TO RESCUE DUMMY

The daredevils who play the priestess' followers in the Pathe serial "The Fatal Ring," took a big chance the other day and barely escaped with their lives, Director Geo. B. Seitz of Astra had arranged for three of them to drive an automobile from the front of a Hudson River ferryboat into the river. As four persons were necessary to take the jump and only three were willing to take the chance a dummy was placed in the back seat of the car to fill out the crew. The cameramen were stationed on a tug boat, the captain of which was instructed to be on the watch ready to pick up the men after they had made their plunge into the water. The signal to start was to be given by the tugboat whistle.

In due time the whistle blew, the car shot from the ferryboat far out into the water, flinging the crew to right and left. The three men, caught by the strong current, contented themselves with floating on their backs expecting to be speedily picked up. The tugboat captain, however, put on full speed and dashed in a different direction. "What's the matter with you?" yelled Mr. Seitz. "Why don't you get those boys?" "Thunder!" said the captain, "I'm after the drowning one. See, he's sinking. All you can see are his feet!" Mr. Seitz looked where the captain pointed. The captain was about to rescue the dummy!

H. C. ALLEN TELLS OF MOTOY PROGRESS

In a recent interview, H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, gave a brief outline of his future policies for the organization.

"I have felt the necessity for some time," he said, "of having our main studio in New York where I can keep in closest touch with the production. While we were getting started and doing business on a comparatively small scale, this was not so necessary, but with the growth of our bookings and our increase of production, it seems best to centralize as far as is possible.

"Mr. Vandivert has just returned from a study of our exchange problems, and reports such progress in that field as to insure the future of our productions. At present we are releasing through the Educational Film Corporation of America, which controls the territory of Greater New York, New York, and Northern New Jersey; the Standard Film Service Company for Southern Ohio and Kentucky; the Standard Film Service Company for Cleveland and Northern Ohio; the Lea Bel Company for Illinois, Indiana and Southern Wisconsin; M. R. Dick for Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Northern Wisconsin; Standard Film Service for Michigan; Metropolitan Film Company for New England; Metro Film Service Company for Virginia, Maryland, D. C., N. C. and Delaware; Mayer and Rosenthal for California, Arizona, and Nevada; William T. Binford for Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico. We have the country pretty well covered and are now completing arrangements for taking up South America, beginning probably at Buenos Ayres. Mr. Woolwidge left this week for London to attend to the details of our new English office, and will remain over there some time studying the conditions of the foreign markets.

"Our present plans are to release 1,000 feet each week, composed of two 500 foot novelties, the novelties to be released on alternate weeks. A one reel subject will be released in addition to this program, and after December 1 this plan will be augmented by a further release of one reel a week.

Mary Miles Minter loves to tell fairy stories to children when she can gather a group of them about her. That is why she enjoyed playing in "Charity Castle," because she could tell fairy tales to her brother in the play.

First Petrova Release October 22

President Collins Pleased With Progress Being Made on Famous Artist's Initial Production

FREDERICK L. COLLINS, president of the Petrova Picture Company, the new company formed to produce Madame Petrova's personally supervised pictures, has expressed himself as being highly satisfied with the progress being made on the first Petrova film.

Assured of its success, both artistically and as a subject for the market, he has already begun to lay his plans for the succeeding Petrova picture.

It seems certain that the first picture will be ready for distribution by the date set, October 22. Five thousand feet have already been completed, and the company is hard at work on the remainder of the story. Reports from the studio indicate that neither time nor expense has been spared to bring the completed production up to the high standard set for Petrova pictures.

"No More Big Pictures"

BIG AMERICAN EXHIBITOR DECLARES MOST BIG PRODUCTIONS FAIL AT THEATER

BRANDING the present output of special productions as "miles of mediocrity," William Moore Patch, president and managing director of the Fort Pitt Theater Company of Pittsburgh, declares that the day of big pictures in the United States is done unless the present system of production and distribution of so-called special features is completely changed.

Theater Made Records

During the past two years Mr. Patch has maintained, at the Pitt Theater in Pittsburgh, an unbroken policy of big pictures, with two exhibitions daily at a scale of admission price ranging from 25 cents to $2.00. Not only this, but it is safe to say that the Pitt Theater has broken many records for successful runs with big pictures in the United States. In addition to D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which ran five months at the Pitt Theater, other films, such as "The Battle Cry of Peace," "A Daughter of the Gods," "Intolerance," "The Crisis," "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," and "Civilization," have all enjoyed engagements of from four to eleven weeks.

Coincident with Mr. Patch's statement on the big picture situation in general comes his announcement of a complete change of policy for the Pitt Theater in Pittsburgh—a change that involves the elimination of all pictures, save two or three each year which can be presented in such a manner as to bring two dollars into the box office.

Mr. Patch's decision in this matter is all the more remarkable because it is well known that he has achieved unprecedented success with his big picture policy in Pittsburgh at two-dollar admission prices. He states that his present decision is based on a determination to maintain the high standard of his house, even at the cost of sacrificing the policy he has built up.

Stage Plays at Pitt Theater

In place of photo-dramatic spectacles during the coming winter, the Pitt Theater in Pittsburgh will house a resident company of the best players obtainable for the purpose of trying out new plays, many of which will be produced later in New York, Chicago and Boston.

A month or two ago Mr. Patch opened his own offices in New York on the nineteenth floor of the Times building. He intends establishing the Pitt Theater in Pittsburgh as a base not only to try out new plays for himself, but for a number of other prominent New York producers who are seeking a place to test their plays before they are produced on Broadway. In other words, Mr. Patch intends doing in Pittsburgh what Mr. Morosco has succeeded in doing in Los Angeles.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Pitt Theater will house legitimate attractions in the future, however, Mr. Patch is not going to give up his interest in big pictures. Any feature films that he considers worth two dollars will be produced on an elaborate scale at the Pitt Theater from time to time throughout the winter.

Enters Producing Field

It is also an open secret that Mr. Patch intends to take up the production of pictures himself in the very near future—and on a large scale. As far as his creative ability goes, no less person than Mr. Griffith said of him before leaving for Europe last January: "Mr. Patch is one of the coming motion picture men of America." This talent will be given full scope, inasmuch as Mr. Patch has associated with him some of the wealthiest men in Pittsburgh.

Confirming his decision in regard to the Pitt Theater, Mr. Patch has made the following statement from his offices in the Times building:

It is useless to deny the gravity of the big picture situation in America. Since Mr. Griffith produced "The Birth of a Nation," and followed it with his still more remarkable spectacle "Intolerance," every big picture producer in America has been vainly striving to imitate him—with most disastrous results.

Since last June, I have sat through sixty-two so-called big pictures, and I have only seen two that could be classed under that category. There is no use in mentioning these pictures—except to say that they will be shown at the Pitt Theater later on in the season.

I furthermore desire to call attention to the state of chaos now existing in the business end of the picture industry in America.

Exhibitors Misled

Hundreds of inferior pictures have been placed in big theaters along Broadway, advanced prices charged for them (when they were not worth 25 cents), their runs forced, and then small exhibitors deceived throughout the United States as to the exact business done. These small exhibitors, in consequence, have paid fabulous prices for inferior pictures and have lost thousands of dollars thereby. They now form an indignant body of "wise old owls," who are thoroughly alive as to what does and what does not constitute a big picture.

The Fort Pitt Theater Company of Pittsburgh is now directing the American tour of the Official War Films of the Italian Government, called "The Italian Battlefront." These films, to get away from picture figures, have done a good business everywhere. But we are having some unique experience with them.

Our offices are crowded with small exhibitors who want to play the pictures, but who sincerely believe that we are liars, and that we have done no business at all. Some of the less timid exhibitors book the picture, and they are stupefied to find that they make good. There is no use in showing the others box office statements, because they believe they are faked. The only thing we can do is to exercise the patience of Job and bide our time. Slowly but surely exhibitors throughout the country are beginning to hear about the Italian war films, and the business they are doing.

When Mr. Patch was asked whether, in his opinion, there would be any more big pictures in the future, he stated:

To say that there will be no more big pictures, is rank foolishness. As matters stand at present, however, the big picture, as an art, has been well nigh ruined in America by an army of inferior men who possess no brains at all; and the pity of it is that pictorial entertainment is one that demands more intelligence, more forethought and more artistry than any other form of amusement.

The real tragedy of the entire situation lies in the fact that the majority of stupid people in the American theater seem to have chosen the making of pictures as a profession.

My fondest hope is that all those who consider themselves big picture producers in the United States will form a combine and sue me for libel. Then I will have an opportunity to reveal to the public generally, the extraordinary conditions now existing in the picture industry in this country.

Fall Back on Legitimate

In the meantime, there is nothing for me to do but to turn to the legitimate stage in order to be sure of obtaining productions of such standards as are worthy of the consideration and continued confidence of my clientele.

I haven't the time, nor has any producer, to make enough pictures of a quality warranting $2.00 admission prices to keep the Pitt Theater open all the year. If I succeed in making one such picture each year, I shall be content. Furthermore, I have neither the time nor the inclination to attempt a reformation of the screen.

Under these conditions, therefore, there is nothing left me but to fall back on the legitimate medium of dramatic entertainment, the quality of which, so far as my own theater is concerned, I personally can control.

I hope the pictures will "come back." I think it possible that they may in a few years, when the patience of the public finally becomes exhausted and it starts a wholesale housecleaning. But I cannot afford to wait until that time arrives.

N. A. M. P. I. MEETING

Committees of National Association for Ensuing Year Appointed—New Members Accepted—Report Film Thefts on the Increase

The administrative committees of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry for the ensuing year were perfected on Thursday, September 20, at the quarterly meeting of the Board of Directors, when President William A. Brady presented his appointments for members of the executive committee which were approved by the board and comprise the following: Walter W. Irwin, chairman Vitagraph V. L. S. E.; J. A. Berst, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Films; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Samuel Goldfish, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; P. A. Powers, Universal Film Manufacturing Co., Richard A. Rowland, Metro Pictures Corporation, William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; Lee A. Ochs, Louis F. Blumenthal and Louis L. Levine of the Exhibitors' League, and William A. Johnston, representing the General Division.

At a special meeting of the members of the Association, held prior to the directors' meeting, an amendment to the by-laws was voted increasing the memberships of the executive committee from nine to twelve.

President Brady announced the appointment of a permanent committee on expositions as follows: William A. Brady, president, ex-officio; J. A. Berst, J. E. Brulatour, Arthur S. Friend, J. H. Hallberg, Gabriel L. Hess, W. W. Irwin, P. A. Powers and William L. Sherrill. The directors contend that with the two expositions for next year the manufacturers, distributors and supply and equipment companies should not be called upon to participate in any additional expositions, balls or similar propositions where advertising space is solicited, and it was decided to refer all such matters to the joint exposition committee of which Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott will act as secretary. Announcement has previously been made that an exposition will be held in New York next February, followed by one in Boston in July, both of which will be under the joint auspices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

The directors received reports showing a great increase in film thefts throughout the country, and acting upon recommendations presented to them, a committee was appointed to formulate plans which are to be presented at a joint meeting of the producers and distributors to be held during the first week of October. The committee will meet at the Association's headquarters, on September 28, and is composed of the following: P. A. Powers, Universal Pictures Corp.; Ricord Gradwell, World Film Corporation; R. A. Rowland, Metro Pictures Corp.; J. A. Berst, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corp.; Walter W. Irwin, Vitagraph, V. L. S. E.; John R. Freuler, Mutual Film Corp and Stephen A. Lynch, Triangle Distributing Corp.

A communication presented from the Rev. Christian F. Reisner requesting co-operation on behalf of the National Association was granted and Executive Secretary Elliott was given power to arrange for the programs which Dr. Reisner and his associates may require representing the International Board of Sunday Schools, comprising five million children.

The Goldwyn Distributing Corporation was elected as a member of the association and will be represented in the distributors' branch by President Samuel Goldfish. The following individual members were elected; Ben H. Grimm, John F. Chalmers, James L. Hoff, George F. Blaisdell, Archibald MacArthur, Jr., Randall M. White, James A. Milligan and Anthony P. Kelly.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has been elected to active membership in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America and will be represented in that great body comprising all of the important industries, railroads and commercial organizations by President Brady and Secretary Elliott.

The organization of the several branches has been perfected with the exception of the general division which is to be called together early in October. Adolph Zukor is chairman of the Producers' Committee, Walter W. Irwin, chairman of the Distributors' Branch, and J. E. Brulatour, chairman of the Supply and Equipment Division.

The resignation of Arthur James as a vice-president and director of the association was accepted. This vacancy will be filled at the forthcoming meeting of the General Division of which Mr. James was one of the representatives.

Mountain Dew, with Marjorie Wilson (Triangle)—"A very good picture. No drawing power for the star is unknown."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Golden Rule Kate, with Louise Glaum (Triangle) "This star is gaining in popularity. Production very good. Played to capacity two days."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

The Food Gamblers, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"Fine picture but the title suggests propaganda, which is unpopular. Business light for two days."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

An Even Break, with Olive Thomas (Triangle)—

"Splendidly staged and acted. Miss Thomas is real star material. Business great for two days."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

A Successful Failure, with Jack Devereaux (Triangle)—"Pleasing light comedy. Several good laughs. Good business."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

Borrowed Plumage, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"Better than the usual costume play. Well received; business good."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

Madame Bo-Peep, with Seena Owen (Triangle)—"First class story with weak title. Business picked up on the second day."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

Bullets and Brown Eyes, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"A fine picture, to good business. One of the best with this star."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Peggy, with Billie Burke (Triangle)—"A fine picture, to only fair business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Madcap Ambrose, with Mack Swain (Keystone)—"This is a fine comedy. Kept them laughing to the end."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

A Royal Rogue, with Billy Armstrong (Keystone)—"An average Keystone,—fine."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

His Wedding Night, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"Not so many laughs in this one. Too much sameness. Business good, notwithstanding."—Sylvia Grogg, Hippodrome and Grogg's Theater, Bakersfield, Cal.

The Stronger Love, with Vivian Martin (Paramount)—"A fair picture, helped out by the star. Just fair business."—Charles G. Neiswanger, Crystal Theater, Osborne, Kansas.

The Love Mask, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A good western with plenty of action, which pleased a big crowd."—Charles G. Neiswanger, Crystal Theater, Osborne, Kansas.

What Money Can't Buy, with Jack Pickford (Paramount)—"The star is gaining in popularity and while this is a routine play, it pleased well."—Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

The Long Trail, with Lou-Tellegen and Mary Fuller (Paramount)—"A melodrama that will get by. Mary Fuller is the card in advertising. Lou-Tellegen doesn't draw."—Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Camping, with Victor Moore (Klever Komedies-Paramount)—"A good, clean comedy. Brought forth many hearty laughs."—Harry Miller, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

The Soul of Kuri-San, with Sessue Hawakawa (Paramount)—"The star's work is splendid and so is that of his wife, but the story itself is rather depressing."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

The Heir to the Hoorah, with Thomas Meighan (Paramount)—"Simply great. The kind of picture most people want to see. Give it extra advertising, for everyone will enjoy it."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

What Money Can't Buy, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff (Paramount)—"Not as good as this pair's previous offerings. Story about a mythical country. Personally I do not like such pictures and our audience felt the same way about it. They like modern stories of the times."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Cook of Canyon Camp, with George Beban (Paramount)—"A good character picture of the lumber camps. Nice outdoor scenery. It gets many a good laugh. Everyone seemed to be pleased with it. Title scared some of our patrons away."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Efficiency Edgar's Courtship, with Taylor Holmes (Essanay-Perfection)—"This is a bully feature and filled us up to the top. It's clean and a sure money and friend maker for any exhibitor. We're anxious to see Holmes' next pictures."—Charles E. Hagen, Kenmore Theater, Chicago.—In discriminating neighborhood.

The Man Who Was Afraid, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"This picture was a great drawing card and well liked by everyone."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Man Who Was Afraid, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"This is a dandy picture, which went over big. Everyone in the audience was satisfied."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—Very high class suburban patronage.

Conquest Programs (Edison-Conquest)—"We played the one- and two-reel subjects in programs one and two and our patrons all said they were the best of their kind ever seen. The grown people were enthusiastic over them and they were very interesting to the children, and so form ideal offerings for the family group. My people liked them so well that hereafter I shall only need to announce 'Conquest' pictures to draw a crowd."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—Very high class suburban patronage.

Light in Darkness, with Shirley Mason (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"Gave very fair satisfaction but our people thought the action too slow."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

One Touch of Nature (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"Drew exceptionally well for two days against Ringling's

The False Friend, with Robert Warwick (World)—"A good picture with Warwick at his best. Good business."—Charles G. Neiswanger, Crystal Theater, Osborne, Kansas.

The Beloved Adventuress, with Kittie Gordon (World)—"A very weak plot. Many left the theater before it was over."—Harry Miller, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

Mothers of France, with Sarah Bernhardt (World) "Very artistic. Good business."—H. L. Kinsey, Academy of Music, Selma, Ala.

Betsy Ross, with Alice Brady (World)—"A costume play that did not take as well as we thought it would. It is good for its historical value. We would rather see the star in modern roles and not wearing a white wig. Average business. This is a good picture for school schildren."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Youth, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"Star is well liked. Business very big."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—High class downtown house.

The Marriage Market, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"A pretty fair picture but with little drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Eternal Question, with Mme. Petrova (Metro)—"Not a Petrova picture. She doesn't have a chance to act, but most of my patrons liked it."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Diplomacy, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"We took this on open booking and it went over big The print was in good condition."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—Very high class suburban patronage.

The Girl Without a Soul, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"A good title for our box-office. They cannot help liking the star in this picture. It is all right; don't be afraid of it."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Slacker, with Emily Stevens (Metro)—"This went better for us than did The Little American. Boost it big, as everyone who sees it will have a compliment for it. Has a good allegorical finish and contains no battle scenes. A picture that will go big with a little advertising."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Brand of Cowardice, with Lionel Barrymore (Fox)—"Drew well and pleased on account of the border stuff in the story."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.

Miss Robinson Crusoe, with Emmy Wehlen (Metro)—"Of good value. Played to excellent business."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.

Periwinkle, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"A good picture. Large business."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Joan, the Woman, with Geraldine Farrar (Artcraft)—"A splendid production but the people do not respond to a play of this kind as they do to a modern drama. It is a shame! Although we did not make anything on this picture, I'm glad I showed it and I think that any exhibitor who figures he can come out even on it ought to show it."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"This broke all house records."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—Very high class suburban patronage.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"The engagement of this picture has been extended five days. It is playing to capacity business and has pleased thousands of people. Mary Pickford's greatest picture."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Down to Earth, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A good picture. Did not draw because of previous runs in the neighborhood."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Conquest of Canaan, with Edith Taliaferro (Frohman)—"Not the best, by any means, but it pleased most people."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Girl Who Did Not Care, with James Morrison (Ivan)—"My public liked this picture very much. Held them out two nights."—William Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Pride and the Devil, with Alma Hanlon (Art Dramas)—"A good picture and good business. The star is fine."—William Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The Silent Witness (Hoffman Foursquare)—"Ran at this theater two days. It is the best feature I ever played in my house."—Samuel Rutinsky, Chatham Theater, New York.

War and the Woman, with Florence LaBadie (Thanhouser-Pathe)—"A weak 'invasion' picture. This type of play is not popular with our patrons. Fair business."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

Les Miserables, with Henri Kraus (Pathe special)—"Played two days at advanced prices to capacity. This classic will never die."—B. F. Rothstein, Majestic Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

When Love Was Blind, with Florence LaBadie (Thanhouser-Pathe)—"Just an ordinary picture, very melo in spots. Business same way."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Last of the Carnabys, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe)—"Just a fair picture with fair drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

---

Susan's Gentleman, with Violet Mersereau (Bluebird)—"Up to the usual Bluebird standard. This star is becoming popular here."—Harry Miller, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

---

Southern Justice, with Myrtle Gonzales (Bluebird)—"Very ordinary. Story worked a thousand times. The war should bring something new."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Light at Dusk, with Orrin Johnson (Lubin)—"A great picture, faultlessly directed, but a disappointment at the box office."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Enlighten Thy Daughter (Enlightenment)—"A wonderful production."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

---

Enlighten Thy Daughter (Enlightenment)—"Big business. Very good come-back on the second day."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

---

On Trial (Essanay-National Exhibitors' Circuit)—"This feature has been tremendously successful. It played a full week to exceptionally good business at the Tivoli Opera House, followed by a four-day engagement at the Big T & D Theater. The feature fascinates the spectator by the interest it arouses in the working out of its story. We have enjoyed phenomenal business without additional advertising."—William H. Jobelmann, Turner and Dahnken Circuit, San Francisco, Calif.

Starts Work on "Robe of Honor"

Carpenters, scenic artists and art directors have been busy for some time erecting the settings which will be used in "His Robe of Honor" in which Henry B. Walthall will make his debut as an independent star-manager.

Mr. Walthall has been in Los Angeles for some time, personally supervising the necessary arrangements before starting the filming of the production which will be made under the personal direction of Oscar C. Apfel.

"His Robe of Honor" which will be a visualization of the book written by E. S. and J. F. Dorrance is a romantic story concerning the intrigues of politics and the wiles of political bosses, in which Mr. Walthall will appear as the young district attorney who has been appointed judge of the supreme court through the influence of a graft-permeated political machine which anticipates using him for a tool to serve their ends. The story is an expose of the methods used in many of the larger cities where the bench is controlled by politics and offers a remarkable opportunity for Mr. Walthall in the role of the trickster lawyer who becomes an upright judge by the cultivation of those forces of his character which are trained and nurtured by a woman of society. This production will be the first of a series of seven-reel productions in which Mr. Walthall will appear at the head of his own independent producing company under the executive direction of Paralta Plays, Inc.

"The Warrior," a Clean Picture

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin, of General Enterprises, Inc., 1600 Broadway, New York, owners of the United States territorial privileges of "The Warrior," feel highly elated at the fact that the feature offering has passed the careful scrutiny of the National Board of Review without the necessity of a single elimination. This circumstance is most rare in the censoring of feature productions, as there is generally some scene to incur the displeasure of the reviewing committee.

"The Warrior" was passed in its entirety, a commentary on the wholesomeness of the screen play of love, comedy and war. In the wide appeal which "The Warrior" will make to all classes, General Enterprises, Inc., wishes to emphasize above all things the cleanliness of the production and it is the general impression that film offerings of "The Warrior" type are rapidly "making picture-theaters safe for the women and children." The strong strain of delightful comedy which the film contains is particularly attractive to the female sex, while the virile manhood of Maciste in his daring adventures in the Alps will reach the hearts of the opposite sex.

Making a Loser Pay

BY G. H. OSTRANDER

Manager of Five Theaters in Denver, Colorado.

I HAVE just disposed of the Liberty Theater, a small house which was one of five I have owned or operated, and it is so small, yet so successful, that its story is rather interesting.

"A Poor Excuse for a House"

When this place was practically wished on me last November, it was without doubt the poorest excuse for a picture theater in the city of Denver. It was showing only three nights a week at five cents. I at once opened it a fourth night and used features two nights at ten cents, leaving the other two nights for five cents.

In a very short time I learned what the people in the neighborhood wanted. The five-cent nights dwindled to practically nothing, whereas the ten-cent nights were fairly well patronized. This convinced me that what was necessary to good business was a clean, comfortable theater with good pictures and music, backed by business principles, which, summed up, means an established policy, which is necessary to the success of any theater.

Followed Suggestions in Motography

The landlord was induced to make alterations and repairs, and decorate the building to conform with the suggestions outlined in Motography in the articles by Mr. Rothapfel.

In making the improvements in this minature show house it was intended that everything be arranged as much like a large theater as possible.

Three small boxes or loges were placed at the entrance end of the theater directly in front of a paneled arrangement intended to serve as a protection to the patrons from drafts coming in through the entrance doors.

Color Scheme of Tan and Old Rose

The decorations were in tan and old rose in a neat panel design. Around the operating booth was arranged a lattice work covered with green vines and flowers. Palms were used in the orchestra pit, which was surrounded by a fence with large square posts, on each of which sat an enormous jardiniere filled with artificial flowers. The flowers for these decorations were purchased from a large department store at a very low figure. They were in good condition, but the store did not want to use them again.

A new Powers 6-A machine, a grand piano and a Grafanola were installed.

Reputation to Be Lived Down

After all was done, I had a very pretty, comfortable and well appointed theater. The total capacity, including the twelve box seats, was 210 and there arose the problem of how to make a paying proposition out of so small a show in this day of advanced ideas and methods in the exhibiting business. There also arose the difficult task of convincing the residents of the neighborhood that we were giving them a real show. The reputation of the house had to be lived down. They had to be shown that we were giving them something besides poor pictures poorly projected.

Vigorous Advertising Campaign

A vigorous advertising campaign was started, in which a suburban newspaper, weekly programs, window cards, specially prepared dodgers, etc., were used. However, none of the disastrous methods such as the giving of souvenirs, drawings for prizes, country store, amateur nights, etc., were resorted to, as the writer has invariably found these unprofitable and expensive, and sometimes unpopular with the better class among the patrons. My patronage consisted almost entirely of the middle class.

The theater was reopened on March 4 to run every night in the week at five and ten cents; fifteen cents for loge seats. Some patrons did not take kindly to the advance in the price of admission and it was like educating them. However, after once getting them inside it seemed they became regular patrons, as they almost invariably found a pleasing entertainment.

Pictures Viewed Beforehand

Programs were selected with the greatest care, and whenever possible I made it a point to see the pictures at some other house previous to showing, and when no music scores were available I could give the musicians some idea of the nature of the picture, and it also gave me an advantage in advertising the subject.

Paramount, Pathe, Metro and General Film subjects were used. A piano and violin furnished most of the music, while the Grafonola, with a well selected list of records, some to suit almost any kind of picture, was used to fill in while the musicians were resting, thus giving variety as well as music all the time. Then, too, there was always an usher on hand—sometimes two—who were posted on courtesy to patrons and who showed each person to a seat. Some might not think an usher necessary in so small a theater, but they were found to be an asset here.

Study Human Nature

To go into every little detail as to how 210 seats were made to pay would require too much valuable space and there may not be many exhibitors up against such a task. However, the fact remains that it can be done if an established policy based on common sense business principles is inaugurated. An exhaustive study of human nature is essential in solving a good many of the exhibitor's problems.

Ince Takes Biograph Studio

The old Biograph studio in Los Angeles, a cinema pioneer of Southern California, after a long period of disuse, has been taken over temporarily by Thomas H. Ince, and is now being used for the filming of photodramas which he will release through Artcraft and Paramount.

"Alone Worth Price of Admission"

MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago:

I want to say that your department, "What the Picture Did for Me," is alone almost worth the price of magazine—and especially to us country exhibitors. Don't ever discard the "What the Picture Did for Me" pages. They are invaluable. Wishing you continued success.—A. N. Miles, Eminence, Kentucky.

TO HANDLE PETROVA PICTURES

First National Exhibitors' Circuit to Distribute Pictures of Popular Star—Contract Drawn Up Between Rothapfel, Schwalbe and F. L. Collins

An arrangement has just been concluded between Superpictures Distributing Corporation and the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., whereby the latter organization will distribute the forthcoming Petrova pictures.

Madame Petrova is the first woman star whose productions have been accepted for release by the Exhibitors' Circuit and the Petrova pictures will be the first series of features distributed by their exchanges. Like the Chaplin pictures, which have recently been acquired by the Exhibitors, the productions in which Madame Petrova appears are to be sold independently of all other productions under an exclusive Petrova contract. This arrangement means that the Petrova pictures will appear in more first-run theaters in the United States and Canada than have previously been available for any other feature productions. This fact, together with the country-wide advertising publicity campaign to be conducted by Superpictures Distributing Corporation, guarantees to both large and small exhibitors everywhere attractions of unusual box office value.

This contract, which marks a distinctly new step in the relations between exhibitor and producer, was negotiated on behalf of the exhibitors by S. L. Rothapfel of New York and H. O. Schwalbe of Philadelphia, and on behalf of Superpictures Distributing Corporation by its president, Frederick L. Collins.

When interviewed at the office of Superpictures Distributing Corporation, 25 West Forty-fourth street, Mr. Collins said:

"The relation between Madame Petrova and the exhibitors which has been established by the contract which has just been executed is extremely gratifying to me, not only because I believe that the arrangement will be extremely profitable, both to the exhibitors and to the producer, but because it is a direct result of our previously announced policy of 'big pictures for big exhibitors.'

"On August 12, 1917, we announced that the first of the big pictures for big exhibitors would be Madame Petrova in a series of special productions produced by the Petrova Picture Company, the distribution of which would be in the hands of Superpictures Distributing Corporation. Since that announcement we have been approached by the heads of substantially all the leading distributing organizations in this country, and have received offers for these pictures on financial terms that were as flattering to Madame Petrova as they would have been tempting to us had it not been for our announced policy of dealing, whereever possible, with the exhibitors direct.

"Therefore, the arrangement by which the Petrova pictures will be shown first in the leading houses throughout the country and later handled in each section by a man known throughout that section as its leading exhibitor is not only a gratifying, but an entirely natural outgrowth of the policy announced by us."

At the Biograph studio, where Madame Petrova and her company were working in a big set covering half the studio floor and reproducing in detail the magnificent home of a well known American ambassador, the famous Polish actress made the following statement:

"I am indeed happy to wear the colors of the exhibitors, and proud, too, that they should have shown such interest in my aims and ambitions. I hope with all my heart that they will never have cause to regret it. For my part, I shall give the very best that is in me in my endeavors to merit their confidence and approval.

"Already the new relationship has given me a close touch with the need of the exhibitors that I have not had before. It has been a pleasure to have the frequent advice of such men as Mr. Rothapfel, the president of the circuit, who has followed my production plans from the first, and who is so enthusiastic over the first picture that he is already arranging a musical setting that will add greatly to its presentation. I feel that we cannot go very far astray, so far as the exhibitors are concerned, when the exhibitors themselves are consulted in regard to every particular: the story, the scenario, the title and the director."

Operators Get Raise

At a joint conference between representatives of the Chicago Exhibitors' League and the motion picture operators' union, held September 21 at the League headquarters in the Masonic Temple, the committee representing the theater owners gave in to the union men, and, with a few slight revisions and modifications, agreed to pay the new scale demanded by the union. This increase, which was at first stubbornly opposed by the exhibitors, raises the pay of Chicago operators to 75 cents per hour. L. Zoller, Charles Stuart and Paul Sittner, together with the members of the excutive committee of the local League, headed by President Joseph Hopp, constituted the committee which met the operators' representatives.

Harris Ingraham of Horsley-LaSalida has nearly completed "The Child of M'sieu," a five reel featuring Baby Marie Osborne for the Pathe program.

U. S. Asks Producers to Save Food

THE government has asked the producers of motion pictures to aid in the saving of food. The following letter has been issued to manufacturers:

Confronted with the stern necessity of stopping every possible waste of food and foodstuffs during the continuance of the war, we are compelled to earnestly request that during the war the use of real food in scenes on the stage in theaters and the use of real food in the course of the production of motion pictures be entirely eliminated.

Undoubtedly a satisfactory substitute or imitation can be found where the play or motion picture requires the appearance of the use of food, and probably scenes showing the use of food, in cases where substitutes or imitations cannot be used, can be omitted.

Although the amount of food so used by any one theatrical or motion picture producer through a given year is small, the combined amount used by all of the theatrical and motion picture producers is very large. Its elimination will be a material aid in the conservation of food and foodstuffs which we are compelled in the performance of our duty to enforce.

Will you be good enough to acknowledge receipt of this letter, with your personal assurance that you will comply with this request immediately and vigorously? Faithfully yours, U. S. Food Administration, by Herbert Hoover.

Seven Cents an Hour—Make It Ten

SEVEN cents an hour, or a trifle under that, is what the average picture show charges for entertainment. The typical ten-cent show gives eight reels of film, which should take nearly two hours to run and are usually pushed through in an hour and a half.

When five cents, instead of ten, was the customary admission price, few shows ran over one hour. There was a time, of course, when a thousand feet of film and an illustrated song constituted the program—about a twenty-minute show. And a good many old-timers will contend that they made more real money then than they do now. If that is true, why not return to the five-cent, half-hour show, and bring back the good old days?

Because it takes three times as many fans to keep a half-hour show filled as it does a show three times as long. And the fans are not there any more.

Somebody—speaking of the war, not of the picture business—said the other day that only weaklings and women should be optimists; that strong men should look always at the darkest side of the situation, so as to be prepared always for the worst. We do not agree with him entirely, because we believe it is possible to prepare for anything that might happen and still remain optimistic. But it is idle to talk of good business and improving conditions when the truth reverses the claim.

The five-cent theater men who crowded as many reels as they could onto their program were directly responsible for the slump in fans. In other words, they "killed the job." Make anything as common as dirt, no matter how good it is, and people tire of it. Send a girl two pounds of candy every day, and she will soon quit eating it altogether.

So today we find that the ten-cent, ninety-minute show generally is not overcrowded. "Holding 'em out" has become almost an obsolete term in picture show vernacular. And yet seven cents an hour is less than the old Nickelodeon got for the entertainment it purveyed in small but frequent doses.

Producers have been much concerned for some time about the question of "How many reels?" There is a general agreement to the theory that the ideal show, for practical, every-night use, should consist of a five-reel, a two-reel and a one-reel. That makes an average eight reels of the present ten-cent show.

There is nothing the matter with this program, except that it is sold at seven cents an hour. At least five of the eight reels probably cost more than they did five years ago. The receipts per hour, as we have shown, are less than they were five years ago. That is why exhibitors make less money today than they used to make with five-cent store fronts.

With everything going up, the motion picture exhibitor is entitled to his increase. Lots of theaters are charging fifteen cents now; but the prevailing price is still ten cents for the show. It should be ten cents an hour.

That gives the exhibitor a choice of at least two ways to get his ten cents an hour. He can continue his present show and charge fifteen cents for it, or he can continue his ten-cent charge and cut his show to an hour—five reels. We cannot offer any advice on this point, because conditions vary. Some neighborhoods will not stand for more than ten cents. They should have a shorter show. Some neighborhoods will not stand for a shorter show. They should pay a higher price. There is no compromise between the two conditions.

But we are strongly in favor of the fifteen-cent price. That is within the reach of practically everybody, and everybody knows that prices are going up. If they want the show, they will pay the price; if they do not want the show, the exhibitor might as well quit, for they will not come at any price.

With a house properly proportioned to the neighborhood, good music, good advertising and some showman ingenuity, the exhibitor can make money on ten cents an hour. He cannot make money on seven cents an hour. With ten cents an hour, he would have enough to improve his music and his advertising, and so increase his attendance in spite of higher prices. With seven cents he must economize on both music and advertising, and so is in constant danger of losing some of the attendance he has.

The war tax problem is not yet settled, and there is some possibility that the conference committee will change the senate's twenty-five per cent limit to ten cents. That, of course, would mean that a house charging fifteen cents would be taxed. Congress always assumes that men engaged in business make money, and representatives of both exhibitors' associations are working hard to convince the committeemen that motion picture exhibitors generally lose money nowadays.

We trust that the government will not impose this demand on an already overburdened industry. But even if it should, it is obvious that the exhibitor with a fifteen-cent admission price would still be better off. No man refuses a bigger income because of the income tax.

It is fundamental business reasoning that whatever the exhibitor spends, in his house or for it, must be paid by his customers. Therefore, as a business proposition, we predict that the exhibitor who raises his rates from ten to fifteen cents for an hour-and-a-half show and devotes some of the increase to better music and better advertising, will actually increase his attendance and make some real money for his pocket.

Censorship Only on Complaint

AN attorney who has had "many battles with Major Funkhouser and his so-called board of censors, in and out of court," calls attention to the serious discrimination which is practiced between the speaking stage and the picture screen. There is, of course, nothing new in this observation, nor in his examples of uncensored plays which were censored as soon as they were screened, and serial stories and even biblical texts which met the same fate. All that is an old story to film men.

Chicago's censor board has committed too many sins against motion pictures to list here, and the proposed amendment pending in the judiciary committee of the city council does not better conditions. Neither does Major Funkhouser's protest that he is only carrying out the ordinances afford any relief in a truly onerous situation.

There is no question that the "New York plan" of picture censorship is the only reasonable system—if censorship in any guise can be called reasonable. Examination of pictures after complaint has been made against them, and correction of any offensive portions revealed by such examination, really deserves a better name than censorship. It puts the censorial burden upon the people, where it belongs, and so saves a great deal of trouble and nonsense. Incidentally, it is a far more economical plan than that of seeing every picture and putting a futile O. K. on the majority of them.

Of course, the scheme of censoring only on complaint still is open to abuse, because the necessary complaint may — and generally does — come from some irresponsible busybody or professional reformer. But the system offers much greater resistance to the arbitrary and senseless tendencies of censorship, and encourages a more healthy and less morbid interpretation of harmfulness.

Film men know that existing laws, irrespective of censorship, are adequate to dispose of any possible picture irregularities. Nevertheless, it is unlikely that any opposition would develop in the trade to the appointment of special officers (call them censors if you like) whose function would be to police the exhibition of pictures and take care of such complaints as the offended public might enter.

This is a logical variation of the censorship idea, and probably the only one that bids fair to be acceptable to the trade and the reformers alike.

Community Service Through Pictures

CONQUEST PROGRAMS TO MEET ENTERTAINMENT AND EDUCATIONAL NEEDS

By Genevieve Harris

THE exhibitor in whose community the schools, churches and clubs are interested in motion pictures, and the exhibitor who would like to interest these groups in pictures will be equally glad to learn of a new program which at once answers his question, "Where can I get the films for a family group entertainment?" and "How can I work up an interest in these special features?"

The idea back of the Conquest Pictures, which are made by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., is to provide an entire program, especially planned to meet the need of an exhibitor who wishes to have a "family group" offering on a certain day of the week. Frequently an exhibitor has provided an excellent feature picture for boys and girls, only to meet criticism because of some comedy or other filler run with it. Or he may have some excellent short subjects, but be unable to run them in a well balanced program. In the Conquest plan, seven reels are furnished, usually consisting of a four-reel feature, one reel of comedy, one reel of travel, and another of the "magazine" type, showing something of timely interest, or perhaps an unusual one-reel play. There is a great deal of variety in the composition of the programs( but the selected subjects must be interesting, clean and worth-while.

Entire Program Planned

These pictures, of varying length, offer an opportunity to the exhibitor wishing to plan his own program, for they may be booked separately. But the complete programs have been so arranged as to give the most entertainment value and to avoid monotony and sameness that the average exhibitor who wishes them for special performances will doubtless use each one as planned by the distributors.

The George Kleine Company is distributing these Conquest Programs and is giving an unusual service with them. This part of the plan will aid the exhibitor who wishes to interest the better class patrons in his theater. For when an exhibitor has booked the pictures, the Community Service Department of the George Kleine Company gets to work to interest the people in that community in the coming pictures. This is done in a direct manner which should bring results. The department is under the management of Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez, a woman who for several years has been interested in the "Better Pictures" movement from another angle. She knows well the exhibitor's phase because she has successfully managed young people's matinees in theaters under varying conditions in New York City. Mrs. Dessez's experience thus enables her to understand the peculiar problems which confront the exhibitor who is seeking to win and to satisfy the interest of the schools in his town. From her experience she is able frequently to give "first aid" treatment to theaters which do not seem to thrive.

Club Women Are Interested

In addition to this, Mrs. Dessez, because of her work in women's clubs and parent-teachers' associations for pictures suitable for the family group, knows just how to reach the interest of these influential people in cities large or small. Also, her personal acquaintance with social workers throughout the country is large. Mrs. Dessez's campaign is conducted in this manner: When a theater manager in any town books the Conquest Programs, Mrs. Dessez asks him to send her a list of the teachers, ministers and social workers in that town. To each she writes a special letter. To the president of the women's club, for instance, she writes:

> The Women's clubs all over the country are meeting to consider how they may be of greatest service in this time of national crisis. Whatever activities they may decide upon, this line of endeavor seems to be generally recognized, that it is the first duty of the women of the country to keep the community life as normal as possible and to save the children of our country from the demoralization that came to the young of Europe through the letting down of barriers, the suspension of rules they had always recognized and the great changes in their ways of living.
> In this great work of noblesse oblige, undertaken by the club-women of the country in their capacity of "universal mothers," nothing can be of greater service than clever, lively, constructive amusement in the motion pictures.
> The necessity of some power of selection in this great democratic entertainment has become generally recognized and those who have given the problem serious thought feel that the solution of the problem will be found in the program suitable for the family as a whole.
> The Conquest Pictures, manufactured by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and distributed by George Kleine, are designed to meet this great need. They are a series of well-balanced programs of clean and lively entertainment, composed of short features, wholesome comedy, travel, science, natural history and patriotic subjects. Mr. Edison has said that these programs are to be his contribution to his generation in the motion pictures. The object of his endeavor is to turn into constructive channels this great social force for which he, as inventor of the embryo of the motion picture machine, is responsible.
> In putting these programs on the market, it is our plan to have an exhibitor in each community show Conquest Pictures on one day in the week. We wish to secure for this exhibitor the active support and co-operation of those interested in the welfare of that community.
> The Blank Theater will show these programs every ..... Will you and the members of your organization give the exhibitor your active co-operation in his effort to render a service to the patrons of his theater?
> Will you interest teachers, parents and others responsible for the welfare of young people in this effort of Mr. Edison and his associates to meet the nation-wide demand for better films that through public appreciation this effort may be sustained?

Personal Letters to Educators

Such a letter cannot help but increase the interest of the women in pictures, and its effect in increasing the patronage at the theater whenever the Conquest Program is shown seems unquestionable.

To ministers and teachers similar letters are sent. The attention is first drawn to the general effect of the photoplay upon the minds of the children; the aim of the Conquest Program is set forth; the theater and day of their appearance is given and there is a plea for co-operation. In the letter to teachers the following facts are brought to their attention:

> Statistics show that two million children in the United States spend from two to three hours a day in the motion picture theaters. Educators know that the things acquired visually make deep and lasting impressions upon plastic young minds. What are these two million children getting each day from the screens? Much that is worth while perhaps, but with it they get a great deal that is harmful because they acquire before their minds are ready for it, a familiarity with every human experience. The inevitable result is, as every teacher knows, that minds that should be on studies are busy trying to steer a course through a sea of knowledge far beyond their depth.

We are trying to accomplish in the motion pictures what has already been done in the libraries, where children have been withdrawn from the cheap and spectacular books by having the best presented to them. This effort will be successful only if the public assists by its approval and support.

The school year, just opening, will undoubtedly see an increased interest in the subject of photoplays for young people and the family group. Exhibitors in many localities will find that children are allowed to attend the theater only on Friday or Saturday nights and he will wish to cater to them and their parents with clean, entertaining features. For these "family group" nights, and for his Saturday matinees, he will find the Conquest features well worth investigating.

New Strand Mutual Comedies

Billie Rhodes, the dainty little comedienne, comes back in one-reelers on the Mutual release schedule of October 1.

The Mutual Film Corporation has just concluded negotiations for a series of forty-four one-reel comedies starring Billie Rhodes, supported by Jay Belasco. They will be released weekly. The first release is issued October 2.

The schedule for October includes:

Tuesday, October 2—"Some Nurse."
Tuesday, October 9—"Firing Father."
Tuesday, October 16—"For Sweet Charity."
Tuesday, October 23—"And Along Came Mary."

Miss Rhodes scored a distinct success in a series of eight Mutual-Strand comedies released early in the year and they were so successful from the box office point of view that John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual, began negotiating to secure another and a longer series of productions of the same type and quality.

Billie Rhodes has a faculty of putting over her stuff, of getting the laughs without resort to the ludicrous. A well balanced cast was selected to appear with her. The productions are, in every sense, what are known in the language of the trade "Society comedies." There wasn't a slapstick in the studio. They quite disprove the old theory of motion picture comedy that pie throwing was essential to put comedy across.

Miss Rhodes was a soubrette in "Babes in Toyland" and broke into pictures in dramas for Kalem.

Urges Co-operation with Exhibitor

Miss Mary Gray Peck, who last year made many addresses in different parts of the country on motion pictures, under the auspices of the National Committee for Better Films, a department of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, is making plans for addresses of a similar character this year. Miss Peck is a member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and was a member of its motion picture committee. Being formerly a member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, and a speaker of marked ability, her addresses have proved very valuable indeed.

She has given the subject of motion pictures and their value to the people an intensive study. She believes that the motion picture has a great future for it is the one form of art recreation which is available for rich and poor alike. She thinks that legalized censorship is an impossible means of bettering pictures and has frequently opposed in her addresses this proposition. The more satisfactory plan she believes is that of co-operating with the exhibitor in securing exhibition of the finer types of pictures.

No Date for Next Chaplin

The date of the release of the forthcoming Mutual-Chaplin special, "The Adventurer," has not yet been set despite the fact that the production was expected to be ready for exhibitors by September 1. The final scenes have been delayed, first by the illness of Mr. Chaplin and then by an attack of sickness which kept his leading woman, Miss Edna Purviance, from the studio for more than two weeks.

The release date will be announced by the Mutual Film Corporation as soon as it is certain, but no announcement will be made until that time to prevent the possibility of postponement.

Mayfair Purchases Stories

During the last few weeks the reader of the Mayfair Film Corporation has been very busy reading a number of the novels now enjoying marked popularity in the book stores.

When this notice was received from the Mayfair offices a number, best suited to Miss Hyland's type had already been purchased and others were under the final consideration.

In every instance the story is a wholesome, refreshing one and not based in any way on the terrible world conflict now raging.

Fifteen Chapters in "Fighting Trail"

The reports that have appeared in some of the trade publications to the effect that the new serial, "The Fighting Trail," produced by Greater Vitagraph, is to run indefinitely is in the wrong, according to advice direct from that company.

"The Fighting Trail" is to consist of 15 chapters only. The first episode was released to exhibitors on September 10 and one is appearing now each week.

ALICE BRADY WITH SELECT

Select Pictures Corporation Captures Popular Star, Who Is to Appear in Eight Select Star Pictures During Coming Year

Alice Brady is now a Select star.

Many exhibitors will come back with the remark that she has always been a select star.

But the news in this story is the fact that the Select Pictures Corporation, recently added to the production map of New York, has signed the former World star and Miss Brady will be presented during the coming year in eight pictures. These will be released under the Select Star Series system.

On the first of these eight pictures Miss Brady will begin work at once at the Paragon studio in Fort Lee. She will be directed by Edward Jose, whose work is best known to picture fans through his direction of Norma Talmadge in "Poppy" and "The Moth," the latter being a current Select release. Miss Brady's first picture will be an adaptation of Henry J. W. Dam's play, "The Red Mouse." It is a story of modern life with a French flavor. The screen title of the picture has not yet been determined.

Alice Brady is the daughter of William A. Brady. At first her talents were lent to the musical comedy stage, and she appeared in a number of musical successes, among them being "The Mikado" and "The Balkan Princess."

Miss Brady soon forsook the lighter field of musical comedy, and appeared in legitimate drama, in which field her greatest success was in a production of "Little Women." Her real popularity, however, is the outcome of her work as a star in motion pictures. On the screen Miss Brady has enjoyed a remarkable vogue.

Perhaps the greatest of all Miss Brady's screen successes is "Paid in Full," made from Eugene Walter's play. After this must be ranked "Maternity," "The Hungry Heart," "In Darkest Russia," "The Dancer's Peril" and "The Self-Made Widow."

It is the announced policy of Select Pictures that Miss Brady will be presented in the highest class productions. Her stories will be selected from the successes in the literary and dramatic field. Her directors will be men who have shown in their productions directing talents of the highest quality.

The Jewel Productions, acting through Miller & Wilk, Inc., brokers, have purchased Ralph Ince's newest production, "The Co-respondent."

EXHIBITORS MEET

Kansas Motion Picture Exhibitors' League to Hold Convention at Manhattan October 15 and 16— Big Attendance Expected

The semi-annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kansas, to which all exhibitors, exchange and supply men are invited, will be held in Manhattan, Kansas, on the fifteenth and sixteenth of October.

Matters of vital importance to exhibitors will be up for discussion and it is very essential that all Kansas exhibitors, at least, attend this convention. Arrangements are being made for the biggest gathering of its kind ever held in Kansas and an extra large attendance is anticipated.

Efforts are being made to obtain several motion picture stars and the Kansas State Agricultural College, the institution responsible for the now famous "Winning With Wheat" film, has donated its large gymnasium for a big "movie ball," to be held on the evening of the sixteenth of October, also to stage special entertainment features for the visitors, all of which will be filmed by the Holt Feature Film Company, of Manhattan.

A trip to Fort Riley, including a visit to the famous Camp Funston, has been arranged for with the M. C. & I. Ry. Co., for all in attendance at the convention, also an auto trip over Manhattan and vicinity as guests of the Manhattan motor club. Other entertainment will be provided and everything done to make a pleasant and profitable visit for all concerned.

On account of the crowded condition of Manhattan, caused by Camp Funston, only ten miles away, it is imperative that hotel reservations be made as soon as possible. These can be arranged for by writing J. J. Marshall, manager of the Marshall theater, Manhattan, Kansas.

City After Chicago Censor

It is very possible that the powers of Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, chief of Chicago's censor board, will be clipped by action of the city council following a long series of complaints and suits by film companies and many expressions of dissatisfaction with the arbitrary work of the censor on the part of the public.

The judiciary committee of the city council took the matter up at its meeting on September 25. Alderman Steffen asked the committee to recommend an amendment to the ordinance to the effect that when a picture is rejected the entire censor board of twelve shall pass judgment on it. Under the present ordinance there is no appeal from the Major's decision except the courts. If the council passes the amendment it will have the effect of stripping the major of his present arbitrary powers, and all the film interests are hoping for such action.

Eva Tanguay Picture

Among the early releases on the Select Pictures list is "The Wild Girl," the picture in which Eva Tanguay is presented for the first time on the screen. On account of Miss Tanguay's enormous popularity as a vaudeville star, the Select Pictures branches are receiving many inquiries regarding the release of this new feature.

Clara Williams Joins Paralta

Clara Williams made an agreement with Paralta Plays, Inc., during the recent visit of Carl Anderson President of the Paralta organization, to the west coast, under which a company headed by her will produce pictures at the Paralta studio in Hollywood. Her productions will be distributed under the executive direction of Paralta Plays, Inc. Miss Williams and her company will begin work at once.

Clara Williams, who will head her own Paralta Company.

Miss Williams came to the screen from the legitimate dramatic stage, on which she had been a most attractive figure for several years.

Her first appearance was in the role of "Lady Isabel" in "East Lynn" with the Santa Barbara Stock Company. Leaving the Santa Barbara organization, Miss Williams joined Richard Jose en tour in "Don't Tell My Wife," and then went into vaudeville with True Boardman in a sketch called, "The Way of the West." In Denver, G. M. Anderson was attracted by her unusual beauty and persuaded her to forsake the stage for the screen. So she made her debut in pictures with the Essanay company, playing leads in one-reelers.

Deciding at the end of a year and a half to go back on the stage, she went to Chicago. Here she accepted an engagement to go on the road in another playlet called "The Awakening." Then she joined Lubin in Philadelphia, where she remained for a year. Going with the Lubin company to the Pacific coast, she was approached by the New York Motion Picture Corporation. She accepted the offer. Her first role with this company was in "The Witch of Salem." Miss Williams' most prominent screen successes are "The Bargain," "The Coroner," "Hell's Hinges," "The Criminal, and "Three of Many."

Essanays Coming

Taylor Holmes, Charlie Chaplin and George Ade, the Hoosier Humorist, supply Essanay's share of film entertainment to be released the coming week.

Mr. Holmes, who formerly was a stage star, will be seen in a comedy-drama entitled, "Fools for Luck." It will be released on the Perfection Pictures program October 8. "Fools for Luck" is Mr. Holmes' second screen venture. The first, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," is drawing excellent business for exhibitors.

The second of the Essanay-Chaplins, which will be released through the General Film Company, October 13, is "A Jitney Elopement." This series is comprised of new prints of all the pictures Charlie Chaplin made for Essanay. "The Champion" was the first. One is being released each month. Included in the series are "Shanghaied," "A Woman," "In the Park," "By the Sea," "A Night in the Show," and others of the comedies in which Chaplin won his first public recognition.

The next George Ade Fable to be released through General Film is entitled, "The Fable of All That Triangle Stuff as Sized Up By the Meal Ticket." It will appear October 13. These two-part comedy-dramas are designed for any program owing to the popularity of their author, many exhibitors are using them to good effect as featured subjects. The Fables in Slang have a screen time of, approximately, twenty-five minutes. One is being released by Essanay each week.

"EXHIBITORS MAKE STARS"

Louise Glaum, Who Has Held Long Engagement With Triangle, Declares Players Should Not Change Companies Often

That the exhibitor, particularly the small town exhibitor, is responsible for building up the popularity of a star is the opinion of Louise Glaum, who after a short vacation in New York City has returned to Culver City, California, to commence work on a big Triangle production in which she will be starred.

"Virtually every star will tell you that she attributed her success to hard work, but I believe a great deal of credit is due to the exhibitor who discerns the spark of talent in a player and has the confidence to advertise his discovery," says Miss Glaum. "Producers do not and should not elect people to stardom until the exhibitors make the nomination." She contuned:

In some instances a player of prominence on the stage is made a star immediately upon accession to the screen. This often has proved to be a mistake. It has not been the policy of Triangle to do that, for I know most of us have struggled several years before we gained a following among exhibitors and fans that would warrant us stellar honors.

Of course there are exceptions, as demonstrated by Olive Thomas, who hopped from musical comedy into pictures and made an instant hit. But she is gifted with a wonderful personality. Most of us have been less fortunate in gaining immediate attention. But there are several girls at the studio who have wonderful possibilities that exhibitors have noticed and boosted. Alma Ruebens, a positively gorgeous beauty—and with brains, too—is going right to the top. Margery Wilson is so sincere and consistently fine in her work that we felt her success was insured from the first, and now she is realizing her ambition. Belle Bennett, a young actress of rare emotional ability, is another who will be a popular star. Then there is Bessie Love and Ruth Stonehouse, both well established now after several years of hard work. Each of these players has been recognized first by the exhibitor, who then called the attention of the public to them through advertisements. When the public had been won, the producer was ready and glad to feature them in important roles.

The bureau of criticism established by Mr. Davis at the Culver City studio is a splendid department, I think, for through it the exhibitor can express his candid opinions and preferences in regard to stars and types of pictures.

I, for one, do not believe that a star is benefited by changing companies often. After exhibitors have faithfully advertised a star and expended a great deal of money in creating notice for her in a locality they do not care to see competitors reap the profits. So many players do not think of that when they switch back and forth from company to company. Eventually, I think, they lose the confidence of the exhibitors who made them. That is one reason why I would prefer to remain with Triangle, even though I were not under contract. I feel that the Triangle exhibitors have done a great deal for me and that I will be a success in their houses, whereas if I shifted to another theater in the same town I might not receive the same advertising consideration, and my plays might not attract as well.

I want strong plays, not vehicles, a good director, a camera man who understands his business and cutters that are experts. Without attention to these factors a production will fail no matter how excellent the star may be. The Triangle studio is perfectly equipped, and the forces of players and technical experts are daily being augmented.

Advance views of "The Princess of Park Row," new Vitagraph Blue Ribbon for October 1, with Wallace MacDonald and Mildred Manning.

"The Princess of Park Row"

"The Princess of Park Row," a swift-moving international romance from the pen of Paul West, is the vehicle which heads the Blue Ribbon October releases.

"The Princess of Park Row," which was picturized by A. Van Buren Powell and produced under the supervision of Ashley Miller, a new acquisition to the Vitagraph directorial staff, will mark the debut of Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald as a feature combination. Miss Manning is well known to Vitagraph exhibitors through her performance in "Mary Jane's Pa," in which she was featured with Marc McDermott. Wallace MacDonald, a popular leading man, won a place on the Blue Ribbon program through his work in a number of the O. Henry stories in which Miss Manning also played. William Dunn, another popular Vitagraph player, is seen in a "heavy" role.

"The Princess of Park Row" tells of the adventures of a princess of a foreign principality who comes to New York with her father on a governmental mission. She meets and loves a young newspaper reporter, who saves her father's life and is instrumental in frustrating a clique of her father's unscrupulous countrymen.

The story is a combination of absorbing action and spontaneous comedy. There are a number of rough-and-tumble fistic encounters in which Wallace MacDonald as the reporter engages with a band of gangsters. The light comedy touches are furnished by Anne Brody, who, as the princess' maid, has an unconquerable fear of Indians, whom she expects to find rampant in New York. There are many intimate glimpses of two institutions for which New York is famous—Coney Island and Park Row.

The scenes showing New York with its myriad amusement vehicles are decidedly novel and will prove a source of interest to people outside of New York and its environs, and also provide the exhibitor with a valuable selling point.

Will Supply Cuts to Exhibitors

An innovation in exhibitor service just announced by H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of Triangle Film Corporation, will be of interest to all theater owners who realize the value of co-operative effort.

After an exhaustive study of the exhibitor's needs, Triangle has organized a studio service department which will work in conjunction with the distributing corporation's present service branches. Beginning with the November releases, line cuts of illustrations suitable for newspaper reproduction will be supplied to all exhibitors through the Triangle exchanges or direct from the studio to any Triangle exhibitor on request. This will be in addition to the customary supply of press and lobby material now furnished. Three illustrations showing the big scenes will be supplied with each release, and it is planned to have them reach the exchanges four weeks in advance of release dates.

In order to handle this new service effort, it has been necessary to install at a considerable expense a complete new equipment for still pictures that will guarantee a complete set of dramatic action snaps on each production. Each still will be especially selected for its box office value in lobby display.

Mr. Davis will welcome the suggestions and criticisms of exhibitors after this service is put into operation.

Exceptional Cast in "Little Princess"

One of the most notable aggregations of motion picture players ever assembled as a supporting cast to Mary Pickford is evidenced in the forthcoming Artcraft release, "The Little Princess," now bing staged at the Lasky studio in Hollywood under the direction of Marshall Neilan. Chief among those in the case are Theodore Roberts, William E. Lawrence and Jennie Lee, and their capable support will, it is believed, go far toward making that forthcoming production a real work of cinematographic art.

FUNKHOUSER STILL BALKING

Vitagraph's "Within the Law" Held Up—Censor and Police Chief Place Themselves in Contempt of Court

"Within the Law," Greater Vitagraph's screen version of Bayard Veiller's phenomenal stage success, probably will be the nemesis of Major Funkhouser, the Chicago film censor czar. The picture may also be the cause of the elimination of all motion picture censorship in Chicago.

Major Funkhouser, Chief of Police Scheuttler and the Chicago city authorities last week placed themselves in contempt of court when they refused to honor a writ of mandamus, issued by Judge Crowe, commanding them to issue a permit that would allow the big production to be shown in its entirety and without a single deletion.

Judge Crowe issued the order on September 13 after Attorney Lewis F. Jacobson, under the direction of President Albert E. Smith and General Manager Walter W. Irwin, himself a lawyer, had brought mandamus proceedings to compel the Chicago censor to issue the permit which he had refused for more than four months.

Immediately after the issuance of the order by Judge Crowe, Attorney Jacobson applied to Chief of Police Scheuttler for the permit. The Chief of Police, acting on instructions from the office of the Corporation Counsel, refused to issue the permit despite the court order.

Upon the refusal Attorney Jacobson immediately prepared a petition for a rule upon Chief Scheuttler to show cause why he had not issued the permit. Later, upon ascertaining that the chief had acted on instructions from the office of the Corporation Counsel and suggestions of Major Funkhouser, Mr. Jacobson asked permission of the court to withdraw the charge against the chief and asked for the punishment of the proper persons.

Judge Crowe from the bench censured the Corporation Counsel and Major Funkhouser for their arbitrary course in refusing to issue the permit in the face of the court order. The court referred to Major Funkhouser as "an arbitrary despot" and declared that the city authorities did not appear to be acting in good faith.

Attorneys representing Major Funkhouser took an appeal from Judge Crowe's decision ordering that the permit for "Within the Law" be issued.

Greater Vitagraph's attorneys immediately countered and asked for an injunction restraining the city authorities from interfering with any showing of "Within the Law" in Chicago. The application for the injunction recites that "Within the Law" is now very timely and is of great value, and that if the presentation of the picture is further delayed its value would be lessened by further postponement.

In support of this assertion that the intrinsic value of the picture for rental purposes would be reduced, Attorney Jacobson attached to the petition affidavits from numerous Chicago exhibitors who are anxious to book "Within the Law" immediately and who declare that they are willing to pay a higher rental price at this time than at a later date.

The bill for the injunction was presented on the legal theory that through the issuance of the writ of mandamus by Judge Crowe, Greater Vitagraph's right to show the picture immediately had been established.

Immediately following the refusal of Major Funkhouser and the city authorities to honor the writ of mandamus ordering the issuance of a permit for the showing of "Within the Law," Chicago exhibitors, exchangemen and, as a matter of fact, every person even remotely connected with the industry, prepared to take drastic action in an effort to end the activities of Major Funkhouser and of Chicago censorship. This drastic action started with the collection of a fund to be used for legal purposes and the wide circulation of a letter which was tantamount to a call to the colors to start the censor czar on his way to Siberia.

MACISTE KILLED?

E. Matson Brings Report From England of the Death of "The Warrior's" Gigantic Star on Italian Front

Film circles were considerably shocked by the reported death on the Italian battle front of Maciste, the giant star of "Cabiria" and more recently, "The Warrior." The news of the casualty was brought to this country by E. Matson of John Olson & Company, prominent Scandinavian film traders. Mr. Matson landed in New York this week and immediately communicated with A. H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin of General Enterprises, Inc., who own "The Warrior," the film spectacle in which Maciste is now appearing in this country.

According to the information borne by Mr. Matson, the giant Italian screen player was slain during the terrific fighting on the Bainsizza Plateau in the recent great Italian offensive. Mr. Sawyer has sent a cable across in order to ascertain the complete story of the heroic film player's demise.

Maciste was one of the first to volunteer in the service of the country at the outbreak of hostilities and has been "doing his bit" in the first line trenches for many months. The stricken actor's right name was Ernesto Pagani and his first screen appearance in America was as the giant Numidian slave in Gabriele D'Annucio's masterpiece "Cabiria." He was discovered by the Itala Film Co. of Torino, Italy, while employed as a dock laborer for one of the steamship companies. Because of his unusual strength and wonderful physique, he was cast for the slave part in "Cabiria."

Suit Delayed on Technical Grounds

The suit of Louis Frank, Fred Herrington and Judge Tugwell, who are trying to garnishee the funds of the Chicago Exposition on the grounds of back salaries, was quashed last Thursday, September 20, in the court of Municipal Judge Richardson on technical grounds. No witness for the Chicago League was called as it was ruled that the bonds and affidavits in the Frank Herrington case were defective and that the plaintiffs were bringing suit against officers of an Ohio corporation who lived in Illinois and who at the time proceedings were started were not doing business in the Sucker state.

Nothing will be done now until new bonds and affidavits are filed. Attorney Gilbert Noxon is representing the League in this controversy.

Myrtle Stedman has been making a tour of the theaters of the United States and Canada.

William Fox is presenting at the Globe Theater in New York a picturization of "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," perhaps the most fascinating of all the Arabian Nights Tales. The picture is the second of the Kiddies Feature series which Mr. Fox is sponsoring.

Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, those delightful youngsters of "Jack and the Beanstalk" fame, appear in the leading roles of the new picture—Francis as the son of Mustapha, the tailor, and Virginia as the captivating Princess. Also there is Violet Radcliffe, who was the miniature and polished villain of the land at the top of the "Beanstalk," and who in "Aladdin" appears as another deep-dyed doer of villainy—Abdalla, the magician, who would make the beautiful princess his bride.

The production is described as spectacular in the extreme, and required the services of hundreds of kiddies.

From beginning to end the filmed "Aladdin" is said to possess distinct charm. At the very outset the audience is introduced into the wonderful city of old Bagdad. The sun is setting on the Oriental splendor of the ancient mart of the East, and Mohammedans kneel everywhere in prayer. The Arabs on the sands of the desert, without the gates; the devout in the Mosques; the powerful in the palaces, and the workers in the bazaars, all turn towards Mecca. Then attention is concentrated on Aladdin, and there is unfolded with all its unusual and appealing qualities the ever-entrancing story of his marvelous adventures with the wonderful lamp and the genie who was its slave.

"Rasputin" Run Extended

The New York run of "Rasputin," the World Picture, Brady-Made, at the Park Theater, has been extended for the present, due to the insistent demand for tickets of admission.

The only unoccupied time on the books of the Park when it was decided to place "Rasputin" before the public immediately covered twelve days, beginning September 12. Another attraction had already arranged for a fortnight following the limited "open time" available for the World picture, which in consequence was announced for twelve days only.

A. M. P. A. MEETS

Associated Motion Picture Advertisers Complete Year of Accomplishment and Launch New Efforts—Committees Appointed

A year full of effective activity has just been closed by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc. With almost one hundred per cent attendance of membership, the activities of the second year were launched at the weekly meeting held on Thursday, September 20, at Keen's Chop House, on Forty-fourth street.

It was decided that an effort will be made to have some prominent person present to speak at every weekly meeting during the coming year.

A special drive also is to be made to recruit the membership of the committee to one hundred per cent of the advertising and publicity men of the picture industry in order that every company may be represented and the association may act as a unit on several questions of vital financial importance to motion picture companies.

The final audit of the circulation of all trade papers has been placed in the hands of a committee consisting of Nat S. Stronge of Vitagraph; P. A. Parsons of Pathe and Paul Gulick of Universal. They not only will verify previous checks but also will check the returns against each other for the purpose of ascertaining the duplication of circulation in the field.

President Arthur James announced the appointment of the standing committees for the year. These appointments are:

Publicity Committee—Nat S. Stronge, chairman; L. R. Thomas, Hop Hadley, A. S. Levino, Randolph Bartlett.

Membership—Paul Lazarus, chairman; Julian Solomon, Charles E. Moyer.

Publications—Charles Burr, chairman; Jacques Kopstein, Jerome Beatty, Nat G. Rothstein, Pete Schmidt.

Membership Recruiting—Victor Johnson, chairman; Jacques Kopstein, C. W. Borrell.

The Banquet committee which had in charge the recent annual banquet held at Delmonico's, was continued and was instructed to make arrangements for a monthly beefsteak dinner.

Harry Poppy and C. W. Borrell were elected to membership and three applications for membership were referred to the membership committee.

Prominent Writers for Lockwood

Another prominent author's name is linked with the next release of a Metro wonderplay de luxe, produced by the Yorke Film Corporation under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer with Harold Lockwood as the star. The picture is called "Paradise Garden" and the author is George Gibbs.

Harold Lockwood, handsome Yorke star.

George Gibbs has earned quite a reputation for himself as a writer. He has had published a number of books and all of them have had a big sale. "Paradise Garden" is now "on the stands" in novel form and of all of Mr. Gibbs' books this is regarded as his best.

The works of only prominent writers have been used by Mr. Balshofer as vehicles for his star. Of the recent Yorke productions the following authors have been credited with the story: Harold McGrath, "Pidgin Island"; Clarence B. Kelland, "The Hidden Spring"; Robert W. Chambers, "Under Handicap"; James B. Hendryx, "The Promise"; Francis Perry Elliott, "The Haunted Pajamas"; Marie Van Vorst, "Big Tremaine"; and E. J. Rath, "Mister 44" and "The River of Romance."

"Paradise Garden" has been made into a seven-reel picture and will be released October 1.

Discussion on Music Tax

Two committees, one representing the American Exhibitors Association and the other the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, met at the offices of the American Exhibitors' Association in the Times building, New York, Friday morning, September 21.

The object of the meeting was to try to see if some peaceful agreement could not be reached on the music tax question. Various propositions were submitted by each side and the question was thoroughly discussed. At the conclusion of the conference, lasting several hours, only one thing remained upon which no agreement had been reached.

Moe Levy, attorney, of Norfolk, Virginia, personal counsel for Jake Wells, president, and Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, were insisting that the concessions granted the American Exhibitors' Association should not be limited to members of that association, but should likewise apply to all other exhibitors in the United States and Canada, whether members of the A. E. A. or not.

The various ideas agreed upon by the gentlemen representing both organizations will be submitted to their respective boards of directors at special meetings to be called within the next ten days. The feature upon which the disagreements arose will remain in abeyance until after these meetings have been held, but both sides have agreed to discuss the question at issue and try to reach an agreement in the respective directors' meetings.

Saving Food in Pictures

The producing organizations of Paramount have signified their intention of co-operating with Herbert Hoover and the U. S. Food Administration in eliminating food waste by using substitutes in all pictures now in process of production, or which shall hereafter be produced, until the necessity for such conservation is past.

Screenshine

THE GALLANT EXCHANGE MAN

A PROMINENT Irish exchange manager, whom you know, last week took a feminine friend of his to Weeghman Park to watch the Cubs play.

The young lady, needless to say, was not a devotee of the sporting pages, and she knew very little about the tycobb pastime.

The two arrived at the park at the last of the second inning.

"Gee, that's great!" shouted the fill 'em man. "We've got a man on every base!"

"What of it?" said innocent, blue-eyed Feminine Friend; "so have they."

(She is resting easily.)

Every time we make up our minds to be higher and nobler we sit in front of somebody at a movie show who audibly tells his or her matey everything that's happening on the screen, and then we fall with a thud into the hating, roughneck class again.

"Umph," said the villainous Stuart Holmes, while the cameras at the William Fox studios were silent.

"Some women are so stout that it seems to me the only thing they can get ready-made is an umbrella."

LET THE MOVIES CURE YOU

A TOUCHING example of the power of the screen—even its healing power—is to be found in the story of the little girl who was struck by an automobile near the West End Theater, Chicago, last week.

She was knocked down and the car passed completely over her. When she was picked up and the ambulance called she cried:

"I don't want to go to the hospital! I want to go to the West End Theater!"

It was found that she was not seriously hurt but the ambulance physician decided that she should forego the movies for that evening at least.

That was probably harder for her to bear than the accident.

Goldwyn Still Expanding

HAROLD BOLSTER LEAVES TO INTRODUCE BRAND ABROAD

THAT exhibitor interest in Goldwyn productions is not regional or restricted to certain portions of the country is evidenced by the company's flood of contracts signed during the week that literally dot every part of the North American map. The success of "Polly of the Circus" and the unusual praise of the second Goldwyn production, "Baby Mine," following its pre-release showing in Chicago, has greatly stimulated the Goldwyn business in every section of the United States and Canada, as has been anticipated by the company. Among the contracts signed in the last few days are:

Atlanta, Ga., Rialto and Forsyth; Le Roy, N. Y., Family; Medina, N. Y., Delmar; Cazenovia, N. Y., Cazenovia; Lyons, N. Y., Ohmann; Chicago, Ill., Park; Enid, Okla., Royal; Sand Springs, Okla., Liberty; Marshall, Tex., Elks; Alva, Okla., Rex; Bryan, Tex., Colonial; Bonham, Tex., Bert and Ann; Honey Grove, Tex., Bon Ton; Detroit, Mich., Strand; Monroe, Mich., Family; Indianapolis, Ind., Southside; Bowling Green, Ky., Princess; Bismarck, N. D., Bismarck; Aberdeen, S. D., Princess; Sommerville, N. J., Regent; Far Rockaway, N. Y., Columbia; Jersey City, N. J., Monticello; Jersey City, N. J., Orpheum; Shippensburg, Pa., Lyric; Ridgeway, Va., Opera House; Johnsburg, Pa., Opera House; Pittsburgh, Pa., Hilltop; Fayette, Mo., Alama; Columbia, Mo., Columbia; Pulaski, Va., Elks Opera House; Covington, Va., Hippodrome; Radford, Va., Columbia; Lynchburg, Va., Isis.

Bolster on Around-the-World Tour

Harold Bolster, who recently resigned the vice-presidency and general management of the General Film Company to join the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation as general manager, leaves next week for a trip around the world to begin the extension of Goldwyn activities into the far parts of the globe.

Sailing from San Francisco on October 4, Mr. Bolster goes first to Sydney, Australia, where he will establish headquarters in that commonwealth. On his arrival at Sydney Mr. Bolster will find that Goldwyn already has paved the way for him by sending on ahead experienced organizers and salesmen who carried the first Goldwyn productions with them several weeks ago. Trade showings will be held at Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane, in Christchurch, New Zealand, and arrangements completed for a regularly maintained distribution in the antipodes. As soon as the Australian business is disposed of, Mr. Bolster will move on and arrange for deliveries in Melares, in India, Java, the Dutch East Indies, China, Japan, the Philippines, and Hawaii, by which time it is expected that he can visit Europe for the organization of a Goldwyn selling organization in the principal countries on that continent.

Mr. Bolster's work for motion pictures was done as a business executive of the Vitagraph Company. During the first three months of his employment he marked out new plans for more efficient production of pictures, which were adapted and installed by the president of Vitagraph. In April, 1917, Mr. Bolster resigned from his position as business manager of Vitagraph to become vice-president and general manager of the General Film Company.

Entering the Goldwyn organization two months ago

You already are aware of the sparkling eyes of the sparkling Madge Kennedy looking at you here and you know, too, that she's the cause of it all in Goldwyn's "Baby Mine."

quietly and unannounced, Mr. Bolster has devoted all of his time in recent weeks to the organization of Goldwyn's export department.

Mr. Bolster goes abroad equipped with a letter of introduction from Secretary of State Robert Lansing, to all of the United States consular and diplomatic agencies in every part of the world, which will greatly facilitate his work.

"Auction Block" About Ready

With Rex Beach's newest production, "The Auction Block," about ready for release and destined to be the usual big attraction and money-getter for exhibitors, a professional inquiry as to why Rex Beach pictures make so much money in the picture theaters prompts an immediate reply.

Rex Beach is author of almost a score of novels—all of which have been popular with the American public. Several million copies of his novels have been sold in America and hundreds of thousands in foreign lands. In recent years, besides having popularity in novel form, all of the Rex Beach fiction has had serial publication in the biggest and most successful magazines of the United States, England and Australia.

In addition to these two forms of publication virtually all of his bigger stories have been syndicated for publication in the magazine sections of thousands of American newspapers. It is almost an impossibility to advertise any one of these stories, when made into a motion picture, more than it already has been advertised through magazines, newspapers and in its novelized form to the people of America.

When "The Auction Block" is released in a few weeks every exhibitor knows that behind it there stands the immense attraction power of Rex Beach's name.

Mabel Normand at Plattsburg

The thousands of body-weary student officers in the second training camp at Plattsburg, who know little but reveille, beans, drill, beans, drill, beans and taps, were treated to a palatable morsel of diversion this week. Mabel Normand is in camp.

Work driven rookies—especially those whose lady-folk are far away and to whom week-ends mean nothing but Saturday to Monday—stood about with a pleasantly stunned expression on their countenances and gasped.

Mabel Normand's first comedy for Goldwyn Pictures, "Joan of Flatbush," by Porter Emerson Browne, calls for many martial scenes. In company with Director Charles T. Horan, Mr. Browne, Lawrence McCloskey, of the scenario staff, George Bertholon, Mr. Horan's assistant, and a headquarters staff, the comedienne will spend two weeks on the shores of Lake Champlain.

Hugo Ballin Gets Compliment

Being out of touch with the Sierras and the Alps, Hugo Ballin, the artist now engaged in motion picture work, found a problem confronting him when it came time to film "The Cinderella Man" in the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee.

Edward Childs Carpenter's successful little play, in which Mae Marsh is to be the star, calls for a dozen or more outdoor winter scenes—scenes with snow, frosted window panes and howling winds. The Jersey climate at this season is innocent of snow, so it became Mr. Ballin's duty and pleasure to teach nature a lesson with the aid of art.

Under the art director's skilled hand there arose on the floor in a commodious corner of a studio a vista of rooftops, chimneys, rain pipes and shutters. And presently the snowfall began. Carelessly yet carefully spread over the roofs lies a coating of what appears to be snow, three inches deep and so carefully compounded that in pictures it cannot possibly be distinguished from the article the poets love to write about and hate to shovel off their walks.

The day after the big studio snowfall Mae Marsh appeared with her furs over her arm. She was reminded that she wouldn't need them in the picture.

"But I dislike to sit about in the cold," she protested. Mr. Mallin felt complimented.

BRENON FILM READY

Herbert Brenon's Production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," Begins Broadway Run After Record-Breaking Exploitation Campaign

Following a campaign of exploitation and advertising of great magnitude, Herbert Brenon's production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," is to have its metropolitan presentation at the Broadway Theater, New York.

The decision to enter upon this engagement being reached suddenly, Herbert Brenon himself took full charge of his presentation arrangements, obtained the Broadway Theater, advertised on a lavish scale in all the Manhattan dailies, personally supervised all the details and management of this public showing, obtained billboard space throughout the metropolitan district and even aided in the arrangement of the musical score for this historic world-drama.

Only those who know how Herbert Brenon works in such periods of nervous tension can realize the energy with which he entered upon this seemingly impossible task. The great daily drama of the real Russia, the panorama of a government in process of dissolution, changing daily, naturally provided Brenon with opportunities for still further improvements in his picture after its showing at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, and he took advantage of these wherever possible. This involved trimming and partial rearrangement of his negative, the making of entirely new prints for the metropolitan run, and the preparation of other prints for territorial buyers.

The Iliodor Picture Corporation is now ready to sell territorial rights on "The Fall of the Romanoffs" and purchasers will have the good fortune to obtain the production almost at the moment when it is enjoying huge prosperity in New York and while the interest in the real Russian drama is at white heat as the pendulum swings backward and forward in Europe.

In the entire history of the picture industry there has never before been a production offered at the moment of a great national crisis that embodied down to the smallest of details every incident that develops in the news of the day and hour. Naturally Herbert Brenon contends that here is a production destined to make fortunes for all who present it throughout the country.

"Shorty" Hamilton, star in the series of "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton," Mutual, is a hit with fans, according to Mr. J. Bauer, manager of the Dixie Theater, Westbrook, Minnesota, who writes: "Shorty Hamilton is one of the best features I ever used. Fans are going wild over him."

FIVE-STAR SCHEDULE

Mutual's Plays for October 1 Are Unusual—Include Edna Goodrich, Mary Miles Minter, Helen Holmes, and Billie Rhodes

Edna Goodrich, Mary Miles Minter, Helen Holmes, Billie Rhodes and George Ovey are on Mutual's release schedule for the week of October 1. Miss Goodrich appears in "Queen X," the second of her Mutuals, and Miss Minter in "Her Country's Call." Billie Rhodes appears in "Some Nurse," the first of a new series of Mutual-Strand comedies.

Edna Goodrich in "Queen X"

"Queen X" is a five-reel drama built around the crusade of the federal authorities against a gang of oriental smugglers. It was written by Edwin M. Stanton, assistant district attorney of New York, who conducted the government's fight on the orientals. It is full of vivid action, and unusual scenes, carried by an interesting and powerful story. The production was staged under the direction of John B. O'Brien.

Miss Goodrich's first Mutual production, "Reputation," was a revelation of the star's popularity from the box office angle. It swept aside all doubt as to the value, at the ticket window of the motion picture theater, of a star of the speaking stage. Miss Goodrich's fame as a beauty and as an actress—if box office results are indicative—has penetrated the most remote cross-roads.

Mary Miles Minter in "Her Country's Call"

"Her Country's Call" is the second of the new series of Minter Mutuals starring the pretty little star. Miss Minter is now working under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham. "Her Country's Call" follows "Charity Castle," which was pronounced a Minter masterpiece.

Miss Minter is cast, in "Her Country's Call," as a girl of the moonshine mountains, the daughter of a Civil war colonel, stolen during war time by a bootlegger, who has been reared to despise the flag by the mountaineer whom she thought her father.

The old lesson is unlearned by a young captain of secret service and the mountain child sounds the alarm which saves the border town from attack by outlaws. She finds her father and sister and acquires a handsome husband.

"Some Nurse" First New Strand

"Some Nurse" is the first release of a new series of Strand-Mutual comedies starring Billie Rhodes, the pretty little comedienne. She is supported in the picture by Jay Belasco, who appeared with her in a series of successful one-reel productions a few months ago. "Some Nurse" is built on a clean, rollickingly funny story and has been produced with lots of snap. It is, in every respect, a quality comedy. The release date is October 2. The second comedy on the week's schedule is "Jerry in Yodel Land," a side-splitting one-reeler featuring George Ovey, the star in the series of one-reel Cub comedies which are released through Mutual. The release date is October 4.

Helen Holmes in "The Lost Express"

The third chapter of the new Mutual serial, "The Lost Express," is released on Monday, October 1. Helen Holmes does some thrilling stunts in "The Wreck at the Crossing," which is the title of the chapter. She rides on the roof of a speeding passenger train, does battle with a gang of ruffians, leaps to a cable stretched across the track and crawls, hand over hand to a telegraph pole. Before the chapter ends she has another thrilling experience. The automobile in which she is racing is struck by the train at a grade crossing, hurled twenty-five feet and demolished. The action of the chapter is fast and the story moves with great rapidity. Director McGowan has produced some high voltage thrills and Miss Holmes takes the risks with the same fearlessness which has won her world-wide fame as the most daring girl on earth.

"The Lost Express" is a fifteen chapter photonovel from the pen of Frederick B. Bennett, noted traveler and writer. It was directed by J. P. McGowan and produced by the Signal Film Corporation.

Two Topical Releases

The topical releases for the week include Reel Life No. 75, scheduled for October 1, and Mutual Weekly No. 144, scheduled for October 3. The weekly contains the current news up to the hour that the film is made up. Reel Life covers the following subjects: "Dogs of War," "The Sign of a City," "Making Army Rifles," "Japanese Dwarf Plants" and an animated cartoon from life entitled "The Chorus Girl Who Hesitates is Lost."

A trio of advance peeps at Mary Miles Minter in her latest story, "Her Country's Call," on Mutual's October 1 schedule.

In "Her Country's Call," the charming Miss Minter is a girl of the Moonshine Mountains who has been taught to despise the flag.

Varied Releases on Fox Program

What is probably the most varied and widely different group of releases William Fox has ever made is announced for October. The pictures star Gladys Brockwell, Virginia Pearson, June Caprice, George Walsh and Dustin Farnum. Technically, Miss Brockwell's play is a September issue, as it will be released on the last day of the month; but inasmuch as it has been substituted for another production through a change in schedule, it comes practically unheralded. This will be the order of the photoplays:

September 30—Gladys Brockwell in "Conscience." October 7—Virginia Pearson in "Thou Shalt Not Steal." October 14—June Caprice in "Miss U. S. A." October 21—George Walsh in "This Is the Life." October 28—Dustin Farnum in "The Scarlet Pimpernel."

"Conscience," Miss Brockwell's new starring vehicle, is an unusually vivid drama with an allegorical motif. The central theme has been deftly treated by Bertram Bracken, the director.

Miss Pearson's forthcoming subject, "Thou Shalt Not Steal," required an extraordinarily large supporting cast.

"Miss U. S. A.," as the title indicates, gives June Caprice a story infused with patriotic spirit. The picture is most dramatic and shows also many spectacular military scenes.

On October 21 the public will first have the opportunity of seeing a photoplay made by one brother and starring another. R. A. Walsh is in charge of screening "This Is the Life," and George is doing valiant work in showing just what that life is. The picture is of the light comedy type for which "Smiling George" has become famous.

"The Scarlet Pimpernel," the final release of the month, is rich in adventure and brims with action, as anyone who has read Baroness Orczy's splendid novel well knows. The stage version has been counted as one of the biggest "hits" of the British theater. Dustin Farnum is in the starred part. The pimpernel is a tiny wayside flower which has been adopted as the emblem of a band of Englishmen engaged in rescuing condemned aristocrats during the French Revolution.

Invites Exhibitors to Affiliate

The Motion Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles has been invited to become affiliated with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry through a resolution which was adopted at the recent meeting of the producers' branch committee. The Pacific coast body was formed some time before the creation of the National Association a year ago, and with few exceptions its membership is the same as the producers' branch committee of the national association. Prominent members of both associations have for some time been agitating the question as to the advisability of an affiliation, or possibly absorption of the coast association by the producers' committee as the latter now comprises forty-two producing companies in its membership roll and several applications have been assured for action at the forthcoming directors' meeting, including two members of the coast association.

C. C. Ezell, with Lewis J. Selznick, has returned to Dallas, Texas, from New Orleans, with more than $7,000 worth of bookings on the Selznick subjects. Mr. Ezell reports conditions bad at New Orleans, more than 24 suburban houses have closed since last March.

Marie Walcamp in "The Red Ace"

Marie Walcamp, who makes her 1917 bow to Universal patrons in Jacques Jaccard's new outdoor mystery serial, "The Red Ace," has, with one brief intermission, appeared in dramatic thrillers released under Big U auspices throughout the past four years.

Marie Walcamp, attractive and snappy Universal star.

Her work last season as the heroine of "Liberty," Jaccard's big patriotic story in sixteen episodes, established her firmly as one of the premier athletic stars of the cinema world. It is confidently predicted by those who are now following her work in the opening episodes of "The Red Ace," that she will add considerably to her prestige with the characterization of Virginia Dixon, the fearless and appealing American girl who fights her way to victory over a band of alien conspirators seeking to wrest the secret of a lost platinum mine from her family in the wilds of British Columbia.

Solid and substantial evidence of Miss Walcamp's drawing power may be gathered from the fact that since the release of the first episode of "The Red Ace," on August 27, more than 240 houses have booked the Universal serial in the vicinity of New York alone.

Born in the town of Dennison, Ohio, twenty-three years ago, Marie Walcamp first gained attention in musical comedy, appearing with Weber and Fields, Kolb and Dill, De Wolf Hopper, Anna Held and Frank Daniels, before she entered the films. She is a striking example of the actress who has developed from moderate success on the speaking stage into what might legitimately be termed triumph on the screen. Her proficiency in nearly every branch of outdoor sport in which a woman can excel has had much to do with her establishment as a prime favorite with that vast portion of the population that demands action as well as beauty from its heroines of the silent drama.

"The Conqueror" on Broadway

William Fox, the master motion picture producer, is showing still another remarkable feature production on Broadway at the Globe Theater. His new achievement is "The Conqueror," in which William Farnum's will be the electric-lighted name. R. A. Walsh, who staged "The Honor System," is the director. Jewel Carmen appears chief in support of Mr. Farnum. Henry Christeen Warnack, former dramatic critic of a Los Angeles newspaper, wrote the story.

The picture is at the Globe for a limited engagement of two weeks. The career of General Sam Houston, the Texas pioneer, was the basis for the story of "The Conqueror."

Patron Pulling Ad-Talks

BY THE "COUNSELLOR"

We owned a theater in a town of about five thousand population. There, of course, were several other houses in this town, and competition was pretty stiff. On an average everyone was perhaps breaking a little better than even. Rivalry was naturally keen.

The ability of each man seemed to be evenly balanced as to the selection of pictures that would appeal to his public. The problem resolved itself into the proper exploitation.

The newspapers were not very liberal, but gave what they themselves called a reasonable representation. The newspaper space used by each house ran about the same. If there was an increase in space by one house the rest would follow.

For convenience sake, let's say the name of our theater was the Princess and the manager's name Mr. Keen. Now Keen had a way of digging into a problem and getting the proper answer.

He realized that practically the same people were attending his theater night after night, and if this was true of his house it was true of the others. In other words, out of the five thousand or more inhabitants of the town they had succeeded in educating practically only the combined number of their seating capacity to the pictures. In all, perhaps there were only a couple of thousand people that had ever gone to see pictures and practically three thousand who never attended.

It resolved itself into a problem of educating more people to pictures. While the plan was original with him, it has been employed by others since and perhaps some one may have used it before him. Nevertheless its value and effect was big. He determined to get as comprehensive a mailing list as he could of the entire city. He figured that in a town of approximately five thousand people there weren't more than two thousand homes, and perhaps less. The telephone book, of course would have given him a fair list. The city directory would have been a good source of supply, but he figured it would be better to get this information first-hand. A house to house canvass was his idea. He knew it would take up a good deal of his time if he did it personally so he decided to hire a girl as the best method of securing the information.

He preceded her visits with an advertising campaign in the papers. In his ads he merely asked, "Has 'the princess' called on you yet?" He had cards printed for her with "The Princess" as the center line and in the lower left hand corner, "The Princess Theater." He made up convenient cards on which he asked for information that would be very valuable to him. The name and address, number in family, whether they attended a theater and which, which stars they liked, whether they preferred dramas, comedies, melodramas, etc.

He had the girl leave a pass whether they were regular attendants or not. Many of them did not want to take it, of course, regular patrons claiming they got their value when they went to his theater and others stating they wouldn't attend anyhow. He posted the girl on the various angles of the business, gave her bits of interesting news about the stars, so that she could answer some of the many questions that were put to her. Those to which she could not reply she jotted on the reverse side of the card. The information was looked up and printed from week to week in the house program.

With the information he had secured he practically had the entire city at his finger tips. He knew what each individual liked, who their favorite stars were and what their objections were to certain pictures. He classified these according to the sort of photoplays they liked and also according to the stars they preferred.

Let's say for instance he had Mary Pickford on Wednesday night. He would address a letter to those who admired Mary Pickford telling them that their favorite star was going to be in such and such a play on Wednesday night. The last paragraph he would devote to a brief mention of the names of other productions to appear that week. The admirers of other stars appearing that week would be advised in the same way. This required only one complete circularization for the entire week of the complete mailing list. It also had another advantage. If one of his steady patrons remained away for some time he would look up his mailing list, find what her favorite kind of plays or stars were and the next time he had something to her liking he would write her a personal letter stating he had missed her at the theater, but that he felt positive that Miss So-and-so in a certain picture was going to be to her special liking. This personal letter campaign never failed. It brought them back not only for that picture, but made a steady patron of that person.

The whole scheme when closely analyzed is nothing more or less than personal service and attention which invariably makes a person feel somewhat obligated to the person who is extending it. It is an important factor in an advertising campaign.

Great Help to Exhibitor

MOTOGRAPHY:

Your department, "What the Picture Did for Me," is of inestimable help to the exhibitor. For honest criterions by which to judge a play in advance to its showing I depend almost exclusively upon your critics and Julian Johnson of Photoplay Magazine.

Your manner of publishing the worth while news is the best I can conceive. You have the faculty of assembling to the best advantage a great deal of news in a comparatively small area of clear, white paper.

As to the editorials, I consider them honest, excellently written and stimulating. I do not always agree with their sentiments, but that is why I read them. I want to get the other man's point of view, not my own.—A. K. Pay, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

MOTOGRAPHY, Gentlemen:

I have not been a regular subscriber to MOTOGRAPHY, as I have been the state representative of another publication and am still a contributor to it, but your cut plan of loaning good cuts appeals to me and I am enclosing check for a year's subscription.

Will be glad to send in my opinion of the worth of pictures from time to time for your valuable "What the Picture Did for Me" department.

I play Norma Talmadge in "The Law of Compensation" on October 27-28 and would like to use that cut in your September 15 issue, the one showing Miss Talmadge in the garden.

I am also playing "The Alabaster Box" and would like to borrow those cuts from the same issue. I get out a hard finished paper house organ a week in advance of my playing dates on all pictures.—Fraternally, Jo E. Rickards, The Hip, Phoenix, Arizona.

Importance of News Films

The open booking plan under which Universal's twice a week news service is now being handled is meeting with gratifying success. During the past summer the number of exhibitors using the Animated Weekly and Current Events have increased nearly 100 per cent. Issued on Wednesday and Saturday, respectively, these two pictorial chronicles of the world's happenings are enabled to cover every event of wide interest with almost unbelievable speed. On special occasions, such as the recent parade of New York State troops, entire reels have been photographed, titled, printed and distributed within a space of six hours.

Under the hustling leadership of Jack Cohn, a corps of news specialists have been developed who never miss an opportunity to secure the best record of events "just as they happen," that it is possible to obtain. News scoops put over by Universal cameramen that will probably go down in cinema history include the first pictures to reach this country of General Pershing's arrival in France and the scenes of the Russian revolution, to mention two special instances that comes to mind immediately.

It is enterprise of this character which has raised the news feature to a plane of importance never before enjoyed. With the whole world in turmoil, people are looking more eagerly every day to the up-to-the-minute news feature for a graphic interpretation of the events that will be talked of by future generations.

The Animated Weekly and Current Events meet this demand in every particular with good photoplay, clever editing and brief, snappy titles.

Universal's "Make It Pay"

With the resumption of full-time business throughout the industry, Universal's "Make It Pay" department, which was established a few weeks ago as a free service auxiliary for exhibitors, is being patronized extensively. Not a small share of credit is due C. G. Wood and his assistants handling the work of the department for helping put over Universal's two new serials, "The Gray Ghost," and "The Red Ace," which have both been successfully launched in the East within the past three weeks.

Special copy is prepared wherever it is necessary to assist an exhibitor in reaching his clientele, and advertising and publicity cuts, suited to his special needs are loaned free of charge.

Praise "The Conqueror"

The New York newspaper critics were unanimous and enthusiastic in their praise of "The Conqueror," William Fox's massive and spectacular photo-dramatization of the heroic life and romantic times of General Sam Houston, which opened a Broadway run at the Globe Theater last Monday night. William Farnum received glowing encomiums for a masterly portrayal of Houston, one of the most famous characters in American history, and the photography, especially of the thrilling battle scenes, excited unusual interest.

Following are excerpts from reviews of "The Conqueror":

Harriet Underhill, in the Tribune, said:

A chance to see William Farnum in a picture which abounds in human interest. Sam Houston is the best thing that William Farnum ever has done, not forgetting his dual role in "The Tale of Two Cities." Thousands of horses and some stupendous battle scenes are a part of the entertainment. In fact, the picture quite beggars description: there is so much of it and it is so varied. But bigger than these is the dynamic, dramatic drive of "The Conqueror." The picture holds the audience tense, ever expectant of new thrills, as they watch the humorous, romantic, sometimes pathetic, ever human story of Sam Houston.

Zit, in the Evening Journal, said:

"The Conqueror" has come and conquered. This William Fox wonder picture, revealed for the first time last night at the Globe, is a triumph of photoplay production. It possesses in abundance every quality that spells success, and success that is solid, substantial, lasting. And it gives William Farnum, one of the most gifted American actors, a role he makes his own. Mr. Farnum's is a masterful interpretation. "The Conqueror" is an inspiration to Young America of today, for it shows what can be done if a man has will and faith in himself. Don't miss it. It has been called "the titanic American drama," and it is.

The American said:

The audience last night actually sat on the edge of their seats. "The Conqueror" is clean, wholesome, stirring, patriotic photodrama. It is superlatively American.

The Evening World said:

"The Conqueror" lived up to its title, for it surely did conquer the large audience that turned out to see William Farnum in the leading role.

The Globe said:

It is a cross section cut out of American history-in-the-making, and it holds intense interest for every citizen and resident of the United States. Sam Houston is depicted with vigor by William Farnum.

Special General Film Herald

To cover important new announcements a special edition of the General Film Herald has just been distributed. It contains data and forecasts on the new four-reel O. Henry stories, the new George Ade "Fables in Slang" and the Falcon features, four-reel dramas. The newest Selig releases and the complete "Further Adventures of Stingaree" from the Kalem Company are also represented in this edition.

Sails for London

J. Frank Brockliss was the guest of honor at a theater party given at the Eltinge Theater, New York, last week. In the party were the executives of the King-Bee Films Corporation.

Among the guests were Louis Burstein, president of the King-Bee Company; Nat H. Spitzer, L. L. Hiller, Jacob Wilke, Arvid Gillstrom, Ed. Rosenbaum, Jr., and S. Garrett.

Mr. Brockliss represents the King-Bee Billy West comedies abroad.

Olive Thomas in Triangle's "Broadway, Arizona," and Belle Bennett in "Ashes of Hope."

Colored Producing Company

The Kolored Komedy Kompany, which will release the Trykay Films, is one of the recent entrants in the film business with headquarters in Chicago.

This company is under the direction of E. Fourer Hurley and Ogden K. Hunsaker.

Mr. Hurley has had a good many years' experience in the picture business and was more recently with the Continental Producing Company, which made "The Spirit of '76."

Mr. Hunsaker, previous to joining the Trykay Company, was associated with Balboa and Keystone as assistant director.

The studios of the new concern are at 36th street and Rhodes avenue, Chicago, where they are now at work on their first comedy production, "The Darktown Fire Brigade." Studios will also be constructed at Mt. Bayou, Mississippi.

Some well known stories for which the company states it has picture rights are "The Coffin Club," by Roger Melville, which ran in the Saturday Evening Post; David Post's story, "African Golf," which ran in People's Magazine; "The Battle of Bull Durham," by Ralph Davidson, which ran in the Cosmopolitan.

The company has already secured the services of Miss Jane Thomas and Lee Perrin, it is said, to play leads in their productions.

Flaherty Options Belgian Pictures

F. J. Flaherty has secured an option on the Belgian war pictures which are being marketed by M. L. Fulton for the entire United States. These pictures are said to be the authentic pictures as endorsed by the Belgian government and have the official signatures to guarantee this.

Mr. Flaherty has not stated in what manner he will exercise the option he has obtained nor how he will market the films.

New Russian Play

A big Russian production to be released this season is "The Tyranny of the Romanoffs," a six reel photo-spectacle based on the tyranny of the Czars of the Great Russian Empire, which is now well on its way towards becoming one of the greatest democracies of the world. The picture was purchased by Ben Blumenthal, the head of the well-known Export and Import Film Company.

"Wolfville Tales" Filmed

"Wolfville," the classic frontier town created by the late Alfred Henry Lewis and made known to millions of readers in the series of Western stories which this gifted writer produced some years ago, has been immortalized by the Greater Vitagraph Company.

Several months ago the Vitagraph Company obtained the motion picture rights to all of the "Wolfville Tales" and the first two features from the series already have been completed at the company's Western studio in Hollywood, with William Duncan and Carol Holloway, stars of the big serial, "The Fighting Trail," in the leading roles. The initial picture in the list of Lewis masterpieces will be "Dead Shot Baker" and the second "The Tenderfoot."

As a painter in words of the quick-shooting days in the West, Alfred Henry Lewis took rank with Bret Harte.

Paris Rebuilt for Fox

Paris was rebuilt for a William Fox picture play only a short time since. Mr. Fox's decision to film Baroness D'Orczy's "The Scarlet Pimpernel" made it necessary to call out half the carpenters in Los Angeles to do the construction work. The subject will be released on October 28.

Take a Drink at the Fountain

"ISN'T it fine when the lights blink bright at the Vic? You take a peep and see your neighbors all sitting around, while the orchestra fizzes out a lively march."

"Shows you unusual animals as they live in their own back parlors of the jungle."

These are a couple of examples of the expressions used by the most refreshing and original program writer in America. This new advertising star is located at the Victoria Theater in Buffalo and was discovered solely by MOTOGRAPHY.

Very soon we are going to print a whole story, giving a number of other new, quaint and patron-pulling expressions from this unquenchable fountain of words. There is really a wealth of value and suggestion in the way he writes his programs. You will find some GOOD STUFF.

Watch for it in MOTOGRAPHY very soon.

Exhibitors Co-operate

Factional interests were forgotten last week in Washington when representatives of the American Exhibitors' Association and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America worked together in behalf of the exhibitors against the proposed war tax.

H. B. Varner, chairman of the legislative committee of the A. E. A., and Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the A. E. A., sent a wire to Lee Ochs, president of the M. P. E. L., advising him that the situation was serious for exhibitors. Mr. Ochs was out of the city and in his absence Mr. Blumenthal sent broadcast a number of telegrams and Grant Anson hurried to Washington to co-operate with Mr. Varner and Mr. Pettijohn.

"Mr. Blumenthal and Mr. Anson are entitled to their share of credit for anything that may have been accomplished in Washington that will prove beneficial to the exhibitor," said Mr. Pettijohn on his return to New York. "Both men co-operated with Mr. Varner and myself and all factional differences were forgotten in our work for the exhibitors of the country."

Brenon Controls Own Corporation

According to the New York Telegraph, Herbert Brenon, president of the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation, has purchased full control of the organization from Louis J. Selznick, who owned a half interest. The price paid was the turning over to Mr. Selznick full control of the productions made by Brenon during the past year. These include "War Brides," featuring Nazimova, and "The Lone Wolf."

This episode in Briggs' famous cartoon series, "When a Feller Needs a Friend," from the Chicago Tribune, needs no explanation. It is simply a new expression of the old truth of the universality of pictures.

Essanay's for October

Essanay's October offering on the Perfection Pictures program, George Kleine System, distributors, includes two five-part comedy-dramas and a continuation of the weekly releases through General Film of George Ade's Fables in Slang.

Taylor Holmes heads the feature list in his second Essanay production, entitled, "Fools for Luck." This is a scream version of a story by Kennett Harris entitled "Talismans," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Based on the prevailing human weakness, superstition, and portraying the ludicrous efforts of a young man to "work a rabbit's foot" in a love affair, it presents Mr. Holmes in a role of subtle humor of the same type in which he won his fame on the stage. The picture has a screen time of sixty-five minutes. It will be released October 8.

A week following the release of "Fools for Luck," Bryant Washburn will make his first appearance on the Perfection Pictures program in a five-part comedy-drama entitled "The Fibbers." The story, written by James W. Adams, a magazine writer, hinges on the theory that while it is all very well not to fib to your wife, still, by the same tokens, your wife should not fib to you. The results of this reasoning, wrought in "The Fibbers"—both man and wife—are dire in their effect. It has been aimed to give Mr. Washburn a role affording him the amplitude for his humorous portrayals which were so well liked in "Skinner's Dress Suit," and other of his recent successes. Virginia Valli appears as his leading woman. Miss Valli has been seen before with Mr. Washburn, having played an important part in "Filling His Own Shoes." She also took the leading feminine role for Taylor Holmes in his first Essanay production, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," and won favorable comment on her work. "The Fibbers" has a screen time of sixty-five minutes. It will be released October 15.

New Madge Kennedy Comedy

Comedians of note are in the cast supporting the Goldwyn comedienne, Madge Kennedy, in the filming of "Nearly Married," Edgar Selwyn's successful comedy, which is nearing completion at the Goldwyn Fort Lee studios. Among them are Frank Thomas, Mark Smith, Alma Tell, Richard Barthelmess and Hedda Hopper.

Mr. Thomas, after a number of years in stock, was seen in several noteworthy Broadway attractions and last season was leading man in "The House of Glass."

Mark Smith, who played the part of "Tom" in the original stage production of "Nearly Married," has the same role in support of Miss Kennedy. He made his debut on the stage at the age of seven in "1492." After several years in stock, Mr. Smith was given an important part in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," with Henrietta Crosman as the star. Later he was seen in a repertoire with Bertha Galland. His next venture was as one of the principal comedians with Marie Cahill in "Marrying Mary." His most recent work on the stage was with "The Traveling Salesman."

Henry Walthall, the newest Paralta star, will make his debut under the auspices of the Paralta, under the personal direction of Oscar C. Apfel.

Seven Reel Features on Program

RELEASED ONCE A MONTH BY TRIANGLE

COMMENCING December first, Triangle will release a multiple-reel feature once a month at the regular program price to all Triangle exhibitors who have contracts or run the program regularly. This is offered as a sort of bonus to the Triangle exhibitors, enabling them to give their patrons a monthly special feature which will net extra profits to the theater.

Some time ago it was announced that Triangle would release one big states-right feature a month, which could be booked either by the Triangle exhibitors or by others. This would have been offered at a price considerably in advance of the regular program number. It has been decided, however, that everything will be placed on the program at the standard program rental.

Big Stories Purchased

During the past month H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Triangle Film Corporation, has quietly purchased sveral big and widely advertised novels and plays for these special productions. The first to be produced is "The Alley of Flashing Spears," a story by Donn Byrne which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. This is considered one of the most popular stories of the year and will take rank with the greatest special features of the past year.

Entirely aside from these multiple reel features, the other program releases of five reels each will be of a higher artistic and box office standard than ever before, according to a positive statement issued by Mr. Davis.

"We are paying particular attention to the selection of our stories and will furnish the exhibitor with a diversified program of society dramas, comedy drama with a punch, heavy dramas with comedy relief, strong heart interest plays, and dramas of the outdoors. Emphasis is being placed upon the importance of titles,—titles which will excite interest and a desire to buy on the part of those who see them in advertisements or posters.

Many Productions Ready

"All October releases are now finished and the November productions will be completed within ten days, so we are now ready to guarantee not only prompt deliveries but will have prints in exchanges at least two weeks ahead of the November release dates." Mr. Davis continued:

October and November releases are as follows: "Ashes of Hope," "A Phantom Husband," "One Shot Ross," "Wild Sumac," "Firefly of Tough Luck," "The Stainless Barrier," "Doing Her Bit," "Up or Down," "Indiscreet Corinne," "Fighting Back," "The Fuel of Life," "Easy Money" and "Blue Blood."

We are willing to stake the future of Triangle on the quality of these October and November productions from every standpoint—story, cast, lavishness of production, and box-office value. They are the kind that will bring people back. We also have both Triangle and Keystone comedies for November completed and are now working on December releases. No money has been spared to make these genuine laugh producers.

Seven-Reel Specials

We invite the opinions of representative exhibitors as to the length of special features. The consensus of opinion of those already consulted is that the actual length should not exceed six thousand feet to be released in seven short reels.

Working on this basis, the special monthly releases for the program will be seven-reelers of the quality of "The Flame of the Yukon," which holds the record for being one of the best specials of the year, although it was released on the program at a price much lower than any of the states-right features.

Utica Exhibitors Meet

Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, spent Thursday in Utica, N. Y., attending a meeting of the Utica exhibitors. For some time there has been a split among Utica theater men. Three factions have been in the field, and it was impossible to get any concerted action by the exhibitors to any movement in their behalf. Recently some of the leading exhibitors in the various groups saw that in order to get anywhere it was necessary for co-operation and all factional differences were settled, so that the local organization in Utica is a strong body of exhibitors determined and militant for their rights.

While in Utica Mr. Pettijohn conferred with William Fait, Jr., treasurer of the A. E. A. The organization was ninety days old on September 20, and after an examination of the books it was found that not a single bill was left unpaid and that there was a substantial balance in the bank.

William Desmond in Triangle's "Flying Colors," September 30; Bessie Love in "Polly Ann," and the oriental Triangle-

Keystone Comedy, "The Sultan's Wife." Those delectable Keystone bathing girls appear in the latter as harem maids.

MOTION PICTURE CLUB

Representative Film Men of Chicago Organize to Fill Place of Dissolved Reel Fellows Club—Membership Limited to 100

Chicago has a new club for film men, built carefully and conservatively and supported by the most representative and prominent men in the business.

"The Motion Picture Club" is the name of the new organization. It has been developed from new material by the re-organization committee of the Reel Fellows Club, the former organization which has been dissolved and cleared from the map. This committee has worked in co-operation with representative film men of the city and the new club is the result of the combined opinions of the entire group.

The Motion Picture Club will have a carefully selected membership, limited to 100. This is to insure the right kind of men and the right kind of support. The dues are to be $2 per month; the initiation fee, $10. Meetings will be held at prominent clubs twice a month, one of these meetings to be held at noon.

The above decisions were made at a dinner meeting held at the Planters Hotel September 17, under the leadership of R. R. Nehls, chairman of the reorganization committee, and Richard Stoddard, secretary. Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago M. P. E. L., and many other prominent film men were present.

New Elsie Ferguson Play

Following the sensational success of Elsie Ferguson's initial photoplay characterization in "Barbary Sheep," at the Rialto Theater, New York, and throughout the country, under the auspices of Adolph Zukor for Artcraft Pictures, the next screen subject for the popular stage star was announced by Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft. The new film vehicle for Miss Ferguson is an adaptation from the popular book, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing," by Mary S. Watts, author of "Nathan Burke," and many other well known works.

Work on this production is now well under way at the Famous Players-Lasky studios in Fort Lee under the personal direction of Mr. Tourneur. An exceptional cast has been selected, including Elliott Dexter, Fania Marinoff, Frank Goldsmith, Callie Delatorre, Mae Bates, Edith McAlpin, Isabel Vernon, Blanche Craig, James Cogan and Marie Burk.

"The Warrior" at Sing Sing

Directly following the close of the run of "The Warrior" at the Criterion Theater, Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin, owners of the spectacle starring the giant Maciste, were in receipt of a request from the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing, New York, bespeaking an exhibition of the picture for its members. The request was promptly met by General Enterprises, Inc., and in consequence the exploits and daring stunts of marvelous Maciste were watched with keen enjoyment by the entire prisoner body of Sing Sing on Wednesday evening, September 12. E. J. Meagher, chairman of the Mutual Welfare League entertainment committee, was enthusiastic in his praise of "The Warrior" and chose the picture because of its timely patriotic and war flavor.

To Fight Blue Laws

Theater managers and proprietors of amusement places are up in arms in the state of Ohio as the result of an attempt on the part of state authorities to enforce the blue laws and prohibit Sunday opening of theaters.

The action of the managers, it transpired, is due to the raid which the police of Hamilton, Ohio, conducted recently against the proprietors and managers of theaters in that city. More than a hundred places of amusement, including motion picture houses and vaudeville theaters, opened their doors to the public on Sunday and the Chief of Police of the city swooped down on them and closed them all.

It marks the first of a series of raids throughout the state of Ohio for the suppression of Sunday enterprises, it is understood, and unless the managers mobilize for a hasty defense, it will become state-wide in its effect.

A meeting has been called at Cincinnati, and plans for the prosecution of a campaign against the blue laws will be formulated. It is expected the local headquarters of the United Managers' Protective Association as well as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will be called in to assist in the fight.

The action of the Ohio authorities in warring on the Sunday shows at this time is declared to be most unwarranted, in view of the tax situation. Offers have been made by theater proprietors to turn over a portion of the Sunday receipts to the various war funds of the nation, while frequently various managers have done this without a previous announcement.

In view of this state of affairs, the managers maintain, it is a short-sighted policy that prompts the officials of Hamilton and presumably of the entire state to enforce well nigh obsolete blue laws.

Unique Film Star

Mary MacLane, the Butte, Montana, girl whose book, "The Story of Mary MacLane," startled and almost shocked the country several years ago, has become a film star.

Miss MacLane has been engaged by Essanay and will be featured in a super-feature entitled: "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," by that company.

The picture will take up the heart affairs of Miss MacLane which she treated with such frank realism in her story. She gives some idea of her opinion of men, as she gleaned it from her actual life experiences, in the following statements:

I have the passionate, sensuous gray eyes of the weary courtesan and the virginal pink lips of the cloistered nun. I have a slim young body and it was my vanity that saved me from many a slip between the cup and the lip.

I am egotistical, but not more than the rest of the world. I am only more frankly so than the rest.

I have had loves to which I have given my heart's blood by the gallon.

From drunk men, from false teeth, from a fish too long dead, from a dread mood of discontent—kind devil deliver me.

Miss MacLane is now writing her own scenario at the Essanay studios. Arthur Berthelet will direct the picture, which will be in six or seven reels.

Director General McGowan of the Signal Corporation purchased three passenger coaches, and an engine, from the Y. N. P. R. R. this week, which will be wrecked in the eighth episode of "The Lost Express," the Signal-Mutual serial featuring Helen Holmes.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

Ogden Protective Policy

AT a meeting of the managing officials of the Ogden Pictures Corporation the question arose as to the disposition of the succeeding Lillian Walker releases in the various state rights territory throughout the country.

It appears that one or two territories in the United States are not at this time in a position to hande extraordinary attractions on any basis other than a percentage basis.

It is the determined policy of the Ogden Pictures Corporation not to release any production on a percentage basis, and the question arose as to what disposition should be made of the succeeding releases where any prior release had not been disposed of in any territory at the time of the completion of any subsequent production.

The managing officials therefore determined that no succeeding Walker production shall be offered for sale to state rights buyers, or released in any territory, until all preceding releases have been disposed of and actually booked.

This is to avoid a subsequently made production from being exploited or booked, with a prior release never having been shown. In other words, productions must be booked in the order in which they are made.

States Rights House Organ

More than one hundred direct-by-mail inquiries from exhibitors desirous of booking "Parentage" have been received by the editor of "The Parentage Messenger," the first house organ to be launched in the state rights field. These requests for first runs have come from all over the country following the issuance of the first four numbers, and each one has referred in praiseworthy terms to Frank J. Seng's house organ, thereby justifying its existence as a magazine of service.

As rapidly as these letters have come in they have been sorted and forwarded to the various exchanges handling "Parentage," to be followed up by personal calls and the actual booking contracts secured.

The fifth issue of the "Parentage Messenger" contains a splendid article on "Campaigning by Telephone," in which a way is pointed out to work up a large personal following by a consistent use of the telephone.

Hoffman Gets "White Trail"

"The Great White Trail," an epic of the Arctic and which received such sterling endorsement in the trade reviews at its recent Broadway showing, has been acquired from Wharton, Inc., by M. H. Hoffman, Inc. Contracts were signed a few days ago which transfer the entire American rights to this feature—exclusive of Canada.

Big Exhibitor in Field

David V. Picker, manager of the New Russia Film Corporation, is another of those who have come into the industry with a sound commercial training. Recently Mr. Picker has entered the states rights field, and is one of the chief promoters of the new official pictures of the Russian Revolution and Battlefronts, brought to this country a few weeks ago by the representatives of the Skobeleff committeee. Mr. Picker was one of those who selected these pictures and feels that they will become an immediate success with American audiences.

Secures "A Mormon Maid"

The Greater Features Company of Seattle, Washington, have secured the Pacific Northwest rights to the Friedman Enterprise production, "A Mormon Maid," in which Mae Murray is starred. The territory embraced in this field covers Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

The negotiations were concluded on behalf of the Greater Features Company by Jack Lannon, president, while the Friedman Enterprises and their selling agents, Hiller & Wilk, were represented by Benjamin Friedman, who is making an extended tour of the Pacific coast in the interest of "A Mormon Maid."

In addition to controlling "A Mormon Maid," the Greater Features Company is exploiting "Where Are My Children," Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "The Witching Hour" and "The Conquest of Canaan."

Noble's Special Picture

John W. Noble's big state rights offering, "Shame," claims special attention because of the fact that it depends for its success upon the beautiful heart interest of its deeply absorbing story as much as it does upon its sensational and spectacular features.

While it is perhaps natural that a director, striving for the first time to produce a subject which measures up to his own ideas of a really big production, would strive for a startling effect, Mr. Noble has withstood this temptation and confined his efforts to building up the climaxes of a strong, well balanced drama with remarkable skill and intelligence. Jules Burnstein is acting as Mr. Noble's general representative marketing "Shame" on a state rights basis.

Scene from John W. Noble's special state rights picture, "Shame."

Buys "Lust of the Ages"

Harry Samwick, on behalf of the Producers' Feature Service, purchased the rights to "The Lust of the Ages," the first Lillian Walker release of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, for Greater New York, Long Island and Westchester county.

On all the future productions of the Ogden Pictures Corporation the state of New Jersey will be sold as a separate territory, and Greater New York, up to and including Westchester county, will form another state right allotment. The entire United States has, therefore, been divided into twenty-one state rights territories, as compared with fourteen individual territories, which has heretofore been the accepted division. This will not alone permit of a greater number of prints of the production to work, but will also allow exchanges greater concentration of endeavor.

Warner Buys Billy Wests

The Billy West franchise for the state of New York has been grabbed up by Harry M. Warner, president of the Dispatch Film Company, the rights having been acquired of the King Bee Company. Warner, who has been identified exclusively as a purveyor of big features, has fallen into the comedy realms of pictureland lately, as witness his acquisition of the "Mutt and Jeff" series of cartoons, and other comedies.

Handle "Submarine Eye"

E. & H. Film Distributing Company of Atlanta, Georgia, has secured the distribution rights to Williamson Brothers' sub-sea thriller, "The Submarine Eye," for the states of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee. The LaBelle Amusement Company is handling this attraction for the state of Florida.

Manager Hy Gainsborg of the New York Hoffman-Foursquare Exchange reports that he has booked the last of the Broadway picture houses on Edgar Lewis' "The Bar Sinister." The complete list of theaters handling this picture are: Savoy, Broadway and Thirty-fourth street; Seventy-seventh Street Theater, Schuyler Theater, Adelphi Theater, Riviera, Keystone, Olympia, Claremont, and Fox's Audubon Theater. All these houses have played "The Bar Sinister" from one to four days each.

The home office of General Film at 440 Fourth avenue, New York, gave a formal farewell to Allen Adams, its representative in the great draft army, and at the same time ratified the ideal of patriotic duty.

"Wonderful Co-operation"

MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago: We are returning via American Express a bunch of cuts, for which we thank you.

We are enclosing another batch of "requests" and trust that we will be able to get some of these.

Thanking you for your wonderful co-operation, we remain.—W. S. McLaren, Majestic-Colonial Theater Co., Inc., Jackson, Mich.

PATHE, KAPLAN ALLIANCE

Big Distributing Organization to Handle Plays of Russian Art Film Corporation — Kaplan Going Back to Newest Republic

One of the big deals of the new season in the motion picture industry has just been completed, the contracting organizations being the Russian Art Film Corporation and Pathe. By the terms of the agreement signed by Pathe and N. S. Kaplan, president of the Russian Art Film Corporation and representative of the famous Moscow Art Theater in America, all the screen productions of this company will be distributed in America and Canada by Pathe and its comprehensive organization. Negotiations for the sale of the rights in other countries are well under way.

With the success of his plans assured so far as America and Canada are concerned, Mr. Kaplan has engaged passage for Russia and will sail from Vancouver on October 25 to continue in Moscow the production of film features for Pathe. Unless government obstacles intervene, he will have in his party an American cameraman and laboratory manager, thereby assuring the continuation of the Russian repertory under the best possible auspices. The launching of the repertory in America has been a tremendous task because of the handicap of cutting and titling the pictures in New York, thousands of miles from the base of production. This handicap will be eliminated under the new program and the features will arrive in this country practically ready for release.

"As I intimated last week," said Mr. Kaplan, in discussing the details of the agreement with Pathe, "I have obtained the co-operation of one of the most important distributing organizations in the United States to market my productions. In fact, I am convinced that so far as Russian Art Films are concerned, Pathe is the most important distributing organization in this country. The long experience of this corporation in handling foreign films is a guarantee that Russian Art Films will be introduced to American audiences under the best possible auspices. Before I return to Russia I shall deliver to Pathe twenty-six completed five and six-reel features. Long before these features are all released I shall be sending other and better pictures to America to continue the repertory. In addition to this program, there will be a series of special features."

Petrova to Give Recitals

Madame Olga Petrova is planning to make a brief appearance on the legitimate stage this season at one of the smaller and more intimate type of metropolitan theaters like the Princess or the Booth. These recitals will be held on afternoons other than regular matinee days and will not in any way interfere with Petrova's activities in producing Petrova Pictures.

By the arrangement existing between Petrova and Frederick L. Collins, president of Petrova Picture Company, the distinguished actress will be unhampered in these stage pursuits, in view of her agreement to devote herself primarily to the production of her own personally supervised films. Until her first picture has been released, on or about October 22, Petrova cannot definitely announce the dates of her recitals, but she has already begun to formulate her program.

What Theater Men Are Doing

NEWS FROM LIVE EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

New Theater Policy

A NEW policy which will mark an epoch in the motion picture history of Columbus, Ohio, is announced for the Majestic Theater. It will mean the presentation of fewer pictures and better pictures in a practically ideal environment. It will mean the presentation of the world's best plays and the world's greatest stars. Each picture will be shown an entire week, accompanied by an orchestra second to none in the playing of pictures. This organization will be led by Buel B. Risinger, one of America's foremost orchestra conductors, who has had a wide and varied experience in the playing of motion pictures.

In addition to this there is in course of construction, and now being installed, the largest pipe organ in the city of Columbus, which the manufacturers have guaranteed will be ready for playing November 1.

First, as to the pictures themselves, which have been secured for the Majestic at an annual rental of $50,000, the largest contract ever signed by a single motion picture house in Columbus; they will include all of the productions directed by David W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," and other famous masterpieces, and also all of the pictures in which Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Marguerite Clark, Billie Burke, Geraldine Farrar, Pauline Frederick, and Olga Petrova will appear.

This does not refer to any of the pictures in which these stars have appeared in the past, but only to the big new master productions that are now in the making.

Heretofore, Majestic patrons have seen two or three productions of uniformly high quality in one week. They will now see but one picture within the week, but it will be the very last word in motion picture art. It will be of such quality as to be worth the while of the most critical. The picture going public is perhaps more exacting in its demands than any other class of play-going people. They are not content with the modest productions of a few seasons back; they demand the most skillful actors in the theater world and the most elaborate stagings, correct in every detail, that technical directors can provide.

It is such a demand as this in which the Majestic now delights. It fairly jumps at the opportunity, for the management knows that it has the best pictures that the world provides and that it has the facilities for presenting them in a way conspicuously worthy.

The greatest program the world now offers is at the disposal of Majestic patrons; the stars they know or want to know, the plays they have wanted pictured, the novels they have wanted to see visualized—all big—all artistic—all worth while pictures.

ENTER THE WEEK RUN

There is nothing that succeeds like success, is the old aphorism. Correspondingly, there is nothing in the theatrical world which indicates the touching of a popular need and a desire to supply them, like the extended engagement. This play or that picture is able to remain in a theater for an entire week for the reason that it has real merit behind it.

The Majestic has begun a policy of playing all its pictures for the full seven days, a policy which has usually been possible only in the great centers of population, like New York and Chicago. But now such a remarkable assemblage of talent and such remarkable producing facilities for great pictures have been made that it becomes easily possible to play such attractions for a solid week in Columbus.

The seven-day run means that the most remarkable program of stars and the most remarkable organization of producers that the picture world has ever known is at the disposal of Majestic patrons. It means that the general directive genius of men like Jesse L. Lasky and Daniel Frohman and the technical efficiency of men like David W. Griffith, Cecil B. DeMille, Thomas Ince, John Emerson and J. Searle Dawley and the acting ability of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Billie Burke, Pauline Frederick, Geraldine Farrar, Marguerite Clark and Olga Petrova have been made available to one theater. It means that the super de luxe program of all screendom has been skimmed of its cream and contracted for, to entertain Majestic patrons fifty-two weeks in the year.

It means that the director has more leisure to prepare his scripts, to study his effects, to direct his technical men and carefully cast his actors to the best advantage. It means that the actor has time to prepare a fine part, and do it well. It heralds the fact that the day of the consistently great photoplay has arrived.

NEW MAJESTIC MUSIC

The Majestic management has always realized the importance of good music.

To bring the Majestic music to a high state of efficiency a symphony orchestra especially trained in the art of playing pictures has been engaged.

At its head is Buel B. Risinger, one of America's foremost conductors. His ten years' experience in this particular line, together with his magnificent library of music especially adapted to pictures, qualifies him as being thoroughly competent to lead the Majestic's new musical organization.

To further improve Majestic music a new pipe organ is being built, to be installed. The city of Columbus will be proud of this instrument. Next to the Hippodrome in New York it will be the largest theater pipe organ in America.

To the music lovers of Columbus the Majestic management submits with pride this combination of orchestra and organ, believing that it will tend to develop the presentation of pictures to the highest state of perfection.

IN CONCLUSION

The policy of the Majestic Theater for the season of 1917-1918 is to present fewer and better pictures accompanied by the finest kind of orchestra and organ music, under the leadership of a man who has had ten years of practical experience and who has made the playing of pictures a study. In order to carry out this policy, the management of the Majestic has selected the best plays with the most popular stars. This season the Majestic is spending $26,000 more than it has ever spent before in order to provide the best pictures, and an additional $10,000 to provide better music. The wonderful organ is now being constructed at an expense of $12,000.

The prices for the coming season will be 15 cents until 6 p. m. and 15 and 25 cents after 6 p. m., with the exception of Sundays and holidays, when the night prices will prevail. Children under 16 will be charged 10 cents until 6 p. m. and 15 cents after 6 p. m. for any seat in the house. The time of starting the show remains the same, namely, 1, 2:45 and 4:30 in the afternoon, and 6:15, 8 and 9:30 at night.

Picture Man Writes Song

By J. L. Ray.

Billy Arnold of Nashville, Tennessee, who has been connected with moving pictures and the stage since Hector was in his infancy, has written a new song in collaboration with Leon Cole, the newly-wed musical director at the Strand Theater. Its title is "'Mid the Green Fields 'Round My Old Kentucky Home," with lyrics by Arnold and music by Cole. "Bugs" Arnold writes anything from songs on up to multiple reel photoplays.

The Advantage of Seat Covers

As time goes on, picture theater managers begin to see more and more each day the many advantages of placing washable seat covers over the backs of the seats in the auditoriums of their houses.

During the warm days, especially, the female of the species of Nashville, Tennessee, can be found wending its way to the houses where this convenience is thoughtfully provided by the management, and many are the praises which come from the ladies who witness a show in comfort, with the aid of these covers, particularly after they have been in a theater where the seats are bare.

The first cost is not so great that any house will have to take the bankruptcy law, while the laundry bill is of minor consequence in comparison with the shekels they bring into the coffers.

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

THE exhibitors of Akron, Ohio, now have an organization known as the Akron Screen Club. They have also held their first social affair which transpired September 10 at a summer place near Akron. Nearly all of the managers of the 28 active theaters "belong." Robert Miller of the Waldorf Theater is president; J. H. Moore of the Ideal, secretary, and C. H. Belden of the Thornton, treasurer.

The Board of Standards and Appeals has granted the application of the B. F. Keith's New York Theater Company for the erection of a theater in a residential zone, at the northwest corner of Valentine avenue and Fordham Road, New York City.

Two more picture theaters in Rochester, New York, have left the straight picture class during the last month by adding vaudeville to their programs. The Strand and the Gordon are the latest to join those offering the mixed entertainment. It is expected, however, that the straight picture houses will benefit by this thinning of their ranks, as it will lessen competition.

A theater to cost $3,000 will be built at each of the sixteen national army cantonments of the country, according to Raymond B. Fosdick, chairman of the amusements and recreation committee of the Council of National Defense. These theaters will be set aside for the use of volunteer performers, organizations, etc., desiring to aid in making less monotonous the life of the soldiers by amusements of various kinds.

A class for projection machine operators has been started at the Central Technical School, Toronto, Canada, in connection with the vocational training for war cripples returned from Europe. There is a shortage of experienced operators in Ontario and much interest is being taken in the course by the returned warriors. Wages for operators in the Province range from $20 to $25 per week, with union hours.

An arrangement to centralize authority in the license department dealing with motion picture theaters has been announced at a meeting of the Brooklyn branch of the Exhibitors' League. The new scheme will combine the film houses of the Bronx, Manhattan and Brooklyn under one jurisdiction and all exhibitors accused of violating the laws will be brought before but one tribunal. Moreover, cases involving children and the admittance of minors to picture shows will be referred to the license commissioner. Conferences to come to an agreement are under way between the city officials and the exhibitors' locals.

Exhibitors of Newark, New Jersey, have decided that the panacea for the shortage of change they have been finding in their cash boxes is an increase in admission prices. Nearly half of the houses of Newark have raised the ante considerably and find their patronage still about the same as before. The Newark Theater, of which J. B. McNally is manager, now charges 50 cents for the privilege of a seat in the orchestra circle. And the Strand has boosted its "pay-as-you-enter" to twenty-five cents. Other theaters of the city are getting ready to follow suit, as it seems to be the only means by which they can dodge the devil and miss the sea.

The Princess Theater of Melville, Saskatchewan, stands as an example of small town picture theater which has been doing a thriving business for several years. It was built in this railroad center of Western Canada in 1913 by Besler Bros., and with a good front and consistent management it has made money. The house seats 500 and is a fire-proof brick structure. The show usually consists of five or six reels and the admission prices are ten and fifteen cents, with matinees only on Saturdays, for which the admission is only five and ten cents.

A double-header arrangement was made for the Globe and Rialto Theaters, Toronto, for the screening of "The Whip" at both houses during the week of September 17. These theaters are about three blocks from each other in the downtown section and by the constant use of messengers the one print of the production was used in both houses from 9 a. m. to 11 p m. each day. Both the Globe and Rialto Theaters are controlled by the Globe Securities, Limited, through Arthur Cohen.

When Menches Brothers advertised in the papers of Akron, Ohio, for a suitable name for their new West Hill picture theater, which is nearing completion, they expected to get a good many suggestions, but they were totally unprepared for the inundation which followed; 11,200 answers poured in to Horace Parks, president of the Summit Beach Park Amusement Company, who will manage the new playhouse. Representatives of the three Akron papers will finally decide on the winner. And in the meantime the house is getting a lot of valuable publicity.

The largest and most costly theater in Canada, the St. Denis of Montreal, has been reopened under the management of Roland Roberts of Toronto as an exclusive picture house after being in darkness since last spring. The first presentation was that of "Polly of the Circus" during the week of September 10 and this was followed by the special attraction "Redemption" during the week of September 17. This theater seats 3,000 people and it did capacity business after its reopening. The St. Denis went into the hands of receivers last winter and was auctioned at public sale for some $140,000 last spring. Its success under the new management and with the new policy seems assured.

The problem of the uniform apportionment of coal for the coming winter at Berlin has suggested retrenchments in numerous directions previously thought unnecessary. The suggestion is made that the theaters cut down the number of their weekly performances to save illumination and heating fuel. The Berlin playhouses, which opened for the fall and winter seasons, with capacity business, are protesting against the proposed movement to limit them to one-half their usual number of performances. The managers point out that the theater is the only remaining medium through which war-weary brains may be relaxed.

People of Corvallis, Oregon, may yet be able to attend moving picture shows, even if the city did vote to close the picture houses on Sunday. A proposition is on foot to erect a large dance pavilion and moving picture house just outside the city limits, which will be operated seven nights a week. The people interested in the project insist that there are many who would patronize a resort of this character if it was run in a creditable manner, and since the city will not permit pictures within its limits on Sunday, they will exhibit them on the outside.

W. A. Roderick and F. O. Brown, officers of the Paris Theater Company of Denver, were ordered into court recently for showing the film, "Who's Your Neighbor?" The men were charged with violating the city ordinance prohibiting the exhibition of immoral pictures. The picture men, however, maintain the film is not immoral and that it was rejected by the national board of censorship because it is a "propaganda film." The exhibitors declared they would run the picture despite the threat of the city attorney's office to file a prosecution for each exhibition.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Texas Amusement Managers Association was held in Dallas, last week. Appointments were made of members to serve on the association's adjustment bureau, which has for its purpose the business of adjusting differences between exhibitor members and the film exchanges. For the association P. C. Levy of Fort Worth and C. J. Musselman of Paris were chosen, while the exchanges are to be represented by H. M. Owens of Parmount and L. B. Remy, Goldwyn. A fifth member, who will be neutral, is to be selected to act as chairman.

A cry of "Fire! Fire!" threw five hundred men, women and children into a panic September 3 while enjoying a pretty romance picture at the K. & K. Opera House, 1217 Carson street, Pittsburgh. The spectators jumped from their seats and made a wild rush for the doors, knocking children down in their efforts to reach the exit. Fortunately no one was seriously hurt. An unidentified man standing in Carson street ran to the door of the theater and gave the alarm that nearly resulted in tragedy, but police arrived on the scene and soon succeeded in restoring order.

The Ludke Brothers of the Ludke Theater at St. Peter, Minnesota, recently pulled a clever advertising stunt while showing Vitagraph's special feature, "The Fall of a Nation." They covered an automobile with a wood frame, tar paper and projecting imitation cannon to resemble a war monster on the order of the tanks. A bugler and drums were used and as the strange machine went down the streets it created a good deal of interest and many people came to see the show that was advertised in bold characters on its formidable looking sides.

The Duplex Theater of Detroit, Michigan, has been closed down for good if the action of the sheriff in auctioning off the equipment is any criterion to go by. The house, which had two auditoriums, is being dismantled as rapidly as possible. It was unique in that while the feature film was being shown in one auditorium short reels were being displayed in the other. The shows were then switched, the audience remaining seated. The doors of the auditorium in which the feature was being shown were closed after the projection was once started, so that no one would have the picture spoiled by getting in for just the tail end.

An exhibitor of Bluebirds in Utica, N. Y., created a great deal of talk among the town folk through the medium of an innocent piece of advertising he distributed in the form of a four-page folder, half the size of a playing card. On the front page, in attractive letters, appeared the words: "How to Escape the Draft." Those eager to delay a trip to Europe opened the little folder to find staring them in the face the one word: "Enlist." On the back page the showman advertised "Treason," a Bluebird photoplay that has been accepted as propaganda in the aid of patriotism.

The owners of the Diamond Theater, New Orleans, have closed a deal whereby they become also owners of the People's theater at Dryades and Washington streets. The theater has a seating capacity of over 1,500 and it is well equipped. It is the intention of the new owners to make many improvements, both inside and outside the building, but they will endeavor to make these improvements without closing the theater.

The policy of the People's theater in the future will be to show only the best pictures, together with excellent music and high-class vaudeville.

As Uncle Sam keeps drawing the young men of the nation into camp and cantonment women are stepping right into their shoes in the places at home. Miss M. H. Barney, at the Cozy Theater, Crystal Lake, Minnesota, is the first woman in that state to go into the operator's booth and take over the responsibility of the projection for that theater. In the south, another of the fair sex, Miss Louise Millet, has applied for membership in the Dallas, Texas, union of motion picture operators. Officials of the union were puzzled as to how to treat her application as there is no precedent to go by, and consequently the young lady's application has been referred to national officers of the union.

W. S. McLaren, secretary and manager of the Majestic-Colonial Theater Company, Inc., of Jackson, Michigan, is one of the live wire exhibitors who is taking advantage of Motography's offer of "free cuts" to beautify the programs he gets out for his playhouses. In a letter with "requests" for more cuts he tells how he kept the Jackson County Fair from cutting into the box office receipts this year.

At the county fair, held here last week, we had a big "black top" on the grounds seating 350 people, where we ran an hour show for ten and fifteen cents. We also showed in our booth on the fair grounds with a home projector, Vitagraph's "From Script to Screen," with a lecture. This film was shown free every half hour. In addition we had good music in the booth at all times.

We believe we are pioneers in this arrangement of making the fair work for the exhibitor instead of being a competitor. Formerly business at our two theaters up-town was very bad during fair week but in this case it was much better than normal at both places, in addition to fine business at the tent.

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

Owing to the value of this masterly article on projection engineering by R. B. Chillas, Jr., presented as a paper before the Illuminating Engineering Society, I am going to give it the entire space of the department this week—Editor.

WHEN we consider that the business of the "films" in its various ramifications is now one of our leading industries, it is rather disconcerting to our pride as illuminating engineers to consider the way in which we have neglected to apply many of the principles to which we give such careful attention in other lines.

It is possible that because of the predominance of the amusement feature of this industry, many of us are inclined to be rather skeptical as to its economic value. But because of the pace at which we are driving ourselves in this age, we are demanding that our amusement and relaxation shall be similarly intensive. As a means for furnishing the most of keen enjoyment and relaxation to the greatest number of people of all ages and conditions, irrespective of race or creed, at a minimum cost per individual, the motion picture certainly occupies a position of real economic importance. It well deserves far more careful engineering consideration than has in the past been accorded it.

This article concerns itself directly with some of the features of the production of the light and its projection.

Requirements

The requirements for the light source for motion picture work are that it shall be steady, of maximum intrinsic brightness and of such distribution characteristics as will permit a high degree of concentration upon the film at the aperture plate. The resources available to the illuminating engineer today are all in what may be properly classed as incandescent radiators, namely, the high amperage concentrated filament tungsten lamp and the alternating-current and direct-current plain carbon arcs. As yet, none of the gaseous radiators have been made sufficiently concentrated to be useful.[1]

Characteristics of Direct-Current Arcs

In the direct-current arc the positive crater is of relatively large area and forms the principal light source. The negative crater or spot is very small and need not be considered as a light source, although the characteristics of the negative are of the greatest importance in securing steadiness of operation. It is desirable in operating such an arc to have the positive crater as nearly as possible directly facing the axis of the optical system. To secure such an arrangement with the minimum amount of shading of this crater by the negative carbon should be the aim of every operator. The principal characteristics inherent to the direct-current arc which work to its advantage as compared with the alternating-current arc are (1) that the arc is longer, giving less shading of the crater; (2) that the positive crater receives energy continuously and so maintains a higher temperature and gives a whiter light than the alternating-current arc; (3) that the net efficiency is higher as a result of the two previous characteristics.

So much of the success of arc projection depends on the proper choice of the correct size and quality of carbons that it would be well to go into considerable detail on this subject. The size of the positive crater is determined by the power input to the arc. The positive carbon must be chosen of a size such that when the arc has been established and has burned long enough to reach steady conditions, the area of the positive crater will very nearly occupy the entire end of this carbon. If the carbon is too small for the current used, the crater will overlap the end of the carbon and a condition of marked unsteadiness is bound to occur. If too large, the crater will not cover the end of the carbon, the average temperature of the tip is low, the arc wanders and the efficiency becomes less. The size of the negative carbon required by the negative spot is very small, that is, the actual size of the negative spot for a current of 100 amperes is less than 1½ mm. in diameter compared with 16 to 18 mm. for the positive crater. It will be seen from this that conditions other than the size of the spot determine the proper size of the negative. The principal one of these is the current carrying capacity. Any method which will increase this means that a smaller carbon can be used. In turn this results in the decided advantage that the negative spot is then confined to a very small area at the tip and increased steadiness is secured.

Characteristics of Alternating-Current Arcs

For the sake of clearness, we can say that there are two types of alternating-current arcs in use. In the low current arcs used for stereopticon work the arc length is kept quite long and the operation is nearly noiseless except for the slight hum. From what has just been said about the direct-current arc, it will be seen that there is a large difference in the relative areas of the two craters. Consequently, with the rapid reversals of the current the function of the two carbons must alternate. This demands then a compromise on the grade of carbons to secure the best set of conditions, as it does not necessarily follow that a good positive makes a good negative. With the long arc operation there are no sharply defined craters and because of the fact that the high temperature positive spot alternates, the average temperature of each carbon tip is much lower than the temperature of the positive crater. This is the principal reason for the marked difference in efficiency of the alternating-current arc as compared with the direct-current arc.

In practically all motion picture work on alternating current, the carbons are operated with a very short hissing arc. In fact, they are separated by the smallest possible air gap consistent with a reasonable degree of crater exposure towards the lens. Under these conditions of operation, sharply defined craters are formed, yet the average crater temperature and efficiency is much less than that of the direct current positive.

The following comparison between direct-current and alternating-current arcs at equal power consumptions in the arc may prove interesting:

Length of throw, screen to aperture plate.....67 ft. (20.4 m.)
Focal length, first condenser lens.....5.5 in. (14 cm.)
Lens diameter, effective.....4.25 in. (10.8 cm.)
Screen size..... 7 ft. 3 in. by 9 ft. 10 in. (2.2 by 3.0 m.)

| | D. C | A. C. |
|---|---|---|
| Upper carbon | 16 mm. cored | 16 mm. cored |
| Lower carbon | 8 mm. coated | 16 mm. cored |
| Current | 40 amperes | 65 ampered |
| Arc volts | 54 volts | 35 volts |
| Arc Powerfactor | — | 92 per cent |

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Arc watts | 2,160 watts | 2,150 watts |
| Illum. on screen | 11.85 foot candles | 5.10 foot candles |

The arc position in the lamp house was the same in each case. No change was made in the focusing of the objective lenses.

The choice of the proper size of carbons for alternating-current service is governed by the current carrying capacity and the formation of the craters at the tip. With carbons of good quality, it is found that the size needed to give the necessary crater area at a given current has carrying capacity for a slightly greater current. It would not, therefore, pay to use a metal coating.

Table of Sizes

The table below gives the sizes of carbons and the currents at which they should be operated:

TABLE I—Size of Carbons

Can a similar scheme be applied to the moving picture projector? We believe that it can. Of course, it is not practicable to apply this scheme directly, since the searchlight beam is essentially a cylinder of the diameter of the mirror so that it would require a film big enough to cover the beam, or else a lens as large as the mirror to focus the light on the film.

A scheme which to the writer appears to possess very decidedly advantageous possibilities, is in the use of an ellipsoidal mirror in place of the parabolic mirror used in searchlights. Sigmund Schuckert has a Swiss patent dated 1889, in which is shown a sketch of such a mirror with the carbons arranged as in a searchlight, that is, with the positive carbon on the axis, with its crater at the focus nearest the mirror.

An ellipsoidal mirror, generated by the rotation of an arc of the ellipse about its major axis, subtending a solid angle of 120° or 150° about the focus adjacent to the mirror and converging the reflected rays upon the other focus at an angle sufficiently small to be within the satisfactory working limits of an objective lens should offer no serious difficulties in construction and would permit a vast improvement in the utilization of the light from the arc.

The writer has calculated several such mirrors and finds that the curvature and size are by no means excessive. From the table given above, it will be seen that a 120° mirror has a theoretical possibility of 75 per cent of the light from the crater. Compare this with the 17 per cent obtainable with the present lenses. Even with only a 25 per cent utilization of the scheme, it is still better than the lens scheme of 100 per cent efficiency. A free discussion of this subject would be gladly welcomed.

The best arrangement of carbons for this would be with a horizontal positive and a small metal-coated negative carbon, inclined at about 20° to 30° from the axis. The lamp parts should be made of minimum cross section normal to the reflected rays.

Light Distribution

With all of the present schemes of operation, there is a great deal of light lost within the lamp housing. The distribution of light from an unobstructed circular disc radiator is represented by a sphere, with the diameter, normal to the disc, indicating the maximum intensity. The positive crater of the direct-current arc and both craters of the alternating-current arc are of this type. The best theoretical condition, therefore, would be to have the positive crater on the optical axis and directly facing the first condensing lens, and the negative carbon so placed that no shadow will be formed on the lens. Under present practice this setting is almost never used. The extent to which it is approached is a measure of the efficiency of the scheme.

On alternating current, it is necessary to depart considerably from such a setting. It has been shown that it is necessary to operate with a short arc in order to secure craters. The two craters then naturally tend to face each other and because of this almost to obscure each other. The inherent efficiency is therefore low. By carefully regulating the relative positions of the two carbons, the craters can be forced to open out a little, but the best that can be done is still far below the possibility of direct-current work. Furthermore, it is necessary to use the light from only one crater of the alternating-current arc in order to secure sharp definition of the projected picture. The resultant distribution of light from the best alternating current arc is, therefore, a section derived from the spherical distribution curve of one crater diminished by the shadow of the other carbon and by the fact that the crater is inclined to the optical axis.

Compare the alternating current and direct-current curves (Fig. 1 and Fig. 2). The direct-current maximum intensity may and often does fall onto the lens. The alternating-current maximum is never realized as it falls on the tip of the other carbon.

Utilization of Light

The quantity of light utilized by the present lens system is measured by that which falls within the solid angle subtended by the first condensing lens. The size of this solid angle depends upon the diameter of the lens and upon the distance from the lens to the arc. The size of the lens is governed by the accuracy with which lenses of large size can be made at a reasonable expense. This appears at present to be about 4½ to 5 in. The distance from the arc to the lens should be as small as possible, but this is limited by the amount of heat which the lens will stand. The limit of this with high powered arcs is about 5 in. The limit of the solid angle, therefore, is about 45°. For the best results with the present scheme it is essential that one pay particular attention to the focal length of the condenser lens. As an example, a lens of 5.5 in. focal length receives 35 per cent more light than one of 6.5 in. focal length, from a crater directly facing the lens.

On the basis of the total flux of light emitted from an unshaded circular disc source, such as a positive crater, the table below gives the maximum percentages which fall within the given solid angle, symmetrical about the axis of the radiators.

It will be seen from the above table and from the figures shown above that the maximum efficiency of a lens embracing a solid angle of 50 is only 17 per cent. In order to increase this it is necessary either to use a lens of larger diameter or else a lens of the meniscus type, since the lens is already placed as close to the arc as it will stand. The cost of such a short focus lens or system of lenses of the necessary degree of accuracy is out of proportion to the gain secured thereby. Furthermore, the fact that the crater does not ordinarily directly face the lens and that the negative carbon frequently causes some shading, renders it highly probable that the percentage of the light which falls on the first condenser is only 10 to 12 per cent of that produced by the direct-current positive crater. In the case of the alternating-current arc the percentage is even more pitifully small. And this does not tell the whole story, since no deduction has been made for the light necessarily cut off by the edges of the aperture plate in order to secure a fairly uniform illumination over the area of the film. The writer has not measured the light received on the screen as compared with that produced under good conditions by the arc, but ventures the opinion that it is not over 5 to 8 per cent.

Possibilites of Improvement

Every one will grant that it is desirable to secure an improvement over these conditions. To the writer it appears that the obvious point of attack is at the arc and condensing system, to see whether it is possible to secure a scheme which permits a greater utilization of the light than the 17 per cent secured by the present lens system.

In the optical system of the searchlight projector, the arrangement of the parabolic mirror, embracing the usual solid angle of 120° about the focus, with the positive crater at the focus and directly facing the mirror has a positibe efficiency of utilization of 75 per cent of the total flux. This assumes no shading by the negative. In other words the searchlight scheme is fundamentally over 400 per cent better than the present projector arrangement. Even with the losses in light due to the shading of part of the mirror by the negative carbon, the actual percentage of the light which falls upon the mirror is about 60 per cent of the total flux produced, or about 350 per cent better than the theoretical possibilities of the projector.

Brenon Studio Work of Art

By Alison Smith

The Herbert Brenon studio has been built around one man's knowledge of the psychology of acting. Proceeding on the assumption that the studio was made for the actors and not actors for the studio, Herbert Brenon has arranged every detail of the entire plant with a view toward creating an atmosphere that would sustain the illusion and stimulate the imagination of those acting under the trying technical conditions of film work.

Your first impression of the studio is that it suggests a legitimate theater with an important scene continually on the stage. There is an atmosphere of eager and intense preparation throughout the entire building which is subdued, however, by the "Silence" signs out of consideration for the actors on the main stage. The keynote of the establishment is given by printed placards hanging in nearly all the rooms, which state that "The Studio Means as Much to the Artist as the Church Does to the Devout Worshipper," and that "The Greatest Strength Lies in Silence, the Greatest Power in Motionlessness."

The mental attitude of the film worker is obviously of paramount importance and nothing has been left undone to provide the actor with the inspiration that a theater performance would give, but which is too often lost in the mechanics of motion picture work. To this end, a small orchestra has its place in the studio, which plays appropriate selections especially adapted to the various pictures as they are being filmed.

The screen actor enters the studio very much as a legitimate actor takes his cue for a stage entrance, and through all the time that he is before the camera he is made to feel the presence of the invisible audience that will greet the finished picture.

If a member of the company begins work on a story, he is permitted to carry it through to its logical conclusion; thus the scenario writer always writes his own titles just as the cameraman always does his own cutting, and so on through the various phases of the work that the continuity of a given idea may not be disturbed.

The spirit which Mr. Brenon has infused into his work has been communicated to the entire force that he has working with him and is noticeable in every detail of the studio's arrangement. Employes reflect the courage of the producer's convictions, which have been radical enough to inaugurate a distinct departure from the conventional method of constructing and producing films.

"Rasputin, the Black Monk"

Peerless Production Released by World Film. Reviewed by George W. Graves

GOOD acting is a marked characteristic of this exciting play, based on recent momentous happenings in Russia. Montagu Love as the Black Monk is far and away the dominating character. He plunges right into his work with a zest and sincerity that tells, doing the best character work we have yet seen him do on the screen. Mr. Love makes his Rasputin a very powerful wonderful and weird character. June Elvidge, of whom something good is always to be expected, is cast in a picturesque role; Arthur Ashley does well with an emotional character part. The other principals are Irving Cummings, Julia Dean, Hubert Wilkie and Henry Hull. Beside this talented aggregation of players there are about a dozen others playing small roles in the support.

The story, by E. Richard Schayer, combines recent historic events pertaining to the Russian birth of freedom with a strong dramatic thread, following the career of the disreputable Rasputin from a low-class wily deceiver of the peasant folk up through government circles to the seat of the Czar's confidante, and coming to a climax with his sudden and tragic fall. Russia rejoicing in her new-found freedom marks the end of the picture.

At the beginning of the story Rasputin, in the employ of the government, betrays into the hands of the latter a large body of secret revolutionists with whom he has deceitfully aligned himself. Raff (Arthur Ashley), their leader, summarily sent to "the mines," swears vengeance on the Black Monk. The betrayal of the revolutionists is a lever lifting the ambitious self-appointed monk higher in governmental circles. Possessing a hypnotic healing power, he saves the life of the little czarevitch and thus works his way into the royal household. Claiming to be a prophet, he teaches a peculiar philosophy and religion, but in reality the monk is a rank libertine. Rasputin influences the czar's every move, and so it is he who is responsible for the starving, inefficient army and the other weak points in the national structure that are paving the way for successful German invasion. And so the story proceeds, with the arrogant monk boastfully asserting, "I am the czar," and just about making good his claim. The final climax, precipitating his capture and his assassination at the hands of the long-imprisoned Raff, is what one might style, "great stuff."

The Russian street and "mob" scenes were given very fine atmosphere by Arthur Ashley, the director. Also, the types selected to appear in these "mob" scenes and the artistic costuming helped very considerably the pictorial and artistic effectiveness of the film. The best achievement of both scenarioist and director is seen in the swift, suspenseful and always interesting action. There are no slow spots. Consistent with the steady rise of Rasputin to power is the picture's expansion in power and interest, until the big climax.

"Rasputin, the Black Monk," is a timely, well-acted, fast-moving melodrama. It ought to bring big business.

"Barbary Sheep"

Artcraft Five-Reel Drama Featuring Elsie Ferguson. Reviewed by George W. Graves

SELDOM has a more artistic picture than this been offered to the public. Not only is the telling of the story a work of supreme art, but the settings, exterior and interior, costumes, lightings, photography, and character types are all so startling in their degree of perfection that the spectator has nothing to do but be bewitched and enthralled by the whole thing. Surely the mystery of the desert and the east that plays such a big part psychologically in the story is felt by everyone in the audience. And this is the big reason why the finer feeling of the story is appreciated. When the erring wife, who has been lured into a compromising position by the suave, black-eyed Arab, breaks down and tells her husband that the subtle lure of the desert night, with irresistible mystery proved to be her undoing, understanding takes the place of what might have been incredulity in the audience.

Director Maurice Tourneur has achieved in "Barbary Sheep" some artistic effects that have never been equalled on the screen. From the street scenes in Algiers to the desert and the rocky cliff where abide the Barbary sheep, the settings are masterpieces of pictorial beauty. Several moonlight scenes will linger in memory. It is a remarkable thing that the same sets, no matter how massive, are not, or at least do not have the appearance of being used twice.

"Barbary Sheep" illustrates what can be done with a simple, conventional story through exceptional direction and acting. It also shows what the proper development and flawless rendition of a featured role will do for a picture. Elsie Ferguson's initial appearance on the screen meets with and goes away beyond all expectations. Her acting as Lady Wyverne, the tempted wife, is something that will arouse the most jaded movie-goers to open enthusiasm. Graceful in movement, subtle in expression, lovely in person, Miss Ferguson's presence in the picture is one continuous fascination. She has adapted herself to the requirements of the camera so well that no one would doubt if told that she had been a screen actress for years. Judging by her enormous success in this, Elsie Ferguson has a brilliant screen career before her,—and the theater public has many treats in store. As for the exhibitor,—if, after having shown "Barbary Sheep," he doesn't find his patrons going out of their way to ascertain the date of the next Elsie Ferguson showing, all we can say is that his patrons are of a different type than those who immensely enjoyed the picture at the Rialto Theater, New York.

Lumsden Hare was perfectly typed for the portrayal of Sir Claude Wyverne, the husband, and he certainly provided the picture with a real, true-English character. Pedro de Cordoba, as Benchaalal, gave an excellent rendition.

"Barbary Sheep" takes its place as one of the best half dozen pictures of the year.

"An Alabaster Box"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in Five Parts. Reviewed by George W. Graves

ALICE JOYCE has a part of tender appeal in this story of hard-shelled small town people, written by Mary E. W. Freeman and Florence M. Kingsley. Her talents have been given every advantage possible and there is no doubt about the fascinating star being at her very best. Judging from its synopsis, the story would seem to be one whose interpretation it were wiser to leave to black and white pages, since it seems to be such a simple, narrative affair, rich indeed in careful psychological analysis, but without the required action for movie presentation or without being susceptible of having action built upon its frame.

Briefly, this is the story: Andrew Bolton, a progressive man, has made his little country town flourish in business. But he makes a misstep, ruining himself and some of the townspeople involved in his investments. He is sent to prison on a charge of embezzlement, while his daughter, Lydia, goes to live with her wealthy uncle. Upon the latter's death, years later, Lydia, under an assumed name, returns to her father's village, buys back the old homestead with money inherited from her uncle, and astonishes the villagers by her free spending. When Lydia is settled, Bolton, bent and gray, returns secretly to his former home. But the villagers soon discover him, learn the true identity of Lydia, and, thinking the latter has been spending the money supposedly stolen from them, they storm the house. Bolton appears on the steps, scathingly denounces the ungrateful people, and, weakened by the shock of his phillipic, falls dead.

Of course, a brief synopsis hardly gives a suggestion of the finer points of the story. All through the story is a study of a peculiar class of narrow-minded and selfish people. Not only has Director Chester Witney made his picture an interesting study of human nature but he has also put action into every one of the five reels, all of it having a bearing on the main theme. Some of the action is pleasantly humorous; all of it is intensely human.

Mr. Witney's direction is responsible for the picture's success, for without this painstaking, intelligent supervision Alice Joyce's part would not have been what it now is. Mr. Witney went after unusual effects—and he got them every time.

Marc MacDermott does excellently with the character role. His makeup is a thing to remark about. Other players are Harry Ham, Patsy De Forest, Frank Crane and little Aida Horton.

"An Alabaster Box" is a remarkable production, technically and artistically. Alice Joyce has one of the most intelligent, humanly sympathetic roles of her long career, carrying it with perfect grace and finish.

"Sirens of the Sea"

Universal Sea Picture a Jewel Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

IN some respects this feature will recall "Undine," on early Bluebird release, also made by Universal. Both are based upon the legends of the sea and deal with mermaids and sirens, roles taken by actresses very lightly clothed. For this reason, the picture will not be liked in many conventional neighborhoods. If you ran "Undine" and your patrons did not object, they will not criticize this. If they did, it would not be advisable to run this.

At the Playhouse, a Michigan avenue theater in Chicago, this picture is drawing very good business and has been held over for a third week. But the writer has heard criticisms of the picture which convince her that conventional-minded neighborhoods will not take kindly to it.

Artistically, the picture contains many beautiful scenes, but becomes very monotonous because of repetition, a very weak story and too great length. There are scenes of the nymphs dancing, dissolves of fairy scenes, wonderful shore and sea backgrounds, and torchlight dances, which are of real beauty, but when these are repeated endlessly, the viewer becomes bored and restless. And the plot will interest few.

The story is largely allegorical. The heroine, rescued from the sea when a child, is entertaining a group of her school friends when the picture begins. One of the girls is very jealous of her. The heroine, to escape from the villain of the play, jumps over a cliff and is believed drowned. The hero rows out to sea in a boat, falls asleep and dreams that the girl, who originally came from the sea, has gone back to her mermaid companions. A long allegory is worked out, in which real love, personified by the heroine, overcomes the power of evil, personified by the jealous girl. This allegory forms most of the picture. At the close, the hero wakes up. His boat has drifted to an island, where he finds the girl, safe. Both are rescued and taken back to their friends.

"For France"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Released September 17. Reviewed by George W. Graves

A PICTURE with more than the usual amount of excitement and suspense, with scenes that are real thrillers, is "For France," whose story was written by Cyrus Townsend Brady. When the action gets warmed up to full play it is a case of the audience shouting, or at least feeling like shouting, "Vive la France," and "A bas, les Allemandes." With its hero as an American aviator who casts his fortunes with his "second best country" and runs straightly into the most wished-for romance and adventure, the story takes pains to accentuate the strong bond of friendship between America and France.

The director, Wesley Ruggles, has instilled a realism in his picture that counts big in every scene. Although the picture is one of action it is also one that discloses some very unordinary portrayal. Edward Earle and Betty Howe, the leads, work wonderfully together. Mr. Earle, first as the spendthrift and then as the airman hero plays his part with full regard to its feeling and makes his first Vitagraph role one that he may be well proud of. Betty Howe, with dark hair and eyes, looks the picture of a French girl. She is made of the stuff that composes screen favorites and will certainly be liked by the fans. The director has given both stars every chance to register.

"For France" is a dynamic, red-blooded play of the kind that movie houses "eat alive." The whole thing was very well produced and acted.

"A Man's Man"

Paralta Seven-Part Play Features J. Warren Kerrigan. Reviewed by George W. Graves

"A MAN'S MAN," Paralta's first offering, is all that anyone could expect in a virile, romantic adventure story. Some of it is the most imaginative, highly colored fiction, but the whole picture holds the interest of the spectator far better than the average story of the type that is filmed. As a red-blooded melodrama, with mystery, lightning action, suspense, together with the most entertaining directorial side effects, the picture just about reaches the 100% mark of perfection. The question that counts is: Does the picture interest right straight through? "A Man's Man" certainly does that in a way seldom approached by pictures along the same story lines.

The original story, by Peter B. Kyne, which appeared in the "Red Book" magazine, was scenarioized with consummate skill by Thomas G. Geraghty. The latter's efforts, combined with those of Oscar Apfel, the director, undoubtedly made the picture what it is as a piece of photodramatic artistry, although Peter B. Kyne's story, of course, was the best kind of material to work with. In less able hands the author's piece might have come out the old "movie stuff," whereas the picture as it now stands is remarkably free from the old methods and insipid style of the routine melodrama. It is very evident that the picture was produced slowly and carefully; the producers no doubt kept their shoulders to the task until they secured the effects they were after. There is nothing half way about anything in "A Man's Man." This applies to the final assembling of the scenes as well as their first production and re-production.

J. Warren Kerrigan, an actor who has the distinction of holding an enviable popularity record dating back to the early days of movie making, has the featured role, a part that gives him every chance to appear at his best. His natural, modest way of playing the American hero has a big part in the picture's general elimination of overplayed theatrics. Mr. Kerrigan makes his character a real likable fellow, a person very far removed from the stereotyped "romantic actor." Lois Wilson, playing opposite, makes a very marked impression as an actress of ability. She is extremely beautiful in her close-ups. Ed. Coxen, as second lead, does all of his work with a nice earnestness and effect. Others in the strong support are Ida Lewis, Harry Von Meter and Eugene Pallette.

If their succeeding pictures are as good as their first in story, acting and production the name Paralta is bound to boom. "A Man's Man," as the first contribution of the company, fires a signal cannon that all exhibitors looking for the highest class material will surely hear and take note of.

Henry Hull, the young actor who plays the role of Kerensky in "Rasputin, the Black Monk," is said to bear an almost startling resemblance to the Russian idol of the hour. Young Hull, however, is not a product of the Czar's former domain—in fact, has never been nearer than the Atlantic seaboard to Russia.

Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation Gives New York Showing. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, of Boston, gave a trade showing of their first production in New York recently in the spacious Aeolian Concert Hall, which was well filled with prominent people within the trade as well as scientists, photographers, etc., interested in color photography. After two hours' run without interruptions, every person in the audience was astounded to find, first of all, that the severe eye strain which has marked the witnessing of all previous natural color photography pictures was entirely eliminated. This has been the main drawback with the different processes advanced from time to time. With the elimination of the eye strain, of course, has gone its chief causes,—the depressing vivid rainbow cross colorings that seemed to fill the very atmosphere, and the color fringes around moving objects.

The colors themselves, in this new process, which, to our mind, goes head and shoulders above all previous efforts in natural color photography, are exquisitely delicate. The coloring of such intricate things as the star's (Miss Darmond's) plaid dress and an open field of flowers brought forth rounds of applause. Both Miss Darmond and the little child star who figured in the first part of the picture, had blonde hair which photographed beautifully. The facial colorings and expressions, too, were most extraordinary.

In presenting a drama, with its locale on both land and sea, the pictures had ample scope to be investigated from all angles. The going through with a regular drama, with its interiors, close-ups and other exactions put the new color process to the test, but Technicolor came up smiling every time.

Not a little part of the entertainment was the drama itself, a romantic, somewhat pathetic story, involving not only the youthful leads, but bringing in some real human characters on the side, such as an old sea captain and his mate. The story tells about the seemingly hopeless love affair of a beautiful girl, who, having strayed from home when an infant, is brought up aboard ship by a wonderful old sea captain, who treats her as his own daughter. She is spoken of in derision by the wealthy and proud parents of her lover, who call her a wharf rat and will under no circumstances submit to his marriage to her. But it is finally brought to light that the girl is the long-lost daughter of fashionable and wealthy parents,—in fact, the child of the best friends of her lover's family, so all ends very brightly.

Opposite Miss Darmond is Niles Welch, who makes his part extremely boyish and interesting. The gentleman who played the part of the sea-captain deserves especial mention, as does the little child who had so many delightful scenes with him in the opening of the story, but from the names we have at hand we cannot tell just who's who. The other players, including captain and child, are Charles Brandt, George De Caroton, Joseph Dailey, Herbert Fortier, Louis Montjoy, Mrs. Caroline Harris, Virginia Lee and Violet Azzel.

Another Bright Marguerita Fischer Comedy, Mutual Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

HERE is a fluffy, entertaining comedy drama, with Marguerita Fischer in a mad-cap role and a story that approaches farce, but is always amusing and pleasing. There are a number of incidents which will win laughter, some of these due to Miss Fischer's acting and some due to clever bits of directing. The cat-and-dog fights in which the heroine's pets take part are as funny as anything in the picture. A group of ragged youngsters and their pranks, especially the comedy ball game, add to the merriment. Then there is plenty of action of a melodramatic nature, so that no one can say the play drags.

If your audience likes comedy, you will make no mistake in boosting this offering. Marguerita Fischer has pleased generally in previous pictures of this style, and she will be liked as well in this one. Harry Pollard, who has directed Miss Fischer's other pictures, also directed this. The supporting cast is clever. John Steppling, well known as a comedian, has a good role. Jack Mower is leading man. Jean Hathaway, Joseph Harris, Luke Warrenton, Leota Lorraine and Marjorie Blinn also appear.

The picture is in five reels and is released September 17.

The Story: Peggy Brockman and her father live happily on their ranch until the father marries and the stepmother and her two daughters begin to make life miserable for the mischievous and unsophisticated Peggy. Lord Raleigh, traveling in his yacht, incognito, has stopped near the Brockman home for a few days' fishing and is discovered by the socially ambitious Mrs. Brockman and deluged with invitations. He commissions his valet to serve in his stead. Peggy is forbidden to attend Mrs. Brockman's masked ball in the nobleman's honor. She steals away to put a crimp in the party by disabling his shore boat. Through a mishap she finds herself on board the yacht with the real Lord Raleigh. Police, hunting a runaway girl, pursue them to the garden party, where they have sought refuge. Peggy is put in college for the prank and the nobleman enrolls also. One night she climbs into the boys' dormitory by mistake and finds herself in Lord Raleigh's room. He has, on an avowal of love from her, previously secured a marriage license. They escape the dean but have been discovered and decide to get married to prevent scandal. On the way from the justice's house, they are pursued and land in jail. Peggy's horrified family, dragging the bogus Lord Raleigh, arrive at the cell and to the consternation of Mrs. Brockman and her daughters, Lord Raleigh admits his identity and announces that Peggy is his bride.

William Russell in American-Mutual Release of September 24. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS latest Russell feature as a whole measures up to the standard of previous releases. It surpasses some of them in beauty of exterior locations and photography, but its story is not so pleasing as some the star has had. However, it gives him a chance to "hero" in his usual style, contains a fight, several high-power automobiles, and a plot that will carry the interest of the average patron.

The unexpected guest causes some re-arrangements.

Russell's role is of the type he usually plays and therefore will be satisfactory to his followers. John Gough has an important part but plays the consumptive almost too realistically. Francelia Billington plays the heroine. George Periolat is the villain. Edward Sloman directed. Harvey Gates wrote the story. The settings and locations, as we have remarked, are unusually fine.

The Story: "Big Bill" Darcey (Russell) is entertaining a group of his reckless pals at his hunting lodge. When their supply of liquor gives out, they go to the lodge of their neighbor, Enoch Foyle, to borrow more. Foyle is not there but they find a girl, Nora Faynes, waiting for Foyle. Darcey, aided by "Sammy," the only one of his guests who is a true friend, saves Nora from the rest of the gang. Then Foyle returns and Nora shoots him, wounding him slightly. Darcey takes Nora to his own lodge for the night. He has fallen in love with her and to save her reputation, marries her. Later Foyle, who is dishonest, tricks Darcey out of most of his fortune. Darcey believes that Nora is in league with him and will not listen to her explanation.

Sammy is ordered to the desert for his health. Darcey goes with him. In tramping through the desert, they lose their way. Sammy's strength is exhausted and he dies. His last request is that Darcey give Nora chance to explain. Darcey is rescued and goes back to fullfil his promise. He finds Nora dining with Foyle. But Nora has tricked a confession from the man and detectives have overheard it, and Foyle is arrested. Then Darcey learns that Nora and Foyle had always been enemies and that the man had cheated Nora's mother of all her money. It was to beg aid for her dying mother that the girl had gone to Foyle's lodge.

"Should She Obey?"

Arizona Film Production Released Through Hoffman. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS is a propagandic subject, aiming its shafts at the old enemy of playwrights and novelists—divorce. It undertakes its work in serious fashion at the start, devoting much footage to the session of the Nevada legislature which lately passed a stringent divorce law in that state. Governor Boyle and many people of prominence, including scholars, divines, and welfare workers appear in these scenes. In line with its title, the picture through a series of allegories beginning with the days of the cave-man, points out many instances where the wife's obedience to the husband is a shameful thing, becoming merely the channel for the despotism of evil.

The main story has to do with the career of a man who started in poor circumstances but rose to wealthy and influential station in life. Although his wife had really helped him to become what he was, William Gordon forsook his wife and took up relations with a calculating woman of the stage, with ambitions equal to his own. He forced his wife to divorce him. Later on William and his new wife found, through a series of terrible disappointments, that money would not buy a position in the best American and European society. Their ambitious plans fell to the ground and the two then received the bitter return of the measure they had meted out to all in their path.

The acting and production is of standard quality. A good many directorial innovations provide interest on the side, and now and again there is a smattering of comedy. Norbert Myles, Gene Genung and Billie West, all did very well with the principal parts.

There is plenty in the film to please a not too particular audience, although, as propaganda, the picture has the very grave fault of not driving its point home convincingly. The picture is not really remarkable in any line, but neither is it poor, so it will pass into the list under "fair," as entertainment.

Ruth Stonehouse in a "Crook" Play, Butterfly for September 24. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

RUTH STONEHOUSE acts cleverly the role of a girl pickpocket masquerading as a boy. Except for this touch of novelty the picture follows the usual trend of "crook" plays. Its story is well presented, is entertaining and fairly brisk in action. There is little to criticize in the play from the standpoint of the average, especially the middle-class audience. While there is nothing unusually sensational, the story has a good bit of suspense, and the heroine holds sympathy firmly. Everyone will be interested in her clever trickery and enjoy seeing her outwit her enemies and win happiness and a better mode of life.

Capable players support the star, and the picture is produced in a very satisfactory manner. A magazine story, "A Gentle Ill Wind," by Maud Pettus, served as the basis for the plot. The players are Miss Stonehouse, Lloyd Whitlock, Lydia Yeamans Titus, M. W. Testa, J. Webster Dill, Betty Schade and Harry Dunkinson.

The Story: "Spider" (Ruth Stonehouse) is a clever girl pickpocket who masquerades as a boy. Her headquarters are at "Pop" Hogland's pawn shop. Her guardians decide that they can use her more successfully as a girl, and they buy her pretty clothes and furnish an apartment for her, expecting her to aid them in their swindling schemes. "Spider" rebels and runs away. She is struck by an automobile in which Ralph Ward and his mother are riding and is taken to their home. She pretends not to remember her past life, and they try in vain to learn who she is. She stays with them, winning the hearts of both mother and son. All goes well until one of the "gang" meets Ward and succeeds in enmeshing him in a fraudulent affair. "Spider" now uses all her old trickery to aid Ward and after an evening of excitement, she not only saves Ward's fortune, but traps the swindler. Then her real life is disclosed, but Ward does not let that prevent his marrying her.

Italian vendor, and the little fellow whom fate throws into his path, have together, constitute a large part of the story action which is kept live and breezily entertaining by these two actors. Mr. Beban excels in Italian characterizations and it is very likely that the public would rather see him in these than any other type of portrayal.

Gardner Hunting's scenario, based on a story outlined by Kathlyn Williams, contains a great deal of interesting action in which we find both humor and pathos. The plot itself is one of those that relies very much upon characterization and also upon good direction for its proper interpretation.

"Lost in Transit" is a picture of which Mr. Beban may well be proud and one that the exhibitor can play to his audience with the assurance that they will be exceptionally well pleased with it. In the support are Pietro Sosso, Vera Lewis, Henry Barrows and Frank Bennett.

Triangle Five-Reel Comedy-Drama Features Olive Thomas. Reviewed by George W. Graves

OLIVE THOMAS has another attractive role in this as a blase musical comedy star in old New York who has a strange, to say the least, romantic adventure with a Western miner. The role surely suits Miss Thomas as well as the first memorable one which she had with Triangle. The story, by Lynn F. Reynolds, is one of those breezy, romantic kind that always finds favor. From the time when the actress first involves the Westerner in a press-agent's stunt right through to when he, having kidnapped the girl and taken her to his ranch, finds himself facing a long prison sentence, the story is one of keen delight to the spectator. It is told with that histrionic and directorial fascination which makes a story of this kind register with full force. Lynn Reynolds also directed.

Opposite Miss Thomas is George Chesebro, who makes the Westerner a very human and likeable character, as well as a forceful one. George Hernandez gives a very good characterization as Uncle Isaac Horn, who furnishes the picture with a great deal of good quaint comedy.

"Broadway Arizona" is a thoroughly enjoyable picture. It is a perfectly clean picture with the interest well centered in the characters and with just enough comedy and dramatic excitement to keep all the action entertaining throughout.

Artcraft

The Man from Painted Post—(Five Reels)—Artcraft—October 1.—Starring Douglas Fairbanks. "Fancy Jim Sherwood" is known as the all-around good fellow of the community—gets all the cattle thieves and bandits to conquer. He goes after a man he has long hated, playing the part of a tenderfoot to get him. He also gets the school ma'am, who came from the East to teach the young Westerners.

Butterfly

The Secret Man—(Five Reels)—Butterfly—October 1.—The story of Molly, the sheriff's sister, her secret marriage to Henry Beaufort, owner of a nearby ranch, and of the help that Cheyenne Harry gives them. Cheyenne Harry escapes from the Arizona penitentiary and falls in Beaufort. He gets work at the ranch, but when the sheriff looks at him extra hard he leaves in the night. Molly and her child are being driven by the Mexican foreman of Beaufort to another town and the wagon breaks down. Molly is told that her baby is dead and she loses her mind. Cheyenne comes upon the wrecked wagon and finds the child alive. He cares for it, but is unable to get water for it. So, when he sees the posse, he gives himself up for the child's sake. Molly gets him out of prison in order to clear her name, and they arrive at the Beaufort ranch in time to prevent the sheriff from murdering Beaufort. Molly and her husband then explain that the marriage has been kept secret on account of his uncle's will. Cheyenne and Chuck steal out into the night and are gone.

Fox

Conscience—Fox — (Five Reels) — September 30.—Starring Gladys Brockwell. While Ruth Somers is dressing for her wedding to one man she receives a message from a man whose sweetheart had killed herself after his love had been stolen by Ruth. Conscience leads Ruth into court and there is enacted the various shameful deeds which Ruth has committed, featuring the wrongdoings of Avarice, Passion, Vanity, Hate, and Revenge.

Metro

Paradise Garden—(Seven Reels)—Metro—October 1.—Starring Harold Lockwood. Jerry Benham, heir to the vast Benham fortune, lives under the care of Roger Canby, who has been chosen by his father to bring Jerry to manhood without a thought of sex or a knowledge of evil. He develops into a fine specimen of manhood. While fishing one day he meets Una Habberton, a sweet, wholesome girl, who is visiting on an adjoining estate. Jerry, at first, wants to throw her over the wall, but discovers that he likes to talk to her. Canby dismisses her from the grounds. When Jerry is twenty-one he is introduced to the world by Jack Ballard, a rather fast young man, who introduces him to Marcia Van Wyck, one of the idle rich. He falls in love with her, though he sometimes thinks of Una. At Marcia's coming-out ball he is disillusioned by her conduct and that of Jack, with whom he fights. Then comes the vision of the character of Christ as revealed to him by Canby, and he returns to the estate to take up his old life. Canby tells Una of Jerry's love for her, asking her forgiveness, and one day they are again united in Paradise Garden.

Mutual Star Productions

The Runaway—(Six Reels)—Empire All Star—September 24.—Starring Julia Sanderson. Alice Avery is a pretty little girl, an orphan child of an artist mother, brought up by her aunt and uncle, who don't like the job and try to shift the responsibility to a husband. Accordingly they look around and pick out a yokel of the neighborhood, the son of the wealthiest person around, who loves Alice to distraction. But Alice will have none of him. She runs away to New York and hunts up a painter who had once spent a summer at her aunt's. He takes the child to his bachelor apartments and he and all his friends make a pet of her, while teaching her drawing and watching her grow up. She grows restless and finally has some words with the lady of the painter's favor. She loves the artist and he loves her, but he doesn't know it until Alice brings him to his senses, and gets the husband she wants, among other things.

Paramount

Countess Charming—(Five Reels)—October 1.—Starring Julian Eltinge. Saunders Julian, a wealthy young business man, meets Betty Lovering, beautiful daughter of a social-climbing mother, at a Red Cross gathering in the local country club. He offends Mrs. Esmond Vandergrift, the social leader, and for this is ostracized. He reenters society as the Countess, dressed in feminine apparel he once wore in theatricals. He collects for the Red Cross and has a fine time, until the various thefts are discovered and traced to the "Countess." Betty has run the gauntlet of emotions, when the Countess recites the charms of Saunders Julian, and when it is announced that the Countess is dead, wants to put some flowers on her coffin, thus exposing the double personality of Saunders.

Triangle

Broadway, Arizona—(Five Reels)—Triangle—September 30.—Starring Olive Thomas. "Broadway, Arizona," blazes a trail from the Gay White Way to the western desert, along which Olive Thomas travels as a New York musical comedy star abducted by a wealthy cattleman whose pride has been injured by her press agent a year previous, when he was doing the town. Resenting the exploitation of his name to further the publicity of her Broadway show, his determined love leads him back to the metropolis when news of her failing health reaches the ranch, and by a clever ruse, he steals the girl from her hotel in broad daylight. Out in Arizona she regains her strength, while detectives follow the trail. The discovery of her hiding place, and her surprising confession, give the story a satisfying climax.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

The Princess of Park Row—(Five Reels)—Blue Ribbon Feature—October 1.—The King of Bellaria stumbles upon a plot of the baron's to steal mining properties of vast value from the people. He sends Prince Niclos to New York to raise money to repay the people. The Prince is accompanied by the Count Kronski, who is in league with the Baron, his daughter, Princess Margot, and maid Berta. In New York the Prince negotiates the loan without trouble and the Princess falls in love with a reporter who "covers" the hotel. While affairs are thus moving nicely the Prince is double-crossed by the Count, and his life is saved by the reporter. When the King is advised of the series of events by cable he makes the reporter a Prince, so that he can marry the Princess.

General Enterprises

The Warrior — States Rights — Seven-Part Comedy-Drama.—Starring Maciste. At the war's beginning Maciste is interned by the Austrian authorities. He overpowers the guards, leading the little band of Italians to a castle near the border. The owner, an old Italian nobleman, with his nephew and his sweetheart, give asylum to the refugees. The Austrians follow. The giant warrior routs the entire band. After many thrilling adventures he reaches Italian headquarters and becomes an Alpino. Encountering three Austrians, he places one under each arm and the third on his back. Using one for a sled, he drives the other two in team, in this manner making a steep and dangerous descent. In camp he places his prisoners under guard. In the castle, two officers are fighting a duel for possession of the girl when the Italians attack. The Austrians flee in terror before the superhuman efforts of the battle-crazed warrior. Rushing into the great dining room he encounters the two officers. Seizing a flaming firebrand from the grate he gives battle to the enemy, completely routing the pair. The sweethearts are reunited, and mounted on the broad shoulders of Maciste, happily embrace.

Universal Program

At Bay—Episode 14 of The Gray Ghost—(Two Reels)—September 24.—Morn Light and Hildreth are found safe and sound in the secret chamber, in the ruins of the house. Hildreth and Morn Light make all arrangements to be married. Marco goes to the crook's house and tells the others to follow him if he does not return within a short time. The crooks overpower him and the other police, too, when they enter. The Gray Ghost then tells them he will call up that evening and tell them good-bye, but he first arranges a bomb that will explode when the telephone rings. The Gray Ghost and his crooks go to Morn Light's, where they are awaiting the minister. When the minister comes he finds the Gray Ghost is the groom, Morn Light agreeing to everything in order that the knife held so close to Hildreth may not pierce his heart.

A Prairie Romeo—(Two Reels)—Star Featurette—October 4.—Bill Bones, a cowboy on the ranch of Harvey Campbell, is in love with the cook, Priscilla Duff, but through a misunderstanding, thinks his suit is not welcome. So he quits and goes to town, seeking refuge in the flowing bowl. The station agent has been held up and robbed and the sheriff and his men are about to start after the bandits, when Bill gets in. He wants to join them, but they tell him he is too drunk. They shut him up in a cell and leave for the hunt. When they are gone Bill kicks at the door, part of it gives way, and he crawls out and beneath the building. Later he goes back to the cell and is released. Then he returns to the jail, holds up the sheriff and his men, and phones for the bartender and Campbell. When they arrive he shows them the eyelets cut from some bandanas he found in the cell, and they make the sheriff produce the money taken from the agent. Then Bill returns to the ranch and his love.

Kicked in the Kitchen—Victor Comedy—(One Reel)—October 5.—Sir George Gravy and Sir Henry Spoon, dressed in the garb of aristocracy, stroll up to the grounds of the Hillside estate, and following some splashing noise come upon a select swimming pool party given for Gladys, the Hillsides' pretty daughter. The two well-dressed strangers, with their air of boredom, are escorted to the pool and made welcome. Here Sir George has the good fortune to save Gladys by hauling her out of the water when she goes down for the third time. After their experience the two gentlemen return to their accustomed duties, that of cook and waiter at a local beanery. There the Hillsides come for supper and though the waiter and the cook try to keep cool and not let the secret out, their identities are discovered.

The Lion's Lair—Bison—(Two Reels)—October 6.—Jim Strong, an English army officer in charge of a British trading post in the jungle, lives with his daughter, Nettie. Nettie and Dick Price, an official guide of the British army, are sweethearts. During the absence of Dick with a party, Strong is bitten by a snake and before help can reach him, dies. Nettie sends to Cape Town for relief, and Lieutenant Harry Reynolds hastens to the post. In the jungle one of the party injures an elephant and the enraged animal destroys the camp, and for this reason they start for the post. Left alone with Nettie, Reynolds, who is an imposter, tries to make love to Nettie, and when she repulses him he tries to use force. From a distance Dick sees Reynolds and Nettie struggling on the edge of a precipice. Leaving the party he rides rapidly towards them, throws a rope over a stump, climbs hand over hand up the cliff to Nettie's rescue.

Counting the Count—L-Ko—(Two Reels)—October 3.—Lucille's father and mother would like to make her a Countess, but the idea doesn't appeal to her, at all. She runs away to the farm of her uncle, where lives uncle and aunt and Cousin Bill, whom she adores. She has a good time with Cousin Bill until mother and father and the Count come out after her. The Count gets in bad right away, but the parents accept him for her. In town the preparations for the ceremony are going on and the unwilling bride is dressing, but then she has an idea. She changes clothes with the footman. Bill meantime changes clothes with the Count and appears for the ceremony. As Lucille is standing near the footman bride she recognizes the feet of Bill. Just then two detectives come to arrest the bogus Count. Lucille shrieks and pulls the veil from the bride. Later the real Count is arrested and Bill and Lucille are married.

The Storm Woman—Gold Seal—(Three Reels)—October 2.—The cub reporter is looking for a story for his Sunday special. The old gentleman tells him the story of the woman with the fortune-telling parakeets. Years ago there lived in Italy Maria and Nina Martelli with their father. Guy Trumbull, a wealthy American youth, is touring Italy. He sees them and falls in love with Nina. Then he falls in love with Maria. The shock kills the father and Nina throws herself over a cliff. She does not die, but she is injured for life. Maria vows vengeance and haunts Guy all his life. He finally dies from fear. The cub thinks it a corking story and asks to go home with her to see her invalid sister, thinking of photographs, but the old woman with the parakeets smiles and shows him, beneath the umbrella, her little family of happy children. It is only a story.

The Naughty Choice—Joker—(One Reel)—October 4.—Lizzie inherits Peachville's only department store from her uncle, on condition that she marry within three months from the date of his death. She loves Hector, her assistant in the store, and he loves her. One day she looks at the calendar, to discover that there is only one day left. She sends Hector for a minister. The Fox awaits his opportunity. He collects evidence that Hector has committed a crime of the deadliest nature, and threatens to expose him if he does not relinquish his claim to Lizzie. Hector does so and the Fox takes the note to Lizzie. Then to secure the fortune she is about to marry the Fox, when Hector comes out of the ice box and exposes the whole thing.

The Masked Marvels—Joker—(One Reel)—October 6.—While Gale and Milton quarrel as to whether women make good detectives or not, they get fired from their positions as cook and butler. A series of burglaries have mystified the police, and when Gale appears and tells them she can catch anything, they send her to the house most recently robbed. Milton also is sent there on a like errand, and in awful disguises they each mistake the other for the crook. They call the owner. When the police arrive they recognize the amateurs, tied up and gagged and a note from the "owner" saying he was the real crook.

Pete the Prowler—Nestor Comedy—(One Reel)—October 2.—Eddie and Edith plan to elope, but Papa overhears the plans. He has a detective on duty at eleven that night. Pete the Prowler also had a date that evening. He finds Eddie's ladder and enters the house early. He ransacks the dining room and then ascends to Edith's room. When Eddie comes a suitcase appears and hits him on the head. Eddie carries it to the machine and returns for Edith. But the burglar has appeared and Edith faints. Then the burglar dons her veil and motor coat and descends the ladder. Eddie helps him tenderly to the machine and they are off. On the other side of the house Papa and the detective hear the confusion and enter to find the house robbed. Edith and Papa and the detective follow in another machine. Eddie stops and the burglar escapes through the field. The suitcase is full of silverware and Papa is so delighted to get the valuables back that he lets Eddie have his daughter.

Universal Screen Magazine, No. 39—October 5.—Testing and bottling of milk is first shown, followed by Menhaden fishing on the coast of North Carolina. More Better Babies pictures are shown this week, Bernarr McFadden giving some outdoor exercises. New inventions are illustrated by a demonstration of music by wireless. A Miracle in Mud completes the issue.

General Program

The Lonesome Road—O. Henry—Broadway Star Feature—(Two Reels).—Buck Caperton and Perry Roundtree were inseparable companions, but when Marianna appeared on the scene and Perry fell for her, Buck, to whom woman was a sphinx, hied himself to parts unknown. Six months later he wandered back and comes upon Perry watering a rose plant. Perry admits that he would like one more good time, and he consents to join Buck, saying that he must be home by seven. In the saloon Perry orders sarsaparilla and suggests a game of checkers. Buck, now feeling disgraced, threatens the bar keeper with instant death if he allows it to leak out that he was ever found "fraternal" with sarsaparilla and checkers. They are in the midst of an exciting game of checkers in the back room when the Trimble gang arrive at the saloon and proceed to fill the place with lead. When it is nearly seven o'clock Perry fights his way through with the table leg. Mrs. Perry is waiting at the gate, but Buck declines their invitation to come in. Plodding down the lonesome road he recalls the look the little woman gave Perry when she saw him safe, and concludes that the fool in the game isn't Perry Roundtree after all.

The Fable of the Speedy Sprite—Essanay—(Two Reels)—September 29.—Loretta, an elfin of the young unmarried set, was a bit old-fashioned, but could ring more iron men than any other village belle. Herbert was a village lad just like the pictures in the magazine clothing ads. One evening Loretta prepared for four throbbing Roscoes, including Herbert, to curl up among the soft pillows in the family parlor. Jealous, Herbert gave the three simpering rivals the go-by, seized the apple of his eye and rolled out to his chug-chug wagon. Straight into the river, a la Annette Kellerman, drove our hero, refusing to back up until his proposal was accepted. It was.

W. E. GREENE BACK

Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, has returned to his desk at the New York headquarters following a well-deserved vacation. Mr. Greene, after an extremely active year, during which he piloted his organization to its present magnitude, left his affairs in the hands of his associates to take up the life of a gentleman farmer on his rural home at South Weymouth, Mass. The most fertile portion of Mr. Greene's farm was set aside as a war garden last spring by the Artcraft executive and during his two weeks there received his personal attention.

Chicago Notes

C. E. Bond, formerly with Triangle, is now manager of the short reel features at the Paramount office.

Max Goldstine, local Artcraft manager, was in New York a few days last week on business.

J. G. Gilmore has joined the Jewel Productions, Inc., and is already responsible for many signed contracts.

"The Eyes of the World" were at last able to open at the Auditorium Theater. The decorators finally finished their work.

Benjamin N. Judell, a well-known Chicago film man, has been appointed to take charge of all the Universal exchanges at Minneapolis.

Maurice Fleckels, district manager for Universal, is a visitor in Chicago, and expects to stay for a few days on Universal business.

Miss Norma Hoganson, of the laboratories of the American Film Company, was married on September 25, to Mr. Paul Block.

Richard R. Nehls, general manager of American, reports a most satisfactory bulk of foreign shipments for the past week.

Charles R. Condon, New York representative of Motography, was in the city several days last week on business with the home office.

Twelve prints of Fox's "The Spy" are being unravelled daily in Chicago theaters, being evidence that William Fox came out ahead in his tilt with Major Funkhouser.

"Sirens of the Sea," the Jewel production, has proved one of the best money-getters that Chicago has had for some time. This feature has played to capacity houses for the past two weeks.

The employes of the Butterfly Photoplays of Chicago will run their first annual dance at the Colonial ballroom, Saturday, September 29. Many exhibitors and prominent film folks have promised to be present.

Myrtle Stedman will be in the city in a couple of weeks to appear at various picture theaters. She has made a tour of the United States and Canada and her talks to audiences are preceded by a brief song recital. Miss Stedman claims Chicago as her home town.

Major Funkhouser, in answer to various recent attacks, has issued a statement declaring that his censoring is never done arbitrarily, but follows the rules laid down by the city ordinances and state laws. There is a variance of opinion regarding this matter.

W. K. Hill, in charge of Paramount's service department, spent several days last week helping launch new picture houses. Among them were the Grand, managed by Charles H. Dodge, at Keokuk, Iowa, and the Amuseu opened by Ludy Bo..en at Burlington. It is said that Hill could start a theater in a dry-goods box and make a go of it.

Theodore F. Brett is to erect a theater and office building to cost $120,000 on West Madison street, near Western. It will be leased to Lubliner & Trinz for ten years, beginning April 1, 1918. The rental is to be $12,000 per year.

Deborah Finnan, who was special assistant and representative of M. H. Hoffman in Chicago during the latter's long regime as general manager of Universal, is now busy getting the inside of the new Hoffman-Foursquare Exchange quarters in readiness for the formal opening on September 24.

The call to the colors has deleted the staff of the American Film Company once more. Dwight Furness, chemist, is now a photographer in the signal corps, with the rank of First Lieutenant. The toning department has lost two men, Michael Taylor and his firm friend, John Burke, who refused to be left behind.

M. M. Reubens, the Joliet exhibitor who is well known in Chicago, is making a feature of a local motion picture in two reels. This was taken in Joliet and excited a great deal of interest when one of the scenes called for a pistol duel on main street. The fire department, police, and local people appear in the play.

Eli Van Ronkel, manager of the Jewel Productions, reports that exhibitors are clamoring for a chance to book "Sirens of the Sea." He announces that Lubliner & Trinz have signed a contract for this picture to run no less than three days at every one of their string of houses.

The Advertising Film Producers' Association, which is the official department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, met in executive session at the Rothacker studio Monday, September 17.

It was decided to change the name of the organization to the Motion Picture Advertising Association of the World and to hold the next meeting at the Statler Hotel, Detroit, Michigan, on October 26.

Rex Weber, director for the Titan Pictures Corporation, who is producing a series of comedies for the American Military Relief Association, was badly hurt in an automobile accident last week.

Mr. Weber was making some interior scenes at the Selig studio and called a Yellow taxi to take him to the Rothacker studio. The car was traveling at a very high rate of speed over Lincoln avenue, on the south bound car tracks, when suddenly the driver turned to the left and the car skidded to the curbing and broke a rear wheel off. Mr. Weber was thrown out and severely injured.

In rearranging the new feature picture policy of the Orpheum Theater, Jones, Linick & Schaefer have decided to begin with "The Honor System," Sunday, September 30. This, in turn, will be followed by Maxine Elliot in "Fighting Odds," "The Whip," Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn," "Intolerance," William Farnum in "The Conqueror," "Jack and the Bean Stalk," "Alladin and the Lamp" and Mary Garden in "Thais."

In speaking of the new policy, Aaron Jones said, "We are going to make an effort to get away from the star system. We will try to pick the pictures from an entertainment stand-point and for themselves alone, rather than because a highly advertised star is playing in them. We will present at the Orpheum the biggest pictures that can be bought at any price, changing our program every Sunday and Thursday."

NEW CHICAGO CHARMER

TAKE four parts of the patience of Job, three parts of the persistency of a book agent, and three parts of the courage of "Go-get-'em" Pershing. Mix well and take six days a week from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. until desired results are obtained. This is the formula for getting into films, as compounded by Miss Helen Ferguson, Essanay's young star, now playing opposite Taylor Holmes, the comedian.

"I visited the Essanay studio every day it was open for four months," laughed Miss Ferguson. "They wouldn't even give me a chance until one day, in a court-room scene, they had one vacant chair. They had pressed into service stage hands and everyone else obtainable to fill other seats and finally, in desperation, the director grabbed me for the last chair.

"That was the beginning. I made good as a court-room spectator, so I got extra work from time to time until finally I was a 'regular.'"

There is nothing "stagey" about Miss Ferguson. Off stage you would never know her from the average high school girl. She supports her mother, with whom she lives, and is a typical "homey" girl, devoted to her mother and her work.

Miss Ferguson's ambition does not stop at the "movies." She is studying poster designing, music and scenario writing.

She was born in Decatur, Illinois, and came to Chicago seven years ago. She left high school two years ago to go into pictures.

Miss Ferguson's first big lead was with Taylor Holmes in "Fools for Luck," which will be released October 8. She is now being filmed with Mr. Holmes in "The Small Town Guy."

A number of prominent Chicago exhibitors, according to Bill Sweeney, national secretary of the League, have again sent a flood of telegrams to their congressmen in Washington protesting against the establishment of a tax system that would eliminate only the five and ten cent house. Such a move is now under consideration and the menace that had once been thought dead has again raised its vicious head and is staring the exhibitor in the face.

Lee Ochs, national president of the Exhibitors' League, was called out of the city on short notice the evening of Wednesday, September 19, when he learned that his presence would be necessary at the legislative conference in Washington. The question of exempting theaters charging less than 25 cents admission is again up for consideration, and the outcome still hangs in the balance. Mr. Ochs, who has been in Chicago on business, left the city precipitately to appear before the congressional committee and make a plea to save the exhibitor from excessive taxation.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, returned to the Chicago offices Saturday. President Hutchinson has been at the studios at Santa Barbara for a month, planning a fall and winter campaign.

"The American Film Company expects to launch a campaign of increased expenditure," says President Hutchinson. "We realize that our expenditures must keep pace with the constantly increasing artistic values of the American pictures and we intend to spare no expense in keeping them at the high standard we have always set for our screen dramas. We expect to produce nothing but five-reel features. With the addition of Margarita Fischer to our stars, including Mary Miles Minter, William Russell, Gail Kane and Juliette Day, we have a quintette of notable screen stars."

NEW CHICAGO EXCHANGE

Frank J. Flaherty, for years one of the most successful managers of distribution in the west and recently of the Universal, has been engaged to take charge of the Hoffman-Foursquare Exchange in Chicago. His assistant is to be Miss Deborah Finnan, who held that position with the Universal Chicago branch. The Hoffman-Foursquare Exchange has quarters in the College Building, at 207 South Wabash Avenue.

The Chicago branch of Hoffman-Foursquare starts out with a good array of features:—"The Bar Sinister," Edgar Lewis' big production; "Her Fighting Chance," with Jane Grey, and "Madame Sherry" in which Gertrude McCoy stars.

The newest Hoffman-Foursquare features which will be placed at the disposal of Branch Manager Flaherty in the next few weeks are "One Hour" with Zena Keefe and Alan Hale; "The Great White Trail," the Wharton's epic of the Arctic, and "The Fringe of Society." The final feature is "A Trip Through China," the Brodsky art-drama.

ABEL ON TRIP FOR SELECT

Sydney F. Abel, special representative of Select Pictures Corporation, has left New York on his first visit to the newly established Select exchanges.

Mr. Abel's first objective is Washington, D. C., where he will be in conference with branch manager V. P. Whitaker, who has recently taken charge of the Washington exchange just opened at 811 "E" street, Northwest.

Whitaker reports big business from the nation's capital, and Abel expects to have a promising report to make on his return from his first official trip.

"EXHIBITOR SHOULD BE CONSULTED"

"Every director ought to make it his business to come in contact with the exhibitors, as often as possible," said Anita King, the new Horkheimer-Mutual star, whose first production, "The Girl Angle," is to be released October 8. "The exhibitor comes in contact with the people. The people stop to tell him as they go out of his place, what they think of his picture, why they like it and why they do not like it. The exhibitor represents the pulse of the people.

"A director very frequently will say: 'What does the exhibitor know about it?'

"Often the director will cut out entirely the little fine touches an author introduces in his script. Now, as a matter of fact, these very situations are what the public most enjoys. It is the little human touches that reach them and that 'hit them right between the eyes.'

"Neither is an audience satisfied entirely with youth and beauty. It looks for something more real than either can give. Therefore, if the directors could only meet the exhibitors, it would be a decided help to the acting staff of a company producing the pictures."

SLUMS FIGURE IN NEW FERGUSON FILM

The slums of New York's lower East Side play a prominent part in Elsie Ferguson's new Artcraft picture, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing," adapted from the well-known book by Mary S. Watts.

In order to get the actual "local color" for the picture, the entire company of players deserted the Fort Lee studio to stage a series of exteriors under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, who also produced Miss Ferguson's current film success, "Barbary Sheep." Although considerable difficulty was experienced in filming the scenes on account of the crowds that gathered every time the photographer set up his camera, Mr. Tourneur, with the aid of a half dozen members of New York's "finest," finally succeeded in obtaining the desired views in which some of the real natives of the Ghetto took part.

The new vehicle for Miss Ferguson offers a strong contrast to her first Artcraft picture. In "Barbary Sheep" she appeared as the polished woman of the social world, while as Jennie Cushing she portrays the part of the poor street urchin. As in the case of "Barbary Sheep," however, the photoplay is an adaptation of a popular novel by a well-known author.

Henry Schumman-Heink, son of the famous prima donna, has been released from the Triangle's playing forces, at Culver City, to sign a new contract with the Naval Reserves. This will not be his first service under Old Glory, for in 1916 he served in the Naval Reserves.

Industry Aids U. S. Again

SPECIAL PICTURE WITH "40-STARS-40" TO WORK FOR NEW LIBERTY LOAN

THE ever-ready picture industry has again placed its shoulder to the wheel in the aid of the government.

The second big liberty loan is to be boosted throughout the nation by means of a remarkable special liberty picture, in which appear forty of the most celebrated luminaries of the silent and speaking stage, together with President Wilson and numerous other prominent public personates.

Scene from the Second Liberty Loan picture, in which forty big stars appear and which is to be distributed by the National Association to aid the government. We'll let you guess who this bold bandit has relieved of their liberty bonds.

No Rental Charge to Exhibitors

This film is to be distributed by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in co-operation with the secretary of the United States treasury. There will be no rental charge to exhibitors. Every exchange will handle the subjects.

The second Liberty Loan picture comprises five distinct subjects, each about five hundred feet in length, any one of which is a complete episode in itself. It is explained by the committee that any one of the five episodes can be shown by exhibitors in any sequence as there is nothing to indicate that any one film follows another. The subject of the films are all of a distinctly patriotic and historical nature, presenting upon the screen in the persons of the most distinguished stars the greatest characters in the history of the country—the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and twenty or more other memorable events in the history of our country are thus enacted upon the screen by these great stars, always with a view to kindling a patriotic spirit.

Featured Personages

Among the notable personages and stars who take part in this unprecedented production are President Wilson, Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, Dudley Field Malone, late Collector of the Port of New York, and Thomas A. Edison, DeWolf Hopper, Raymond Hitchcock, Douglas Fairbanks, Julian Eltinge, William Hart, Wilton Lackaye, David Warfield, William Courtleigh, Clifton Crawford, Leon Errol, Edmund Breeze, Jack Hazard, Jefferson DeAngelis, Hal Forde, Paul Everton, Jed Prouty, Tom McGrath, Will Rogers, John Drew, Barney Bernard, Mary Pickford, Lillian Russell, Mabel Taliaferro, Beverly Sitgreaves, Mrs. William Courtleigh, Billie Burke, Pauline Frederick, Ann Wheaton, Nance O'Neil, Ethel Barrymore, Elsie Janis, Laurette Taylor, Marguerite Clark and Lillian Walker.

The picture was conceived and assembled by Herbert F. Rawll with the co-operation of the committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry of which Adolph Zukor is chairman. Other members of the committee are Marcus Loew, J. E. Brulatour, W. W. Irwin and George K. Spoor.

Immediately upon the completion of the five episodes the finished product was taken to Washington by Mr. Rawll, L. E. Olwell and John C. Flinn, advertising and publicity manager of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Here it was shown to officials of the treasury department by whom it was approved and endorsed.

Method of Distribution

Chairman Zukor appointed A. L. Lichmann, sales manager of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, as a committee of one to supervise the distribution of the production of which there will be five hundred prints in all. It is the purpose of the committee to have these five hundred prints shown in as many communities and theaters as is humanly possible during the time that the campaign for the second Liberty Loan is in progress. With that end in view, Mr. Lichmann has ordered the managers of the various Paramount exchanges scattered throughout the United States to obtain, from each exchange of all other picture companies operating in their respective territories, a complete list of all theaters which their exchanges are serving. These lists will be collated and the territory will then be apportioned to each of the several exchanges and they will be furnished with the names of the various towns in which they will handle the distribution of the second Liberty Loan film. By this method every exhibitor in the country will be reached and the dividing up of the entire production into five separate parts will enable the exchange managers to give the picture the widest possible distribution.

It is pointed out by Mr. Zukor in notifying the exchanges of this plan that the handling of this second Liberty Loan picture represents the greatest opportunity which the motion picture industry has thus far been afforded of being of direct service to the country and its tremendous task of winning the war. To the exhibitor the film has the double appeal of its patriotic import and the fact that such a galaxy of notables and stage stars will prove one of the greatest drawing cards that any theater could possibly obtain.

Theaters Furnished With Slides

It is urged that the exhibitors give the second Liberty Loan pictures the widest possible publicity and advertising as it will not only assist in the boosting of the Loan itself, but will prove of great advantage to their individual theaters. For the purpose of assisting the exhibitors in advertising the Loan, the committee is issuing 17,000 sets of advertising slides, the inscriptions upon which have already received the approval of the Treasury Department. One set of these slides is to be sent to every theater in the country.

In this connection the committee also wishes to call the attention of the exhibitors to the Liberty Loan trailer which was used in publicizing the first Liberty Loan. Every exhibitor who still has this trailer in his possession is urged to use it again in pushing the second one.

PATHE ANNEXES NEW STARS

Fannie Ward, Frank Keenan, Bessie Love, Bryant Washburn Added to List of Luminaries—New Feature Policy Begun

Pathe has just cast its golden net among the constellations of screen stars and made a big haul. Fannie Ward, Frank Keenan, Bessie Love and Bryant Washburn are soon to gleam from Pathe productions in company with Mrs. Vernon Castle, Mollie King, Pearl White and others.

J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., announced last week that his company has determined upon a new feature policy for the season now beginning, which will go into immediate effect.

It is stated that the financial resources of the Pathe company are to be used to the fullest extent in making the program one of the greatest in the picture business.

Until further notice, pictures starring Gladys Hulette, Antonio Moreno and Baby Marie Osborne will be Gold Rooster Plays. They will continue one each week up to the program released October 14. Thereafter they will be released intermittently. October 14 will see the release of the first of the Pathe Plays, Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Stranded in Arcady," and the program will also include a five-reel Gold Rooster Play.

This does not mean that the Pathe program will always include two features, though it will do so very often.

BREAKERS AHEAD FOR CENSOR

Brady Informs Chicago League He Will Head Delegation of Prominent Film Men to Chicago to Boost Stephens Amendment

The Chicago branch of the Exhibitors' League played host last week to William A. Brady when that dynamic producer was in the city to help put the skids under Major Funkhouser, autocrat of the Chicago censor board. Mr. Brady, after appearing before the judiciary committee of the council during the hearing on Alderman Steffen's proposal to take the blue pencil from the major and present it to a commission board of censors, hurried over to the League headquarters in the Masonic Temple and was met by a body of prominent Chicago exhibitors, including Joseph Hopp, president of the local chapter of the League and national vice-president, and William Sweeney, the man who has held down the national secretaryship for a number of years.

Mr. Brady assured the exhibitors that he would back the league to the far end of no man's land to strip the major of his misused power. He even declared that he would head a delegation to Chicago of some of the most prominent producing heads and theatrical men in New York when the Steffen proposal comes up for consideration again.

The whole motion picture industry is arraying itself against the Chicago censor and expects to make his unjust and prejudiced censorship an "A" exhibit for the effect it will have over the entire country.

The Steffen amendment to the ordinance would give a commission interpretation instead of an individual interpretation. Instead of allowing one man with unaccountable whims to reject a good film and thereby subject a producing concern to the great monetary loss such delay inevitably causes, the proposal before the council judiciary committee at the present time would vest the power of censorship in a commission of ten persons, six of whom would have to vote against a film in order to throw it out.

After appearing before the council committee, Mr. Brady hurried back to Washington. Before he left, however, he disclosed news regarding the status of the admission tax that brought joy to exhibitors' hearts. He expressed with utmost confidence that the house representatives would approve the senate amendment subjecting only houses charging 25 cents or over to the tax.

This leniency with the industry, according to Mr. Brady, was brought about because of the splendid cooperation with the government and was nothing more nor less than a vote of gratitude for the patriotic work of producer and exhibitor in lending their aid to make the people of the United States understand why they were in the war.

English Actress with Paramount

Journeying direct from Copenhagen, Denmark, to Hollywood, California, to become a member of the Lasky Stock Company, Netta Evans, the distinguished English actress, will appear in Paramount pictures in the near future.

Miss Evans achieved no small fame with the Pathe and Gaumont companies in Paris. She has also worked in films in Berlin and Copenhagen. Up to the time war was declared between England and Germany, Miss Evans had been engaged in picture work in the Teuton capital. Leaving there for Denmark, she secured an engagement with a prominent producing concern in Copenhagen.

The Self-Made Widow, with Alice Brady (World)—"Fair production to only fair business. Cannot compare with the star's former productions and is not up to the standard of Brady productions."—Julius Frankel, Temple Theater, Newport, Ky.—In high class neighborhood.

Rasputin, the Black Monk, with Montague Love (World)—"Shows Russia's religious impostor, Rasputin. Montague Love featured as Rasputin plays the part exceptionally well. June Elvidge, as the girl under the spell of hypnotism, plays her part to perfection. An all-star cast supports. Made from the historical standpoint, it is all that could be expected of a picture. I admit that the first three reels drag, but it would be practically impossible to get to the climax earlier. The picture brought capacity business and is well liked."—H. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Corner Grocery, with Lew Fields (World)—"Contains many laughs, although the picture doesn't amount to much, any more than does Lew Fields. It gets over. Is just a program picture."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Panthea, with Norma Talmadge (Selznick)—"Wonderful production. Drew better the second day than the first."—Julius Frankel, Hippodrome Theater, Newport, Ky.

Poppy, with Norma Talmadge (Selznick)—"Gave poor satisfaction in my town, which is usually strong for Norma."—M. T. Jones, Metropolitan, Owatonna, Minn.

Barbary Sheep, with Elsie Ferguson (Artcraft)—"A very satisfactory picture. I believe Miss Ferguson will be a very well liked picture star. Business satisfactory."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

A Romance of the Redwoods, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Gave good satisfaction to capacity business."—M. T. Jones, Metropolitan Theater, Owatonna, Minn.

A Romance of the Redwoods, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Broke the house record, held by In Again, Out Again."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Broadway Jones, with George M. Cohan (Artcraft)—"Picture gave good satisfaction but drew only mediocre crowds."—M. T. Jones, Metropolitan Theater, Owatonna, Minn.

Down to Earth, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"The star made far better picture than this one when he was with Triangle. Yet we pay more for this and the public cannot see why we charge them fifteen cents for an ordinary program picture."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Hawk, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"This was very good. Ran on a Sunday."—L. J. Frana, Olympic Theater, Calmar, Iowa.

The Vengeance of Durand (Vitagraph re-issue)—"A good picture but it shows too great difference in the players then and now."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Stolen Treaty, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A secret service story, well done, with a fine cast. Star and photography good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

Bobby, the Boy Scout, with Bobby Connelly (Vitagraph)—"A very small boy but a big star. He certainly is liked here. His picture is sure to please the youngsters as well as the adults."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The College Widow, with Ethel Clayton (Vitagraph)—"This picture pleased my patrons, because this is the author's home. Otherwise it would not have done so."—R. A. Shobe, Kentland Theater, Kentland, Ind.

Kittie McKay, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"This is one costume picture that went over big here. Good business with this one."—Albert Metzger, Fairy Theater, Knox, Ind.

The Shop Girl, with Edith Storey (Vitagraph)—"Picture good. Star very popular here. Photography was clear. Brought good business."—R. A. Shobe, Kentland Theater, Kentland, Ind.

The Shop Girl, with Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"This feature is excellent and both stars are very good. Patrons all pleased. Business capacity for two days."—Peter Grillo, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

Richard the Brazen, with Harry Morey (Vitagraph)—"Has pretty fair drawing power, although the title is not a very attractive one."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Durand of the Bad Lands, with Dustin Farnum (Fox)—"This kind of picture always goes big with my audience. Star and production great. Plenty of comedy all through."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Soul of Satan, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"Went over big. Miss Brockwell is a favorite here. Her work is fine. Picture well directed."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Small Town Girl, with June Caprice (Fox)—"An excellent feature. Jane Lee shares honors with the star. Let's have more of her. Fine business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kan.—High class patronage.

Every Girl's Dream, with June Caprice (Fox)—"A big, expensive production with a great cast, wonderful settings and scenery. Star wonderful and a money getter."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Empress, with Holbrook Blinn (Pathe)—"Avoid this if you are catering to a fastidious patronage. Elaborate staging, fine acting and excellent photography, but the story is distasteful and very suggestive."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kan.—High class patronage.

Joy and the Dragon, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"Not as good as previous Baby Osborne pictures either in type of story or the child's acting. It drew very well." —A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Screenshine

By Mel

ALMOST A GOOD STORY

IT WAS a festive occasion—a police raid.

The scene was a bad place in the city of Loose Angels.

And—horrors!—a pretty picture actress was found therein.

But wait. This story isn't so good as you thought.

She was simply studying types so she could give the correct impersonations on the two-dimension stage.

She said.

Art requires a great deal of a person nowadays.

HELLO!

Miss Mabel Sullivan, with the jolly blue eyes of Killarney, known to every exhibitor in Chicago as the Vitagraph operator, is now presiding over the hello lines at the Famous Players office, and Mr. Zukor is to be congratulated.

DO WE FIND THE RANGE?

Those speedometers of the screen, the reviewers, are now, it seems, to be beset with the great difficulty of avoiding the new war word, "camouflage," in typing their trenchant impressions.

Not to camouflage the target of this double-barreled paragraph, we will say that one of Chicago's most prominent reviewers hasn't missed out on the new field piece of verbal artillery for a week.

THIS MAN'S THERE

Along comes A. G. Stolte, manager of the Palace Theater, Vinton, Iowa, showing us what close attention he gives to his patrons' comfort and entertainment. Last Sunday evening a great many people were enjoying a ride in their automobiles and before going home stopped at his theater.

Suddenly a rain shower came up. Mr. Stolte immediately displayed on the screen a slide reading, "It is raining outside—is your automobile covered?"

There was a short intermission permitting time enough for the autoists to cover their machines, during which time the orchestra rendered some very delightful music.

This is only one of the many little "stunts" that Manager Stolte is noted for. More power to him.

Says the editor: "There's a Divinity that shapes our ends rough, hew them how we will!"

If that's the case, we'd like to know why he patronizes that manicurist.

NOBODY CAMPING HERE

A fill 'em salesman tackled a hard "hick"-ory nut when he went up against the Nevada exhibitor who said he didn't believe he had heard of a film star named Mary Pickford.

The peerless picture pusher finally jogged his memory and the alert showman said, "Oh, yes, I remember her. And she sure was great in 'Carmen!'"

Gives Out List of Non-Taxable Music

CHICAGO LEAGUE FURNISHES EXHIBITORS SELECTIONS THEY CAN PLAY

THE latest thorn in the breast of exhibitors throughout the United States is the music tax. This is the fee which the Society of American Authors, Composers and Publishers are authorized by a supreme court decision to collect from theaters, or other public places, which play the music copyrighted by members of the society.

Only Official List of Non-Taxable Music

MOTOGRAPHY publishes herewith the first official and authentic list of non-taxable music which has been given to the theater men of the country. It is the list compiled by the Chicago League, under the direction of President Joseph Hopp. This is the first branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America to take up the question in this helpful manner. MOTOGRAPHY is furnishing by letter any additional information desired by exhibitors concerning the tax.

The Chicago League has sent the list to its members with the following explanation:

Below is a partial list of music numbers that can be used by your pianist, organist, or orchestra, that is Non-Taxable. We will add to this list right along, and furnish you with same from time to time. When writing for the music desginate to the publisher whether the music desired is for orchestra or piano alone.

Any members wishing information regarding the music tax, or list of non-taxable music can be obtained by calling on Miss Katherine C. Melcher, at the headquarters of the Chicago League, 1416 Masonic Temple.

EXHIBITORS TO CO-OPERATE

Campaign Arranged for Motion Picture Activities During Food Conservation Week, October 21 to 28—Exhibitors Asked to Help

Arthur S. Friend, treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who is the head of the Motion Picture Division of the United States Food Administration, is authority for the statement that motion picture exhibitors, during the week of October 21 to 28, will have an opportunity of demonstrating their loyal devotion to their country and patriotic service. The call is made for their co-operation and active participation in the great drive for enlisting the food conservation army. The technical name of the movement is the Food Pledge Card Campaign.

"Not only are exhibitors requested to exhibit pictures bearing upon the campaign," said Mr. Friend, "but they are also urged to make prominent display of slides, posters and other matter supplied for exploiting this tremendous campaign for the conservation of food in the international crisis.

"Samples of the slides are to be sent to all exhibitors. There are two series, one for the week of October 14, a preliminary series, and one for the week of the campaign, marked A and B respectively.

"It is the desire of the food administration that the motion picture exhibitors of the United States shall fully appreciate the importance of this campaign, the gravity of the situation, and the manner in which they can materially assist.

"The Motion Picture industry has claimed for the screen that it is the greatest power and force for good. This is an opportunity to prove it.

"On October 21, the first of the official pictures of the food administration will be released. It will constitute a portion of the weekly news reels of Pathe, Universal and Mutual so that every picture theater in the country subscribing to any one of these three important news weeklies will be able to show it.

"During the week of October 21-28, the Four Minute Men will speak in the picture theater on the pledge card, and lend their efforts toward the recruiting of this vast army for conservation.

"There is in the printer's hands, a very attractive six color one-sheet carrying the Food Administration's shield of service and the words 'Food Will Win the War'—'Official pictures of the United States Food Administration are shown at this theater.' We hope to get these posters out before October 14, so that they can be placed in the lobbies of all of the theaters throughout the country in time for the big drive. When they go out, we should like to have them framed and kept permanently on exhibition."

Petrova Signs Thomas Holding

Madame Olga Petrova, who recently engaged Thomas Holding to play the part of the Crown Prince of Belmark in the first of the eight pictures to be made by the Petrova Picture Company this year, has just signed a contract with Mr. Holding whereby he becomes her leading man for the next four pictures. A clause in the agreement also gives her an option on Mr. Holding's services for further pictures.

The first picture in which Mr. Holding appears with the Polish star will be completed this week and will be released on or about October 22. The second picture will be started almost immediately after the completion of the first one.

It was Charles Frohman who first brought Thomas Holding to America. In this country, Holding has played the leading man with Billie Burke, Maxine Elliott, and many other equally well known players.

In the motion picture field Mr. Holding's career has been no less distinguished. His first picture was "The Eternal City" for the Famous Players and while he was still in Rome, Oliver Morosco signed him up for the revival of "Peg O' My Heart" as soon as he should again reach America. After a season with "Peg," Holding returned to the Famous Players under a year's contract as Pauline Frederick's leading man. More recently he has been seen on the screen with Jane Grey in "Her Fighting Chance," with Doris Kenyon in "The Great White Trail" and with Clara Kimball Young in "Magda."

Select Exchange for St. Louis

C. E. Shurtleff, sales manager of Select Pictures, has left New York to open a Select exchange in St. Louis. This new branch is in addition to the eighteen other Select exchanges now operating in the United States.

The St. Louis exchange will be placed in charge of Edward W. Dustin, formerly of the Pathe organization and until recently the Triangle Branch Manager in St. Louis.

In Des Moines and Kansas City the Select Pictures Corporation is taking over the former Selznick exchanges operated for Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc. Mr. A. H. Blank, the well-known middle-west operator, has had direction of these exchanges in Kansas City and Des Moines.

Another member of the Select sales force who journeyed West at the same time is Sydney Abel, special representative. Mr. Abel has just returned from a visit to the new Select exchange in Washington, D. C., where he found business unusually satisfactory, and is now beginning an extensive trip to Pittsburgh, Chicago and Minneapolis. Due to the release of "The Moth," Norma Talmadge's first Select picture, "Magda," Clara Kimball Young's first Select production, and "The Public Be Damned," many contracts are being closed at these points.

Chaplin Builds Studio

With the completion of "The Adventurer," the title of the latest Mutual-Chaplin special, Charlie Chaplin starts his affiliations with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, for which organization he will produce eight pictures during the next eighteen months. One million dollars, with an additional $75,000 as a bonus, is the figure that will be paid Chaplin under the conditions of his new contract, with other financial inducements in the event of any of the eight subjects measuring over the two-reel length.

The Lone Star studio at Lillian Way and Eleanor avenue has been abandoned by the Chaplin company and work will be started shortly on the construction of a large new studio which will be owned by the star. Several sites in the Hollywood and Melrose districts are under consideration.

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures was moved to extraordinary enthusiasm recently at the projection of Fox's "When a Man Sees Red," with William Farnum.

In Case the Tax Hits the Ten Cent Houses

THE federal tax bill, as finally approved by the Senate and House conference committee, includes ten cent theater admission prices as objects of levy. The only chance for return to the wise provision of the Senate, exempting all admission prices under twenty-five cents, lies in the floor discussion of the committee's report, which is going on even as we write. Optimistic motion picture men, who are fighting hard at Washington and hoping for the best, tell us there is still a strong possibility of incorporating the twenty-five cent clause in the final bill. The circumstance which mitigates against it, of course, is the brief time remaining for Congress to settle many points of difference, and the consequent necessity for reciprocal sacrifices for the sake of an early conclusion.

Therefore, while the champions of the picture cause are battling valiantly—and against considerable odds—for an equitable adjustment of the tax, and while we continue to pray for their success, we will lose nothing by considering the ultimate result if the ten cent limit is the one finally adopted.

We have repeatedly stated here a fact that should need no statement to the trade—that the average ten cent house is making little or no money—and the ten cent house is the backbone of the industry. When, here and there, one is found claiming a profit, investigation would generally reveal a faulty system of bookkeeping—insufficient charges to operation, depreciation and interest.

And if, in rare cases, good management and keen showmanship have actually produced a small profit—and that means annual, not weekly profit—the proposed tax will effectually wipe it out. Ten per cent of its gross income is more than any business can stand without changes.

There are two ways of meeting the new impost, if it has to be met. One is to make fifteen cents, instead of ten, the prevailing price. We are strongly in favor of this change. We believe it will actually increase attendance, by providing the exhibitor with additional funds for advertising and improving his attractions. It will take care of the tax and give the exhibitor a real profit.

There will be some, however, who cannot bring themselves to this conclusion, and who will not be persuaded to post a fifteen cent price. Their only alternative (unless they are willing to pay the tax out of their pockets as long as their pile lasts) is to charge eleven cents.

Of course this ridiculous figure will have to be explained to the public, which should not be expected to know anything whatever about theater taxes. A good, big placard over the box office window should point out that the one cent is for war tax.

The exhibitor who believes in playing his cards on the table might do himself a service by explaining further to the effect that "The government expects this theater to contribute $—— in taxes this year." A weekly attendance of only six thousand would make the figure $3,000, which looks—and is—big. That might save him from the criticism of people who think he is rich and ought to pay the penny for them.

False Conclusions as to Juvenile Influence

THE National Board of Review of Motion Pictures has been making a study of "the idea that much juvenile delinquency is traceable to the movies," and now sends out a report on the subject over the signature of its assistant secretary, H. F. Sherwood.

Unquestionably, a great deal of harm is done by irresponsible statements that shift the blame for unfortunte occurrences upon the most convenient shoulders. That is an old trick of newspaper men, and the pictures are not the first, but merely the most recent, to suffer by it.

A good parallel was the popular press habit, in the earlier days of electric lighting, of blaming "crossed electric wires" for every fire—which doubtless did as much to hamper the progress of electric illumination as any other one thing.

The days of active newspaper enmity to the pictures are about over. Antagonism has, in many cases, been succeeded by co-operation. Newspapers and film makers not only work hand in hand, but the editorial writers frequently fight hard against the legislative and censorial injustices that constantly threaten the pictures.

The harm that newspapers still do to the picture business is, therefore, mostly inadvertent and unwitting. Daily editors have neither the time nor the patience to subject all the copy they handle to a psychological analysis to determine if there be a possible sting in it.

The fact that the damage is unintentional gives reason to hope that it may be eliminated. Wilful annoyances are difficult to stop, but the unconscious ones generally stop themselves when they are made conscious.

The greatest difficulty in making the newspapers see the motion picture side of the case is that, to them, "story" value is more important than fact value. There is story value in the report that little Morris Cohen (as related by Mr. Sherwood) almost succeeded in hanging himself because he was "re-enacting a film scene." As a matter of truth, there proved to be no fact value in it at all, because he had witnessed no such scene in a film. And so on with a number of cases investigated by the National Board. The assistant secretary goes on to say:

> A social worker who conducted a city-wide investigation of the recreations of children in New York City last year, which included one hundred stories taken from newspapers dealing with crimes said to have been suggested to boys by motion pictures, found that there was no foundation for the statements in the cases of eighty-nine. Of the remaining eleven, only one boy could fairly be said to have received the actual suggestion for his crime from pictures which he saw at a motion picture exhibition.
> It might as well be held that circuses are to blame for the broken arms and legs of small boys, and the league baseball games are responsible for the cracked heads and bruised fingers of youthful baseball enthusiasts. The motion picture has been much maligned by those who credit it with being the chief motive for juvenile delinquency. The National Board of Review seeks to eliminate from motion pictures anything which, if imitated, would be a basis for crime.
> In closing something may be said regarding a recent assertion made at a convention of representatives of one of the largest religious denominations of the country to the effect that upwards of fifty per cent of those attending motion picture theaters are young people, and that these pictures are causing a great amount of crime. This sweeping statement is self-evidently not based on accurate knowledge. A recent survey of recreations made in the District of Columbia by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor showed by actual count that in seventy-three motion picture theaters less than one-fifth of those present were under eighteen years of age. This tends to corroborate other data of the same character. Crime is a long-standing evil. The inciting impulse in the case of the young is very frequently declared to be the prevailing forms of recreation. Once it was fiction. Now it is the movies. Doubtless at one time railroads, shortening the journey to wicked cities and perdition, were considered by many to be abettors of crime.

Before closing, we would call attention to the first part of that last paragraph. "By actual count in seventy-three motion picture theaters, less than one-fifth of those present were under eighteen years of age." Here is a figure that many old exhibitors will dispute—less than twenty per cent of their attendance could be classified as children.

How many theater men do know definitely the proportions of men, women and children making up their audiences year in and year out? We venture to say that the majority do not know. And yet such a census, readily obtained, is the best sort of guide to program selection—and the best kind of answer to those who make assertions about child attendance without knowing whereof they speak.

Kathleen Clifford, the charming and vivid little star, and scenes from Paramount's new serial, "Who Is Number One?"

BIG SERIAL READY

Paramount Sets Release Date for Anna Katharine Green Serial, Starring Kathleen Clifford—Smashing Thrills in Each Episode

Monday, October 29, has been set as the release date for Paramount's first serial which bears the strange, haunting title "Who is 'Number One'?" The complete novelization—not a synopsis—will be printed in the most important newspapers in fifty cities, coincident with the release of the fifteen episodes.

Kathleen Clifford is the star of "Who Is 'Number One'?" and in this Paramount serial she is making her film debut. Already a success in vaudeville and musical comedy, her work in "Who Is 'Number One'?" her infectuous charm and her dramatic talent, as well as her ability for staging neck-risking stunts, will immediately establish her, Paramount believes, as one of the most popular of all serial heroines.

Besides the campaign of newspaper advertising, Paramount will launch behind "Who is 'Number One'?" a smashing billboard campaign in 150 cities with the avowed purpose of making "Who Is 'Number One'?" the best advertised serial ever released.

"Who is 'Number One'?" tells the story of the machinations of a mysterious, revengeful woman. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," is the theme behind this woman's intrigue.

A man of masterful mind—a powerful financier, a clever inventor—J. Pierpont Morgan and Thomas A. Edison combined, is the object of this woman's hate. He does not know why he is marked for destruction by the plot that is devised first to strip him of all that is dear to him, then finally to take his life.

Into this turmoil comes Kathleen Clifford. She falls in love with the son of the financier. Her fresh, clean mind is matched against the evil schemes of the conspiring crew. "Number One," the mysterious one, is the leader of the attack, the agent of the woman scorned. Kathleen fights for the man she loves.

In every episode are smashing thrills, ranging from an axe-fight between divers under the sea to a tremendous dive from the yard arm of a ship, and a leap across a court from a roof to a fire escape that resulted in a broken arm for Miss Clifford.

FILM PIRATE ARRESTED

Film Exchangeman and Theater Owner Arrested in Brooklyn on Charge of Stealing Print of Chaplin Comedy

Sidney A. Huffman, owner of a film exchange at 729 Fifth Avenue, and Joseph Quadrini, an exhibitor owning a theater at Smith and Hackett streets, Brooklyn, were arrested after a police raid on Huffman's place by detectives and bound over to the grand jury after a police court hearing before Judge Corrigan.

The arrests followed investigations by secret service men attached to the Mutual Film Corporation, from whose offices a print of Charlie Chaplin's comedy "Easy Street" had disappeared, conservatively estimated as worth $25,000 by the officers of the corporation. Warrants were secured for the man's arrest. He was taken to the theater owned by Quadrini and confronted with the latter but neither would make a detailed confession and both were held.

The arrests constitute a further step in the campaign being conducted by the Mutual Film Corporation against film pirates all over the country. In the course of the Mutual secret service department's activities many arrests have been made and several convictions secured in Chicago and elsewhere.

"There will be no more civil prosecutions of film thieves by the Mutual Film Corporation," said Samuel M. Field, general counsel, in announcing the determination of the Mutual to push the cases against Huffman and Quadrini to the limit.

"We have evidence now which will permit us to proceed with entire confidence against film thieves in various parts of the country who have been masquerading as legitimate dealers, and, under this disguise, robbing wherever opportunity presented. All prosecutions in the future will be in the criminal courts and they will be conducted with the utmost rigor of the law."

Shortly following the publication of "The Burglar" by World-Pictures Brady-Made little Madge Evans will appear as the star of "The Little Patriot."

SUNDAY PICTURES IN MEMPHIS

Chancellor Fentriss Dissolves Injunction Restraining Police from Interfering—Houses Open Sunday as Usual and No Trouble Experienced

By J. L. Ray

Memphis, Tenn.—The Sunday opening of theaters is consuming a large part of public attention in this city, and nobody seems to know just what the present status is going to develop. Chancellor Francis Fentress, on September 21, dissolved injunctions restraining the police from closing the amusement places, and dismissed the bills, automatically eliminating appeal from his decision. Mayor H. H. Litty stated that the attitude of the city commissioners toward the Sunday lid had not changed since the police were ordered to enforce the Sunday closing laws.

Chief Quinlan and Inspector Hayes of the police department predicted that proprietors or managers which tried to operate picture theaters on Sunday would be arrested and required to post forfeits for their appearance in court. It was announced that the police would not only make arrests of theater managers and operators who would attempt to open their doors on Sunday, but that a patrolman would be placed in front of each house to prevent reopening after the managers had made bond.

In the opinion rendered, Chancellor Fentress did not touch the question of whether the city is right in closing the amusement houses on the Sabbath. His action was based on the belief that courts of equity have no power to restrain the enforcement of criminal statutes or city ordinances. He held that the temporary injunction restraining the police from closing the theaters and arresting their managers had been "improvidently" granted. He therefore not only sustained the motion to dissolve the injunction, but in addition dismissed the bills in two separate orders, which prevents appeal from his action. In the event the theatrical men could have appealed, the injunction would have been in force pending final adjudication.

Theaters Open As Usual

The first Sunday following the order found the theaters open as usual, and doing a thriving business. No notices had been received by the police department officially notifying them of the action to be taken against the shows if they opened, the only written orders having been contained in an "ultimatum" issued September 1, which was likewise disregarded. So far as could be learned, no orders had been issued patrolmen to make arrests. It was reported that for the purpose of settling the Sunday question once and for all, one theater manager would be arrested and the case tried for test purposes, but up until a late hour Sunday this intention had not been carried out.

Violation of Sunday closing laws in Tennessee is punishable by a fine of $3. Repeated violations are subject to a fine of $50 under the nuisance laws. Following the agitation by the Protestant Pastors' Association some months ago against the opening of moving picture and vaudeville houses on Sunday, arrangements were made whereby all profits accruing from Sunday operation should be turned over to the United Charities for distribution along various lines of charitable work. This action was upheld by City Attorney Livingston as being entirely proper, and the shows were allowed to continue without molestation. Ouster proceedings were begun against Mayor Tom C. Ashcroft some weeks ago.

DWAN DIRECTS FAIRBANKS

Noted Director Will Go West to Produce a Photoplay in Every Ten Weeks, Alternating with John Emerson

For the purpose of personally directing Douglas Fairbanks in new productions, Allan Dwan, formerly general director of Eastern productions for the Triangle

Illustration of the popular song, "Till the Clouds Roll By." When the mist piles up over the sun it may cost a producer a hundred dollars or more a minute when there's a big company out on location, so he spends many anxious moments watching the moving picture show of the skies. Here's Douglas Fairbanks and the company that made "The Man from Painted Post" trying to be patient with the weather.

Film Corporation, has arranged to leave for California to join the Fairbanks organization. By the arrangement Mr. Dwan will direct one picture every ten weeks, alternating on the production of Fairbanks plays with Director John Emerson. Both Mr. Dwan and Mr. Emerson will have under their jurisdiction a complete producing unit and under the new arrangement the work of staging, cutting, assembling and titling will continue without the usual lay-off between pictures. While one production is being staged the last one is being cut, assembled and titled and the next one is receiving the initial preparation.

Florence Reed in New Play

Harry Rapf, who has now entrenched himself in the front line of producers, announces that Florence Reed will appear in a new screen play, "The Struggle Everlasting," after the stage success of that name written by Edwin Milton Royle.

Miss Reed's association with the new Rapf project will in no wise interfere with her playing in the forthcoming "Chu Chin Chow" stage spectacle at the Manhattan Opera House, in which she plays a leading part. James Kirkwood is the director and the company of players boasts such favorites as Milton Sills, Irving Cummings, E. J. Radcliff, Edwin Hoyt, Albert Hall, Wellington Plater, Fred. C. Jones and others of like repute.

There are no half way measures about Harry Rapf when it comes to turning out productions, as witness the success of "Today," which served as Florence Reed's initial vehicle under Mr. Rapf's management, as well as "The Mad Lover," with Robert Warwick, and "One Hour," which served for Zena Keef and Alan Hale.

The collections on the Hearst-Pathe News for the week ending September 1 were the largest in its history.

Triangle Studios Hum with Activity

BUILDING OPERATIONS BEING RUSHED—PRODUCTION AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

IN an effort to make its Culver City studio the largest picture producing plant in the world the Triangle Film Corporation is rushing improvements that will cost approximately $500,000 and will increase the area of the plant to 26 acres.

A force of about three hundred carpenters and mechanics now are erecting a closed comedy stage 304 feet by 80 feet. Among the other structures to be built on the sixteen acres recently purchased adjoining the present eleven-acre plant will be two glass and concrete drama stages, 250 by 60 feet, a scene dock 304 by 20 feet, a three-story, concrete electric power plant, a camera vault with lockers and accommodations for twenty-five camera men and their assistants and a branch office of the engineering and production department.

The dressing room building, which extends the length of the present plant, will be extended along the entire 26 acres and will contain modern dressing rooms and offices for six hundred players and directors. The new drama stages will cost $50,000 each and the comedy stage, $20,000. The scene dock will be equipped with two big concrete traps in the floor for the use in making "water stuff" and producing under-light effects.

All of the construction work is being done under the direction of H. H. Barter, engineering and technical director of the corporation, directly supervised by General Manager and Vice-President H. O. Davis.

Three Months Ahead of Releasing Schedule

With elaborate sets crowding the stages and every available space in the eleven-acre studio, directors shooting day and night, the production department working on a 24-hour schedule and hundreds of players taking time off only to eat and sleep, the Culver City plant is shipping east at the rate of from two to four five-reelers weekly. Soon the producing plant will be about three months ahead of the releasing schedule, which was the goal set by General Manager and Vice-President H. O. Davis, when he assumed charge recently.

Something positively new in "vamping" will be shown when Director Walter Edwards' picture, "The Fuel of Life," on which he is now at work, is released. In this story the wife is the victim of a "business vampire" and to win back her husband she fights her rival with her own weapons and with surprising results. Belle Bennett is being featured in this picture, with Texas Guinan playing a prominent role.

Some surprising photography is promised in "Up or Down?" which Director Lynn Reynolds is now completing at Santa Barbara. Reynolds, who has already startled filmdom with the feats he has made the camera perform, has worked new scenic miracles in this picture. The play features George Hernandez.

"Atmosphere" That Costs Thousands

One of the handsomest homes ever set up on a Triange stage is being used by Director E. Mason Hopper in his new picture, "Blue Blood," in which Alma Reubens is being featured. The story is laid in the mansion of a rich old New York family and the furniture necessary for "atmosphere" has cost well into the thousands. In this picture a proud old aristocrat sees the family name sink into oblivion through the slaying of his degenerate grandson, only to have new and better blood infused and the name saved through a strange turn of fate.

Director Jack Dillon is busy on a comedy drama, "Indiscreet Corrine," in which Olive Thomas is being featured. In this picture a pampered society girl seeks adventure in the garb of a cafe dancer, lying skillfully to manufacture for herself a past which in the end comes near costing her life's happiness. She enters into a contract with a girl who has a real skeleton in the closet to see who can first win a promise of marriage from a mysterious man, and both win, though not the same man.

The thrilling adventures of a newspaper man, drugged and forced to pose as a millionaire after he has been fired from his paper for falling down on a story, is the plot of the picture, "External Circumstances," being made under the direction of Ferris Hartman with Charles Gunn in a leading role. From an ambitious youth eager to earn enough to marry on, the reporter suddenly finds himself surrounded with every luxury as the result of the wager of two rich youths. In the end he is stripped of his borrowed finery by the girl who jilted him.

Director Cliff Smith is working on a western drama, "The Guardian of El Dorado," in which Roy Stewart is being featured, portraying the young sheriff who was the first of many elected to the post to collect his initial month's pay. In this western thriller, now being made at Hartville, Stewart is given ample opportunity to display his horsemanship. A dancing girl and a rich mine are the stakes in this game of life on the frontier.

Director William Gittens, latest addition to the Triangle forces, is at work on a seafaring picture which will include many difficult water stunts, among them being a battle at sea between a sailor and a shark.

The following October productions have just been completed: "One Shot Ross," directed by Cliff Smith and featuring Roy Stewart; "Doing Her Bit," directed by Jack Conway and featuring Ruth Stonehouse; "Wild Sumac," directed by William V. Mong and featuring Margery Wilson; "The Firefly of Tough Luck," directed by E. Mason Hopper and featuring Alma Ruebens; "The Stainless Barrier," directed by Thomas E. Heffron and featuring Irene Hunt.

Pettijohn Addresses Exhibitors

Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors Association, left New York September 27 to attend a meeting of the directors of the Indiana local of the American Exhibitors Association. Frank J. Rembusch, chairman of the organization committee of the A. E. A., and Mr. Pettijohn addressed the meeting of the Indiana directors and outlined to them the work already accomplished by the association.

Following the meeting of the Indiana directors which was held in Indianapolis on Friday, September 28, Mr. Pettijohn left for Chicago where he addressed another gathering of exhibitors interested in the American Exhibitors Association.

PUSHING NEW POLICY

October to Mark Beginning of Vitagraph's "Best Authors" Schedule of Screen Plays Adapted from Successful Books

The "best authors" policy established for Greater Vitagraph starts with a rush on the company's list of releases for the latter part of October and the early part of November.

Within a period of twenty-eight days four dramas for the screen from successful books are to be released, as follows:

October 15—"Dead Shot Baker," the first of the Wolfville series which is being made from the famous stories by Alfred Henry Lewis.

October 22—"The Bottom of the Well," a mystery play from the book of the same title by Frederick Upham Adams.

November 5—"The Fettered Woman," an adaptation from "Anne's Bridge," one of the best known of the Robert W. Chambers romances.

November 12—"I Will Repay," an adaptation of the celebrated O. Henry story, "A Municipal Report."

"Dead Shot Baker," in which William Duncan and Carol Holloway are featured, is declared to be one of the finest Western pictures ever filmed, remarkable for its daredevil riding scenes and its wonderful lighting effects, Mr. Duncan directing the production in addition to playing the leading role.

"The Bottom of the Well," a melodrama in which a millionaire mill owner is tried for his own murder, brings to the Vitagraph program an extraordinary production. It was directed by John Robertson and presents an all-star cast headed by Evart Overton. Others in the company are Ned Finley, Agnes Ayres, Alice Terry, Adele De Garde, Herbert Prior, Robert Gaillard and Bigelow Cook.

"The Fettered Woman" presents Alice Joyce, supported by Webster Campbell and Templar Saxe, in a splendid adaptation of the Robert W. Chambers novel, "Anne's Bridge." In book form this was one of the most widely read of the Chambers stories, dealing with the fate of a splendid woman falsely accused of killing an adventurer who had sought her fortune. The play was directed by Tom Terriss and is notable for the beautiful scenic effects obtained.

"I Will Repay" concerns the devotion of an old slave for the daughter of his deceased master who earns her living as a writer. A beautiful love story has been introduced, with Corinne Griffith playing the heroine.

Prominent Stars in Ivan Play

Among other things a large cast of prominent stars make the Ivan Film Production "Married In Name Only" an extraordinary picture. The picture is to show vividly the nobility as well as frailty of human nature. Milton

Ivan's "Married in Name Only."

Sills, who was accorded the stellar honors by his wonderful charactization of the role of Joseph Stanton in "The Honor System," has been charged to carry out the leading male role in "Married In Name Only." Marie Shotwell and Gretchen Hartman are with Mr. Sills.

LAEMMLE BACK FROM COAST

Talks of Trip to Universal City Where Important Production Plans Are Ready, Built Around Novel Themes and New Stars

Carl Laemmle has returned to New York after a month's visit at Universal City. During his stay on the coast important plans were perfected for the filming of several of the most pretentious productions that have been undertaken by the big organization which Mr. Laemmle heads. The final details of a new efficiency system, effecting both the business and art of manufacturing dramas for the screen were put into effect during the same period, and a larger number of skilled actors and actresses were put under contract than have been engaged for many months past.

"We are now going full steam ahead," Mr. Laemmle said, "and despite war conditions, expect to do our full share in keeping business in a healthy and growing state.

"One of the chief things that occupied my attention on the coast was the arrangement of working schedules so that the superproductions I have had in mind for some time can be gotten well under way before the rainy season sets in, as spectacular outdoor effects figure in them prominently.

"I was also much interested," Mr. Laemmle went on, "in observing the final experiments in lighting that have just been perfected at Universal City. The results are in many respects revolutionary, and now put effects at the command of our directors that were thought impossible even a year ago. Night photography has now been solved, and many of the greatest scenes that, in my judgment, we have ever filmed have recently been done by the application of the new electrical technique.

A few of the vivid points in Earle Williams' new Vitagraph Blue Ribbon, "The Love Doctor," October 8. Corrine Griffith is the lead of an unusual cast.

All-Star Cast in "Love Doctor"

Greater Vitagraph has supplied Earle Williams with one of the strongest plays of his career, in "The Love Doctor," which is an adaptation from George P. Dillenback's novel, "Hashashin, the Indifferent." Paul Scardon directed the feature and the supporting cast includes Corinne Griffith, Evart Overton, Patsy De Forest, Webster Campbell and Adele De Garde.

"The Love Doctor" contains an unusual theme, dealing with the efforts of a skilled surgeon to interchange the brain cells of two girls—one to whose intense love he remains impassive and the other who is unresponsive to his affection—purporting to restore nature's balance. How the doctor comes to grief through his meddling with destiny, is graphically told in this new Blue Ribbon feature.

Earle Williams is seen as the meddler with destinies and renders his usual superb characterization in a role involving considerable emotional interpretation.

Corinne Griffith is again seen in the leading feminine role with Mr. Williams and as Blanche Hildreth, has one of the most difficult portrayals ever given her. It brings into play her ability to embrace a wide scope of characterization, first as the woman whose intense passion is met with scorn, then as the woman who the artifices of surgery transform into a retiring, impassive woman who ultimately marries the man who sought to save her from harm.

---

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle is soon to return to the sunshine coast to work.

Elsie Ferguson in Street Scuffle

Elsie Ferguson last week experienced her most strenuous work in motion pictures since deserting the stage several months ago, when she took an exceptionally active part in a street fight in New York's ghetto for her new Artcraft film, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing." The scene called for Miss Ferguson's rescue of a street cat which was being tortured by a gang of urchins. Single handed she attacked the crowd of young ruffians and after a most vigorous battle set them all to rout. The affair was so realistic that Miss Ferguson was compelled to cease activities for the day, but according to Director Tourneur, the camera caught one of the finest little scuffles ever staged.

New Producing Firm

The newest film producing company in New York is the Zenith Film Corporation, which will produce special features directed by Wm. Christy Cabanne. The company's first picture will be "America's Mission," to be produced about November 1. Government officials will co-operate in the production of the feature, which will be of aid in the promotion of the war.

The officials of the company are C. Sanford Harger, president; Wm. Christy Cabanne, vice-president; John Baird, treasurer; and Robert J. Huntington, secretary.

Loew Opens New Theater

Marcus Loew opened his newest and costliest theater in New York on October 1. It is the Victoria, situated on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, near Seventh avenue. This is Mr. Loew's thirty-first house in Greater New York and it is said to have cost $1,170,000, including the site. It is furnished in marble, rose and gold. Pictures and vaudeville will comprise the bill.

SELZNICK IN SELECT

President of Select Pictures Corporation Has Not Been Bought Out—Boston Paper Prints "Wild-Cat" Story

In spite of reports to the contrary, Lewis J. Selznick is one of the chief controllers of the Select Pictures Corporation. Mr. Selznick has consolidated his interests with other powerful interests in the industry and formed this new and larger organization, in which no one has a greater share or greater power that Mr. Selznick, president of the corporation.

These statements have been issued officially by Select Pictures Corporation in answer to a story which appeared in the Boston Evening Record. This story told of the "rise of the house of Selznick," of Selznick's battles with the other film producers and finally his "fall."

The story mentioned Selznick's acquisition of Clara Kimball Young, Herbert Brenon, Robert Warwick and Norma Talmadge, and his prominent position in the producing field. Then it went on to tell of how Mr. Selznick had been bought off by Adolph Zukor, of the Famous Players Lasky Company.

Needless to say, these statements were based upon false information, as is shown by the facts given in the first paragraph.

The Select Pictures Corporation now numbers among its stars Norma and Constance Talmadge, Alice Brady, Eva Tanguay, and Rita Jolivet. Its forthcoming activities will be watched with interest.

Taylor Holmes is leading a gay and frivolous life in the movies. It's a new leading woman with every picture.

New Chicago Theater

Chicago is to have a new picture theater on West Madison street, near Western avenue. The building is to cost $200,000. It will contain besides the theater, stores and offices. It will be 125x127 feet, south front, 75 feet west of Western avenue. It will be three stories high. The seating capacity of the theater will be 1,280.

It will be erected by Theo. F. Brett, who has secured a bond issue alone of $11,500, 8 years, at 6 per cent, from Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company.

The primary work of construction is already begun.

Lubliner and Trinz have leased the theater for ten years, beginning April 1, 1918. The annual rental is to be $12,000.

A. E. A. Directors to Meet

President Jake Wells, of the American Exhibitors' Association, has called a meeting of the board of directors of the A. E. A. to be held at their offices in the Times Building, New York City, on Thursday, October 4, at 11 o'clock. Many matters of importance will be discussed at the meeting and an announcement of vital interest to the exhibitors will be made at the conclusion of the meeting.

Third Barriscale Play

Bessie Barriscale has finished "Madam Who," Harold MacGrath's military secret service romance, and has begun the production of her third Paralta picture, "Within the Cup," under the direction of Raymond B. West. The opening scenes are laid in the Latin Quarter in Paris and then shift to old Greenwich Village, New York. A big feature of this picture will be a students' ball, typical of "Bal Bullier" of Paris.

In the circle is Olive Tell, who appears in her first screen play in Mutual's "The Unforeseen," October 22. At the right is Anita King in Mutual's "The Girl Angle," October 8, and the other scene shows Gail Kane in "Southern Pride," released the same day.

"BIG STAR ONLY" PROGRAM

Ten Five-Reelers on Mutual Schedule for October—Olive Tell to Make Screen Deput in "Unforeseen"

Ten five-reel productions with "big stars only" are scheduled for release in October by the Mutual Film Corporation under its schedule of "two a week" which was inaugurated September 1, 1917.

The month will bring a new star to the screen. Olive Tell, the Broadway favorite, celebrated as an actress of the speaking stage, will be seen in her first picture, "The Unforeseen," on October 22.

Anita King's first picture under the Mutual banner, "The Girl Angle," is set for release October 8. Miss King has been engaged by E. D. Horkheimer to appear in a series of star productions for Mutual releases.

Edna Goodrich is on the October schedule twice, in "Queen X" and "A Daughter of Maryland." Mary Miles Minter's "Her Country's Call," is on the list for October 1, and "Peggy Leads the Way" is listed for October 22.

The month's schedule includes:

October 1—"Queen X," the second of the series of Mutual productions starring Miss Goodrich. It is from the story by Edwin M. Stanton, assistant district attorney of New York, and deals with the federal crusade against a gang of oriental smugglers.

"Her Country's Call," the second of the new series of Mutual-American productions starring Mary Miles Minter, in which Miss Minter is cast as a patriotic little mountaineer.

October 8—"The Girl Angle," the first of the series of Mutual-Horkheimer star productions featuring Anita King. The picture is laid in the rough and ready west with Miss King in the role of a woman who hates the male of the species and gets into complications with outlaws and sheriffs.

"Southern Pride," sixth of the series of American-Mutuals, starring Gail Kane, casts Miss Kane as the daughter of an old, aristocratic but impoverished southern family, loved by two men and loving one.

October 15—"The Beautiful Adventure" is Miss Murdock's second picture, an adaptation of the Charles Frohman stage success. It follows "Outcast," a picturization of the startling play of the same title.

"The Calendar Girl" is the second of the Mutual-American productions starring Juliette Day, who left Broadway after her success in "Upstairs and Down," to appear in pictures.

October 22—"The Unforeseen" is Miss Olive Tell's first motion picture, one of the series of Charles Frohman's plays in pictures produced by the Empire All Star Corporation for the Mutual Film Corporation. Miss Tell is a speaking stage star of magnitude and "The Unforeseen" was chosen as the vehicle for her picture debut after careful consideration.

"The Sea Master" is the second of the new series of William Russell productions, following "Sands of Sacrifice." It gives Mr. Russell a new role as a hero of the deep blue. It was under the direction of Edward S. Sloman

October 29—"Peggy Leads the Way" is the third of the new series of Minter Mutuals, starring the dainty and popular Mary Miles Minter. The picture was titled for Miss Minter herself. The picture is laid in the big forests of California.

"A Daughter of Maryland," the third of the series of Mutual productions starring Edna Goodrich, casts the stage beauty in the role of a beautiful girl of the old southland.

Forthcoming Mutual productions, now in the course of production or finished awaiting a place on the schedule of releases include "Wit," starring Gail Kane, "Betty and the Buccaneers," Miss Juliette Day's third picture; "Lucky Jim," starring William Russell; "Doing Her Bit," Margarita Fischer's first picture under her new contract with the American Film Company, Inc.; "Playing the Game," starring Anita King; "The Imposter," "The Richest Girl" and "My Wife," starring Ann Murdock, and "American Maid," starring Edna Goodrich.

Change in Fox Releases

A change which has just been made in the monthly schedule of Fox Film Corporation's Special Features will result in settting back one week each of the pictures originally scheduled for October.

The revised order of releases follows:

September 30—Valeska Suratt in "A Rich Man's Plaything."
October 7—Gladys Brockwell in "Conscience."
October 14—Virginia Pearson in "Thou Shalt Not Steal."
October 21—June Caprice in "Miss U. S. A."
October 28—George Walsh in "This Is The Life."

Two Standard Pictures have been dated for release in October. These are "When a Man Sees Red" (October 7), Wiliam Farnum's superb melodramatic vehicle, and "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" (October 14) the second of the Fox Kiddies productions.

LEARNS PUBLIC DEMAND

Winfield R. Sheehan, Fox General Manager, Co-Operates With Exhibitors and Finds Taste Growing for Better Productions

Exhibitors and the Fox Film Corporation have been brought into close contact by a series of flying trips to the various exchanges recently made by Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the corporation. It is Mr. Sheehan's policy to keep constantly informed as to the picture needs of the public by means of talking directly with the exhibitor.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, Fox Film Corporation.

Public Demanding Better Productions

The demand of the public is constantly toward higher class pictures and Mr. Sheehan has found that exhibitors are becoming more and more desirous of booking features of unusual merit.

In order to meet this growing demand for unusual productions, the Fox Film Corporation is producing a higher grade of pictures than has before been seen, developing high themes, especially for women and children, with frequent strong, wholesome, red blooded stories. These are called the Fox Standard Pictures and they are bound to set a new mark of excellence in the picture business. "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Cleopatra" with Theda Bara; "The Spy," "The Honor System" and "The Conqueror" are notable examples of this new and higher type of photoplay.

The productions above, which have already been released, are enjoying unusual runs in every part of the country.

"The Fox Kiddie Pictures," Mr. Sheehan says, "will enjoy a great wave of popularity." The first of the kiddies series is "Jack and the Beanstalk," which has brought forth some unusually enthusiastic criticisms. "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" has repeated this performance.

General Manager Sheehan is an experienced and farsighted man in the film industry and any statements from him are to be counted as authoritative. He states that conditions in the industry just now are unusually healthy everywhere.

Sheehan Man of Experience

Mr. Sheehan is one of the biggest figures in the film industry. Up to a few years ago he was a well known newspaper man, from which calling he became identified with New York's municipal government. Then he became associated with William Fox in the organization of the Fox Film Corporation. One of the first undertakings intrusted to Mr. Sheehan by Mr. Fox was the successful installation of Fox exchanges in practically every large city of the United States, following which he established branches in Canada, in South America, Australia, New Zealand and the Far East.

General Manager Sheehan then turned his attention to England and Continental Europe, where he organized and put into effective working order the various European branches of the huge company.

Show Pictures to Soldiers

Arrangements are now completed for the showing in England and other foreign countries of all the Fox Standard Pictures. "Jack and the Beanstalk" will be presented in London with elaborate details. While abroad Mr. Sheehan met King George, and made arrangements with the army heads for the showing of Fox pictures to the soldiers in cantonments and everywhere that the authorities would permit the exhibition of pictures.

MAY HIT SMALL HOUSES

Reports Indicate Danger That United States War Tax Will Be Drawn to Apply to Ten Cent Admissions

In spite of the news which has been given out to the effect that the picture theaters whose maximum charge for admission is 25 cents would be exempt from the war tax now in preparation in the United States congress, it is now reported by the New York press that the latest decision of the joint house and senate committees is to levy a tax of ten per cent on all picture theaters admissions of ten cents or over.

It is now said that only the five cent houses are to be exempt. The annual income from the picture houses under this proposed tax is estimated at about $67,000,000.

The text of the war tax has not yet, of course, been made public. It is reported, however, that the house will not pass the bill as recommended by the senate committee—that is, to exempt all houses with a maximum charge of 25 cents. Exhibitors and film interests are at present at Washington conferring with the members of the houses of congress in the attempt to keep the tax as low as possible.

Picture Women Buy Ambulance

The picture players division of the Stage Women's War Relief is now active in connection with its ambulance fund. Mrs. J. Stuart Blackton is one of the leading spirits in the work. The women have already raised $1,500 and expect to place the order for the first ambulance very soon.

The advisory and finance committee includes Daniel Frohman, William A. Brady, Jesse Lasky, Samuel Rothapfel, Edgar Selwyn, E. D. Horkheimer, George Kleine and J. Stuart Blackton.

Strand Has Electric Fountain

Manager Carson Bradford has placed a handsome electric fountain in his Nashville theater after having it overhauled for the winter season, which adds much to the attractiveness of the interior arrangement. The fountain is placed behind the orchestra pit.

"Baby Mine" Goes Over the Top

MADGE KENNEDY LANDS ON BOTH FEET IN JUMP FROM STAGE TO SCREEN

"BABY MINE," the second of the distinctive Goldwyn Pictures, established several new records in various large American cities on its release last week. First of all it lived up to two Goldwyn predictions made for it long in advance of its public presentation. One was that Madge Kennedy would spring into full-fledged screen popularity with critics and the public from the moment of her initial appearance in films. Becoming popular with the picture public is very often a slow process, so in achieving this instantly Madge Kennedy is most fortunate. The other promise made by Goldwyn was that "Baby Mine" would, if anything, excel the drawing power of "Polly of the Circus," a record-maker in the industry.

Judging by the critics' reviews in the New York newspapers, as well as those in other cities, Margaret Mayo's skill as an author of farce comedy for the stage gains new emphasis now that she has retired from the American theater and transferred her efforts exclusively to Goldwyn Pictures. Here are quotations from some of the reviews of the picture:

New York Tribune—Just as everyone had about definitely settled in his mind whether he preferred Marguerite Clark or Mary Pickford along comes Madge Kennedy and upsets all the calculations. She is sweet, she is subtle and her humor is inimitable. One might sum up by saying this is a typical Goldwyn picture, which tells the story. It will be a long time before anything more delightful will be seen on the screen.

New York Herald—In "Baby Mine" Madge Kennedy takes to the screen like a fly takes to fly-paper. This new star should prove a gold mine in the motion picture business. None of her highly ingenious comedy is lost in her transfer to the screen. The spectators were laughing constantly.

New York Times—Madge Kennedy, making her film debut, takes to the screen quite naturally. "Baby Mine" is filled with hilarity.

In an article welcoming her to Cleveland as a screen star, the Cleveland Plain Dealer says: Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine" fulfills the forecast that she will at once become one of the foremost film favorites.

The Toledo Blade says: The motion picture public delights in the decision of Madge Kennedy to turn to the screen for she has had an unbroken series of successes in the theater. In "Baby Mine" she is an instantaneous success.

The Indianapolis News says: Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine" is a second great success for Goldwyn—as big a success as the remarkable "Polly of the Circus." When you see Miss Kennedy you have met the greatest comedienne in all the world.

The Cleveland Leader says: Thank heaven, here is a star who does not gain her comedy effects by making grotesque faces. Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine" scores instantly and goes to the top position among stars of the screen with her first picture. She will always be one of the cinema headliners in Cleveland.

The Washington Post says: Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine," the second Goldwyn picture, is greater on the screen than she was on the stage. Being a star without a duplicate in the theater, this necessarily means that she hasn't an equal anywhere in filmland.

Drawing Power Is Proved

Goldwyn Pictures' drawing power is proved by the flood of letters and telegrams of congratulations received from exhibitors in every section of the United States and Canada by the executives of the new Goldwyn organization. Communication of this news to the exhibitors of the country seems to have been accomplished on wings, judging by the number of contracts received at the Goldwyn home offices since the release of "Polly of the Circus" and "Baby Mine."

Not only are the larger exhibitors of the country coming into the Goldwyn fold, but the smaller ones are increasing beyond all of the initial expectations of the Goldwyn organization. The confidence of the smaller exhibitors in the new productions has been one of the much-sought objectives of the company from the day of its inception more than a year ago. It is the belief of Samuel Goldfish and his allied owners of Goldwyn that no company has ever yet attained more than a small fractional part of the support that the smaller exhibitors of the country are ready to give any reputable company which gives real attention and service to these factors in the industry.

Newly Signed Contracts

Among the newly signed Goldwyn contracts are the following, in all sections of North America:

Olyneyville, R. I., Royal; Newburyport, Mass., Premier; Norwich, N. Y., Colonia; Hamilton, N. Y., Sheldon; Milwaukee, Wis., Strand; Gary, Ind., Royal; Chicago, Ill., States; Ann Arbor, Mich., Rae; Grand Haven, Mich., Robin Hood; Allegon, Mich., Star; Three River, Mich., Rex; Wilmington, Del., Majestic; Williamsport, Pa., Lyric; Williamsport, Pa., Grand; Elizabeth City, N. C., New; Covington, Ga., Lyric; Dublin, Ga., Crystal; Escanaba, Mich., Delft; Galva, Ill., Princess; De Kalb, Ill., Princess; Lebanon, Ky., Arista; Cleveland, O., Jennings; Malvern, Ark., Royal; Arkadelphia, Ark., Royal; Hobart, Okla., Cozy; Midland, Mich., Monarch; Nogales, Ariz., Nogales;

Rubye De Remer, former beauty of Ziegfeld's Follies, who plays the lead in Goldwyn's, "The Auction Block," by Rex Beach.

Marcus Loew Books "The Manx-Man"

Further confirmation of the big exhibitors' enthusiasm over the drawing powers of "The Manx-Man," the presentation of Hall Caine's story, is found in the fact that Marcus Loew has booked this production for his entire metropolitan chain of theaters through the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation.

Mr. Loew's booking of this production is largely due to his own observation of "The Manx-Man's" drawing power when it played next door to Marcus Loew's New York Theater, Forty-fifth street and Broadway, for four weeks of capacity business at advanced prices.

Marie Dressler Begins Work on Second Play

Established in her own studio at Hollywood, California, Marie Dressler has begun engaging players for her second comedy for Goldwyn distribution. The name of the piece has not been announced and beyond the fact that the scenario was written by the comedienne herself, little is known ot it.

"The Scrublady," completed and approved by Miss Dressler just before she left for California, will be released throughout North America on October 28. Lively exhibitor interest is evident in this and other Dressler comedies to come.

Fun-Art Films Starts Work

Fun-Art Films, Inc., has started actual work on its first picture at the Thanhouser Studios in New Rochelle. It is the intention to release two two-reel comedies a month with the well known vaudeville team of Ray and Gordon Dooley featured in the principal comedy roles.

The Dooleys, although young in years, are well known on the big time circuit, and are live wires that need no recharging. Gordon Dooley, famous for his falls, slips and slides with utter disregard for suffering limbs or endangered neck, has never failed to convulse his audience with his sure fire rapid style of entertainment. As "Zit" has so well expressed it in the Journal, he is a "cross between a rubber ball and a boneless squab—he can certainly twist himself into the shape of a pretzel. And of all the electric dynamos, Miss Dooley must have a battery concealed in her somewhere. I never saw a girl work so fast in my life." If the Dooleys can get one-tenth of the laughs on the screen that they can deliver over the footlights their future in this new field is assured.

Vincent Bryan and Johnny Hines will collaborate as producers and directors. Mr. Bryan is a well known writer of popular songs, having written such successes as "Down Where the Wurtsburger Flows," "Cubanola Glide," "Tammany" and is the author of "The Man From Now," for Henry W. Savage, "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," "The Kissing Girl," all big successes, and also the author of specialty acts of Lew Dockstader and Nat Wills for ten years. He also wrote Gertrude Hoffman's two Reviews in 1912 and 1913, all of Rogers Brothers and Montgomery and Stone numbers since "The Wizard of Oz," right up to and including "Chin Chin." For Charlie Chaplin he did the burlesque of "Carmen," and "Police," also "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "The Count," "The Pawnshop," etc.

Johnny Hines, for two years and a half, was leading comedian and co-author of many of the features released by the World Film Corporation.

Mrs. Dessez on Exended Tour

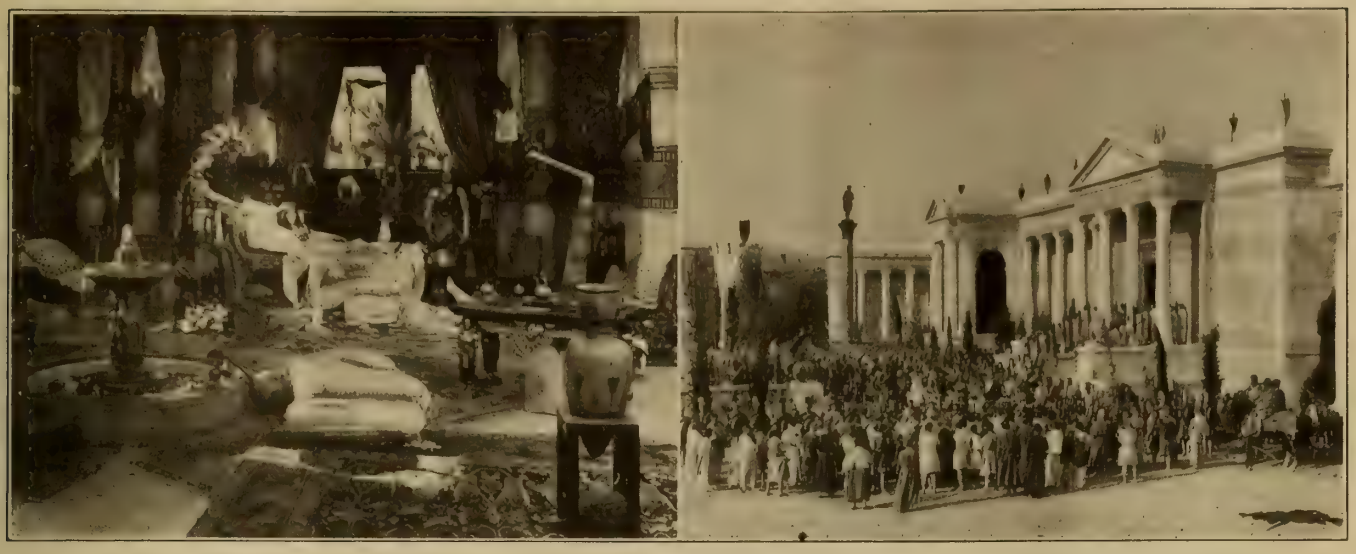
Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez, head of the Community Service Department of the George Kleine System, whose function is to promote the interest of both exhibitors and theater patrons in the Conquest Programs, left Chicago on Friday, Sept. 21, for an extended tour of the country on behalf of Conquest Programs.



Mrs. Dessez will visit, among other points, Cleveland, Buffalo, Detroit, Albany, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., Roanoke and Norfolk. She is calling upon the leading educators, journalists and social workers in each city visited and seeking their co-operation in supporting the Better Film Movement throughout America.

Everyone in the film industry recalls that Mrs. Dessez came into the limelight a few months ago, when, with Mrs. Philip Speed, of New York City, she successfully established the first series of children's matinees in New York City and surprised exhibitors by making their children matinee performances the most profitable showings of the entire week.

Five thousand people saw "Polly of the Circus" when it ran at the Strand Theater in Cleveland. This is a Goldwyn picture featuring Mae Marsh.

The wedding of Mr. and Mrs. E. Richard Schayer in "The Honeymooners," a new Peter Pan release.

Theda Bara on Broadway

Miss Theda Bara, the William Fox star whose fame encircles the globe, will be seen for the first time on Broadway in a sumptuous production of "Cleopatra." In this elaborate photo-drama the greatest siren of ancient times, whose charms and machinations wrecked empires and changed the map of the world, is portrayed by Theda Bara, who by her reputation is the greatest living portrayer of siren roles. She has reincarnated the great figure of history, and has depicted with a fidelity that is uncanny the wondrous beauty and the subtle cunning of the Siren of the Nile.

Never before in the history of photodramatic art has a more artistic and lavish production been attempted. William Fox, following out his policy of producing the best in film production, spared no expense in surrounding his world-famed star with a supporting company of unexcelled players, and with elaborate stage settings which ran into the hundreds of thousands of dollars to erect.

Blasé Broadway will see in the William Fox Theda Bara superpicture "Cleopatra," one of the greatest and most artistic achievements ever attempted for screen production.

Big Billboard Campaign

Paramount is only half done when it completes its enormous newspaper advertising campaign that it has contracted to put behind "Who Is 'Number One'?" the mystery serial starring Kathleen Clifford. Added to newspaper displays and the publication of the Anna Katherine Green story complete, in more than fifty cities, Paramount also will give splendid aid to the exhibitor with a comprehensive billboard campaign, blanketing 150 cities.

The billboards will cover cities and suburbs that have a total population of fifty million persons—half the population of the United States. The newspaper advertising will reach more than twenty-five million persons, not once but from twenty to thirty times.

Beulah Booker, a pretty young miss of 17 summers, has made good in a leading part in Cub comedies, playing opposite George Ovey.

"ALADDIN" AT GLOBE

Second of Fox Kiddie Pictures Gets Unstinted Praise of New York Critics as it Holds Screen on Broadway

"Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," the second of the Fox Kiddie pictures, opened Monday night at the Globe Theater to a capacity audience.

Not only did the several hundred persons who were there as theater-goers enthuse over this picture, but all the critics gave it unstinted praise. They recognized it as a picture far removed from the ordinary run of photoplay productions.

"Aladdin" adds to the already wide popularity of those delightful kiddies, Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin. These little tots, who amazed everyone by their remarkable work in "Jack and the Beanstalk," surpass their previous efforts in their latest picture.

Among the New York press comments were the following:

The American—"It is spectacular. It is more exciting than the biggest screen "thriller," and a thousand per cent more wholesome. It has more humor to the fifty feet than the funniest farce of the season."

The World—"Distinctly repeats the success of 'Jack and the Beanstalk.' The children display very remarkable precocity as film actors."

The Herald—"The picture has many ingenious effects in the numerous indoor and outdoor scenes, and the sand storm shown in the second part was as stirring and realistic as could be expected of any film representation of the fury of the elements."

Harriette Underhill in The Tribune—"It shall merely be stated that we enjoyed it more than anything we have seen this season, because it is filled with delicious subtle humor, furnished by some totally unconscious, incredibily clever children. A perfectly well behaved gathering of persons quite forgot themselves and became enthusiastic. They marveled out loud."

Evening Sun—"The adult will find entertainment in the film version of that popular childhood story, especially because of the beautiful scenes that are unfolded."

Evening Post—"It provides a delightful entertainment for both young and old."

Bluebird Features Published Stories

The management of Bluebird photoplays have come to the conclusion that printed stories, either in book form or as magazine features, make the best photoplays. With that determination arrived at, arrangements have been made to show screen versions of popular novels and fiction narratives in a majority of future releases.

Paralta Engages West

Raymond B. West, who made a very notable reputation as a director with the Triangle Company, has joined the directorial staff of the Paralta organization.

Negotiations which have been going on between Mr. West and Paralta for several months were brought to a head during the recent visit of Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, to the studios of his company in Hollywood. Contracts were then signed under which the young director entered into a long-term connection with Paralta.

Raymond B. West, reputable director who has joined Paralta.

The engagement of Mr. West marks an important step in the determination of Mr. Anderson, president of Paralta, and Robert T. Kane, vice-president, to retain the services of a battery of directors who in talent, versatility, experience and reputation will enjoy the entire confidence of exhibitors throughout the country. In annexing Mr. West, Reginald Barker and Oscar Apfel, they have undoubtedly attained their purpose.

That Mr. West's contract with Triangle would expire in August became known early last spring. At that time Mr. Kane took up with him the proposition of joining Paralta Plays. At the same time other producing organizations sought his services.

Mr. West was very slow in coming to a conclusion as to his future, but the rapid growth of Paralta and the statement of its plans made by Mr. Anderson and Mr. Kane convinced him that his interests lay with this progressive new organization, and he signed with it.

Mr. West will direct Miss Bessie Barriscale's third Paralta picture, following the completion of the finishing touches Reginald Barker is now putting on "Madam Who," Harold MacGrath's romantic military mystery story, which will be Miss Barriscale's first Paralta release. "Rose o' Paradise," her first Paralta picture, will be her second Paralta release.

Mr. West directed several productions in which Miss Barriscale appeared under Triangle management. It was he who directed her first screen appearance—"The Cup of Life."

Mr. West's greatest work was his participation in the production of "Civilization." For eight months he not only directed many of the great situations and incidents, but he also devoted his attention to the camera work and to the construction of scenes.

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley are to appear together in several approaching World-Pictures.

WAR CONVENTION

Picture Industry Represented at War Convention of United States Chamber of Commerce—Business Men Praise Film Co-operation

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., which was recently elected to active membership in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America, participated in the war convention which was held recently at Atlantic City, New Jersey, in response to an invitation received from President R. Goodwin Rhett.

The national association's delegates to the war convention were President William A. Brady and Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott, and although President Brady had made arrangements to attend the convention with a view to explaining to the representative business men of America just what the motion picture industry was doing to aid the Government during the period of the war, he was at the last moment prevented from leaving New York. The industry nevertheless contributed very materially to the success of the convention in arranging for the news weeklies to be present, and during the five days' session at the Garden Pier, where the cameramen representing the Hearst-Pathe, Universal and Mutual weeklies, were enabled to make close-ups and group pictures of many of the executive officials of America's greatest industries, including railroad heads, cabinet officials and many others.

Upon his return to New York, Mr. Elliott stated that it was the most wonderful convention he had ever attended and that on all sides he had heard the motion picture industry commended for the able and efficient manner in which it was co-operating with the Government in the furtherance of its war policies. Mr. Elliott said that several prominent officials had told him that they had seen the slides and film trailers which were shown in the motion picture theaters durin the Liberty Loan campaign and they had also seen the slides which had more recently been shown at the request of Hon. David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture. From this it is evident that the patrons of the 16,000 motion picture theaters throughout the country include the big men of the great industries, corporations and commercial bodies, and that the film and screen is now recognized as one of the greatest mediums of publicity at the command of the federal authorities.

The United States Chamber of Commerce includes in its membership nearly one thousand corporations and organizations, and the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will participate actively in all of its deliberations hereafter.

Fair Honors Fair Helen

For the first time in its history the directorate of the California state fair set aside a day in honor of a motion picture actress, when Friday, September 14, was designated as Helen Holmes day at the fair held in Sacramento. Miss Holmes, accompanied by her director, J. P. McGowan, was a guest of honor at a dinner given by the Agricultural society.

Walt Whitman will soon make his appearance in a Triangle production, "The Tar-Hell Warrior," now under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

ISSAC MARCUS, proprietor of a moving picture theater at Sixth and Dauphin streets, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, has been made the defendant in a damage suit begun by Alice Enterline, of Yonkers, N. Y.

The plaintiff alleges that a seat in the theater collapsed and threw her to the floor. No amount of damages is stated in the preliminary papers filed.

Church members of Owosso, Michigan, have signed a petition asking that all the picture houses be closed Sundays.

A bankruptcy petition has been filed by Edward Schoenloeber, running a motion picture theater at 2430 Vliet street, Milwaukee. The liabilities are scheduled at $1,772.22 and assets of $150, all of which is claimed as exempt.

The Lyric Theater of Springfield, Missouri, will be subjected to the carpenter's ax and mason's trowel this month, according to plans announced by H. T. Loper, who manages this playhouse. The seating capacity is to be increased from 400 to 700 through the addition of a balcony. The lobby also is to be widened and the house given a general overhauling which will make it even more of a puller than it has been in the past.

Alexander Flower has recently purchased a corner on Thirty-fifth street and Forest avenue, Chicago, on which he intends to construct a theater. The house is to have a seating capacity of 1,800 and be used for vaudeville as well as pictures. The cost is placed at $200,000, the building to be completed early next fall.

The beginning of construction work on the new Majestic theater building to be erected at Dallas, Texas, has been postponed for two or three months, on account of the heavy demand for labor in the construction of army cantonments. Carl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement Company, said that new bids will be called for in sixty to ninety days, and that work will be started in ample time to complete the building for next season.

Manager Edel of the Strand Theater announces that he will be glad to receive musical compositions from American composers for rendition by the Strand Symphony Orchestra. Signor Adriano Ariani, the conductor, and Carl Edouarde, will, with Mr. Edel and two well-known music critics, pass on all compositions submitted.

It is Mr. Edel's intention to embody in the symphony program a composition by an American composer, which has not hitherto been heard in public. All compositions submitted will receive serious consideration.

Members of Battery E, headquarters and supply companies of the First Tennessee Field Artillery were accorded a cordial farewell entertainment Saturday night, September 8, by Manager Harry Sudekum of the Princess Theater of Nashville. This courtesy was extended to the men of the local battery through the desire on the part of Manager Sudekum to express his apreciation of their continued patronage in a substantial manner and also out of a spirit of patriotism in the giving of a pleasant send-off to the boys who are leaving for Berlin, via Greenville, S. C., and France. Needless to say, the occasion was much enjoyed, and Manager Sudekum received many grateful thanks at the hands of the big gun men.

H. E. Ellison, manager of the Princess and Rialto theaters of Denver, Colorado, has just booked Pathe's Les Miserables for first run in his city. Mr. Ellison, until recently was manager of the American, Rex and Liberty theaters in Salt Lake City. He is strong for advance prices and is going to inaugurate a higher price policy with the advent of "Les Miserables," which enjoyed such vogue during its run at Orchestra Hall, Chicago.

Mrs. H. L. Vorse, Mrs. G. J. Frankel, and Millie R. Trumbull of the board of motion picture censors, Portland, Oregon, hereafter are to approve names of persons to act as motion picture viewers. Heretofore names were presented to the board and appointments made without question. The board appointed the committee at a recent meeting when, according to the report of its secretary, 509 picture reels were viewed during August and only nine eliminations ordered. No pictures were condemned during the month.

Stolen in Columbus after having been passed by the Board of Censors, the moving picture films of the Chamber of Commerce outing were recovered in Cincinnati, September 13, by detectives employed by the Universal Film Company. The pictures, after recovery, were shown in a number of Cincinnati theaters, among them the Orpheum, September 23; Clifton, September 24; Colonial, September 25; Forest, Avondale, September 26; Lyric, Covington, September 27; Casino, Clark and Linn, September 28, and Variety, September 29.

The Orpheum theater of Memphis, Tennessee, has begun its fall season under the management of Arthur Lane, who has had active supervision of the house for a number of years. The Orpheum is controlled by the vaudeville circuit of the same name, and operates as a combination picture and vaudeville house. The interior of the building has been made attractive through the means of new paint, upholstering and draperies, and the house as a whole has an appearance of being ready to handle some big business during the fall and winter months.

The question whether the Kansas Motion Picture Board of Review has the final decision on what pictures shall be shown in the state will be decided by the Kansas Supreme Court. Judge W. H. McCamish, in the Wyandotte County District Court ruled that the board's decision was not final and that the state announced it would appeal. In making his ruling Judge McCamish said that the Kansas law was not clear.

The picture in question was "The Easiest Way," starring Clara Kimball Young. It was forbidden in Kansas by the board as immoral. The distributing company brought a suit in the Wyandotte County Court to compel the board to pass the picture.

A decision sustaining the ruling of the Wyandotte court will mean that the courts will have the power to pass on pictures after the censors have made their decision.

Over 1,500 people attended the opening of Sunday performances of the moving picture houses in Goshen, Indiana. No action of any kind was taken against the opening of the amusement houses and the first day attendance would indicate that the people of the city want the Sunday amusement.

The realization that Sunday movies were endorsed by the last Indiana legislature and that the bill would have been signed by Governor Goodrich, but for a technicality, has had a great deal to do with the change of sentiment.

Petitions are being placed in circulation in Hamilton, Ohio, for the opening of shows on Sundays. These petitions, it is understood, will be presented to Mayor Holzberger as soon as they have been signed.

The theater owners have appealed their cases from the municipal court, and will not pay their fines until the higher court has passed upon their cases.

The state authorities recently picked on Hamilton as a good place to start enforcing the obsolete blue laws and the amusement enterprises are preparing to go the limit in fighting this action.

The case of the state against Herbert U. Dwyer, of Dunkirk, Indiana, for operating his moving picture show on Sunday was set for trial in the Jay Circuit Court. Dwyer failed to appear and his bond for $100 was declared forfeited.

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the Savoy theater and the Leland hotel, at Sanish, North Dakota, early Sunday morning, September 9, causing a loss estimated at $10,000. Nothing was saved but the destruction of the theater, it is said, may mean the erection of an opera house to supply the amusement needs of the town.

George Bird and Fred Mausset, proprietors of the Park Theater, Glens Falls, New York, have announced plans for the enlargement of the theater they manage to a seating capacity of 1,500.

The gentlemen have concluded negotiations for a strip of land adjoining the house which will permit the necessary enlargement being made to the building to increase the seating capacity.

The installation of a larger pipe organ than the one now in use, new seats and other changes in the interior, are included in the plans.

Decatur, Illinois, has the reputation among film men of being one of the picture towns on the map. With its population of about 30,000 it supports and makes paying investments out of the four first class theaters which endeavor to satisfy its picture cravings. All houses show first run stuff and are making money for their owners. Nate Erber manages the Lincoln Square Theater, a house with a seating capacity of 1,600 and is seldom in a position where he is justified in complaining about business. A. Ziegfried, manager of the Bijou, is remodeling his house, which seats 1,000, and is spending $30,000 building on a new front. Manager Carrier, who guides the destiny of the Avon, is running vaudeville and pictures and charging but 5 and 10 cents. The Strand, run by the Dorgan Brothers, is the other first class house that puts Decatur in four-square with its picture loving population.

Thomas A. Kinney has bought out the interest of E. Bleakley in the Park Theater of Franklin, Pennsylvania. Mr. Kinney has already taken active charge of the playhouse as manager and will maintain the same policy the management has hitherto endorsed.

Since its opening in February, 1914, Mr. Kinney has been associated with Mr. Bleakley in the ownership of the house.

The theater is now showing Triangle, Keystone, Fox and Fairbanks pictures.

For the first time in the history of Goshen, Indiana, Sunday picture exhibitions were given there the afternoon and evening of September 9. Managers of "movie" theaters had planned to open at the time the Indiana Legislature passed the Sunday motion picture show bill, but Governor Goodrich's refusal to sign the measure caused them to cancel their program. Now they have determined to test public sentiment. The Goshen Ministerial Association stands opposed to Sunday shows and threatens prosecution.

Manager Gil Burrows, himself, will hardly recognize the New Auditorium Theater of Dayton, Ohio, as the one he used to run when the doors are thrown open after a remodeling which completely transforms it. Bringing the playhouse down to date has necessitated an expenditure of over $50,000; $20,000 went into ventilating equipment alone, and another $10,000 into a fine Kimball organ. Military ushers, dressed in blue uniforms and carrying swagger sticks, will lend class to the general ensemble of this fine institution. When it is finished it will be one of the finest houses in the state.

The Victoria Theater, Buffalo, has an ad writer on its payroll who earns every cent he gets. We have no doubt that patrons of this theater get almost as much pleasure out of glancing through the snappy phraseology of its program as from the screen itself. For example, lamp the following little extract:

Isn't it a worth while feeling when you are the owner of a theater and have spent something like $250,000 in a fine neighborhood to give the folks a real playhouse, and then drop into the place almost any night in the week and see the same folks laughing and happy over the good films you get for 'em? We, the fellow who writes this program, saw Mr. Mark, the owner, watch a pleased Vic audience last week, and he was so touched with their appreciation of the offerings and everything, that we'd swear we saw a tear of joy flicker on his eyelash.

The following is a list of theaters and the plays they used last week in the loop district of Chicago:

Alcazar—"The Devil Dodgers," with Roy Stewart.
Auditorium—"The Eyes of the World," drama.
Bandbox—"Wild and Woolly," with Douglas Fairbanks.
Bijou Dream—"The Public Be Damned," with Mary Fuller.
Boston—"The Corner Grocery," with Lew Fields.
Casino—"Absinthe," with King Baggott.
Castle—"Barbary Sheep," with Elsie Ferguson.
Colonial—"The Whip," with Alma Hanlon.
Lyric—"Two Little Imps," with Katherine and Jane Lee.
Orpheum—"Sands of Sacrifice," with William Russell.
Pastime—"Parentage," drama.
Playhouse—"Sirens of the Sea," with Louise Lovely.
Rose—"Rasputin, the Black Monk."
World—"A Broadway Sport," drama.
Ziegfeld—"The Countess Charming," with Julian Eltinge.

Remarkable Screen Presentation

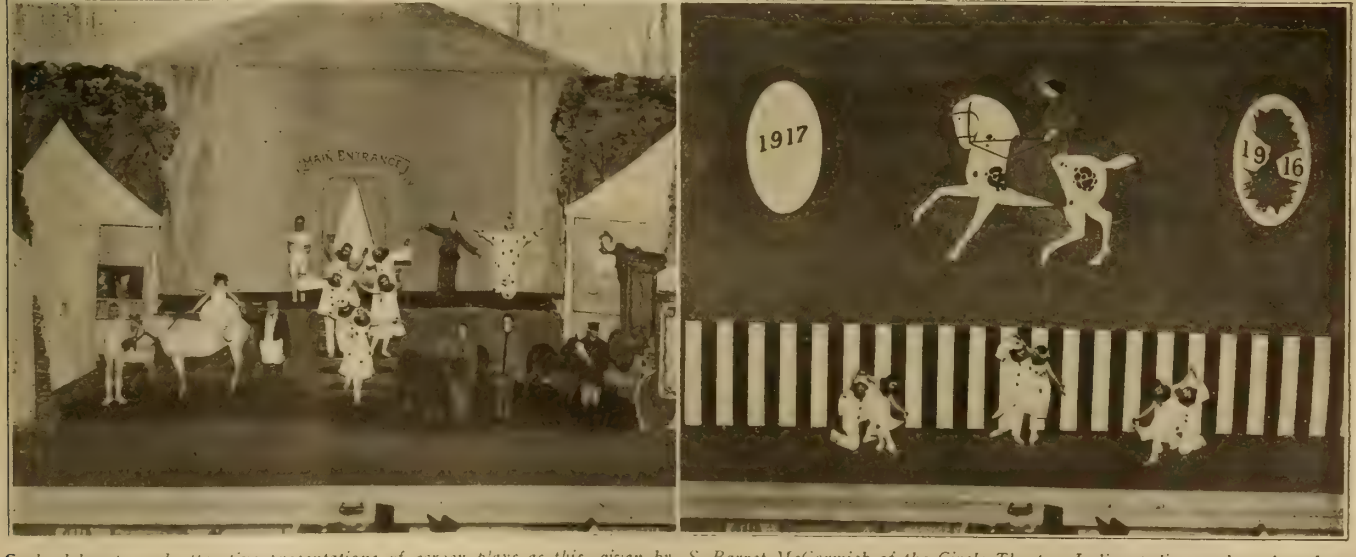
THE presentation of a stage spectacle of hippodromic proportions and the first successful welding of real life with the people of the shadows was the novelty created by S. Barret McCormick, managing and producing director of the Circle Theater, Indianapolis, as a curtain raiser to the anniversary program of that splendid theater and an embellishment to the principal screen feature, "Polly of the Circus."

The creation of the stage spectacle by Mr. McCormick was not simply to make a fitting scenic frame of unliving scenery to the play on the screen, as is so often done, but to create an atmospheric effect with color and pantomime that would bring an intimate relationship between the living and the silent players and with the lure of life, color and reality carry the audience into the spirit of the play that was to follow on the silversheet.



For this production the scenic artists and builders of the Circle scenic studios, which is maintained by Mr. McCormick to embellish his program, constructed a huge drop, 50 feet by 40, which was hung in the first entrance of the stage and pictured a circus rider mounted on a beautiful white horse, on either side of which were hoops bearing the legends "1916" and "1917," the drop was symbolic of both the play and the theater's anniversary.

Following a majestic festival overture played by the Circle orchestra the curtain rose, disclosing this drop beautifully illuminated while to the strains of a "Pierrot and Pierrette" suite Mlle. Theo Hewes and ballet presented an enchanting dance conception.

As they finished the dance and with pantomime invited the audience to look upon what followed, a blare of trumpet, the piercing sound of calliope, the tunes from circus band and all the motley noises of circus day burst forth and the curtain disappeared disclosing a full stage set as the exterior of a circus at the close of a parade. Here was all the glittering paraphernalia of the "big top," the animal wagons and side shows, while horses and ponies crowded the stage with the numerous performers, clowns and acrobats, bareback riders and ringmaster, animal attendants and ballet all formed the gorgeous pageantry of circus day, while the wierd noises from bands and calliope, the shrill piping of snake charmer and the unintelligible words of the "Ballyho" man literally carried one back to childhood and the fascination of the "lot."

The scene lasted but a few moments, just long enough to make one forget the things of everyday and feel the spell of the sawdust ring, and as the horses and ponies and the performers, were filing through the main entrance of the "big top" the first scenes of the screen play began, the stage scene disappeared and the audience found itself gazing upon the picture barely aware of the transition from real life to the land of shadows.

So successful was this innovation that one of the newspaper critics in his review of the performance remarked: "Great as is the play on the screen, the real feature of the program is the stage spectacle produced by S. Barret McCormick, which by its daring originality and novelty creates a new epoch in motion picture presentation."

Such elaborate and attractive presentations of screen plays as this, given by S. Barret McCormick of the Circle Theater, Indianapolis, are bound to draw the crowds in.

Canadian Exhibitor in Trouble

By W. M. Gladish.

Special correspondent for Motography.

The Toronto police authorities rather rubbed it in when they fined a local exhibitor after he had been severely burned and his theater badly scorched in a blaze which started in the projection booth while he was in charge of the machine himself. The exhibitor, George T. McNally, proprietor of the Bonita Theater, 1035 Gerrard Street East, started a matinee performance before the arrival of his licensed operator and, due to his alleged inexperience, the film became ignited.

McNally had no license as required by the Province of Ontario with the result that he was prosecuted at the direction of Chief Inspector Otter Elliott. Magistrate Cohen imposed the minimum fine of $20 and costs as a warning to others. McNally also received a bill for $410 from the exchange whose five-reel feature was destroyed in the fire. His theater was also closed for a week for repairs.

An example was also made of another man, an operator in a Toronto theater, when his license was cancelled for two months because he was found in an intoxicated condition while in charge of a projection machine. The authorities took action in this case because they wished to show that the public must be protected.

Another Toronto exhibitor was arrested on September 15 on the charge of making illegal use of war tax tickets. The police claim that three spotters found this manager reselling the Government tickets after they should have been destroyed in a chopping box.

Raises Evening Prices

Ben Cronk, for several years the manager of the Allen Theater, Calgary, Alberta, has been brought to Toronto to assume the management of the new Allen Theater, which will be opened in that city on or about October 15. O. D. Cloaky of Calgary has been promoted to the managership of the Allen there, for which house a new policy has just been adopted. Evening prices have been raised to 20 cents and 30 cents, but the matinee prices continue at 10 cents and 15 cents. Paramount pictures will be shown at the Allen Theater, Calgary, during the coming year and programs will be changed twice each week. Eight shows will be held each day. Mr. Copley has been signed up for the coming twelve months as the leader of the Allen orchestra, while a change has been made in the concert organ so that it can synchronize with the orchestra.

Nashville Strand Reopens

By J. L. Ray

(Special Correspondent for Motography.)

Repairs to the Strand Theater of Nashville, Tenn., were completed ahead of the allotted time, and the house opened to the public on Saturday afternoon, September 1, at 4 o'clock.. Capacity audiences filled the theater from the opening hour to view "The Car of Chance," a Bluebird subject starring Franklin Farnum.

The Strand is resplendent in its new paint, art pictures, and general tone of attractiveness, and reflects great credit upon Manager Bradford for the capable manner in which he has handled the renovating work.

The walls in both auditorium and corridor are finished in white and gold, with a strip of black and white art characters running around the upper section.

Here is a big-gun head line that can't fail to catch every reader's attention and make him read the ad. This copy was placed in the Daily Bulletin of Bloomington, Illinois, by Manager C. E. Irvin of the Irvin Theater, following his run of "The Slacker." Such advertisement is certain to make people want to come to the show and come early.

A heavy velvet carpet the length of the large center isle is a feature which has greatly improved the effectiveness of the interior arrangement. Linen seat covers have been provided all seats in the auditorium. The ventilation of the Strand is very good, the house being cooled during the warm season by a number of ceiling fans, augmented by a battery of wall buzzers on each side. The lighting system is splendid, employing both the overhead indirect lighting and shaded wall lights to furnish the necessary illumination.

The ticket booth has been moved from the back portion of the corridor to the front, within a few feet of the pavement. The manager's office is located where the ticket booth was formerly placed, and the space occupied by the old booth proper is being utilized for storage purposes. New Power projection machines were ordered for the opening day, but were delayed in reaching the city. A new screen has been installed which adds much to clear projection of the pictures. Music is furnished under the direction of Leon Cole, who is assisted at times by a full orchestra. Mr. Cole came to Nashville from a Chattanooga house.

Advantages of News Reels

Vaudeville houses in Tennessee have found the news weekly to be the most practical film service to be used before and between the vaudeville acts by reason of the fact that in the projection of a news picture, each subject contained therein is of only a few minutes duration, and the spectator can immediately pick up the thread of the story without confusion.

Beban Signs New Contract

The famous impersonator of Latin types, George Beban, will remain as one of the galaxy of stars who are engaged in making pictures for Paramount, and at least two more Beban productions will be released following "Lost in Transit," which went to exhibitors September 3.

During his period of activity in Paramount pictures, Mr. Beban has done some of the most appealing, wholesome and thoroughly satisfying photoplays that have ever been produced. In each and every one there has been pre-eminently featured a type of Latin character which in itself was worthy of commemoration in the annals of dramatic representation. It is conceded that Beban is an artist without a peer in his line and he has had the advantage of excellent vehicles, splendid support and productions to which the most careful attention and sumptuous investiture has been given.

Close-Up of Triangle Writers

With the arrival of Julian Johnson, former editor of Photoplay Magazine and now editor-in-chief of the Triangle literary department at Culver City, all scenarios are being carefully viséd by the new chief editor after they leave the hands of Editor Cunningham, whose large force of writers is busily engaged on a variety of stories. Most of the scribes are back from their vacations and are getting acquainted with the new additions to the staff.

Grant Wallace, seasoned war correspondent and chum of the late Richard Harding Davis, has put over his first big western story, which promises to present something new in the way of western dramas.

Lillian Ducey, the short story writer, who has lately been added to the staff of the Triangle scenario department, is now working on her first script.

R. Cecil Smith is closeted in his Culver City home with a story by Earl Derr.

Verne Hardin Porter, story writer and former magazine editor, is now entering into the travail of his third continuity.

Joseph Anthony Roach, Triangle staff writer, has been accepted by the National Army.

H. B. Daniels, by profession a San Diego lawyer and by choice a writer of very fine screen stories, has joined the staff of Triangle writers.

George Elwood Jenks has just finished the script of H. O. Davis' patriotic story, in which Ruth Stonehouse is being featured, and is now devoting his talent to a comedy drama script for Olive Thomas.

George du Boise Proctor has forsaken comedy drama for the time being and is writing a really serious drama for Triangle.

Applying Efficiency Methods

Samuel Krellberg, president of the Overland Film Company, has quietly but rapidly developed one of the most efficient organizations in the industry.

Some five years ago, he decided to enter the exhibiting field with his father, and together they operated a chain of theaters in New York and New Jersey. From this Mr. Krellberg gradually drifted into the export and states rights field, and that is the idea of the present organization.

Mr. Krellberg is applying his modern efficiency methods to the distribution of the official pictures of the Russian Revolution, which the Overland Company is distributing for the New Russia Film Company, with extraordinary results. He says that every film transaction should be put upon a strictly commercial basis, the moment that the finished production leaves the studio.

Lots of Realism

There was lots of realism, not in the scenario, incident to the making of "The Bottom of the Well," the Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature scheduled for release early in October. For instance, the midnight fire which destroyed the laboratory used in one of the closing scenes in the production.

Much of the feature was filmed at Vitagraph Village, near Sea Gate, and in the laboratory scene there were employed a score of policemen and as many citizens, all of whom got busy as soon as the flames were discovered.

Ogden Pictures Move

The Ogden Pictures Corporation have leased for a term of years a suite of offices on the eleventh floor in the Times Building, New York, removing their present offices from the Godfrey Building, where they were temporarily located.

"STORM WOMAN" ON U LIST

Diversified Bill of Drama, Comedy and News Features Gives Variety to Strong Combination of Productions

Universal's schedule for the week of October 1 is headed by a Gold Seal drama of unusual cleverness, of the title "The Storm Woman," featuring Claire McDowell. E. Magnus Ingleton is the author and Ruth Ann Baldwin prepared the scenario and directed the production. The major part of the production consists of a fanciful tale of the tragic life of an Italian woman who is seen every day sitting at a conspicuous post in a big city with a cage of fortune-telling parrakeets before her.

The mysterious figure, shrouded in a black shawl, has aroused the curiosity of a cub reporter who wishes he knew her life story. For a plate of beans and a cup of coffee a broken-down writer agrees to tell him the tale. It proves to be a recital of gripping interest, rehearsing the wrongs suffered by the young Italian girl at the hands of an adventurous tourist, her pursuit of him to America and her final infliction of vengeance.

The denouement, when the cub seeks further particulars from the parrakeet woman, is highly amusing and a complete surprise. A Nestor comedy, "Pete the Prowler," is another release for the same day. Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts are the featured players in the rib-tickler which Eddie and Lee wrote themselves and which was produced by Louis W. Chaudet.

For Wednesday, October 3, an L-KO two-reel comedy, "Counting Out the Count," featuring Billy Bevan and Lucille Hutton, is provided. It's all about a Count who wanted to marry Lucille and whom Lucille didn't want to marry. After much clothes-changing which entails many ludricrous machinations on the part of Lucille and her true lover, the Count is undone and Lucille marries the man of her choice. On the same date Universal Animated Weekly, No. 92, is released.

A two-reel Star Featurette, "A Prairie Romeo," with George Hernandez, is scheduled for release Thursday, October 4. This is a western comedy drama which was both written and produced by Lynn F. Reynolds. Hernandez takes the part of a banjo-playing Romeo. His serenade meets with a reception decidedly unpleasant at the hands of the boss of the ranch where his Juliet is employed. so he proceeds to drown his sorrows in the time-honored fashion. There's nothing but fun all the way through. Another comedy, this one a Joker featuring Gale Henry and William Franey and titled "Her Naughty Choice," is released the same day.

Universal Screen Magazine, No. 39, with its picturization of timely educational topics is scheduled for Friday, October 5, and in addition the popular trio, Max Asher, Dave Morris and Gladys Tennyson, will be seen in "Kicked in the Kitchen," a Victor comedy by C. B. Hoadley and produced under the direction of Craig Hutchinson.

"The Lion's Lair," a Bison two-reel animal drama featuring Eileen Sedgwick and Fred Church, is listed for Saturday, October 6. There are many thrilling situations in which elephants and lions figure. On the same date Universal Current Events, No. 21, is scheduled for release, as is also "The Masked Marvels," a Joker comedy with Gale Henry and Milton Sims.

Theda Bara in "Camille"

The first showing of the first Theda Bara superpicture, "Camille," was made on September 30, when the pretentious production of Alexander Dumas' famous novel was presented at the Academy of Music.

The picture is described as "a masterpiece of films from a masterpiece of fiction." "Camille" has been famous as a novel, a play and an opera for fifty years. The greatest actresses of the legitimate stage have all sought the role because of its histrionic possibilities. Miss Bara's impersonation of the woman rebelling against the narrowness of convention is particularly suited to her emotional qualities.

Mr. Fox has invested the picture with an especially fine setting.

"The Girl Who Won Out," Oct. 8

Violet MacMillan is the star of the Butterfly feature scheduled for release October 8. "The Girl Who Won Out" is a gripping little sociological drama.

It details the struggles of Nancy Grimm, a waif of the city, to retain control of her baby sister, when both children are left orphans.

The human element is strongly brought out in this production, and some excellent character types are contributed by Mrs. A. E. Witting, Charles Hill Mailes, L. M. Wells and Sherman Bainbridge. Eugene Moore is credited with the direction.

PARALTA LEAVES TRIANGLE

Contract Between the Two Concerns Terminated by News That Stephen A. Lynch Was to Dispose of Triangle Interests

Longacre Square has been teeming with rumors of late in reference to the relation existing between Paralta Plays, Inc., and the Triangle Distributing Corporation, a combination of interests as producer and distributor which had been attracting not a little attention on Broadway since first announced the latter part of last June.

Many of the rumor experts had it that after all the Triangle Distributing Corporation would not handle Paralta Plays and that the contract between Paralta and Triangle had been terminated.

In this instance the rumor man hit the nail on the head. The contract between Paralta and Triangle, entered into June 30, last, under which Triangle became the distributor of Paralta Plays, has been abrogated and no Paralta production will be released through the Triangle organization.

The contract between Paralta and Triangle was more the result of the personal friendship existing between Mr. Carl Anderson, president of Paralta, and Mr. Stephen A. Lynch, than anything else. When this agreement was entered into, it was with the distinct understanding that should Mr. Lynch sell his interest in the Triangle Distributing Corporation the contract with Paralta should terminate.

Mr. Lynch notified Mr. Anderson, September 10, that he was about to dispose of his interest in the Triangle Distributing Corporation. At that time the abrogation of the contract between Paralta and Triangle was taken up and during the past week the contractual relationship existing between the two corporations was brought to an amicable termination by mutual agreement of the parties interested.

This situation will not have any effect on the activities of the Paralta organization. Plans made weeks ago for a wide extension of its producing interests will be carried forward as rapidly as possible. Paralta now has six big feature photo-dramas completed and ready for distribution. Paralta also now has five companies working on productions at the studio in Hollywood. In two months five more big feature photoplays will be added to its output.

When the anniversary of its first year as a producer, June 4, 1918, is reached on the calendar, Paralta intends to have made the record of producing fifty-two star feature plays.

Goldwyn Employes Protest Theater Tax

As the war tax on theater tickets, which has just passed the Senate, awaits action of the House of Representatives, members of at least one big motion picture producing and distributing organization are uniting to protest at what seems to them an undue handicap of the many theaters in the United States with which they do business. Employes of Goldwyn Pictures, acting in concert, with stimulus provided by the facts in the case presented to their attention by an executive department, are forwarding their views on the subject to their various congressmen in a final effort to modify still further an action that lately threatened literally to wipe out thousands of small exhibitors.

Iliodor Restrained by Court

Papers have been served restraining Iliodor, the "Mad Monk," from having his picture taken more than the 125,000 times deemed necessary to record his version of the downfall of the Romanoffs.

This is but one clause in an injunction obtained from Judge Hough September 17, in the United States Court for the Southern District of New York, restraining Ben Blumenthal, Isaac E. Chadwick, and the Export and Import Film Company, Inc., from exhibiting, advertising, selling or otherwise disposing of a motion picture production called "The Tyranny of the Romanoffs," and purporting to have been made with Iliodor in the leading role.

According to the affidavits filed, the issue seems to have been less the manner in which the late house of Romanoff was deposed than the use of the name of Iliodor, to which the Iliodor Picture Company claims certain specific rights. The Iliodor Picture Company owns "The Fall of the Romanoffs," produced at a cost of $250,000 by Herbert Brenon.

A court hearing of the evidence demanding permanence of the injunction, will take place at an early date on the regular calendar.

Stars at Theater Opening

William Duncan and Carol Holloway, who played the leading roles in "The Fighting Trail," Greater Vitagraph's fifteen episode serial, started the big outdoors film novel on its way at the Pantages Theater in Los Angeles last Monday night. The serial, which is described by Pantages as "One of the very best features it ever has offered to a discriminating public," had been booked solid on the Pantages circuit, a chain of theaters covering a large part of the west. September 17 was the date chosen for inaugurating its run on the circuit and Mr. Duncan and Miss Holloway, who are working at the Hollywood studio of the Vitagraph company on the "Wolfville" stories by Alfred Henry Lewis, appeared to big crowds at the Los Angeles theater on the opening night.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

"To-day" and the "The Mad Lover" in West

LAST minute news concerning Pathe's big feature, "Today," starring Florence Reed, and "The Mad Lover," starring Robert Warwick, is that the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico and the territory of Alaska have been sold to the Western Civilization Corporation, of which Isaac A. Rosenthal is general manager.

New York, California, Arizona and Nevada had already been reported closed. Other deals are pending, and it is stated that quick action will be necessary on the part of any state right buyer who wishes to obtain these pictures for remaining territories.

New Russia Film Company Feature Ready

The new pictures of the Russian Revolution and Behind the Russian Battle Lines, recently purchased from the representative of the Skobeleff committee, who brought these official reel-records from Russia, by the New Russia Film Company and distributed by the Overland Film Company, are now ready to be shown to the public.

David V. Picker, manager and also a director of the New Russia Film Company, is an enthusiastic supporter of this new arrangement of the picture. He is one of the foremost exhibitors in the industry, being the owner of the Picker chain of theaters, and a keen judge of pictures. He has great faith in these new pictures, and feels that a great subject such as this, should be arranged so as to best suit the American taste.

The pictures were last run this week at the 81st Street Theater, New York.

General Manager Berg, of the Overland organization, is starting on a trip covering all the important film centers of the country, where he will screen the picture for the various states rights buyers.

General Enterprises Move to Larger Quarters

Owing to the volume of business developed in the disposition of territorial privileges for "The Warrior," the seven part film sensation starring Maciste, "strong man of the screen," Messrs. A. H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin have removed their headquarters to the Longacre Building, at 1476 Broadway, New York.

The taking over of the new offices has also been necessitated by the establishment of new departments under the direction of Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin. Chief among these is a foreign film department, under the supervision of M. R. Fink. A complete exploitation and advertising bureau in charge of Bert Ennis will take care of the publicity for the various interests handled by the firm. Harry G. Kosch, attorney for General Enterprises, Inc., will also have his offices in the new suite in the Longacre Building, which is in line with Mr. Sawyer's idea of having all of the executive departments closely co-ordinated.

General Enterprises, Inc., formerly occupied rooms in the Mecca Building, at Broadway and Forty-eighth street.

"State Rights Pictures Raise Standards"—Burnstein

With no market assured by contracts or advance deposits the special state rights picture depends for success strictly upon its merits, according to the view of Jules Burnstein, general representative for John W. Noble, who has finished cutting and titling his first big feature, "Shame," produced under his own management for distribution on the open market.

"While a director knows that his production, staged for a large distributing company, are assured a certain amount of booking as long as they do not fall below the average of high class program pictures," said Mr. Burnstein, speaking of the new John W. Noble offering, "producing for the so-called open-market is an entirely different proposition. If your picture is only average there is very little hope for it, because its chances of success are good in proportion to its merit above the merit of the usual run of features."

Barbara Castleton Signs with Overland Film

It will be of interest to those employed in the state rights field to learn that Harry Berg, of the Overland Film Company, is preparing to place several excellent releases on that market. Mr. Berg has just secured a two-year contract with Barbara Castleton, who will appear under Berg Productions.

Democracy Subject of New Features

Democracy has been a much used theme in the fall motion picture productions.

One of the best of this kind recently put upon the market is "The Birth of Democracy," released by the Export and Import Film Company, Inc. Ben Blumenthal, president of that organization, has held several private showings for the benefit of various critics, and in every instance the picture has been well received and commented upon. The story deals with that period of the French Revolution which has come to be known as the "Reign of Terror," and shows the final winning of liberty through the sacrifice of the French people.

Mother," 6-Reel Drama Offered by McClure

Perhaps the most artistic picture George Loane Tucker has ever directed has been secured by McClure Pictures and will be offered by this company on a state rights basis.

The film of "Mother" was produced in England, amidst the beautiful scenery of the Dartmoor section—the country of "Lorna Doone" and "Westward Ho."

Elizabeth Risdon, who makes her appearance this week on the American stage as leading lady in William Faversham's production of Shaw's play, "Misalliance," and who starred in Mr. Tucker's production of "The Manx-Man" played the title part in "Mother."

The film is a rendering of Eden Philpott's great novel, "A Mother of Dartmoor," and the story deals with the influence a mother's love has over her wild, headstrong son.

There is an exquisite thread of love woven through the story and, all in all, the drama presents a picture of mother love.

"Redemption" Packed 30 Loew Theaters

Large crowds attended the showing of Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw in "Redemption" in the 30 Loew Theaters. Mr. Cohn, president of the Globe Films, Ltd., stated that his 25 of the 37 theaters in Canada that played "Redemption" played to enormous business and the others will play it before the season is over.

The Dawn Masterplay Company has bought the rights for Michigan.

Sol Lesser Makes Trip to Coast

In pursuance with instructions from his physician to attend to no business whatsoever for at least a month to come, Sol L. Lesser has returned to his home in San Francisco, having sufficiently recovered from his recent attack of typhoid fever to take a trip to the coast. Since its introduction, Mr. Lesser's pet project, the national state rights organization, has made rapid progress. Concrete announcements pertaining to it, will be made to the trade, and its business resumed upon Mr. Lesser's return to New York early in November.

Foreign Rights Sold on "Lust of Ages"

Carle E. Carlton, president of the Crest Pictures Corporation, and Jesse J. Goldburg of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, have closed a contract whereby the entire foreign rights to "The Lust of the Ages," the initial production of the Ogden Pictures Corporation starring Lillian Walker, and the remaining eight releases of the Ogden Corporation to be made during the next twelve were sold to the Crest Corporation.

Negotiations were pending for a period of four weeks and the final contract was signed only after Mr. Carlton received assurances from the Government at Washington that shipments of prints would not be delayed because of the commandeering of commerical vessels during the present war.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

A Number of Useful New Slide Effects

I AM a reader of the Projection Department and am much interested in the different articles that I have read from time to time.

I am an operator of five years experience and at present am the chief operator in the largest theater in the town. We seat five hundred and fifty people and the booth is equipped with two Simplex machines, a dissolver attachment on the two stero lens and also have a good spot light. Our City current is 110 volts A. C. and we use a motor generator set which gives us 60 volts D. C. at the lamps.

I have never written to the department before but would like to offer a suggestion on the handling of effects on the double dissolver. I noticed an inquiry in MOTOGRAPHY under date of September 8, where J. W. C., Kansas, was asking about the effects that he saw used in the Regent Theater at Kansas City and so I will offer another suggestion on the same subject which may be new to some of the readers of the department, here goes:

As I said before, I have a spot lamp in the booth besides the double dissolver so I fitted a stero lens attachment and a slide carrier to the spot lamp and got a stero lens the same size as the other two that I was using and then I had some special slides made. I went to a picture frame store and borrowed an oval gold frame and an oblong gold frame and I had them photographed and made into slides. I had the frame tinted a gold color and inside of the frame I had left clear and outside the frame I had blocked out so that the light would not show through only in the frame and inside of the frame.

The oval frame I had photographed so that it would be just large enough for a person's head and shoulders to show inside of it when the slide was projected on the screen and the oblong one I had made the size of the slide. Before making the oval slide the size wanted can be determined by using a plain piece of glass and having some one stand on the stage and by marking on the slide with India ink you can judge just the size that will be needed to make the slide. I had two of the oblong slides made and had one left with a clear field and had the other one blocked out so that only the frame would show.

I had both of the frames tinted in gold the same as the oval one.

Now here is the way I use these slides to get some very pretty effects. When I get ready to open the show I use the oblong side, that is blocked out in the spot lamp and as I open the dissolver for the first slide I open the dowser on the spot lamp and that gives an effect on the screen of the slide "Welcome" appearing inside a gold frame, I then dissolve to the second slide and so on until I am ready to start the reel of film.

When I cut off the last slide I close the dowser on the spot lamp and that cuts off the gold frame with the last slide. The slide that is blocked out has to be used when using the announcement slides so that they will show up bright and clear. If you use the slide that is clear the light from it will dim the announcement slides.

Uses Oval Gold Frame Slide on Soloist

Another pretty effect is this. We use a soloist and on his numbers I use the oval slide and dissolve it onto the soloist, making him appear in an oval frame which gives a very pretty effect. He takes his place on the stage while the stage is dark and then the slide is dissolved on the screen and when he is through the slide is cut off leaving the stage dark again. This same slide, with the oblong one that is clear on the inside can be used when a quartet is used and one of their numbers sings the verse to a song and the other members join in the chorus.—Use the oval slide for the member on the verse and dissolve to the oblong slide as the other members join in the chorus.

Another "stunt" that is very effective and one that made a hit: Use the oval slide and dissolve the flags of the several countries, United States, England, France, Russia, Belgium, Italy, and Japan, inside the oval frame. Use the American flag first, then the other flags and back to the American flag at the close, then while it is on, open the second lamp of the dissolver with a slide of President Wilson, making him appear on the American flag inside the gold oval frame. This effect was the most popular one that I have used. Of course these slides with the flags have to be made up special and cost a trifle extra but the result more than pays for the cost.

In making up the slides with the gold frames, use heavy slide glass for the cover glass and use the heavy glass next to the arc. These slides are used so long at a time that if you do not use heavy glass they will crack from the heat of the lamp.

I have written more than I intended to when I started out but operators that are interested in novelties on the screen will find that they can get some good ones with the use of these slides.—

J. H. F.

Slide Ideas are Very "Good Stuff" Come Again

Your description of the slides and dissolver effect is very good and the effect must be very pretty on the screen, and operators using the double dissolver can get some very good ideas from your suggestions.

Not all of them have the spot lamp to use with the double dissolver but some of the effects can be used without the spot lamp. A fair spot lamp may be made from an old discarded lamp house and lamp mounted on a stand of some sort with a stero lens mounted with it. This kind of an outfit can be used very nicely for effects but of course does not compare with the regular spot lamp equippment.

Come again with your suggestions.

Reading on Screen Appears to be Double

As I am having trouble getting as good a picture as I would like, I would like to know the cause when the reading on the screen seems to show up double. Also in some of the scenes one can notice on a table the edges show double like in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" it seems to hang on the bottom of the reading.

I have set my shutter almost every way and cannot get rid of it only in some pictures, I think it is in the film as it is worse in some pictures than in others although I can get rid of it by setting the shutter so the picture streaks upward.

Can you tell me whether it is in the machine or in the shutter?—T. J. K.—Nebraska.

From the way that you describe your trouble in your letter, I would say that your trouble was caused mostly from worn parts on your machine. If the trouble was in the titles only then I would say that the trouble was in the film titles and not the machine but as you say that it shows in the scenes as well as in the titles then I think that you will find that there is a back lesh in the shutter and that is caused by worn gears and parts or gears that are loose on the shafts.

Examine the shutter gears and shaft and be sure that they are not worn or loose allowing a backward and forward movement of the shutter. If you find these loose or worn, have them replaced at once. You do not say what make of machine you are using so I can not tell you just what parts might be causing you the trouble.

When readers of this department write in for information of this kind they must state full details of the trouble and the make of the machine that they are using.

Machine Crimps Film in Three Different Reels

I am having trouble with the machine that I am using and would like to have you tell me what is causing it. I am using a Simplex machine and twice in the last week it has crimped the film, in three different reels. I have tried to find out what causes this but have been unable to locate the trouble.

Can you tell me where it is and what is doing it?—M. C. H.—Texas.

Your trouble may be caused by the top or lower sprockets W-145-D or W-146-D being loose on their shafts allowing end play or by the top or lower pad rollers P-102-C being loose on the shafts allowing end play.

Be sure that the sprockets and rollers are set tight on their shafts and that there is no end play in them and that the rollers set exactly true over the sprockets so that the groove in the roller is setting over the teeth in the sprockets, also be sure that the tention on the rollers is enough to keep them steady on the sprockets so that when the film is passing through the machine and a patch hits the roller the tention on the roller will hold the roller firm on the sprocket.

Film will not crimp on a Simplex machine if these parts are adjusted correctly.

Gagnier Manages Vitagraph Montreal Branch

Joseph A. Gagnier, one of the best known film men in Eastern Canada, has been appointed manager of the Montreal branch of the Greater Vitagraph distributing organization, succeeding A. L. Gorman. Mr. Gagnier has been with the Vitagraph forces for eight months and in that time has shown himself to be one of the most capable salesmen in the territory. His success is due, in no small measure, to the fact that he is a former exhibitor and enjoys great popularity among the theater-owners of the territory.

Howe Succeeds Krows on Triangle Magazine

Herbert Howe, who has been handling the trade paper publicity for Triangle, has taken the position of editor of the Triangle magazine, succeeding Arthur Henry Krows, who recently resigned to take a position in the publicity department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Mr. Howe will also handle the publicity for the fan publications.

Helen Hesperia in "Camille" Presented Through General

A six-reel de luxe production of Camille, in which Helen Hesperia, the international beauty, is featured, will be distributed by General Film Company immediately. Miss Hesperia is an Italian star.

"Firing Father" Second Mutual-Strand

"Firing Father," a one-reel comedy, is the second of the new series of Strand-Mutual comedies starring Billie Rhodes. It is scheduled for release October 9.

"Firing Father" deals with the trials and tribulations of a pair of lovers who eventually outwit the girl's father by means of a fake conflagration.

The new Mutual-Strand series opened October 2 with "Some Nurse," the first of a series of forty-four one-reel comedies. Billie Rhodes is the star in the series, supported in most of the series by Jay Belasco.

"Her Second Husband" Edna Goodrich's Fifth Mutual

"Her Second Husband" from the story by Hamilton Smith, a New York writer of note, has been chosen as the next Mutual production starring Edna Goodrich. "American Maid" is nearing completion at Mutual's Long Island studios under the direction of Albert Capellani.

"A Daughter of Maryland," the third of her series, has been scheduled for release by Mutual on October 29. "Her Second Husband" will be released following "American Maid."

"Reputation" was the first of the series of Goodrich productions. "Queen X," the second of the series, is on the release schedule for October 1.

Lawrenceburg House Sold

The Princess Theater of Lawenceburg, Tennessee, has been sold by Almon J. Sims to E. R. Braley, on account of Mr. Sims leaving this town to become identified with the Nashville Tennessean and American. The Princess is a 250 capacity house, and has enjoyed a successful career. Mr. Sims, while a resident of Lawrenceburg, was one of the editors of the Lawrence Democrat, and was interested financially in the paper. He has disposed of his part of the Democrat, and will devote his entire time to work on the Nashville paper, being a graduate of the University of Missouri department of journalism.

Pauline Frederick Married to Willard Mack

Pauline Frederick, the widely known Paramount star, was married on September 24 to Willard Mack, the actor, playwright and manager. The wedding took place in Washington, D. C., where they had gone for the premiere of Mr. Mack's latest play, "Tiger Rose."

Miss Frederick in 1909 was married to Frank M. Andrews, an architect. They were divorced about four years later. Mr. Mack's first wife was Marjorie Rambeau, the erstwhile Mutual star.

Screen Club of New York Holds Benefit

A benefit performance for the house fund of the New York Screen Club will be held on October 9. This date is a postponment from September 25. The affair will be held at the Eighty-first Street Theater on Keith Circuit, which is managed by A. L. Shalkman.

New Orleans Manager

Burt King, one of the best known film salesmen in the Mississippi Valley, has been appointed manager of the New Orleans branch of the Greater Vitagraph distributing organization. He succeeds A. W. Pluess, who was drafted for the new National Army and called to Camp Pike, in Arizona, last week.

Petrova Conducts Department in Magazine

One of the secrets of attaining renown in the field of motion pictures is to possess beauty, intelligence, and a background of experience that creates public interest. Mme. Petrova has them all and she is about to capitalize them to a high degree through the editorial work she has undertaken for The Ladies' World, a prominent woman's magazine.

New Writer Added to Triangle Staff

Alvin H. Nietz, western writer for Triangle, has just finished his second script for Director Cliff and Roy Stewart and has been added to the permanent staff of the Culver City writers. Mr. Nietz has come into the writing end from the position of assistant director instead of from the usual field of journalism. He formerly was assistant to Director Raymond West.

Changes in General Film Exchanges

During the last week several important advances in the personnel and scope of the sales organization were made by General Film Company. The most conspicuous shift of any was the transfer of P. A. Bloch from the Philadelphia managership to the New York exchange to succeed H. H. Buxbaum, resigned.

To succeed Mr. Bloch at Philadelphia, Frank E. Samuels has been appointed, taking charge at once.

A General Film branch office has now been opened at Portland, Oregon, with W. E. Matthews in charge, transferred from the sales force of the San Francisco office.

Beginning October 15, General Film will have an office at New Haven, Conn.

J. M. Cummings has assumed management of the Cleveland office.

King-Bee Takes Another Hive

The King-Bee Flms Corporation have grown so rapidly in the past two months that another suite of offices have been added to their large suite in the Longacre Building.

Davis Added to Metro Staff

William S. Davis, one of the most successful motion picture directors in America, has been added to Metro's directing staff. His first work for Metro will be the direction of a multiple-reel Super-Feature starring Emily Stevens, a screen version of Blair Hall's story, "Alias Mrs. Jessop."

Mr. Davis has written almost every feature he has ever produced, and he has never directed a production which has not been successful. He knows both stage and screen from every angle, having been identified with the life of the theater since his boyhood.

Nanon Toby, until recently engaged on the publicity staff of Triangle as special writer for the fan publication, has become the Eastern manager for Ouida Bergere.

"The Runaway"

Julia Sanderson in Empire Production, Mutual Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS second of the Empire All Star Productions is a six-reel version of the stage play by the same name and stars Julia Sanderson. It has a light story, coming into the comedy drama class, although there is little real comedy. There is little plot, and as it is in six reels, it is frequently draggy. There are a number of pretty scenes, though, entertaining views, and Julia Sanderson will be liked. She plays the role of a girl of eighteen, and in the first reel of the story, looks even younger. In the later scenes the resemblance to a young girl is lost, and she looks like a woman of the world, many years older. But she is always pretty and photographs very well.

The picture is designed for the audiences which prefer pictures light, pretty and unexciting. As a worth-while offering this is not to be compared with "Outcast," Empire's first release, but we believe there are some audiences which will enjoy this more. However, the picture would have been much better if kept within five reels.

The Story: Alice (Miss Sanderson) is the orphan daughter of an actress. She is being reared in a small town by a very conventional uncle and aunt. One summer she meets an artist spending his vacation in the country. After he leaves, Alice quarrels with her guardians, who wish her to marry a village youth, and runs away to the city. She goes to the studio of the artist. A woman who had been her mother's maid follows Alice and is persuaded to stay as her chaperon.

Alice falls in love with the artist and becomes jealous of his model. After a quarrel she leaves and goes on the stage, where she wins fame. The artist realizes that he loves her and persuades her to marry him.

Conquest Program No. 7

Typical Number of Seven-Reel "Family Group" Programs. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A THREE-REEL college story, a two-reel adventure story, one reel of pictures taken at the Philadelphia Mint, showing how silver coins are made, and one split reel containing scenes of work and play at the Culver Military Academy and a brief travelog in the Holy Land, these form the seventh Conquest Program for the family group.

The two one-reel offerings are not only educational; they are unusually interesting. The scenes photographed have been very well selected. The subjects never drag; instead, they leave one wishing for more. These pictures will appeal to any class audience and to patrons of every age.

The two stories in this program will be especially liked by the boys. There are, in fact, picture versions of two boys' books. "T. Haviland Hicks, Freshman," in which Raymond McKee is featured, shows three episodes in the life of a youth during his first year at college and deals with his clever method of avoiding the sophomores' efforts to haze him. This story is in three reels. "Gallagher," from the Richard Harding Davis story, is in two reels. It is a detective and newspaper story in which the office boy leads in the solving of a mystery and obtains a big "scoop" for his paper. It contains a number of thrills and some humor. It will delight every boy who sees it; of that there is little doubt.

This program, because of diversity and novelty, seems well adapted to the "family group" night. It fulfills the need of the exhibitor who wishes to offer something especially designed for the school children and their parents.

Ella Hall in Bluebird Play of October 1. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

ELLA HALL has a certain following, especially in the neighborhood houses, and these admirers will not be disappointed with this latest feature, although the story is not as good as some she has had, and there is little humor. But there are excellent settings, especially in the French part of the play, and Miss Hall appears as a quaint little French girl, part of the time dressed in the costume of a peasant girl.

The story is not very convincing, but it is interesting and contains pathos. The beautiful exteriors and "atmosphere" of the little French village, and the popularity of Ella Hall, are the chief merits of the offering. The average audience is going to enjoy the picture.

J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton are responsible for the story, which Harry Solter directed. In the cast of players are Gretchen Lederer, Victor Rottman, Charles Hill Mailes and Wilton Taylor. The title has little significance.

The Story: A prologue to the modern story shows the love affair between two young people of a little French village, Yvonne and Anatole. But Yvonne marries an adventurer and is later deserted. She returns to her home to die, and leaves a little daughter. Anatole has become a priest and he takes a special interest in the little Yvonne.

When the present war breaks out, Yvonne is kidnapped by the German soldiers. But Father Anatole succeeds in rescuing her and takes her and Jean Duval, a young great musician, to America.

In New York, the little group has a great struggle for a livelihood. Father Anatole dies. Jean attracts the interest and then the affection of a woman of wealth. He is tempted to give up Yvonne for her, but decides that he loves Yvonne best.

Harry Carey in Butterfly Western Story. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

HARRY CAREY, who usually appears in shorter length plays on the Universal program, has a following which will be glad to see him in a five-reel feature. "The Secret Man," in which he is starred, is in many ways a typical "western," with the riding and the outdoor atmosphere, and it has a well presented story, with suspense and human interest, although it is not very convincing. It is well acted and clearly photographed. It will appeal to lovers of western melodramas.

Supporting the star are Edith Sterling, Morris Foster, Vester Pegg, Bill Gettinger, Steve Clements, Elizabeth Janes and H. Gibson.

The Story: Molly, who lives with her brother, has secretly married Henry Beaumont, the owner of a neighboring ranch, and has a little daughter, whom she leaves in the care of the foreman of her husband's ranch. The marriage is kept secret because Beaumont's wealthy uncle disapproves. Before the uncle comes to visit the ranch, Beaumont orders his foreman to take the little girl away.

Cheyenne Harry (Carey), an escaped convict, is working on the ranch. He runs away when the sheriff appears. In his flight he finds the child, who has been injured in a runaway. He gives himself up in order to take the little girl back to the ranch, where she may have the attention of a doctor. Molly, in her anxiety, reveals the fact that the child is hers, and after many complications, the secret marriage is confessed. The death of Beaumont's uncle clears away obstacles. Later Harry is pardoned by the governor.

Franklyn Farnum in Bluebird Release of October 8. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A RATHER confused story, with plenty of action but little plot, is the basis of this latest Franklyn Farnum offering. Some audiences will like it, for it is fairly exciting at times, but very many patrons, especially in the higher class theaters, will be displeased at the story's lack of real humor and cleverness and the star's lack of originality. Joseph De Grasse directed the picture from a story by Isola Forrester and Mann Page. There is nothing remarkable about it. It is an ordinary program offering. Bluebird can do better.

The Story: Theodore Crosby (Farnum) inherits a ranch in the West. The condition is that he take immediate possession. Several other persons want the ranch and they try to discourage Crosby from going to it. They warn him against "Horned Toad" Smith, a bad man. A Spanish woman also tries to foil the hero and get the property. However, Crosby goes west, inviting his fiancee and her aunt to visit him there. The local bandits try to annihilate our hero, but he outwits them. "Horned Toad" Smith at last captures him and the girl, but just before the shooting begins, he discovers that Crosby is the man who once aided him, and the two become friends instead of enemies. After a few other complications are straightened out, the story ends.

"Fools For Luck"

Taylor Holmes in Second Picture, Essanay-Perfection Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

EXHIBITORS who have run "Efficiency Edgar" and are waiting eagerly for Taylor Holmes' second picture, will not be disappointed with "A Fool for Luck," nor will their patrons. While there may not be quite so many laughs as in the first picture, it is a clever comedy, full of real humor of the clean, intelligent sort. Based on Kennett Harris's story, "Talismans," in The Saturday Evening Post, the picture follows the printed version closely. It is a very human story, and is directed and acted in that spirit, without exaggeration, yet with all the humor brought out. Taylor Holmes fits this role as well as he did that of "Efficiency Edgar."

Helen Ferguson, opposite Taylor Holmes, plays her first leading role very well. She is a "find" of Essanay's who seems likely to become a favorite. The photography and settings of the picture are satisfactory. Since the original story was laid in Chicago and its vicinity, the Essanay Company were able to stage it with accuracy.

The story deals with those little superstitions and "good luck" signs which almost everybody knows about and gives more or less attention to. For this reason, it offers the exhibitor unusual opportunities for clever advertising. Horseshoes, four-leafed clovers, rabbit's feet, and other lucky talismens play a large part in the story. The opening subtitle of the picture is well worded and at once sets forth the spirit of the picture.

The Story: Philander Jepson relied upon his luck rather than upon effort to make his way, and he seemed very lucky. He had more confidence in the power of a lucky rabbit's foot than in the skill of his own brain. Knowing that he was lucky, he gambled heavily, and usually won. On a vacation in Michigan he fell in love with a girl and was lucky enough to win her affection in return. Then on a Friday, the thirteenth, he walked under a ladder and the jinx got on his trail. All the unlucky omens began to appear, and he lost his money, his job and his girl, all in short order. When finally he broke a mirror and realized that seven years of such luck lay before him, he rebelled and determined to win in spite of luck. He accepted a minor position, really worked and won promotion. The next summer he went back to Michigan to find the girl. A reconciliation took place, and Philander won a bride and a better position at the same time, in spite of the mirror. But the girl insisted that it was a four-leafed clover that worked the charm.

THE subtitles contain the real humor of these two-reel offerings which are illustrations of George Ade Fables. The stories themselves are seriously acted, and are presented in Essanay's best manner. The release for October 6 is especially good.

The first fable given below is released on September 29. Virginia Valli and Rodney LaRoque have the leading roles. The second one is dated October 6. Paul Harvey, U. K. Houpt, Katharine Amos and John Cossar are the principal players.

elfin of the young unmarried set, was a bit old-fashioned, but could ring more iron men than any other village belle. This uncrowned princess was a she-progressive assaying 98 per cent pure ginger. Herbert was a village lad just like the pictures in the magazine clothing ads. One evening Loretta prepared for four throbbing Roscoes, including Herbert, to curl up among the sofa pillows in the family parlor. Jealous, the love-mad village Romeo, Herbert, conceived a diabolical plot. Giving the three simpering rivals the go-by, he seized the apple of his eye and rolled out to his chug-chug wagon. Straight into the river, a la Annette Kellerman, drove our hero, refusing to back out until his proposal was accepted. Loretta then confessed that she always had been stuck on that cave man stuff, and extended her finger for the sparkler.

Moral: Rapid reformers do not always get credit for their speed.

The Fable of Prince Fortunatus, Who Moved Away from Easy Street, and Silas the Saver, Who Moved in: Once upon a time a boy named Claude was born with a plated-ware spoon in his mouth. When he was twenty-one the family plunder was pushed over to him. About this time an alfalfa product named Silas cast anchor in a two-bit boarding house. When his laundry failed to get back on time he was stuck. Meanwhile Claude was trying to bear up under a smother of one hundred thousand gleaming simoleons. One day Silas was passing Claude's mid-Victorian morgue he called home. Silas gazed with coagulated bitterness and determined to gather in some pesos. Silas became a putter-in, while Claude was a taker-out. When Silas was thirty he was only five thou to the good, but he had spikes in his shoes, resin all over his dukes, and knew the ropes. Claude still had seventy thou and was dipping into the tin box every time he needed ready rhino. When Silas was thirty-eight, Claude still clung to twenty-five thou. Silas had forty thousand iron men and no longer hated Claude. Shortly after Claude hit the fortieth milestone he had to blow the whistle on the family.

Moral: The only safe income is the one that is self-hatched.

Frederick Warde in Pathe Melodrama Based on Russian Events. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

RUSSIA has always been a favorite setting for extravagant melodrama, and the present time offers as many romantic opportunities as anyone could wish. So this story, which is as melodramatic as its title, is given a good start in Russia. Then the heroine and the story come to America, where a number of exciting things happen, and everything is straightened out happily in the end.

From a critical standpoint there are things in the plot and construction of this play to find fault with, and there will be some patrons who will find them. But the average audience is going to enjoy this just because it is story-like and romantic. A Russian countess, who is a leader of a nihilist band, a kind-hearted millionaire, his brave son, the former Czar and Czarina, and the monk Rasputin have part in the story. Frederick Warde has a fitting role, and Jeanne Eagels will appeal as the heroine. Robert Vaughn plays opposite. Lloyd Lonergan wrote the story, which Emile Chautard directed. Acting, settings and photography are good.

The Story: Jack Colton, son of a millionaire, goes to Petrograd to negotiate with the government regarding a loan. He saves the Countess Olga, a nihilist, from the police and gets for her a passport to America. On the way to America, the ship is torpedoed. Olga escapes injury, but a young girl who shared her stateroom, is drowned. In America, Olga at once gets in touch with others of her band. She is told that John Colotn, a money king, is injuring the cause and must be watched. The young girl who was drowned had been on her way to visit Colton, who was a friend of her father's. Olga takes the girl's place and goes to Colton's home, where she is treated very kindly. She grows to hate her false position, but believes she is aiding her country by learning financial secrets from Colton. Colton learns that she is a pretender, but continued to treat her as usual. He also knows that she is working against him. But she refuses to take part in a plot against his life. After the revolution, Olga sees the goal obtained and confesses her deception. Colton forgives her because of her patriotism. He tells her that he, too, aided Russia by his loan. The younger Colton, who has returned from Russia, falls in love with Olga and marries her.

"The Princess of Park Row"

Five-Part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Released October 1. Reviewed by George W. Graves

INTERESTING treatment by the director and human acting usher this story out of the realm of the "just ordinary" into that of the unusual. Even the "padding" is cleverly and entertainingly done. The story concerns a young reporter who has a lively adventure with a girl he thinks is secretary to a princess visiting this country. It finally turns out, after the youth has not only bagged a "scoop" for his paper but also saved the little kingdom from its lurking enemies, that the girl is the princess herself. A good deal of comedy is furnished over the reporter's taking the fat secretary for the real princess.

Adventure, thrills, comedy, and last, but no less important, a well-carried out lifelike love theme, are all to be found in the picture, which is to be rated very high as entertainment. Intelligent acting adds a most vital interest to the picture, since one can never get interested in characters that are not real human beings. Wallace MacDonald, as the reporter, plays the part with an enthusiasm and spirit that is best termed spontaneity. He plays the role as it should be,—with buoyant natural youthfulness, and without overacting. Mildred Manning, as the princess Margot, proves again that she is a star whose work is very good and quite "different" from the rest. Both the leads are certainly very satisfactory. William Dunn, John Costello and Anne Brody also give very able characterizations. Ashley Miller was the director who worked with a story by Paul West.

"The Fighting Trail"

Second, Third and Fourth Episodes of "The Fighting Trail." Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE second episode of Vitagraph's Western serial thriller, entitled "The Story of Ybarra," goes back over the past of the heroine's guardian and shows how the girl, Nan Lawton, happened to be living with him. Ybarra, the guardian, is killed in this episode by the henchmen of Von Bleck, the agent of the Central Powers who is desperately trying to locate the secret cinnabar mine, but a letter he leaves reveals some startling history proving Ybarra not to be Nan's father at all, as she had believed. Nan becomes sole owner of the mine. Yaqui Joe, a faithful Indian servant of Nan's, who knows the mine's location, is caught by the conspirators and is being tortured to the end that he will reveal his secret as the episode closes. "The Story of Ybarra" is fully as interesting as the first episode of the serial, although there is less action and the thrills are not quite so numerous. The revelations of Ybarra's past of course give the spectator a clearer sense of Nan's relation to him and influences that later are to become active. When the thread of the story resumes its course in the present, the action becomes more vital and the episode finishes leaving the audience in suspense and eager anticipation of the next fitly named number, "Will Yaqui Joe Tell?" The parts of the leads are not very prominent in the second episode, but the acting of other characters involved in this point of the story's development is very good.

The third episode, "Will Yaqui Joe Tell?" with its hard riding, fights, perilous descents of cliffs, and the final thrilling escape from the burning house of the heroine, is exciting in the extreme. This episode marks the death of the faithful Yaqui Joe, who refuses to divulge his secret. Nan and Gwyn, her lover, are trapped in the former's burning house by the outlaws in their rage at being defeated in their attempt to secure the missing half of the chart giving the mine's location. Here the picture closes. The third episode is an especially thrilling number, exciting events following hard upon the heels of other exciting events without a moment's breathing space. The leads, William Duncan and Carol Holloway, stand out very prominently and both display enthusiasm and realism in their work. Very able direction is not a small part of the success of this episode.

The fourth episode, "The Other Half," shows how Nan and Gwyn, seen in dire peril at the end of the preceding episode, effected their escape from the burning house through a subterranean passage. The lovers trick Von Bleck and regain possession of the missing half of the chart. Together they start out to locate the secret mine through the help of the complete chart, but a most fateful circumstance intervenes and as this section of the story comes to its completion the future prospects of Nan and Gwyn look dubious indeed, since both are last seen struggling for life in a mountain torrent. In "The Other Half" suspense, excitement and action are the predominating features—qualities that have characterized the whole serial to a marked degree. The number is a "corker" from every standpoint of serial making.

From the four episodes already shown, "The Fighting Trail" is undoubtedly a red-hot box-office attraction. Story, direction, acting—the three fundamentals, are of a remarkable quality. It is a picture of adventure, romance and thrills, given a beautiful setting in the vast reaches of the great West.

"The Eyes of the World"

Clune Production of Famous Novel Given Chicago Presentation. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE popularity of the novel by Harold Bell Wright from which this picture is made, and the advertising given it, resulted in a large attendance at the Chicago opening performance at the Auditorium. The audience seemed to enjoy the film and comments overheard were complimentary.

The story is developed leisurely. There is an undercurrent of allegory, worked out by having each character in the play represent some abstract quality, Civilization, Art, Nature, Materialism, etc. The use of allegorical fade-in scenes has been avoided, and the story is therefore not hampered by the symbolism. The viewer may take the story on its own merits or follow its hidden meaning, as he chooses.

Beautiful outdoor photography throughout the picture adds very much to its enjoyment, and toward the close of the picture there is quite a bit of action of the thrilling kind, a realistic fight at the edge of a mountain cliff being one of the features. Suspense is well handled in this later part of the story. In fact, the plot is set forth impressively in many ways. A technical detail worth noting is the printing of the conversational subtitles in the scenes themselves. This is very well done, without injuring the photography.

The players in the production are Jack Livingston, Jane Novak, Jack McDonald, Kathleen Kirkham, Edward Peil, Monroe Salisbury, Lurline Lyons, Arthur Tavares, Beatrice Burnham, Fred Burns and Ah Wing.

The production probably will draw well anywhere on the strength of the popularity of Harold Bell Wright's books. The author himself in his western home is shown in the introduction to the play. The play itself will entertain the average audience very well. The musical setting given it at the Auditorium is especially fine and aids in overcoming the dragginess which might be felt in the first of the play if given a careless production.

The story: Aaron King, an artist, goes west. On his way he meets Mrs. Taine, a worldly woman (representing the spirit of the Age). Her husband is a dissolute old man, a physical wreck (representing Materialism). Mrs. Taine tries to win the artist's affection, but he is more interested in Sybil, a young mountain girl he meets (Nature). He paints Mrs. Taine, first as she represents herself, a Quakerish, demure woman, then as he knows her to be, cynical and false. Rutlidge, the villain of the story, kidnaps Sybil. An escaped convict aids him. King, in spite of Mrs. Taine, goes in search of Sybil and saves her by overcoming Rutlidge, the fight taking place on the edge of a cliff. In the end, earlier and unsuspected relations of the various characters are revealed. Taine dies and Mrs. Taine's evil efforts are overcome, and at last King and Sybil are married.

"The Apple-Tree Girl"

Charming Edison-Perfection Comedy Drama With Shirley Mason. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS play merits a "Perfection" brand. It will please everybody in any theater anywhere, because it is so wholesome and in every way delightful. The play is founded on a Ladies' Home Journal story, "Little Miss Moses," by George Weston, and describes the career of a girl who, without beauty or wealth, sets out to do three things, make everyone like her, become famous and marry a millionaire. Her method of attaining her aims gives a continuous interest to the story, and the events which occur are delightfully picturized. Little Shirley Mason is charming, as always. She is excellent in the role, and her acting, as usual, has grace and individuality. Raymond McKee plays opposite Miss Mason very well. Joyce Fair, only a short time ago playing child roles in Essanay pictures, is the third important player. Alan Crosland's directing is skillful and the story is well told. The photography is excellent and outdoor views alone would make the offering well liked.

As the Edison picture, "A Touch of Nature," dramatized baseball, this story makes good use of golf. The heroine wins the golf championship, and the game forms an interesting part of the picture. The exhibitor can find ways of emphasizing this game in his advertising.

The Story: Charlotte Marlin (Shirley Mason) is left an orphan with a small fortune and a home in the country. She goes to high school in a nearby town, living with her aunt and cousin. The cousin is a pretty, frivolous girl, and Charlotte, wearied of being considered of no account, sets out to win success without beauty or wealth. After school days, she returns to her country home and teaches the village school. She finds little difficulty in attaining her first goal, making everyone like her. To become famous, she determines to become an expert at golf. She does this, and wins a contest which gives her a championship and national fame. At the country club, where the game is played, she meets her millionaire and wins his heart. But she decides that she really does not want to marry for money, and instead she turns to the boy she had loved in school days, and who had won success himself as a doctor.

"The Conqueror"

William Fox Eight-Reel Drama and Spectacle. Reviewed by George W. Graves

HARDLY a finer character for incorporating in a virile screen drama, than that of Sam Houston, the rugged pioneer settler of Texas, could be thought of, and most surely no more appropriate player for the role comes readily to the mind than William Farnum. The popular actor puts his best work into interpreting the part, being a figure of dominating power and attraction right through. The story, by Henry Christeen Warnack, founded largely on historical fact, gives the character intense sympathy. It follows the life of the great leader from the time when he consorted with the Indians and could not write his name up to the time when, ever led on by his fickle sweetheart, a proud Nashville beauty, he became a leader of the people. At this time, the haughty beauty, in one of her unaccountable humors just after her marriage insulted her husband, aroused his sensitive temperament to a towering rage and brought about an abrupt separation. Some time later, during a raid by a band of Mexican outlaws, Houston rescues his wife, who through suffering has become an entirely new creature. The reunion is both joyful and pathetic.

William Farnum in Fox's "The Conqueror."

In the story's big climax occur the battle scenes which director R. A. Walsh has "put on" in the true masterly fashion, which has characterized his former accomplishments. Not only are these scenes vivid and tensely realistic, but they have a beauty that would warrant their being spoken of as masterpieces of art. The photography, naturally, has a great deal to do with this. The belching cannon, the bursting shells, the white clouds of smoke, illumined by the fire below and standing out clearly in a sombre sky,—the whole thing has been finely executed and photographed. An enormous amount of action and suspense attaches to the scenes enacted soon afterward in a convent whither the heroine flees for refuge. It is here, that after a gigantic struggle, Houston rescues his wife from a terrible fate at the hands of the invaders.

The whole story is deeply dramatic and entertaining, dealing with characters which really have character. Jewel Carmen, first as the proud sweetheart and later as the suffering and repentent wife, does exceptionally well with the role. Charles Clary is to be complimented for his work in another villain part, and J. A. Marcus provides the picture with some good comedy. Others in the cast are Carrie Clarke Ward, William Chrisholm, Robert Dunbar, and Owen Jones. Three real Indian chiefs, William Eagle Shirt, Chief Birdhead and Little Bear, besides a large number of Sioux Indians, add some fine realism to the play.

Not the smallest attraction of "The Conqueror" is the fact that it is a real American drama, and, as such is surely of particular value at this time. The picture is another demonstration of what the William Fox organization can accomplish when it sets its heart on doing things really big.

The feature was photographed by Dal Clawson.

COMING TRIANGLE RELEASES

Many Triangle Productions Breezing to Completion—Belle Bennet with Texas Guinan in New Variation of Vampire Theme

Eight productions are in progress, seven have just been completed and the scenario department is working on scripts for a score of others at the Culver City plant of the Triangle Film Corporation.

At present in the cutting room and soon to be released are "Ashes of Hope," featuring Belle Bennet, under the direction of Walter Edwards; "A Phantom Husband," starring Ruth Stonehouse, directed by Ferris Hartman; "One Shot Ross," featuring Roy Stewart, under the direction of Cliff Smith; "Wild Sumac," with Margery Wilson and directed by William V. Mong; "The Firefly of Tough Luck," starring Alma Ruebens, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, and "The Stainless Barrier," with Dorcas Matthews, directed by Thomas Heffron.

The most elaborate production of those now occupying the seven big glass and concrete stages at the Culver City plant and the 1,800-acre ranch at Hartville in the Santa Monica mountains is "Doing Her Bit," in which Ruth Stonehouse plays the leading role and Jack Conway wields the megaphone. This play was written by H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of Triangle, and centers about the adventures of a girl of the New York tenement district who undertakes to recruit all the bums in the Bowery to the cause of Old Glory. An entire block of New York's East Side was reproduced at the Triangle studio to form the principal setting for the piece and hundreds of picturesque types and characters were selected to furnish the atmosphere. Jack Gilbert plays the leading male role opposite Miss Stonehouse.

William Desmond is given an opportunity to interpret a part in "The Strange Weakling," far removed from his familiar work as a matinee idol. The matinee girls who have adored Bill's male beauty and melted before the gaze of his soulful brown eyes will be sorry to learn that for the past two weeks he has been reduced to the rags and tatters of a "desert rat" and, owing to the requirements of the picture, has been a stranger to the barber for a fortnight. His handsome countenance is now decorated with a luxuriant growth of chin curtains.

Texas Guinan shares stellar honors with Belle Bennet in a new type of "vampire" piece which Walter Edwards is preparing for the screen. It is entitled "The Fuel of Life," and throbs with the emotions of a wife who turns siren to win her husband away from the wiles of a modern vampire whose rare business acumen and spectacular beauty have stolen his love.

Lynn Reynolds, famed as one of the most artistic directors of filmland, promises that "Up or Down?" a new production for which he has searched the entire State of California for scenic splendors, will be a masterpiece of its kind. Reynolds and his company returned last week from Santa Barbara, where thousands of feet of marine views and ocean action were taken. He also took advantage of the mission city's magnificent homes to secure some unusual exteriors. George Hernandez is playing the leading role in "Up or Down?" and is supported by Fritzie Ridgeway and Jack Curtis.

With burning incense, leopard skin rugs, downy counches, filmy draperies and all the other accoutrements of an up-to-date vampire, Olive Thomas is luring George Chesebro to his doom in "Frankly Chaste," with Director Jack Dillon in command.

Three other pictures just begun are: "External Circumstances," featuring Charles Gunn, under the direction of Ferris Hartman; "Guardian of El Dorado," with Roy Stewart, under the direction of Cliff Smith, and "Blue Blood," featuring Alma Ruebens, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

PARAMOUNT SENNETT COMEDY

"A Bedroom Blunder," Initial Offering of Noted Comedy Producer Under Paramount Banner to Be Released October 7

The long awaited news of the release date for the first Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy, "A Bedroom Blunder," is now available. October 7 will be the day upon which this combination of beauty and fun will be presented.

In "A Bedroom Blunder" beautiful Mary Thurman has the role of a young wife who has the misfortune to lose a diamond necklace, which, by a train of excruciatingly funny circumstances comes into the possession of Charley Murray, who has a volcanic wife, in the person of Eva Thatcher. Wayland Trask is Mary's husband and his jealousy is aroused over the necklace episode. There are indescribably funny scenes in a hotel, due to the switching of rooms by a hotel clerk. Charley, who is a flirt, gets into no end of trouble and is in one series of harrowing and hilarious predicaments from start to finish, which culminate in amazing climaxes. There are bathing girls galore in costumes that are exceedingly chic. Miss Thurman's costumes are said to be absolutely novel. Murray introduces inimitable "stunts" and from all indications the comedy will be the most surprising and entertaining that has ever reached the screen.

Modern Mother Hubbard

A travesty on Old Mother Hubbard of the nursery rhyme, "who went to the cupboard to get her poor dog a bone," has been made into a five-part comedy drama by Essanay for its six-year-old star, Little Mary McAlister.

The picture sets forth, in treatment of the lightest vein, the theory that times have changed but little since Old Mother Hubbard's time. And, while her cupboard was bare and her poor dog had to go boneless then, the high cost of living in the present day would enable them to fare no better now.

The picture is entitled "Young Mother Hubbard," and it will be released on the Perfection Pictures program October 29. Its diminutive star's recent productions are reported to have met with considerable success. Among them are "Pants," the series of child plays, "Do Children Count?" and the super-feature, "On Trial," which is being shown over the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

New Ann Murdock Play

Ann Murdock, the Empire-Mutual star, will have for her second picture to be released October 15 the delightful comedy, "The Beautiful Adventure" that was adapted from the French by Michael Morton.

"The Beautiful Adventure" tells a pretty, romantic love story that, for all its Gallic piquancy, is as dainty as a fairy tale.

Woman Suffrage Film

Willis Robards, who recently brought East the big Suffrage propaganda picture' "Mothers of Men," produced by the Robards Players, and featuring Dorothy Davenport, held a private showing of the picture at Loew's New York Roof for the benefit of several prominent members of the Suffrage party.

The production was pronounced by all a distinct success, and Mr. Robards was warmly congratulated upon his achievement. The representatives of the party feel that this picture, when exhibited throughout the country, will be a great benefit in bringing the actual, practical good of the woman's franchise before the eyes of the public, and it will probably be put to that use in the coming campaign. The story is strong and has some real thrills.

Edna Goodrich in "Queen X"

Miss Edna Goodrich's new Mutual photodrama "Queen X," released October 1, is a sensationally attractive production.

Miss Goodrich entered into the adventurous spirit of the play quite as though she were well used to underground passageways, smugglers' dens, villainous looking and slant-eyed orientals and all the elements that go to make up this quick action drama. The brilliant young actress has made Edwin M. Stanton's play a most fascinating study.

Miss Goodrich is at her best when she has plenty of chance for action. She made the critics sit up and take notice when she played "Paprika" in "The Runaway." She used the cayenne instead of the paprika and as a result this dashing little bit was one of the sensations of the New York stage. In "Queen X" Miss Goodrich is living up to her reputation as a peptonizer. She is charming, convincing, thrilling in her dramatic moments, amusing where she lights the labyrinths of crime with a touch of comedy and entirely satisfactory in her general treatment of a difficult topic.

Director O'Brien has caught the spirit of the play admirably. It is the atmosphere of mystery—the subterranean element, the waterfront tang with the big ships in the offing, that stimulates imagination in Mr. Stanton's drama. The smuggling band is made up of Oriental plotters whose determined efforts to circumvent the government in importation and distribution of prohibited drugs is so persistent that the revenue department finds its hands full in running the slant-eyed schemers to earth and ultimately into federal prisons.

New Billie Burke Play

Plays and pictures dealing with the present great conflict are naturally of exceptional interest because generally speaking nearly everything nowadays centers or hinges upon the war in one way or another. Thus "Arms and the Girl," in which Billie Burke, the beautiful and winsome actress, will appear October 8, is a Paramount picture calculated to please the great majority of those who attend the photoplay.

The plot of "Arms and the Girl" follows rather closely the successful stage version. It depicts the adventures of a beautiful American girl, Ruth Sherwood, played by Miss Burke, who is stranded in Belgium at the beginning of the war.

Mutual Empire Star

It isn't often that a star climbs to her exalted rank in exactly two moves, and yet that is what Miss Olive Tell, the beautiful Empire All Star Corporation star, has accomplished, for her previous record in pictures is once as leading lady with Robert Warwick and the second picture playing opposite Walter O'Brien.

On the stage Miss Tell has been just as fortunate for, unlike most beginners, in every play, except one, she has played the leading role. In New York, Miss Tell's first engagement was with Julian Eltinge in "Cousin Lucy," then came "The King of Nowhere" with Miss Tell playing opposite Lou Tellegen, and last autumn she created the principal role in "The Intruder."

At present Miss Tell is very busy, having completed "The Unforeseen," in which she is supported by David Powell, and is now at work on "Her Sister," in which Mr. Powell is again playing the leading male role. "The Unforeseen" is scheduled for early October release on the Mutual programs.

During the hottest ten days on record ten of Chicago's finest photoplay theaters did capacity business with "Parentage," the states rights special feature controlled by Frank J. Seng.

Mabel Taliaferro in Metro's "Draft 258."

NEW METRO FEATURE

"Draft 258," Forthcoming Metro Production De Luxe, Has Vital Story and Many Big Patriotic Scenes —To Rival "The Slacker"

"Draft 258," Metro's successor to "The Slacker", promises to eclipse even that superb screen drama in power and patriotic fervor. Directed by William Christy Cabanne, and written by him and June Mathis, "Draft 258"' will be issued as a special production de luxe in seven acts.

As its name indicates it deals directly with the present. It presents a true patriotic pageant of history in the making. It drives the message of patriotism home with sledge-hammer blows. Its story is that of a typical American family. Mary Alden, played by the delightful little star, Mabel Taliaferro, is a veritable torch of patriotism.

"Draft 258" has a wealth of scenes of national importance. It presents a true patriotic pageant of the nation's history, from the Declaration of Independence and the Battle of Bunker Hill, to a lawn fete in behalf of the American Red Cross, and the departure of a regiment of United States troops down Fifth Avenue on its way to the front. At one point in this remarkable production there is a "flash" of 10,000 soldiers advancing with fixed bayonets. Dashing cavalry rides that are closely connected with the story heighten the excitement.

Every cameraman in Metro's employ was utilized in obtaining the pictures of the stupendous representation of the Tower of Babel that was built for "Draft 258." This great structure, erected at a cost of $10,000, was demolished after it had been used only half a day.

A close view of the Statue of Liberty is shown in "Draft 258" and has a direct bearing on its central theme. A motion picture camera was never set up on Bedloe's Island until Director William Christy Cabanne obtained permission to do so in connection with this Metro masterpiece. The entire production closes on a note of exaltation and intense patriotic feeling.

Mabel Taliaferro lends true inspiration to the part of Mary Alden, the girl patriot. The star was chosen for the role because she is a typically "human" type of American girl. Walter Miller, who played the part of the slacker in "The Slacker," has a chance to redeem himself in the eyes of motion picture "fans" in this production, for as John Graham he is patriotic from start to finish. Matthew Alden, the socialist who finds himself being used as the tool of German propagandists, is played by Earle Brunswick, and the other brother, George Alden, is played by Eugene Borden.

William H. Tooker has the part of Van Bierman, a German agent. Edwin Boring gives a lifelike representation of the Kaiser, at a meeting of the German war-lords when plans are made to spread sedition through the United States. Others in the well-balanced cast are Camilla Dalberg, as a secret service agent; Sue Balfour as Mrs. Alden, Baby Ivy Ward, who plays a Belgian child, Robert Anderson and Sidney Dalbrook.

Praise for "Honor System"

Two governors, one an executive in office now, the other an "ex," were present at one of the performances of "The Honor System," William Fox's stirring cinemelodrama, in Boston, recently. They were Governor Arthur Capper, of Kansas, who is president of the Humanitarian Cult, and ex-governor Foss of Massachusetts.

The critics of the Boston and Chicago newspapers were enthusiastic about the production.

The Boston Transcript spoke of "The Honor System" as a "vivid and unusual film, remarkable in attention to detail and in completeness." It said "the choice of characters was admirable" and that "the picture is valuable also as a record of progress."

"A big theme presented in a masterly manner," says Tamar Lane in the Boston Record. "An absorbing picture with a vital, illuminating story presented in a way that moves the spectator deeply"... Enough incident to provide material for another film or two... A wealth of clever touches, details and humor."

Director Aids Government

Edward H. Griffith, director of many successful motion picture features, has left his work at the Edison studios, New York City, to become a representative of the war department commission on training camp activities. His last picture, "The Awakening of Ruth" with Shirley Mason, has just been released as the first feature offering of the George Kleine System of Perfection Pictures.

NEW ROTHAPFEL THEATER

Present Manager of New York Rialto Will Direct a Second Metropolitan House with Unusual Music and Illumination

S. L. Rothapfel, probably the best known exhibitor in the United States, managing director of the Rialto Theater of New York, will have charge of a new theater which is being completed at the corner of Forty-ninth street and Broadway.

In order to carry out Mr. Rothapfel's advanced ideas of programs and music, special theater arrangements are necessary. In order to provide these for the new house, Mr. Rothapfel has been quietly working for some months on the scheme of decoration and the stage settings and particularly upon a novel system of color illumination. He expects to put in force at the new house many ideas which he has heretofore been unable to use. The name of the theater has not yet been decided.

A classic colonnade of white stone facing on Broadway will strike an artistic keynote for the entire structure. The seating capacity will be approximately 2,500.

The orchestra of fifty pieces will uphold the Rothapfel standard so far as music is concerned. Hugo Riesenfeld will be the musical director, though he will continue to conduct for the most part at the Rialto. Once a week the orchestras of both houses will be combined in what will be known as the Rothapfel Symphony Orchestra, and will give a popular symphony concert at the new institution.

Russell B. Smith and R. H. Hall are building the theater for G. M. Heckscher, Jr. It will be operated in conjunction with the Rialto.

Second Ferguson Release in November

An announcement from Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, states that the second Elsie Ferguson subject to be released by that organization will be offered to the public early in November. The great success of "Barbary Sheep" prompted the producers to obtain the screen rights to another popular novel by a well-known author and after careful consideration of the available subjects, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing" was selected.

A well-known critic, writing on the book, recently said: "The vivid way in which the author, Mrs. Mary S. Watts, has portrayed her in the book, in the completeness with which her life is laid open and in the cordial relationship which she at once established with the reader, Jennie Cushing may be likened to Nathan Burke, another of Mrs. Watts' popular novels. Jennie is the kind of person one cannot forget; her story is not only an intensely human document, it is no less a significant comment on the tendencies of society to-day. All in all, it's a big gripping book, original in conception, fearless in treatment and exhibiting the high standard of literary workmanship which Mrs. Watts' previous volumes have set for her."

In the title role of Jennie Cushing, Miss Ferguson pictures a character which presents a strong contrast to her last screen portrayal in "Barbary Sheep," the new photoplay disclosing her as a little girl of the slums, while her former picturization presented her as the polished English noblewoman.

Wallace Reid will begin work in Lasky's eastern studios about November 1.

New Orleans Gets Loving Cup

New Orleans, the banner office of the Greater Vitagraph distributing organization, is the first to get possession of a loving cup offered by Walter W. Irwin, general manager, as a competitive trophy to be contested for by the sales organization.

In a contest inaugurated about two months ago, each office was assigned a certain amount of business as a hundred per cent quota, the office equaling or exceeding its quota for four consecutive weeks to be deemed the leader of the organization. Where more than one office maintained an average in excess of its quota for the specified period, the one having the highest average was to be deemed the leader. It so happened that the New Orleans office was the first of the sales organization branches to go over the mark and it has maintained its lead for four weeks, although there are several others now in the "100 per cent club."

"PUBLIC DEFENDER" COMPLETE

First of Big Special Screen Productions Announced by Harry Raver, Has Theme Endorsed by Over 2,000 Newspapers

"The Public Defender," the first of a series of big special screen productions, dealing with themes of vital interest to all people and treating of problems close to the minds of the masses, announced for presentation by Harry Raver, has been completed and is now ready for the market.

Aside from the fact that "The Public Defender" is built on a basic idea of momentous interest—equal rights before the law, and that its cast contains the names of three great stars, in the persons of Frank Keenan, Alma Hanlon and Robert Edeson, artists whose names have a real significance at that unerring indicator of popularity—the box office, it presents a story of genuinely strong entertainment values.

The creation of the office of a "Public Defender" as outlined in the visual story presented by Harry Raver, is held by many eminent jurists to be absolutely essential to the proper and fair administration of justice. The idea also has the unqualified endorsement of over 2,000 newspapers and magazines throughout the country, having been editorially commended by such influential metropolitan dailies as the New York Tribune, the Mail, the Globe and the Herald.

Among the prominent magazines who have placed themselves on record as strongly favorable to the idea of a "Public Defender" are The Fra, The Outlook, the New Republic and the American Review of Reviews. In fact almost every publication of any importance in the United States has been outspoken in its advocacy of the plan looking to the institution of the "Public Defender," as presented so concretely in Mr. Goldman's book and carried out with such exceptional virility and artistry in the photodrama.

Harry Raver, responsible for "The Public Defender" as a screen attraction, has been identified with pictures practically since their inception as a form of popular amusement. Mr. Raver, active in every movement wherein the standards of production have been advanced during the past fifteen years, will be best remembered as the man who introduced the two dollar photoplay to Broadway, D'Annunzio's immortal "Cabiria."

MOTION PICTURE CLUB MEETS

New Chicago Social Film Men's Organization Starts Conservatively—Membership Limited to One Hundred Recognized and Desirable Men

The new Motion Picture Club of Chicago held a lively and constructive meeting at the Hamilton Club on the evening of October 1. The work of getting the prominent and conservative film men of the city identified with the club has boomed and the organization is now assured permanency and an active life.

A splendid dinner was served at the meeting, after which the proposed constitution and by-laws were gone over with the fine tooth comb of analysis and adopted with the revisions voted. Richard R. Nehls, president of the temporary organization, president, with Secretary Stoddard and Treasurer Belford performing their respective functions. Great credit is due Mr. Stoddard for his thorough and efficient work on the by-laws. An informal talk by Roderick Ross on war conditions in Canada was enjoyed immediately following the dinner.

The unusual feature of the Motion Picture Club is that the membership is limited to 100. Extreme care is being exercised in adding new members. Only men who are of recognized prominence or desirability are admitted. Those present at the meeting have all paid the $10 initiation fee and the first month's dues of $2. The notes on the furniture purchased by the former Reel Fellows club have been met and the property will be preserved for the future needs of the club.

Chicago film men should be advised that the Motion Picture club is the only official and recognized social film organization in the city.

New York Fighting Music Tax

New York exhibitors have turned. The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers have at last aroused them to the point where they see redress only in fighting back. The society has dragged a number of Brooklyn exhibitors into court for refusing to pay the music tax. The exhibitors are still refusing to pay the tax, and last week by filing a bill of complaint in the Supreme Court of New York against the Publishers Society at least one amusement company let that organization know the wish not to pay the tax was not merely an idle desire on their part but a very fixed determination.

The complaint was filed by Milton Goldsmith, attorney for the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street and Nicholas Avenue Amusement Company.

Besides seeking an injunction against the music publishers restraining them from demanding a license fee as precedent to the playing of any of their musical compositions the plaintiff goes further and demands the dissolution of the Society of Composers and Publishers on the grounds of alleged illegal combination and an attempt unlawfully to control the music publishing business in the state of New York and throughout the United States. Two million dollars per year, according to the complaint, is the amount the publishers have hopes of extracting from the exhibitors' pockets if their plans go through.

Alice Brady in First Select Play

Work was begun last week in the Paragon Studio at Fort Lee on the first of Alice Brady's Select pictures. The name of this production has been changed from "The Red Mouse" to "Her Silent Sacrifice."

In the splendid cast which is being chosen to support Miss Brady are Robert Payson Gibbs, Henry Clive, Blanch Craig and Edmund Pardo. The production is being directed by Edward Jose, whose "Poppy" and "The Moth" have been Norma Talmadge's two most successful productions.

Select Pictures for Week-Runs

Select Pictures, through their Atlanta representative, Walter Price, have just signed a contract with Sig Samuels, proprietor of the Criterion Theater, to play the entire list of Select pictures during the coming year. The Criterion Theater is unique among picture houses in this section of the South, in that it puts on feature plays for a solid week's run, and the one picture constitutes the entire program.

The Criterion is a new house situated on Peachtree street in the heart of Atlanta. The week-run feature was constituted by the owners about five months ago and has proved a great success. This is no doubt largely due to the splendid exploitation methods used by Manager Paterson in presenting his attractions to the Atlanta public.

BRENON PRODUCING FOR SELF

Acquires Entire Control of Corporation Which Bears His Name—Will Produce Hall Caine's "The Woman Thou Gavest Me"

Herbert Brenon is now one of the most active forces in the industry. He has become an independent producer in every sense of the word, acquiring entire control of the corporation which bears his name. He has just produced, "The Fall of the Romanoffs" with remarkable success at the Broadway Theater, and secured Hall Caine's "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" for immediate production. Incidentally, he has found time to undergo an operation for appendicitis at the Postgraduate Hospital, New York.

"The Woman Thou Gavest Me," visualized from the famous Hall Caine novel, will be an important link in Herbert Brenon's chain of productions for the year. Mr. Brenon has already contributed "The Lone Wolf" and "The Fall of the Romanoffs" to the screen. He is now completing Rupert Hughes' mystery romance, "Empty Pockets." "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" will immediately follow the Hughes story and will preceed "Kismet," in which Otis Skinner makes his screen debut.

"The Fall of the Romanoffs," Herbert Brenon's recently completed history-drama, has had a remarkably successful Broadway premiere. Capacity audiences have greeted the production at each showing since the opening performance.

The newspaper comments established a motion picture record in their warmth and approval, placing Mr. Brenon's cross-section of contemporary history on a level with the screen's biggest achievements.

A brief summary of the critical comments follows:

Tribune: "The Brenon picture was a mighty undertaking, which the director has carried through to a successful completion."

World: "Pictorially, it has seldom been surpassed."

Morning Telegraph: "One of the most remarkable and noteworthy pictures of the year. Emphatically a stride forward in motion pictures."

Times: "The general effect is one of great realism and the film as a whole is grippingly interesting."

Sun: "Truth is not often so dramatic as fiction, but in this story of the most remarkable by-product of the war, all the essential historic and histrionic elements were present, awaiting only the skilled hand of a producer like Mr. Brenon to fuse them into the most impressive pictorial form."

Herald: "The picture drama, lavishly embellished with Russian atmosphere, has an almost startling effect of reality."

American: "It abounds in thrills, in spectacular scenes, in gripping situations. More than that, it is a very human story that could be understood by the humblest Russian peasant."

Evening Sun: "Is likely to have an extended success."

Evening World: "Engrossing—a motion picture that deserves popularity."

Big European Star in New York

Asta Nielsen, noted European screen star, is in New York. She is one of the world's highest salaried screen stars and is as well known in Europe as is Charlie Chaplin here.

Asta Nielsen, European star now in New York.

Some of her films have been shown in this country, through Pathe, and created a sensation. Among these were, "In a Fix" (comedy), "Suffragette" (comedy-drama), "A Girl Wtihout a Country," "The Dance to Death," "Gypsy Blood," "The Traitress" and "The Heart of a Pierrot." In these plays Miss Nielsen portrayed characters of widely different emotions and import. Whether as a jolly young student, care-free and happy, or as a suffering woman of the people, she holds us with the vivid reality of each one. She is one of the few actresses on the screen who seem able to show us her inmost thoughts, almost, one might say, the workings of her mind.

Miss Nielsen has with her a scenario made from Holger Drachman's "Once Upon a Time," to which play she secured the film right some time ago, and George Brandes, the famous Danish author and philosopher, is now writing a new story for her production in films.

Miss Nielsen has been busy studying the American film art and said that what struck her most forcibly was the excellent photography, the great amount of titles and the extreme length of time consumed in photographing a feature film.

While Miss Nielsen has not made any definite plans for the future she has her studio manager, Fred Wingardh, with her, who has taken offices in the Strand Theater building.

"Womanhood" Plays Return

Alice Joyce and Harry Morey in "Womanhood," played a return two days' engagement at the Strand Theater, Nashville, Tennessee, and enjoyed a good run. At the former presentation the Strand could not accommodate the crowds which came to see this picture, and Manager Bradford found it necessary to play a return date. Prices were set at 25 cents the first time, and 20 cents on the return.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Newslets for Your Program

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

JULES RAUCOURT, who will play the part of Walter Arden Savage in Emmy Wehlen's forthcoming Metro production, "Nobody," a picture version of Louis Joseph Vance's novel, is a Belgian. Wounded in the battle of Malines, his honorable discharge was handed him by King Albert of Belguim. Before the war he was playing in one of the theaters at Antwerp, but offered his services to his country as soon as war was declared.

The young lady in the gas mask is Helen Holmes getting ready to take a stroll on the bottom of the ocean. The helmet she wears looks as though it might be the conning tower of a one-man submarine. But it isn't. It's just the modern mermaid's head dress.

Bennett Molter, formerly one of Metro's directing staff, is in this country on the twenty-one days' leave of absence granted him as a volunteer in the French army. Mr. Molter is a pilot aviator, a member of French Escadrille No. 102.

The players of the American Film Company, Inc., were more than generous when some one suggested that the Santa Barbara company of Stewart Edward White's corp of Field Artillery might like a few luxuries such as candy and tobacco while they were in training. Mary Miles Minter has a weakness for good bonbons herself and she wrote down her famous name for a goodly amount to purchase sweets for the boys. William Russell knows what a good smoke means to a tired man and he followed suit. The fund was augmented by similar generous contributions from Gail Kane, George Periolat, Francelia Billington, Alan Forrest, Harvey Clark, Clarence Burton and Spottiswoode Aitken. The boys in camp are now smoking American Film tobacco and nibbling American Film candy with many thanks.

Mme. Emily Gilbert Boileau, widow of the famous French artist, Philip Boileau, and the only model that he used for his many beautiful studies of the feminine, is at work at the Goldwyn studio in Fort Lee, N. J. She plays a nurse in "Nearly Married," the comedy by Edgar Selwyn in which Madge Kennedy will appear following her debut in "Baby Mine."

No more pies for Mabel Normand. The famous Keystone comedienne is to desert culinary comedy for higher fields, according to Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

Ruth Roland, star of "The Neglected Wife," is going into vaudeville for ten weeks and will be seen over Pantages time with a singing act.

Marguerita Fischer is an expert on mushroom culture. She knows the first name of every edible fungus and could write a text book on the growth and discovery of mushrooms, if she chose.

Gail Kane is emotionally effected by color. She says blue rests her, yellow makes her feel cheerful and green makes her mentally alert.

Mary McDonald MacLaren, beautiful David Horsley star, brushed elbows with death recently when her automobile was wrecked by another machine. Miss MacLaren suffered several painful lacerations and several bruises. By a peculiar act of providence her beauty will not be impaired although she will be confined to a hospital bed for several weeks to come.

Adda Gleason, who appeared in support of William Russell in "Shackles of Truth," has been re-engaged by the American Film Company to play a role in "Lucky Jim."

Just one of the many thrilling scenes which will be seen in "The Still Alarm," is that showing the factory fire where more than fifty people are seen trapped in the burning building. There is shown the arrival of the fire fighting forces and the subsequent rescues. "The Still Alarm" is replete with such scenes and promises to be one of the most truly gripping pictures ever produced under the Selig brand. Thomas Santschi is featured with Bessie Eyton, Fritzi Brunette, Edward J. Peil, Frank Clark and others in the supporting cast.

Believing that an easily pronounced, easily remembered name is an aid to the popularity of a screen star, the president of the Greater Vitagraph Company suggested a change of name for three of the young actresses who have recently joined this company. They are Miriam Fouche (pronounced Foo-shay), Alice Rodier (pronounced Ro-de-ay), and Agnes Eyre (pronounced Ire). Those are all beautiful names if properly pronounced, but perhaps ten fans would have ten different pronounciations for each of those names. Therefore, new names have been chosen and Miriam Fouche will be Miriam Miles; Alice Rodier will be Alice Terry; and Agnes Eyre will be Agnes Ayres. A Vitagraph actor has also changed his name, for Alfred Vosburgh is now known as Alfred Whitman.

Rex McDougal, now a member of the Empire All Star Corporation, served for eighteen months in the English army in the present war. Mr. McDougall first joined the Scottish Highlanders and later was transferred to the Northumberland fusileers. A severe illness left Mr. McDougal unfit for military service and he was honorably discharged. In "My Wife" and "Please Help Emily," two early Empire-Mutual releases, Mr. McDougal will be seen in support of Ann Murdock.

One of the reasons for the wonderful success of Charles Ray is to be found in the wealth of small detail in his work. He studies every action so as to make sure it would be a natural one, and he insists that his companions act in a life-like manner when playing with him. When he is acting a character he always seems to do the natural little things one would expect of that character and it is in so doing that his parts seem to live.

Anita King, from gun-play and sombreros, has been ushered into the dilemmas of a political story, which will be her second of a series of six on the Mutual Program. Edgar Jones is directing the Anita King pictures at the Balboa studio.

David Powell not only is interested in photography from a business point of view, posing for a camera all day as he does, but is an exceedingly clever amateur photographer himself. Having played with all the most famous people of the stage and screen, Mr. Powell's collection of pictures and "snaps" is unique. Among them are pictures of Sir Forbes Robertson playing golf, Ellen Terry with a party visiting San Francisco's Chinatown, Elsie Ferguson when on tour with "Outcast," and dozens of others both stage and screen.

George Ade, the Hoosier humorist, visited the Essanay studios and met the company there which is filming his "Fables in Slang." It was the first time Mr. Ade had ever been in a motion picture studio, and he evinced much interest in the methods whereby the children of his pen were being given life.

Kathleen Clifford, star of "Who is 'Number One'?" Paramount's first serial, has returned to the vaudeville stage for several weeks in order to fulfill contracts she made some months ago. She expects to finish the last scenes of "Who is 'Number One'?" within a few weeks after which she will begin a tour of the United States in her new vaudeville act.

Alice Mann has probably appeared on your screen. She is Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle's leading lady in "His Wedding Night."

Feature Programs

Mutual Star Productions

Southern Pride—(Five Reels)—American Film Company—October 8.—Lucie De Montrond, with her aunt, Tante Jeanne, and her brother Francois, are the only members of a proud and impoverished Creole family in New Orleans. Francois is in love with an unscrupulous woman, and in order to win favor with her, steals the family jewels, on which money has been lent to Lucie by Gaspar Laroche, an old antique dealer. Robert Orme, of as blue blood as herself and as poor, is the favored suitor of Lucie, but her aunt forbids his attentions and orders her to receive only the attentions of James Morgan, a wealthy cotton planter. At a dance given by Morgan, Gaspar Laroche notices that Lucie does not wear her jewels, and when she tells him that they have been stolen, he proposes that she marry him in order to retain the jewels. A cook in the family has seen Francois steal them, and she tells Lucie, who at once goes to his sweetheart and demands the return of the jewels. Gaspar, who has been shadowing Lucie, insultingly insinuates that she has earned the money to get back the jewels by dubious ways. Lucie resents the insult, Francois enters, a quarrel ensues, and Gaspar is killed by the accidental discharge of a revolver with which he tries to kill Francois. The affair is hushed up and Francois sobered by the tragedy assumes the responsibility of the family. Lucie and Robert's difficulties are smoothed away and a happy reunion results.

Paramount

The Trouble Buster—(Five Reels)—October 8.—Starring Vivian Martin. Michelena, a Roumanian girl left alone in America when her father dies, is befriended by "Blackie," a newsboy. He helps her cut her beautiful curls, gives her a suit of boy's clothing and Michelena becomes Mike. In spare time the youngsters amuse themselves by making clay statuettes, and one of these, the "Trouble Buster," is snapped up by a dealer, and becomes a famous fad. Blackie has been injured, losing his eyesight, but is later cured. After a trying experience with a crook, who tries to blackmail Mike, by threatening to tell that she is the real author of the statue, instead of Blackie, to whom she gave the credit, the little heroine is finally rescued by Blackie himself, who gives her the credit that is her due and also his love.

Triangle

Ashes of Hope—(Five Reels)—Triangle—October 9.—Gonda, a woman of a typical wild and woolly settlement is piqued by the indifference of Jim Gordon, a silent man, who becomes part of the community, without taking any interest in its activities. She bets "Ace High" Lawton, a gambler and her most ardent admirer, that she will break through the ice of Gordon's reserve. Her first attempt was to offer Gordon a drink, which he knocks from her hand. A fight ensues in which the new-comer is injured. Gonda is penitent and goes to nurse the wounded man, and the result is mutual love. They are to be married when Gordon receives a letter from his wife, who lives in the East, enclosing a picture of their baby. He leaves a note for Gonda and departs. Gonda, feeling that all is lost, returns to her old form of living. Gordon, being short of funds, tries to rob the dance hall, but is caught and is to be lynched, when the woman who loves him interferes. She burns the rope about the man's neck and whispers to him instructions for his escape. Gordon reaches his home in safety, while Gonda goes on with a life, which, because of the one real love that she has known, is more irksome than ever. She later marries "Ace High" Lawton, from whom she bought Gordon's freedom.

Blue Bird

The Spotted Lily—(Five Reels)—Bluebird—October 9.—The story of a little peasant girl in Brittany. Yvonne Lamour, the "war baby" of an earlier conflict than the present, in whose heart is an impulse to sacrifice, born of the conditions by which she came into being. A new conflict, that of today, devastates France, and the village priest takes Yvonne and Jean, a lad whom the girl loves, to America, hoping to find happiness and contentment for all. As a result of continued poverty, however, the father is taken ill and dies. Jean surrenders to selfishness and is about to desert the girl who has befriended him. The boy is a violinist and is offered the patronage of a rich Russian woman who has fallen in love with him. At the moment of yielding, however, realization of the girl's many sacrifices for him in the land of their adoption intervenes and he returns to the little girl whose care for him has reached from one continent to another.

Perfection

Fools for Luck—(Five Reels)—Essanay—October 9.—Philander Jepson was lucky—he was lucky to have his job, so at least his friends thought. As an accountant he was a good gambler and for fear that his god-mother, Dame Fortune, might overlook him for a short time, he never missed a chance to add to his collection of lucky souvenirs. After borrowing all the money he could from his cronies, he started on his annual two-weeks' tour of the summer resorts. Brunhilda, a young lady of quite some appearance, and whose parents regarded as the family jewel, enters the scene. Philander regarded this adventure as a dare, but the result was romance. Unfortunately, at this critical moment Madame Fortune took a much needed rest, and trouble planted itself squarely in young Jepson's path. Brunhilda's pa found out all there was to know about Philander and he decided that all that was left to do was to make a fresh start. After he discovered that the girl knew all about him and had been watching him from the beginning, he decided to settle down to an honest job. The girl was not averse to notice that good sense had come to him, and Philander decided that honesty is the best policy. Reviewed in this issue.

Strong Staff of Managers with Chicago Chain

THE Jones, Linick & Schaefer staff of managers, is, without a doubt, one of the finest collection of executives of any theatrical firm in the country. The three members of the firm are typical of the American democracy, for their treatment of their employees is more one of friendship than one of iron rule. Not a day passes, but what Aaron J. Jones, president of the firm, gets in immediate touch with each of his department heads and house managers.

Adolph Linick is the financial executive of the firm. Peter J. Schaefer looks after the properties, keeping them in tip top condition. Samuel I. Levin, the general manager, is the oldest employee in point of service, having been the first manager of the Orpheum Theater, which was the beginning of the vast Jones, Linick & Schaefer string. Mr. Levin is still a young man, although he boasts of the fact that he has a granddaughter four years old.

Ralph T. Kettering, who is general representative and director of publicity, is well known in Chicago, where he has spent twenty years of his life in the theatrical business. He is a playright, author and writer of reputation. Magazines are constantly printing his stories and the stage is never without a new Kettering play or vaudeville sketch.

John G. Burch, manager of McVicker's Theater, was the first manager Jones, Linick & Schaefer employed when they entered the vaudeville field. Mr. Burch was the first manager of the Wilson Avenue and Willard Theater. When McVicker's was annexed, Mr. Burch was brought into the loop to take charge.

Norman E. Field, manager of the Colonial, was one of the early employees of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, having drawn salary from the first moving picture house of the State of Illinois, which was opened in 1903 by Jones, Linick & Schaefer. He left their employ, however, to become amusement director, Earl's Court, London, but after several season's abroad, returned to the fold, and was made manager of the Willard Theater. When a vacancy occurred at the Colonial he was the first choice for the position, and has succeeded wonderfully well.

George H. Moore, who is manager of the Orpheum, one of the finest motion-picture theaters in the world, began his career as house policeman at that theater ten years ago. He was rapidly advanced from one position to another, until he was given complete charge of the Orpheum, at the time that Samuel I. Levin was removed from the management and appointed general manager of the entire circuit.

Louis J. Jones, brother to Aaron J. Jones, acts as manager of the smaller motion picture houses controlled by the firm. He is probably the busiest manager of the lot, owing to his division of duties. He is capable and a great credit to his younger brother Aaron. His theatrical career dates back to Chicago World's Fair, when he and Aaron were joint partners in the program privilege of the Anthropological building.

Sigmund Faller, manager of the Bijou Dream, has made good use of his many years of association with that playhouse, until at the present time, in addition to managing the theater, he boasts a large block of the capital stock. Mr. Faller is a thorough motion picture man, and it is owing to his individual ability to picture feature films, that the Bijou Dream is one of the most successful picture houses in Chicago.

Harry Earl, manager of the Rialto Theater, was an executive of Barnum & Bailey and Ringling Brothers circuses for many years. He was also the first manager of the Masonic Temple Roof Garden when J. J. Murdock was house electrician. It was Earl who first exploited "The Girl with the Auburn Hair."

Short Features Gets Woman Suffrage Pictures

The Short Features Exchange, located on the sixth floor of the Godfrey Building, New York, has acquired from the New York State Woman Suffrage League, their official picture which is to be used in connection with their campaign in the coming election. The picture is one-reel in length and tells in a unique way just what the woman does in the war times. The picture winds up with several scenes of a patriotic nature which proves the contention of women that they are as patriotic as men.

Henry Ginsberg, manager of the Short Features Exchange reports that he has booked the picture in twenty-five of the Marcus Loew houses for an extended run.

A. Kay Gets Lion Hunting Features

The A. Kay Company has just closed a deal with Bob Bakker, the celebrated lion hunter, which it has secured for American and Canadian distribution, the hunter's famous motion pictures of "Hunting Mountain Lions in Montana." The pictures are a novelty, and depict the hunting of mountain lions in the wild mountainous sections of the Rockies.

Chicago Cinema Circuit Organized

Announcement is made of the formation of an organization to fill a long-felt want in the moving picture field.

In the promulgating of a theory long thought of, and exeprimented with on several occasions, finally an organization was perfected, complete in every detail, to be of real assistance to the individual theater proprietor. Such is the idea of the Chicago Cinema Circuit.

Clyde E. Elliot, for the past two years sales manager for the Paramount Picture Corporation, has resigned to accept the presidency and general managership of the new company. In an interview with Mr. Elliot, he makes the following assertion outlining his plans: "Our idea would be to accept in our organization such theaters as are representative of the best in the Middle West, thereby enabling us to co-operate more fully with the various distributing agencies and producers.

"The new organization will not confine itself to the city of Chicago alone, but to neighboring states also. There will be a direct co-operation between each member enjoying a franchise with us, as well as sharing the many years' experience of those associated with us. All of this will be included in the services rendered them. The exhibitor will have back of him an entire organization making purchases amounting to hundreds of dollars a week, and we will also buy state rights productions for first run presentation throughout our territory. I am confident, from the film people to whom I have spoken, that our proposition will be the biggest of its kind ever attempted in the Middle West, a great many theaters having already made application for franchises.

"Our offices will be in the North American Building."

Well-Known Director Joins Metro

Metro Pictures Corporation has added to its directing staff de luxe Frank Reicher. Mr. Reicher was already a distinguished figure on the speaking stage of two continents before entering the field of motion pictures, and success has followed him. His first work for Metro will be the direction of the celebrated star, Ethel Barrymore, in a picture version of Sidney McCall's novel, "Red Horse Hill," adapted for the screen by Mary Murillo.

Friedman at Denver

H. E. Friedman, former branch manager for Pathe at Minneapolis, now heads the Denver Exchange for the same concern. Mr. Friedman has also been connected with Pathe in New York and Chicago.

Big Ivan Production with Stanley King

William Humphrey, one of the best known directors in the country, has in association with others for the past few months, been laboring in the preparation of a semi-spectacular, yet extremely modern play. Oscar I. Lamberger, Ph. D., who is one of the moving spirits in this enterprise, is reporting that locations, selections of special scenic settings and effects are practically completed.

As it will necessitate the taking of scenes in different parts of the country, arrangements for engaging special trains have been made.

The production will rank among the hundred thousand dollar kind, and the leading characters that are to be portrayed will call upon the finest of artistry especially in the difficult parts. One of the very important roles will be the one of the juvenile lead. who will have to appear in the double role of a youth of eighteen and a man of twenty-eight. This part already has been secured by Stanley King, a youthful artist, who in the pre-rehearsals has proved exceptional fitness for the part ascribed to him. Mr. King's screen experience and his pains-taking study of the drama has shown remarkable results. Born in this country he was not satisfied with the tutoring received in the land of his birth, but visited the Imperial dramatic school of Vienna, where he received an additional year of experience. His studies there were cut short by the outbreak of the war.

Clair Hague, general manager of the Canadian Universal Film Company, located at Toronto, has received his appointment as a member of Motion Picture Distribution Committee of the Food Controller's office at Ottawa.

Julius Bernheim, formerly of the Minneapolis Laemmle exchange, has been transferred to the Chicago office of that concern. He is succeeded in Minneapolis by Benjamin Judell.

Chicago Notes

DICK TRAVERS, former Essanay star, is wielding a pick and shovel in the Officers Training Camp at Fort Sheridan, digging himself in and then seeing how fast he can go over the top. Dick finds it quite a change from holding the hand of his leading lady while the camera man turns the crank but, according to Joe Hopp, he likes it nevertheless and expects to come out at the end of the three months training with at least a bar on his shoulder.

Aaron J. Jones, president of the well-known firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, was in St. Louis and Kansas City last week on business.

Edwin Silverman, Chicago manager of the Butterfly Pictures, has just returned from New York, where he spent a week on pleasure bent.

E. Van Ronkel, manager of Jewel Productions, reports that "Come Through" was the first picture to make a successful week's run at the Casino at Madison near Dearborn streets.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have arranged with D. W. Griffith to secure all of his productions to be seen for the first time in Chicago at their Orpheum Theater.

S. B. Griever, manipulator of the celuloid for profit, declares that business is up and coming all the time. He reports also that even the donation business is good, inasmuch as he is now furnishing over 250 theaters in this district with the single reel Ford educationals gratis.

Max Levy, silk shirter who sports monograms on his cuffs even when he goes down to shake the furnace, when seen last week in his office at the Metro exchange and asked for the scandal in the trade, said, "Come on in boy and sit down. I don't know a darn thing but I'll gladly tell you what I know."

Ludwig Kovacs is opening a theater at 3709 Southport avenue to be called the Esthena. Mr. Kovacs is already the proprietor of the Lawndale at 3677 Grand avenue and has been in the show business for 14 years, at one time being out on the road with his own musical comedy company.

C. W. Bunn, head of the Pathe local exchange, says that he made a great sacrifice when he started into the film game. He began as a salesman two and one-half years ago and is now one of the most successful managers in the country. We call that the kind of a sacrifice hit that develops into a home run.

G. H. Moore, manager of the Orpheum on State near Monroe, is up on his toes for the new policy of big features which he is about to inaugurate in this big downtown Jones, Linnick & Schaefer house. Mr. Moore states that while business is even better than at this time last year the effects of drawing the 25,000 young men for the draft army out of the city is already being felt. He expects, however, to offset this falling off in patronage to some extent by the new big feature policy which will permit the boosting of admission prices.

At the headquarters of the League this week the weary minds that have been tusseling with the many troubles of the exhibitor are being given a rest. The World Series is on and if you don't know the national pastime and its history since Eve threw the first curve you're as out of place as a pacifist in a Junker's meeting.

E. D. Gurney, auditor of Universal and Bluebird Exchanges, has been drafted into the national army with orders to go to camp October 3.

Mr. Gurney was married last week and announced his coming marriage while in Chicago several weeks ago on his annual trip around the circuit of Bluebird and Universal Exchanges.

Grecian dances, in the open, are an artistic feature of the new six reel feature picture that is now being made by the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation at the Rothacker studios. A dozen beautiful girls, including Miss Valdeo de Coriche, take part in these dances in the woods, and Charlotte, who has been called a second Pavolwa, leads them.

"Chicago Appreciates Its Film Industry" is the heading of a story used by the Chicago Commerce, the bulletin of the Associated Commerce of Chicago. Several paragraphs are devoted to a resume of the business of the American Film Company and special mention is made of its president, Samuel S. Hutchinson.

The Playhouse Theater is another Chicago theater that will forsake movies October 1. The Playhouse, since last April, has been playing Bluebird and Jewel features. With the closing of the Playhouse Theater, October 1, it leaves only two movie theaters operating under the full week policy and those are the Ziegfeld and Bijou-Dream. At one time last summer, there were ten theaters in the loop showing pictures for a week or more.

There has been a new face at the Exhibitors League headquarters in the Masonic Temple now for a couple of weeks and it's rather a good addition to look at. Miss Catherine Melcher, member of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, has been enlisted by the League to draw up a list of the non-taxable music which can safely be used by theater men without subjecting them to the tax of the Publishers and Composers Society. As soon as the list is completed it will be sent out to all members of the League.

Alfred Hamburger has organized the Continental Theaters corporation, of which he will be the director general. The new corporation has taken over all the Alfred Hamburger theaters. The personnel is said to be composed of representative Chicago citizens and several eastern capitalists desirous of entering the moving picture business on a large scale in the middle west. Arrangements have been nearly completed to announce the acquisition of one large loop theater and another is to be built.

Industry Meets War Tax

TEN-CENT THEATERS INCLUDED IN BILL—OPINIONS VARIED ON MEASURE

PICTURE theaters charging ten cents or over for admission will be required to pay the ten per cent war tax. This measure goes into effect November 1.

Congress finally settled on that plan, due to the opinion held in the House that, in view of the other war taxes, it would be unfair to exempt the tax on admissions to ten-cent picture houses. Theaters charging five cents admission are free from the tax.

It was widely believed throughout the industry that motion picture admissions of 10 and 15 cents would be exempt from taxation following a certain conviction on the part of the Congressional committees that films were more of an educational than of an amusement character, but now that it has been decided to levy a tax in the cases of all picture houses the admission charge to which is 10 cents or over, the exhibitors, through their associations, are already laying plans to meet the situation by the best manner possible.

It is estimated that $65,000,000 in taxes will be collected from the picture theaters annually.

Tax on Positive and Negative Films

In addition, taxes are to be levied upon positive and negative motion picture film. This will come as a serious blow for many manufacturers who have found the competition in their field particularly aggressive of late.

The clause of the bill as it relates to the decision to tax all amusement admissions over 5 cents is as follows:

In the case of persons having the permanent use of boxes or seats in an opera house or any place of amusement, or a lease for the use of such box or seat in such opera house or place of amusement, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to ten per centum of the amount for which a similar box or seat is sold for performance or exhibition at which the box or seat is used or reserved by or for the lessee or holder. These taxes shall not be imposed in the case of a place the maximum charge for admission to which is 5 cents, or in the case of shows, rides, and other amusements (the maximum charge for admission to which is ten cents) within outdoor general amusement parks, or in the case of admission to such parks.

The film taxation which falls under the title of War Excess Taxes is decided as follows:

Upon all moving picture films (which have not been exposed) sold by the manufacturer or importer a tax equivalent to one-fourth of 1 per cent per linear foot; and upon all positive moving picture (containing a picture ready for projection) sold or leased by the manufacturer, producer, or importer a tax equivalent to one-half cent per linear foot.

"Will Eliminate Small Houses"—Zukor

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, has the following to say concerning the new tax:

The result of the tax will certainly be that most of these small theaters will be forced to close their doors. They could not continue to exist and operate at a loss or with no profit. The result of this in turn will reflect directly upon the Government, because it will entail a loss of income and surplus profit tax from the theaters and from the great producing and distributing organizations, whose profits will thus decline.

It is true that the tax will not so materially affect the larger theaters, because some may continue to operate at a sacrifice on their admission receipts. It is the small man who will suffer and, unfortunately, he has already been called upon to face local and other taxes in many instances which have rendered his position precarious. I do not make this statement from any lack of loyalty to the Government, because I believe it to be the absolute duty of every man in this country to assist to the last degree in the prosecution of the war. I am thinking solely of the fact that the Government, in the end, will lose more than it will gain from this tax levy.

The tax on film means literally a 20 per cent tax on completed positive or more than is imposed upon any other industry engaged in production of any character of goods. The result of this will necessarily be reduced footage — less pictures—and again the net return to the Government from the taxation of corporations will be reduced, because of the lessening of returns as a result of decreased output and more expensive production.

Pettijohn Makes Prophecy

C. C. Pettijohn, general manager, American Exhibitors' Association, says:

The war tax will cause a great hardship, especially on ten-cent theaters. The exhibitors of the United States have been most willing to do their bit for Uncle Sam. Their screens have been at the disposal of the government for war loan, food conservation, Red Cross and other government propaganda work. I have never heard of a single theater in the United States refusing to co-operate in this great work.

I believe that the tax as it now exists will put twenty-five per cent of the ten-cent houses out of business. Another twenty-five per cent will take the chance of raising the price, or dropping back to the five-cent program. And probably fifty per cent will be able to continue a ten-cent program as before.

My understanding is that this matter will be regulated in such manner that the tax will be paid by the persons seeking admission.

If every exhibitor in the United States will make a complete report 30 days after the tax goes into effect, to the headquarters of either of the exhibitors' organizations it would give us some intelligent figures and something upon which to base an appeal in December, at least for the exemption of tax on ten-cent admission.

The exemption of five-cent admissions only was in my opinion a mistake. Five, 10, 15 and 25-cent theaters should have been exempted or no theaters should have been exempted. It is not the best thing for a business which is trying to elevate itself to encourage their lowest form of work and place the burden upon those who are trying to raise the standard.

Opinions of Prominent Chicago Men

Joseph Hopp, president Chicago branch, and vice-president of the M. P. E. L. of America:

With the increased cost of all of the necessities of life and all the other war taxes, this tax on the people's chief amusement will come as an added burden on them and will decrease attendance at theaters. It will also be an added burden on the exhibitor who already, in many cases, has had to meet an increase in the Union scale of prices paid to employees, has had to stand the great hardship of the big increases in the cost of film service, has had to meet the problem of the music tax and now this new 10 per cent tax will in some cases force the smaller theaters out of existence.

The exhibitors are thoroughly patriotic. They have for three years been paying a war tax to the government and have thrown open their theaters to the "four minute men" and given their screen over to aid the government in many ways. In consideration of all these things, the least Uncle Sam could have done was to adopt the senate version of the war tax, exempting all theaters not charging 25 cents or over for admission. The new tax will seriously affect the business and will make it difficult for many theaters to continue.

Canadian theaters are able to continue successfully in spite of the same war tax there, because there are much fewer theaters there than in this country and each house has a larger clientele to draw from.

Aaron J. Jones, president Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago:

I don't believe the 10 per cent amusement tax will affect the theaters seriously. Patrons understand the matter and they have to pay war taxes on other things, so I do not believe it will greatly affect the attendance.

The best method of administering this amusement tax is unquestionably by means of the separate roll ticket for the tax furnished by the government. This method is successfully used in Canada. I have had some correspondence with the Department of Internal Revenue at Washington on this matter and have made the above recommendation. Up to date, however, no decision in this regard has been reached.

Max Ascher, Ascher Brothers:

The 10 per cent tax will have a great deal of effect upon the attendance at picture houses. When you consider that a person must pay seventeen cents under the tax to go to a theater which now charges him fifteen cents, it is bound to hurt attendance.

The separate ticket for the tax is absolutely the only way in which the matter can be efficiently handled.

Joseph Trinz, Lubliner and Trinz:

I don't believe it will have a serious effect on theaters or the attendance. The best way to handle it would be, it seems to me, to have separate tax tickets.

Alfred Hamburger, Continental Theaters:

I think the tax will hurt business considerably. I hope not, but I think it will. People dislike to use two coins or to buy two tickets to enter a theater.

William J. Sweeney, secretary M. P. E. L., of America:

It is very hard to tell what the effect of the tax will be. You know there are some people who won't break a nickel to buy a paper and the same people will stay away from theaters, if they have to buy two tickets.

---

As reflecting the extreme satisfaction of motion picture exhibitors everywhere with the O. Henry photoplays distributed by General Film Company, an unsolicited testimonial from one of the largest theaters in the country has been received with much gratification by General Film. The endorsement is from L. H. Becht, president and manager of the Mall Theater, Cleveland.

This Will Save You Music Money

NEXT to the government war tax on admissions the most important problem for the exhibitor right now is the music tax.

There is a way to avoid this added burden in a legitimate way. That is by refusing to use the music published by the Society of Authors, Publishers and Composers, the organization which has imposed the tax.

You will find on page 803 in this issue a new list of music which may be used without any tax complications whatever. This is an addition to the first list compiled officially by the Chicago Branch of the M. P. E. L., published in MOTOGRAPHY last week. If you missed this first list of non-taxable music write "MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago," and a copy will be sent to you by return mail.

A Garden Studio

In the midst of a lovely garden in California, and occupying the house, buildings and grounds of a large private estate in Hollywood, Los Angeles, the beautiful new studio of Lois Weber is unlike that of any other motion picture studio as are the plays which she produces. Just as she determines that there should be an unusual and wholly distinctive quality in her forthcoming productions, so Lois Weber determined that there should be a distinctive atmosphere about the studio in which they are to be filmed.

In converting an estate in the residential district of Hollywood into a motion picture studio, Miss Weber has realized a long cherished ambition to have a place for a workshop where it would be a pleasure to work. The residence itself now forms the administrative building, the gardener's house has become a finely equipped laboratory, while yet another cottage contains the art department's offices. One of the largest and best equipped stages in California has been erected across the entire width of the property.

Exhibitors in the heart of the West are just as alert and alive as any in the country. A good example of an up-to-date house, run in top-notch style, is the Strand, of Livingston, Montana. Two views of this model house are shown above.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

The Silent Battle, with J. Warren Kerrigan (Bluebird)—"This is a picture that all liked. Is up to the usual Bluebird standard."—W. A. Clark, Jr., Elite Theater, Golconda, Ill.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"It has been some time, owing to illness and business, since I have been able to contribute to your most commendable 'What the Picture Did For Me' department, but yesterday and the day before I presented 'Polly of the Circus' to my customers and I feel it my duty in the interest of better films to take time to tell the world that here is a picture production that will please any audience any time. Convey through your valued columns my congratulations to Mae Marsh and Goldwyn Pictures, Inc. Exhibitors, give this picture an advertising campaign of class (not circus) and increase your orchestra, having them play plenty of the old circus galops, and you will have an entertainment that will stand for any reasonable increase in admission. When I see a worth-while film like 'Polly of the Circus,' I feel like boosting the good work along."—R. F. Woodhull, Baker Theater, Dover, N. J.—Refined presentations in a mixed neighborhood.

Heart and Soul, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"Star draws well; picture great; people unusually well pleased." —W. H. Youngblood, Greenland Theater, Greensboro, Ga.—High class patronage.

The Primitive Call, with Gladys Coburn (Fox)—"The star's first appearance at Silverton and it was a success."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Love's Law, with Joan Sawyer (Fox)—"Excellent staging. A good drawing card."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Skinner's Bubble, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"This feature is unusually fine and caused general remark on its excellence."—Rosa Marquis, Lyric Theater, Clarendon, Texas.

The Ladder of Fame, with Harry Watson, Jr. (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"A crazy comedy that seems to please."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Barker, with Lew Fields (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Very good. Fair business. Should draw well."—William Dabb, Lyric Theater, Shenandoah, Pa.

By Stork Delivery, with Mack Swain (Keystone) —"Not quite as good as average."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

An Oily Scoundrel, with Fred Mace (Keystone)—"A comedy with a plot. Good."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Cactus Nell (Keystone)—"Above the Keystone standard—great."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Safety First Ambrose, with Max Swain (Keystone)—"Went over big. Kept them going every minute. A good one."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Love Comet, with J. Belmont (Keystone)—"A corking good comedy."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

King Bee Comedies, with Billy West (King Bee) —"Have played four and they are well liked. Kids watch for them eagerly. West is a good bet and brings good houses. Photography fine; direction by Arvid E. Gilstrom great. Fine, snappy slapstick. Nobody laugh-proof with a West film in sight."—A. E. Finch, Strand Theater, Kansas City, Mo.—High class neighborhood house.

The Slacker, with Emily Stevens (Metro)—"Great. Capacity business. Don't be afraid to run this feature.

It will draw anywhere."—William Dabb, Lyric Theater, Shenandoah, Pa.

The Slacker, with Emily Stevens (Metro)—"At first we would classify this as fairly good, but Emily Stevens over-acts and, in our opinion, is very poorly cast in this play. Financially O. K. This is not Cabanne's best, however."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"Believe me, this is some picture. It will knock a home run to any box office. This star is excellent and a favorite here. I say he is a winner. This is a very interesting comedy-drama, a picture that gets the audience right from the start and holds them with a laugh and a roar to the finish and that counts. Don't be afraid to book this one. It is a repeater."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"Very good. Audience well pleased. Drew a big house. A box-office attraction."—William Dabb, Lyric Theater, Shenandoah, Pa.

Their Compact, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"Audience was not pleased. Business just fair. Bushman is not popular in this neighborhood."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Shackles of Truth, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"This went over well to a good business. Everybody here seems to like Russell. He always puts the picture over."—S. A. Campbell, Electric Theater, Bixby, Okla.

Her Country's Call, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"A fairly good picture, but this star has never succeeded in bringing me any money."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Queen X, with Edna Goodrich (Mutual)—"Picture better than Reputation. The star does not seem to have learned the art of make-up for the screen and leaves her face too pallid."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Fighting for France (Mutual)—"A very good picture for an educational. Film not in the best condition; badly scissored; poor ending."—C. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in MOTOGRAPHY's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

Reputation, with Edna Goodrich (Mutual)—"A very good picture which played to a pretty good audience and pleased everyone."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Charity Castle, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"This did not please our patrons and business was poor. I think the cheaper productions Miss Minter has played in hurt her drawing power in our neighborhood."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Highest Bid, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"A good drawing card and a fine picture."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Whose Wife? with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"A very interesting picture. Our patrons thought it great. Attendance fair on account of bad weather."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Captain Kiddo, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"Played this picture to a full house in competition with The Birth of a Nation. It's great."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Iron Heart, with Frederick Warde (Pathe)—"Excellent picture. Business good. The scenery is great."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

May Blossom, with Pearl White (Pathe)—"This is a wonderful hand-colored picture. It deserves all the praise one can give it. I would suggest to fellow exhibitors to book it. It is full of action and holds your attention from start to finish. Don't be afraid to book this great star in this picture. The audience liked it and went away talking about it. Please make more like it. Do not hesitate to commend it."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Luke, Patient Provider (Pathe comedy)—"I must say that Luke is great. This went over like a whirlwind. I can't say too much for Luke. Many stunts and a laugh or a yell every second. He is all right. Don't be afraid to book it."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Her Beloved Enemy, with Doris Grey (Pathe)—"This is a wonderful production, an exceptionally fine picture. The story carries a good lesson. It holds the interest from start to finish. Boost it."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Oh Doctor, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"If 'Fatty' expects to get the money, he will have to whip up some. This picture is far below par."—H. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Hostage, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"We had a dull night with this and I blame it to the meaningless title. Therefore what benefit is there to you fellow exhibitors when I say that the picture is good?"—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Kiss for Susie, with Vivian Martin( Paramount)—"A silly title which cost us many admissions. Producing companies hiring stars at fabulous salaries should pay more attention to titles given their plays."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Out of Darkness, with Charlotte Walker (Paramount)—"Star well liked. Fine picture, up to the best. Well pleased patrons. Film in good condition."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.

Helene of the North, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"This is one of the pictures people talk about. Well liked. Film in good condition."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.

Bab's Diary, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"A very interesting picture. Photography and star very good. The people somehow got the idea that this was a serial, which injured its drawing power. It pleases everyone who sees it and is holding up well."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Hoodoo Ann, with Mae Marsh (Triangle)—"Just a fair picture that played to fine business on account of the publicity given the star recently."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Raiders, with H. B. Warner and Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"A fine picture to good business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Square Deal Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"Picture very good. Drew well. Extra large house."—W. H. Youngblood, Greenland Theater, Greensboro, Ga.

The Primal Lure, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"A fair picture, but not up to Hart's standard."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Weaker Sex, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"Very good. Miss Dalton is getting to be a good drawing card."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Ten of Diamonds, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"The kind of a picture I think would be classed as good in any kind of a neighborhood, and it is a box-office attraction."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Return of Draw Egan, with William S. Hart (Triangle)—"A Hart picture and a cracker at that."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Matrimaniac, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"A live picture with plenty of action."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Crab, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"A good picture with fair drawing power."—M. A. Clark, Jr., Elite Theater, Golconda, Ill.

The Honorable Algy, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"A good picture, but a disappointment at the box-office."—M. A. Clark, Jr., Elite Theater, Golconda, Ill.

A Regiment of Two (Vitagraph re-issue)—"Too old. Settings not up to present-day standard."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Transgression, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"Excellent. This star always draws big. Play this great feature."—William Dabb, Shenandoah, Pa.

The Woman Beneath, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"As good as the so-called 'selective star' pictures which we pay an exorbitant rental for. Get the ropes out the night you run this, as it is good for capacity business if you will let the public know that you are running it."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Brand of Satan, with Montague Love (World)—"A pretty good picture, but it did not please the audience."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Glory, with Juanita Hansen, Kolb and Dill (State Rights)—"Juanita Hansen with the splendid support of Kolb and Dill brought a fine crowd and pleased everyone."—Rosa Marquis, Lyric Theater, Clarendon, Texas.

Beware of Strangers, with Bessie Eyton and Thomas Santschi (Selig special)—"Very good. Played to good business. Good drawing power."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea (Universal special)—"Good business at advance prices."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

Serials and Series

The Great Secret, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"Picture and attendance can be summed up in one word, 'punk.'"—Levi Stevens, Bijou Theater, Alpena, Mich.

The Voice on the Wire (Universal)—"Great! Standing room only at 7 p. m."—Levi Stevens, Bijou Theater, Alpena, Mich.

The Shielding Shadow, with Grace Darmond (Pathe)—"Not holding the crowd at the eighth episode."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

Shorty Hamilton Series (Mutual)—"Book it. It surely gets them coming and going."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Mystery of the Double Cross, with Mollie King (Pathe)—"At the tenth episode and it holds the people better than the first."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Neglected Wife, with Ruth Roland (Pathe)—"Pathe is the king in serial work. This picture draws like a magnet."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Plan to Stop Film Thefts

At a meeting of the committee appointed to investigate film thefts, held at the office of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry on Friday, September 28th, definite plans were agreed upon with a view to putting a stop to the thieving and selling of films which has been constantly increasing during the past year through an elaborate system which is international in its scope, and has cost the industry upwards of a million dollars.

A sub-committee, consisting of P. A. Powers, treasurer of Universal Film Manufacturing Co., and W. W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., was appointed to complete the necessary arrangements and with full power to act on behalf of the producer and distributor branch of the National Association.

It is confidently expected that the activities of the alleged gang of film thieves will be seriously interrupted just as soon as the National Association committee's plan is put into effect. It is also proposed to secure the co-operation of the Federal authorities in checking up all film export shipments for the purpose of investigating the shipments and to put a stop to any stolen prints being sent out of this country.

TRAGEDY.

EVER reach in your pocket and get a hundred dollar bill when you expected to pull out a one?

We never did either.

But that's what Fatty Arbuckle did while he was on his trip last week from old New York to Chicago. At least Lou Anger swears he did, and we don't want to stir Lou's anger by suspecting the story.

Fatty had tipped the porter with that hundred—and the porter was so scairt to see it that he brought it back!

When the party got on another train, after a stop-over in Cleveland, where Fatty made a spooch at the Stillman, Anger told the new porter about the hundred dollar bill incident.

Then that niggah sho gave them service!

HIGH COST OF TIME.

Up in Max Goldstine's office the other day Fatty Arbuckle was tossing something white and bright up in the air.

"Whachagot?" we said.

He showed us a little plaything Hiram Abrams had given him. It was a platinum watch with Fatty's initials on the back in diamonds—a little bag of shells worth $1,500.

Charles H. Ryan of the Garfield Theater, 2844 Madison street, Chicago, is the latest exhibitor to receive an autographed photograph of Mary Miles Minter as a result of his contributions to Motography's "What the Picture Did for Me" section.

Get wise.

If you send in your report on pictures you're liable to get all kinds of bribes from the stars.

Let's hear from you next week.

THE Si-non Theater of the Simon-Nonnemacher Enterprises of Demopolis, Alabama (when you get through that the rest is easy) has an original method of encouraging good pictures.

Every week the house sends out the following letter:

To all Exchanges Serving our Theater: Greetings—We award at the end of each week prizes as follows:

First prize for best feature of current week.

Booby prize for poorest feature of current week.

After careful consideration our judges have made the following awards for the past week. First prize..... Booby prize.....

Trusting that we may have the pleasure of awarding you first prize next week, we are, with best wishes, Si-non Theater.

The firm operates, besides the Si-non, the Braswell Theater of Demopolis, and the Theatorium of Uniontown, Alabama.

We'll bet this method sort of tends to make the exchanges keep off the bottom of the list if possible. They wouldn't care particularly to have a booby prize letter passed around among exhibitors at the other exchanges.

And in time those letters would percolate to the home office.

THEY KNEED CHAIRS.

The opening of a New York theater failed to take place on the scheduled date because the chairs, ordered last May, and due to arrive four weeks before the first night, were sidetracked for war freight somewhere between Chicago and Manhattan.

They should have held the opening anyway.

It would be great to see a kneeless audience once.

Picture Shows, Music Taxes and Vaudeville

IF all the picture theater owners who also operate vaudeville houses should refuse to recognize music publishers who belong to the "Tax Club," the musical shoe would be on the other foot. For every dollar the music publishers hope to extract from the unnecessary expense column of picture theater accounts, they spend fifty in vaudeville theater song plugging. Vaudeville is more than half music—whether the public realizes that fact or not—and is one of the music publishers' biggest assets.

Last year we published figures showing that less than fifteen hundred exhibitors owned and operated a good half of all the picture theaters in the country. That means an average "string" of six theaters for each of these exhibitors—and some of them, we found, have many times that number.

A good many of these theater strings included at least one vaudeville house. Vaudeville and films do not mix as closely as they did once, but by way of theater ownerships they are still quite intimately related. The "big" exhibitor of pictures generally has a vaudeville house somewhere, and the vaudeville manager with more than one theater usually controls at least one picture house.

There would be nothing surprising in the situation if these exhibitors with vaudeville houses were found to be denying the members of the music publishers' tax club admission to their vaudeville stages. "Tit for tat," while not necessarily a golden rule precept, still governs a good many human actions. The exhibitor who was denied the use of certain music in his picture theaters by process of a prohibitive and arbitrary tax, might see nothing wrong in retaliating by way of his vaudeville theaters.

If anything like that did happen, and the music publishers of the royalty family found themselves shut out of the vaudeville theaters controlled by film men, it probably would not be long before we heard rumors of "royalty rebates" and special exemptions from taxation for the combination picture and variety men. It is not likely that the owner of a vaudeville house would have to pay anything for the use of music in his picture houses.

That, of course, would not be fair to the straight picture man, with no vaudeville weapon to enforce his rights. But it would help him indirectly, because it would be a blow to the music vampires, and we doubt if they could keep it secret. They would be suspected of rebating wherever a vaudeville owner ran royalty music in his picture houses. And that certainly would not make it any easier for them to get their music into the general picture houses.

Of course there is plenty of good music without the tax feature, and we published a list of it last week. The Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is doing good work in preparing these lists. With such assistance, there seems to be no logical reason why the exhibitors should use taxable music at all. It is easy to impose a tax on anything, but enforcing its use is impossible.

Stereoscopic Motion Pictures

THE motion picture principle had scarcely been discovered before a number of imaginative geniuses calculated what a wonderful thing it would be if the moving images could be projected in nature's colors—and could be given a voice—and could be made to stand out in relief like a stereograph. All of which only goes to show that there is nothing particularly new in the line of color pictures, or talking pictures, or stereoscopic pictures. The only distinction is that colored and talking pictures have been developed to as nice a point as one might wish; but pictures with true stereoscopic quality have never yet been presented.

The hard working promoters of color films and talking pictures have been grievously disappointed. Neither ever gained more than a faint flicker of public approval. The colored pictures, whether produced by ingenious mechanical and chemical means or by infinitely painstaking handicraft even more clever, pleased the people only for a thousand feet or so.

Experienced mechanics and famous inventors collaborated in the effort to synchronize phonograph records and celluloid picture strips, so that their activities should exactly coincide. They succeeded. But the public smiled and went back to its silent gray screen.

Here is a situation that deserves a little study. It is clearly a matter of what people like and do not like; and yet it fooled some of the oldest showmen. They fell for the color and the talking features; but the public did not. Why didn't they like it? Or why didn't the showmen know they wouldn't like it?

A good color picture is delightful of course. Color combinations strike pleasantly on every eye. Yet our color perception and our sense of action do not work together. When we make a still observation of an autumn forest, or admire a Chinese vase, we are conscious of color value. But when we watch a baseball game color means little except as an aid in indentifying the White Sox and the Giants. It would be just as good a show in black and white. Color appreciation, in other words, is esthetic and has no real connection with action. So color, while it has charm in itself, adds nothing to the real purpose of a motion picture.

Talking pictures never pleased anybody because they never fooled anybody. The inventors fondly imagined that if the sound and the image were tuned exactly together they would blend into a harmonious and artistic unit. But they did not, and never will. The picture is an illusion—that is its value. The voice does not support the illusion; it distracts from it and damages it. We might say that, illusion being a minus quantity, the sum of two illusions produces a lesser, instead of a greater result.

All this is more or less of a prelude to the subject of stereoscopic pictures. For that is number three of the trio of novelties suggested as improvements in the motion picture art, and at first thought might be mistaken for the same kind of an experiment.

Scientists have said that stereoscopic projection would always be impossible, because to get the stereoscopic effect the two eyes of the spectator must see two different images. Ordinarily, of course, that could not be done, because there are right eyes and left eyes all over the room, with no way of dividing them.

Nevertheless, the scientists were wrong on two counts. True stereoscopic projection can be attained with a stereoscopic film, a double projection, and a screen simply but expensively made of thousands of small lenses. And projection that looks stereoscopic, and therefore is, can be worked in other ways.

Showmen who have been bitten by the color-and-talk pictures would probably be shy toward stereoscopic films if they were offered a chance to show them. They would mentally group the three "stunts" together, just as we did in our opening paragraph, and discard the last because there was nothing in the first two.

But there is a difference. The color and talking effects were additions, but not improvements—as it turned out. The stereoscopic effect would be an improvement, but not an addition.

Pictures projected stereoscopically would be just like ordinary pictures made a great deal more attractive. The illusion—which, as we pointed out, is the real virtue of the picture—would be brought just that much nearer to perfection.

We hope the day will come when motion pictures as good as we have now—we are not asking for better—can be projected stereoscopically in any theater. The present form of projector is so near mechanical perfection, and the present picture is optically so good, that stereoscopy is apparantly the only improvement for which there is still room and opportunity. And motion picture ingenuity will rise, sooner or later, to that very desirable opportunity.

To Support Independent Publishers

CHICAGO LEAGUE VOTES TO USE ONLY NON-TAXABLE MUSIC

MEMBERS of the Chicago Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America have decided hereafter to play only non-taxable music in their theaters and thus avoid the excessive charge the Society of Authors, Publishers and Composers is endeavoring to wring from them for the use of its copyrighted music.

At a well attended meeting, held in their hall at the Masonic Temple, Friday, October 5, they unanimously agreed to put the kibosh on the taxable selections and let them go begging so far as they were concerned.

Plenty of Good Music

Many of the members expressed the utmost confidence in their ability to find plenty of good music in the non-taxable list, which the Chicago League has compiled and sent out to its members.

There was a good deal of disappointment manifest when President Joseph Hopp informed those present that several of Chicago's largest and most influential exhibitors, without waiting for the league to take action, had given in to the Publishers' Society and had agreed to pay the tax.

Attorney Hartman, representing the music trust, as it has been branded by a New York concern which is attacking it under the anti-trust law, informed Mr. Hopp just before the meeting that Jones, Linick and Schaeffer, Schaeffer Bros., Lubliner & Trinz, Schoenstadt & Sons, Katz & Ballaban and Ascher Bros. had already capitulated and come to terms with the society.

This bad news hit the gathering right at the opening of the meeting, and for a time wrapped their determination to fight the tax in a verbal wet blanket. Gradually, however, the blow lost its sinister effect as the discussion progressed and the exhibitors began to realize the possibilities that might eventuate as a result of succumbing to the boot and screw tactics of the composers and publishers.

To Fight To Last Ditch

They finally decided it would be better to fight the thing to the last ditch than bow to the exorbitant levy. A committee consisting of George Laing, G. D. Hopkinson, Jacob Cooper, Sam Gold and Ludwig Siegel was appointed to go to the exhibitors who had agreed to pay the tax and show them the folly of their way in an endeavor to bring them back into the fold.

Although it was considered doubtful as to whether anything could be done to head in those who had strayed, members thought the attempt should be made anyhow.

After informing the assembly of the purpose of the meeting, President Hopp called upon Fred Laing, chairman of the music tax committee, to start the ball rolling.

In his speech Mr. Laing said, "Our only hope is in concerted action. The court has upheld the Publishers' Society in the east, so we have slight chance of beating them through the courts. One thing, however, is certain in my mind —and that is that we can't use their music and fight it. In order to beat them and bring them to their senses we must boycott the taxable music and instruct our pianists, organists and orchestra leaders to make their selections from the uncopyrighted compositions. The non-taxable list contains only one-tenth of all the music published but it will suffice. It must, for I think there is little doubt but that the society will soon see the mistake of trying to tax us for advertising its wares, and if we present a solid, united front and concertedly refuse to play its stuff, it will have to give in."

W. E. Heaney, who spoke just before Fred Hartman's motion to throw the question before the house, brought home the seriousness of the fight when he said, "The revenue of ten cents a seat is merely to bring in a first trench fighting fund. If they get us to pay that they will have us making the rope with which they later expect to hang us. Now is our only chance to fight.

10 Cents a Day Only Starter

"If we don't take this opportunity it will be too late. After we once pay the tax we are gone. The independent publishers, outside of the society, are waiting to see how we are going to accept the levy. They are watching to see whether it is going to be worth their while to stay out. If the Publishers' Society gets the independents they can ask anything they want and we'll have to pay it. That 10 cents a seat charge is just a trial. If they get that and secure the co-operation of the independent publishers also, what is to prevent them from raising the tax to a dollar a seat or anything else they like?

"If we are going to do anything we must act now and act together."

When the vote was finally taken on the question as to whether the society would support the independent publishers or use the taxable music the Chicago men voted unanimously to use only the non-taxable music in their houses.

Picture Showmanship Superior Says Goldfish

Goldwyn Head Thinks Screen Is Better Exploited Than Legitimate Stage—Gives Evidence to Prove It.

THAT the motion picture exhibitors of America strive harder to gain and come nearer to success in attaining the full showmanship values out of their picture attractions than theatrical managers obtain from plays presented in their theaters, is the belief of Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who is himself responsible for many innovations in screen production.

"If you will carefully analyze the situation in the first two hundred cities of America, or several hundred additional towns and cities," says Mr. Goldfish, "you make the following significant discoveries:

"First, you will find that motion picture advertising in the daily newspapers is from two to ten times as great as the advertising of theatrical attractions. This means, of course, that, independently of their natural attraction and popularity with the public, motion pictures are more aggressively exploited than any other forms of amusement ever have been and doubtless ever will be.

"Second, you will discover that the exhibitor, the owner or manager of the motion picture theater makes a greater personal effort to gain public attention through the quality of his showmanship, through display of his inventiveness and ingenuity than the theatrical house manager reveals. A traveling theatrical company comes from New York bringing its own scenery and equipment whereas film arrives in metal containers with only a limited number of showmanship aides in the way of photographs and music cues and printed suggestions for exploitation. The individual exhibitor then applies to each picture as received his own thought and mental inventiveness and imagination. The result of this concentration results each week in some distinctive and attractive exploitation and setting within the theater that it is impossible to apply to theatrical productions.

"Third, there are more existing channels for the exploitation of motion pictures than ever existed for attracting attention to theatrical attractions. The motion picture is more nearly the universal entertainment than anything else could be because of its fractional cost to the amusement-seeking individual.

"I venture to say that few managers of any type have ever equaled the recent fine mounting and staging of 'Polly of the Circus' devised by S. Barrett McCormick and Robert Lieber at The Circle Theater, Indianapolis; of Harold Edel, managing director, and his associates at the Strand Theater, New York; of J. A. Quinn at The Rialto Theater, Los Angeles; of Herschel Stuart at the Old Mill Theater, Dallas, Texas; W. H. Smythe of The Strand, Seattle, and dozens of others with whose showmanship I am familiar. In Indianapolis Mr. McCormick and his aides staged a remarkably beautiful ballet divertisement worthy in every way of the larger opera houses of the country where such delightful spectacles can be achieved because of the larger stages."

Change of World Title

Little Madge Evans' newest World-Picture Brady-Made is called "The Adventures of Carol" instead of "The Little Patriot," as formerly. Like previous photoplays centering around "the World's kiddie star," this one carries a main story about grownups, with whose loves, sorrows and joys the adventures of the little girl are closely intertwined.

Essanay's Schedule Ready Up to First of Year

Essanay's Schedule Ready Up to First of Year—Taylor Holmes and Little Mary McAlister Appear Often on Winter Program of Perfection Pictures.

EXHIBITORS will find a veritable gold mine of Essanay productions in store for them at the beginning of the winter season. Essanay is far ahead of its release schedule, and a complete program of excellent subjects up to the first of the year is now ready.

Taylor Holmes, the stage comedian, in "Fools For Luck," the current release, heads the list. The picture is based on the Saturday Evening Post story, "Talismans," by Kennett Harris. It deals with superstition. Helen Ferguson, Essanay's sixteen-year-old star, plays the leading feminine role.

Little Mary McAllister in Essanay's "Young Mother Hubbard."

"The Fibbers," the next October release, is a comedy-drama based on married life, starring Bryant Washburn and Virginia Valli.

Little Mary McAlister, Essanay's six-year-old star, will appear next in "Young Mother Hubbard," a travesty on the old nursery story, written especially for the tiny actress by Charles Mortimer Peck.

Mr. Holmes will make his third screen appearance in "Two Bit Seats," the action of which was adapted from the American Magazine story of the same title, by Gladys E. Johnson. Marguerite Clayton appears in the leading feminine role. The picture deals with a young spendthrift who can't afford midnight suppers, and a girl who refuses to mulct him, but encourages thrift. The spendthrift reforms, then they call a minister.

There is plenty of action in "The Kill-Joy," in which little Miss McAlister, plays the only feminine role in the picture.

"The Small Town Guy," Mr. Holmes' fourth picture, is taken from the Munsey Magazine story, "The Picture of Innocence," by Freeman Tilden. Mr. Holmes depicts the role of a small town hotel clerk who unconsciously becomes the tool of bunco men, and Miss Ferguson plays the part of the sweetheart who rescues him.

Jack Gardner and Miss Ferguson play the leading roles in "Gift of Gab." Mr. Gardner does the best work of his career in this picture.

"Sadie Goes to Heaven," another Little Mary McAlister picture, taken from the story of the same name appearing in Good Housekeeping magazine, has a strong appeal and numerous humorous situations.

The foregoing pictures all have a screen time of approximately 65 minutes. They are being released on the Perfection Pictures program through the George Kleine exchanges.

In addition, new prints of the original Essanay comedies that made Charlie Chaplin famous will be released monthly. These include "A Jitney Elopement," "A Night in the Show," "By the Sea," and all the others on which the popular comedian made his reputation. New fables by George Ade, the noted Hoosier humorist, are being released each week. These pictures have a screen time of 25 minutes and are released through the General Film Company.

A picture in which Mary McLane, the gifted authoress of unconventional books, will play the vampire in one of her own works, "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," will be ready for release soon.

Bring Suit to Enjoin Infringement

The Fort Pitt Theater Company of Pittsburgh has begun action in the Southern New York District of the United States District Court to restrain Jack Goldberg and Alexander Stathopoulo from exhibiting "On the Italian Battle Front."

The plaintiffs, in asking for $50,000 damages, declare that the use of the latter title is an infringement on their copyrighted title, and that the release of a production purporting to be the official pictures of the Italian army is a violation of their property rights and unfair competition.

The bill of complaint filed by the Fort Pitt Theater Company, under the direction of which the American tour of "The Italian Battle Front" is being conducted, and by the Italio-North American Commercial Union, recites that during the years 1916 and 1917 the Italian Government officially authorized and supervised the taking of certain photographs of scenes along the battle front of the Italian army, depicting the actual war conditions, military operations and achievements of said army, and that these pictures were arranged into a ten-reel motion picture film, the sole and exclusive distribution of which the Italian Government placed in the hands of the Italio-North American Commercial Union.

The Union, in turn, entered into an arrangement with the Fort Pitt Theater Company whereby the latter corporation was given exclusive right, under the supervision and with the assistance of the Italian Government, to exploit these pictures in the United States.

The complaint further declares that the title, "The Italian Battle Front," which was adapted with the consent and upon the authority of the Italian Government, has been copyrighted, and that the Fort Pitt Theater Company has expended large sums of money in advertising this title. It is declared that "The Italian Battle Front" has been widely and favorably known to the public, and that this title has come to be associated with and to designate the officially approved and sanctioned Italian war pictures, and that for the purpose of benefiting from a favorable public opinion which has been created for this production, the defendants have "jointly conspired and concerted together to deceive the public and to deprive the plaintiffs of their just reward and profit by exhibiting 'On the Italian Battle Front,' which wrongfully, untruthfully and falsely purports to be scenes taken on the battle front of the Italian army."

The plaintiffs request the court to enjoin the exhibition of this alleged spurious product and also its advertising.

Chicago Amusement Company Builds New House

THE West End Amusement Company of Chicago is completing its splendid new theater at Madison and Cicero streets. The new house will be called the Madison Square and will seat 1,850. Pictures only will be shown. The building is a two-story structure, containing six stores in front and costing $200,000.

On the second floor of the theater will be a dance hall equipped with a mezzanine balcony and refreshment booth. The theater will be all in one floor. The house is of cantilever construction, which eliminates all pillars. The rotary converter used in the projection is one of the largest in the country, being five horse-power larger than the converter used in the Strand of New York. A Wangerine & Wickhardt giant pipe organ will be installed. It is expected that the house will open October 20.

The West End Amusement Company is composed of James B. Heaney, president; Wm. F. Merle, vice-president; H. J. Heaney, secretary; Wm. E. Heaney, treasurer.

Select Pictures in Seven League Boots

Big Organization Well Launched—Many Offices Opened and Contracts Signed in First Two Months of Activity.

ALTHOUGH Select Pictures Corporation has been in operation for less than two months a truly marvelous progress has been made by President Lewis J. Selznick and General Manager Arthur S. Kane in establishing the new organization.

Having taken over the home offices of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises in New York City, the company has already fully equipped branches in operation in nineteen cities of the United States, embracing the various centers of distribution for the motion picture industry. Exchange managers have been appointed to each of these branches, as well as a sales manager and a special representative with headquarters in New York.

Contracts have been signed calling for the distribution of the pictures made by Clara Kimball Young and her own company, the Norma Talmadge pictures presented by Joseph M. Schenck, the Constance Talmadge pictures presented by Lewis J. Selznick, and Alice Brady, a recently signed Select star, in productions, to be presented by the Select Company itself.

It has been arranged that each of these four stars will produce a series of eight productions during the coming twelve months, and all of these Star Series pictures will be distributed by Select.

In addition, Select Pictures has arranged to distribute a number of splendid single productions of the highest quality. These include "The Wild Girl," the first picture to be made by vaudeville's famous star, Eva Tanguay, which will be released during the next few weeks; the stupendous film drama "Lest We Forget," built around the sinking of the Lusitania and other international episodes, which will present Rita Jolivet as the star and which will be released during November; and the sensational drama of food control and price regulation "The Public Be Damned," now being shown.

Select has been particularly successful during its six weeks of sales campaigning in closing big contracts with exhibitors of prominence. Both Arthur S. Kane, the general manager, and Sales Manager C. E. Shurtleff have been subject for congratulation on account of the remarkable showing which their sales forces have made in the very short time that they have been operating.

Among the nationally known exhibitors and theaters which have been provided with the pictures of all Select stars for the coming year under these contracts are the following:—

New York, and vicinity, Marcus Loew chain of theaters; Philadelphia, Stanley V. Mastbaum's Stanley Theater; Boston, Marcus Loew's Orpheum, St. James and Columbia Theaters; Chicago, Sig Faller's Bijou Dream Theater, H. C. Miller's Boston Theater; Minneapolis, Finklestein & Rubens Lyric Theater; St. Paul, Finklestein's & Ruben's Garrick Theater; Cleveland, Marcus Loew's million dollar Stillman Theater; Columbus, Harry Hart's Colonial Theater; Cincinnatti, Libson's Strand Theater; Canton, Ohio, Ney & Bernower's Alhambra Theater; Youngstown, Ohio, Strunk's Dome Theater; Dayton, Ohio, Libson's Strand Theater; Pittsburgh, Olympic Theater; Erie, Pa., O. A. Potter's Columbia Theater; Altoona, Pa., A. Notopoulos's Olympic Theater; Providence, R. I., Chas. H. William's Strand Theater; Indianapolis, Ind., B. V. Bachus's Alhambra Theater; Denver, The American Theater; Ogden, Utah, H. C. Skinner's Alhambra Theater; Tulsa, Okla., M. M. Smith's Empress Theater; Fort Worth, Texas, E. H. Phillip's Egypt Theater; San Antonio, Tex., Lytle & Epstein's Empire Theater; San Francisco, Kahn & Greenfield's new Mission Theater, New Filmore Theater; Los Angeles, T. L. Tally's Broadway Theater; Santiago, California, R. E. Hick's Cabrillo Theater; San Jose, California, James Beatty's Liberty Theater; Atlanta, Ga., Sig Samuels Criterion Theater; Columbus, Ga., S. E. Possey's American Theater.

It is interesting to note in connection with the above listed notable contracts that through its New York Exchange Select has just signed S. L. Rothapfel's world-famous Rialto Theater in New York for first-run on the entire series of pictures made by Clara Kimball Young and her own company, the first of these productions, "Magda," being shown at the Rialto during the week beginning October 7.

Government Officials See Films of Camp Construction

A moving picture of the construction of a cantonment, from the basic blue prints to the arrival of troops, was shown recently at the War College at Washington to Secretary Baker and members of the general staff. The picture was prepared at the expense of the Board of Commerce of Little Rock, Arkansas, and shows the progress of the work at Camp Pike, near that city.

This picture is the first film shown of the complete process of making an army training camp and will be given general circulation.

The making of the cantonment at Camp Pike covered 52 days. During that time approximately 1,200 buildings were erected. Some 4,000 carloads of material were used. At one stage of the operations three buildings were put up simultaneously within a space of 38 minutes.

Another Week at Broadway

"The Fall of the Romanoffs," Herbert Brenon's latest screen achievement, did not come to a close at the Broadway Theater at the end of its past two weeks' run. The attendance required a continuance.

Memphis Theaters Must Close, Says Mayor

Police Given Positive Instructions to Allow No Theaters or Other Establishments to Open on Sunday.

By J. L. Ray
Special Correspondent for Motography.

ACTING under orders given him by Mayor H. H. Litty, Chief of Police James Quinlan, has instructed his force to arrest the manager and every employe of any theater or moving picture house which attempted to operate on Sunday in the future. Shoe stores, furniture and hardware merchants, cobblers, etc., also come under this order, but instructions issued to date do not make any provision for cigar stands and soda fountains.

Following Chancellor Francis Fentress' opinion which dissolved the injunction the theater managers had obtained against the city which prevented the police from closing these shows, the mayor proceeded to get busy and make final arrangements for carrying out the wishes of the court. Plans formulated two weeks ago were intended to be carried out in such a manner that the managers would be arrested and given the privilege of carrying the case to a higher court on appeal. This ruling was to have served as a guide for future action on the Sunday show question, which has created so much agitation recently. However, a misunderstanding occurred and plans were not carried out. No arrests have been made thus far, so far as the last outbreak is concerned.

Knowing that his job will be in danger and that he can be ousted at the hands of the taxpayers if he fails to comply with the law, the mayor has been firm in his latest orders to the police department. "Close the town," is what he said, and both Police Inspector Hayes and Chief Quinlan have signified their intention of carrying out the mayor's orders in every particular.

"They will be arrested if they open, and with them every employe of every amusement house which we find open," Chief Quinlan said. "We have no choice but to see that the Sunday closing order is obeyed. Our instructions from Mayor Litty are positive."

Contrary to the custom of the past, the amusement houses will not be permitted to reopen after the managers have been once arrested and have posted a forfeit, according to Inspector Hayes. "That merely is a convenient method for evading the law," said Hayes. "If the law says that they shall close, close they must. Our orders from the mayor are to keep the theaters shut, and we will do it."

Billie Burke in "Arms and the Girl"

Just about a week before she makes her debut in a new play at the Hudson Theater, New York, Billie Burke, the beautiful star of stage and screen, who was last seen in the Paramount production, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," will appear in the film version of the successful drama, "Arms and the Girl." This second Paramount picture starring Billie Burke was released October 8.

"Arms and the Girl," however, is more serious in theme, dealing as it does with those harrowing days at the outbreak of the Great War, when the hand of the Hun fell heavily upon helpless Belgium. As an American girl involved in the meshes of an espionage intrigue forced by a German general to marry the man she has avowed to be her affianced, in order to save his life, Billie Burke is said to have achieved a triumph in emotional acting coupled with that delightful and wholly charming delicacy of humor that has made her a favorite throughout the land. Thomas Meighan, one of the most popular of leading men, appearing in Paramount productions, supports Miss Burke.

Elizabeth Risdon, brilliant new star in McClure's "Mother."

Elizabeth Risdon, Star of McClure's "Mother"

Elizabeth Risdon, the young girl who plays the part of a woman past fifty, in the McClure picture entitled "Mother," by the well-known author, Eden Philpotts, has made gigantic strides in the short six years that she has been on the legitimate stage, and the two brief seasons she has been in film work.

Miss Risdon, although she has lived mostly in London, is really an American. She began her stage career at the Haymarket Theater, London. In America she has appeared in many Bernard Shaw productions, having recently opened in William Faversham's presentation of Shaw's "Misalliance."

Miss Risdon's first important appearance in the pictures was in "The Manxman," which recently ran a whole month at the Criterion Theater. Hall Caine saw her play "Gloria" in his play, "The Christian," in London, and immediately asked her to enter motion pictures in his productions.

In "Mother," Miss Risdon has the part of a dear old lady much misunderstood and maligned by her own children, but in the end, just before it is too late, they come to realize her great worth.

Back Up Our President

BY DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.

OUR Government has called for subscriptions to the new Liberty Loan.

Every citizen of our land should consider it a privilege to do his or her bit towards financing our country during this terrible war—the losing of which would mean practical oblivion for every one of us.

There are about twenty million families in the United States of America. A subscription of two hundred dollars per family to the new Liberty Loan would total four billion dollars. Many families can not spare two hundred dollars. But every family can and should subscribe fifty or one hundred dollars or more, according to their means.

It is more than a public duty. It is the one best and surest investment any man or woman can make. Uncle Sam guarantees it. And that insures a fair interest return—in fact, it is a perfectly safe, remunerative way of lending one's money.

I do not believe the majority of our citizens realize the tremendous moral effect that a nation-wide, unanimous, every-last-one-of-us, subscribing to this loan would have with our enemies and the immense stimulation it would give to our Allies.

We must win.

We must back up our President and Congress.

So come on—let's do it the way we should and everybody chip in his bit towards the raising of this new Liberty Loan!

Fatty Arbuckle Hesitates a Day in Chicago

On his way to the Pacific coast, where he will continue to produce two-reel comedies for Paramount, Fatty Arbuckle spent October 4 in Chicago. With him were Lou Anger, manager of the Comique Film Corporation, as Fatty's company is called, and Herbert Warren, who has charge of the fun-making scenarios. The latter has just married Valerie Bergere, the well known stage star of New York.

Fatty drove home one vital point during his conversation with Motography's representative when he said, "A picture is only half done when it reaches the exhibitor. At least 50 per cent of the value and pulling power of the picture depends upon the way in which it is advertised and presented. Music is the most important thing of all in showing a picture."

Mr. Arbuckle's company is to work in the Balboa studio, at Long Beach, which has been leased for the coming season. In the spring, Fatty will make a five-reel comedy of foreign origin, under the direction of Julius Steger.

During his stay in Chicago, Mr. Arbuckle was entertained by Manager Max Goldstine of the local Paramount office.

Stars in Triangle's October 14 Releases

Margery Wilson Featured in "Wild Sumac," Picture of Canadian Northwest, and Roy Stewart in "One Shot Ross"

THE triumph of justice over lawless brigandry, and romance among the great woods of the Canadian Northwest are motifs which promise a strong Triangle program for October 14, when "One Shot Ross" and "Wild Sumac" are released.

Surrounded by the genuine article in cowboys, Roy Stewart undertakes to clean up a western settlement infamous for its wild disregard of law and order. His direct methods of dealing with offenders earn him the title of "One Shot," and as the vigilante of the community, he comes in for a deal of admiration and necessary bloodshed. But when his unerring aim of authority brings sorrow to a little child, he decides to pull stakes for a camp where eternal vigilance is not the price of safety. The hold-up of the outward-bound stage brings him under the shelter of the Sheridan roof, and sows the seed of a pretty romance in which the famous gunman uses his skill to avenge a father's murder and rid the earth of a rival. Supporting Stewart in this new western drama are Josie Sedgwick, as Mary Sheridan, and Jack Richardson, whose "bad men" characterization gives the familiar "gambler of the screen" an opportunity to desert his faro table for a time.

In the second release of the week, "Wild Sumac," Margery Wilson has an unusual opportunity to adapt her personality to the character of a fair young gypsy of the big woods, untamed and unguided, who is charged with a murder of which she is innocent. The long arm of the royal northwest mounted police figures prominently in this story as the half-breed bootlegger is brought to justice and the girl Sumac's true identity revealed. Her thrilling rescue from a burning pyre and a realistic man-battle rivalling in its intensity of emotion the famous fight scene in "The Flame of the Yukon," are high points in the wistful love story. Jack Cunningham prepared the scenario from the story by Elaine Sterne.

On the Triangle Komedy program for this week are "Their Love Lesson" and "A Prairie Heiress," both one-reelers. The Keystone feature, "Pearls and Perils," concerns a maze of trouble started over a string of pearls.

Army Cantonments Provide Big Amusement Field

The film men and legitimate theater men of the country are now reckoning with the fact that the war with Germany has created twenty-eight new cities in the United States, with an average population of 40,000 each. These cities contain a total of about one and a half million young men, all of whom have healthy appetites for amusement and have the money to spend for it.

At most of the cantonments either the government or the Y. M. C. A. is providing pictures for the men. However, in some cases exhibitors have established theaters nearby and have made money. Some of the eastern theatrical magnates are planning vaudeville circuits also.

Abrams and Schulberg in West

Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, and B. P. Schulberg, general manager, have arrived in Los Angeles, thus completing the first leg of a trip whose itinerary includes visits to every city in the United States boasting more than 50,000 inhabitants. The two travelers were met at the depot in the City of Angels by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who has himself arrived in the Coast metropolis only a couple of weeks before; and Herman Wobber, Western representative of the company.

"Among other important matters that I must take up while here," said Mr. Abrams, "is that of making additional productions in the West. I will take this up with Mr. Lasky at once. Weather conditions will render this course advisable for outdoor productions to a large extent."

"Mothers of Men" Ready

Willis Robards, who recently brought East the great Suffrage propaganda picture, "Mothers of Men," has been making some important changes in the arrangement and titling of the picture, and now has it practically ready for the market. The play has attracted much attention in women suffrage circles.

General Has "War News Weekly"

AN announcement of much interest is that General Film Company will act as exclusive distributor for the "American War News Weekly," one-reel subjects dealing with military and naval activities of the United States. This new arrangement began with the twenty-fifth number of the "American War News Weekly," dated October 5.

The "American War News Weekly" is edited from the work of some thirty cameraspondents in this country and Europe, who are doing highly creditable work in providing a high grade graphic weekly of patriotic and topical interest. The activities of the fighting forces, important events in the preparedness movement, patriotic demonstrations and many other events dealing with America's participation in the war are shown each week in these series. As the time approaches when the first overseas army will soon be in the trenches, this graphic weekly is beginning to attract even more attention, and the weekly releases are being followed keenly by the general public. Captain Robert E. Reynolds, well known in army circles, is the editing director of the "American War News Weekly."

A series of new exhibitors' helps has been prepared by General Film. These include twenty slides for advertising purposes, two stock posters and a weekly one-sheet, printed in red, white and blue, in which the four leading subjects are headlined.

Distribute American Films in Europe

President Wilson, Through National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, to Appoint Overseers of Exported Films

ONE of the industry's greatest contributions to the war is the volunteer offer of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, through its War Co-operation Committee, to appoint several of the best known film company executives in this country to have entire charge of the distribution of American films in Russia, France and Italy during the period of the war.

European war pictures will also be included in the plan, which is to be worked out in conjunction with the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, which is erecting hundreds of buildings in these European countries for the entertainment and recreation of the soldiers.

American Cinema Commission

In response to a personal request made by President Wilson during a conference with President Brady, Arthur S. Friend, P. A. Powers and J. A. Berst, at the White House, President Brady called a general meeting of the industry. It was decided to organize the American Cinema Commission in Europe under the supervision of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. President Brady then called for volunteers for the commission. P. A. Powers, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was unanimously chosen as the commissioner for France. Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph V. L. S. E., was requested to take the commissionership for Russia. J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., was chosen for the Italian commissionership.

It was the consensus of opinion that an American commissioner should be chosen who will have under his sole jurisdiction the selection of all the films to go to these countries, as well as the appointment of assistants and a staff which will be immediately organized for this purpose. Jules E. Brulatour, representing the Eastman Films and treasurer of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, was the unanimous selection for the head of the American Cinema Commission, with headquarters in the United States. Mr. Brulatour reported that he had talked over the long distance telephone with George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Company, at Rochester, N. Y., who volunteered the fullest co-operation possible from the company's organization in France in connection with the distribution of films in that country.

Select Millions of Feet of Film

In connection with the great task which is placed before the American Cinema Commission is the selection of millions of feet of film which is to be sent abroad. There were several volunteers to assist Commissioner Brulatour in this country, among them being Samuel R. Rothapfel of the Rialto Theater; Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Samuel Goldfish, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; B. N. Busch, World Film Corporation, and Al Kaufman of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

President William A. Brady presided at the meeting which was attended by the following:

William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; W. W. Irwin, Vitagraph V. L. S. E.; Lewis J. Selznick, Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Samuel Goldfish, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; Ricord Gradwell, World Film Corporation; W. R. Rothacker, Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., of Chicago; P. A. Powers, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Samuel R. Rothapfel, Rialto Theater; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Films; Lee A. Ochs, National Exhibitors' League of America; Louis E. Blumenthal, Exhibitors' Trade Review; William Wright, Kalem Company; Al Kaufman, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Fred Beecroft, Motion Picture News; Peter Jeup, Detroit, Michigan; R. R. A. Mosher of Buffalo; Charles C. Pettijohn, American Exhibitors' Association; Alfred S. Black, Rockland, Maine; Robert W. Priest; Mark Vance of Variety; Sam Spedon and George Blaisdell of the Moving Picture World, and Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott.

President Brady is to arrange for an appointment through Secretary Tumulty so that he may present the members of the American Cinema Commission to President Wilson very soon.

Three Authors Added to Universal Forces

During the past fortnight, Universal has added three authors of considerable note to the scenario department on the coast. They are Charles Kenyon, J. Edward Hungerford and Captain Leslie T. Peacocke.

Charles Kenyon, who has recently completed several photoplays of note for Paramount, is the author of "Kindling," the play in which Margaret Illington created a furore on Broadway some seasons ago. He is a native of San Francisco, and worked on newspapers in that city before winning success in the dramatic field. Mr. Kenyon is now engaged upon a story which will run to five or more reels.

For the past ten years, J. Edward Hungerford has been one of the best known magazine writers in the country, and has also had books published and feature photoplays produced during that time. He has been assigned to the creative branch of the scenario department, under Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, and it is safe to predict that he will furnish many striking new ideas during the months to come.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke is already well known to Universal patrons, having been connected with the organization twice in the past. He is probably best known as the author of "Neptune's Daughter," the first great Annette Kellermann spectacle. Captain Peacocke is said to have completed the outline of another big marine story which has been O. K.'d for early production.

Frank Campeau Re-engaged by Fairbanks

Frank Campeau, who plays the part of "30-30" Madden in "The Man from Painted Post," the forthcoming Artcraft release, has been re-engaged by Douglas Fairbanks to appear in the next production under the direction of John Emerson. As a portrayer of heavy dramatic roles, Frank has few rivals, and because of his unusual ability was selected for the new cast, as contrast to the Fairbanks' smile and light comedy characterization.

Douglas Fairbanks and Frank Campeau, powerful character men.

On the speaking stage Campeau was known as "the villain with the eyes of fire." In addition to creating the character of "Trampus" in "The Virginian" he played important parts in a number of the Augustus Thomas, A. H. Woods and Charles Frohman productions.

It is very likely that Campeau will be permanently identified with the Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft photoplays.

Herbert Lubin Undergoes Operation

HERBERT LUBIN of General Enterprises, Inc., was removed from his home to the Stern Hospital, New York, last week, suffering from an acute case of appendicitis. An immediate operation was necessary, owing to the advanced stage of the disease.

A touch of sentiment was loaned to the affair through the presence of Dr. Engel as officiating surgeon, inasmuch as he is a brother of Joe Engel of the Metro organization and was called in at the urgent solicitation of Herbert Lubin, who was formerly associated with Metro as holder of the Canadian franchise. Dr. Engel, who is just in receipt of a commission as lieutenant in the United States army, left for his post after delaying his departure to superintend the operation of his friend.

Owing to the weakness of Mr. Lubin's present condition, caused by the unusual duration of the operation, no visitors will be permitted to see him until after Friday of this week, after which time he will be glad to greet his friends during his period of convalescence. Mr. Sawyer will handle Mr. Lubin's affairs during his enforced absence from his desk at the offices of General Enterprises, Inc.

Vitagraph Serial Goes Over Big

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Greater Vitagraph distributing organization, last week sent his personal congratulations to the company's sales force for the splendid work its members did in booking "The Fighting Trail," Greater Vitagraph's big serial of the outdoors.

When the home office statisticians finished their compilation of the bookings on "The Fighting Trail," their figures showed that the serial has been booked to numerous accounts in every city of the United States having 10,000 population and over, and in many smaller cities and towns. From New York City, with ninety-seven bookings, down to towns like Swaledale, Iowa, with a population of 235, practically the whole country has been covered.

Greater Vitagraph continues to receive a flood of telegrams and letters from exhibitors characterizing the serial as the greatest melodrama ever produced on stage or screen. The company's $150,000 advertising campaign on "The Fighting Trail" is being credited by exhibitors in many instances with contributing to the tremendous impetus given to the serial by release date.

In advance of the release of "The Fighting Trail," the Greater Vitagraph Company sent out a complete campaign book containing press material for each of the fifteen episodes, reproductions of paper, advertising cuts, a novelization of the story, star cuts, heralds, and numerous suggestions for "stunts" to be used in putting over the picture. This campaign book has been declared the biggest thing of its kind ever put out in the history of the industry, and, according to statements by Vitagraph, the exhibitors of the country have found it of inestimable value in their handling of the serial.

Visiting Exchange Man

A. J. Nelson, branch manager for General Film Company at Washington, D. C., was a visitor at the home office of General last week. He reports a strong demand for the O. Henry and George Ade releases, as well as an unusual amount of interest in the de luxe production of "Camille" with Helen Hesperia, just released by General.

Indiana Exhibitors Hold Successful Meeting

The Indiana State organization of the American Exhibitors' Association held a successful business meeting at Indianapolis, September 28, at which plans for the coming year were discussed. Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager, and Frank J. Rembusch addressed the meeting and outlined the policies to be pursued to build up a strong organization entirely on business lines and free from all entangling alliances with any other branch of the motion picture industry.

Film Stories Changing Rapidly

Frances Marion, Scenario Writer for Mary Pickford, Says Audiences Now Understand More Intricate Stories

FRANCES MARION, who is responsible for the screen adaptation of Mary Pickford's current triumph, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," as well as other Artcraft productions, is not only a writer, but an artist with the brush and pallet as well. Miss Marion's success in the motion picture field is partly due to her close observation of the public and her study of screen audiences.

"The scenario of today is vastly different from the scenario of five, three or even a year ago," said the Artcraft scenario writer recently. "In fact, it has changed considerably within the last six months and we no longer have to do our pictures in words of one syllable for an audience which has developed so fast that we can write more and more intricate stories and picture audiences can follow them.

"I am now working on a screen adaptation of Francis Hodgson Burnett's story, 'The Little Princess,' for Mary Pickford. As soon as that is finished we will do an adaptation of another famous story. The screen adaptation of 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm' was more difficult to write than one would imagine, because it will be recalled that there are no very thrilling or dramatic situations; however, I believe we have presented a story that has particular interest to the public."

On being questioned as to how she became connected with the photoplay world, Miss Marion said: "I just fell into the scenario writing game entirely by accident. I used to write short stories for the magazines and received several requests from motion picture companies for the screen rights to these stories, so I thought that if I had magazine stories that the screen wanted, a little study would enable me to write stories directly for the screen.

"I gave up illustrating and designing which I was then doing, and went in entirely for scenario work. I went with various producing companies before joining the Artcraft forces as scenario writer for Mary Pickford. My first work for Miss Pickford was an adaptation of 'A Poor Little Rich Girl,' upon which 'Our Mary' induced me to come West and write all of her scenarios, and there is no person in the world nicer to write for than Mary Pickford.

"Even scenario writers have their limitations and cannot think of everything, but Miss Pckford and Drector Neilan work right with one, and between the three of us we manage to evolve a story."

Triangle Production Goes Forward

Variety of Themes Keeps Enlarged Directorial Staff Busy—Olive Thomas Picture Nearly Completed—Elaborate Sets in "Regeneration"

WITH nearly a half score of directors at work on new pictures and five waiting to begin early work on new stories, production records at the Triangle Film Corporation's Culver City studio are threatened with a new high water mark.

Seven new screen dramas were finished last week, including "The Firefly of Tough Luck," "The Stainless Barrier," "Fighting Back," "Doing Her Bit," "The Fuel of Life," "The Guardian of El Dorado," and "Easy Money." Three of these are western dramas and all of the stories carry punches befitting their titles.

Director Lynn Reynolds, well-known in the picture world for his amazing feats with the camera, is working on "Up or Down?", in which George Hernandez is being featured. This is the thrilling story of the experiences of a young author and his ex-convict pal in the cattle country. Many scenes for the picture were located in the vicinity of Santa Barbara, which boasts of the largest cattle ranches in California, and incidentally, much beautiful scenery.

Rapid progress is being made on Olive Thomas' new picture, "Indiscreet Corinne," which is being directed by Jack Dillon. In this comedy drama Miss Thomas will be seen to advantage as a pampered young society girl seeking adventure in the guise of a masked cafe dancer who has always regretted her lack of a past. The way in which she acquires the lurid background, against her own will, is a novel feature of this story.

"Regeneration," E. Mason Hopper's latest creation, is heralded as an intense drama of New York life. A proud old man sees his hopes turn to ashes with the slaying of his worthless grandson, only to find an unexpected heir whose red blood is fused with the Van Duyn blue. One of the most elaborate settings ever erected on the Triangle lot at Culver City is used in this picture, an entire stage being covered by the interiors of the Van Duyan establishment. The rich furnishings are valued highly. One of the finest homes in the fashionable West Adams district of Los Angeles is being used for the exteriors and as many as thirty-two stock people have been used in one day by Director Hopper. Alma Ruebens, "the dusk jewel of the screen," is featured in this picture. Her costumes are said to be a revelation in fashions.

Director Thomas Heffron, who recently completed "The Stainless Barrier," a romance of the south featuring Irene Hunt, is now directing William Desmond in his newest picture, "Gentility." In this story a young Irish lad, a blacksmith in a little village in old Erin, suddenly finds himself rich through the death of an uncle in America. The adventures of the uncouth but wholesouled lad in a Chicago mansion, where he is trying to play "the lord of the castle," his breaks and quick recoveries and how he foils a polished Italian count and fortune-seeker promise episodes which will give the Triangle star ample opportunity to display his histrionic ability and manly good looks. "It's quite a relief to be an Irish lad after several weeks as an unshaven desert rat," was Desmond's comment on beginning "Gentility." In his last picture, "Fighting Back," the star was driven into hiding behind a growth of whiskers.

"Fanatics," in which J. Barney Sherry will be seen in the leading role, is rapidly taking shape under the direction of Raymond Wells. The apartment of an adventuress, furnished with rare tapestries, oriental antiques and teak wood masterpieces, will contribute rich atmosphere to this story.

Director William Gittens and his company, including Monte Blue, master swimmer and horseman, and Claire MacDowell, are at work in the San Diego harbor district on a water picture whose working title is "Everlasting Mercy." In this story of the sea, Director Gittens plans some feats of daring in the water, such as a knife fight with a shark.

New Wallace Reid Play

Baring German intrigue in America, portraying Hun plots to injure this country and its Allies, "The Thing We Love," which will be released in November by Paramount, with Wallace Reid as the star, supported by a splendid cast, will be a timely picture, besides possessing much merit and innumerable thrilling scenes and situations.

Costume Review in Eva Tanguay Production

WHEN Eva Tanguay makes her first appearance on the screen in "The Wild Girl"—which Select Pictures will release shortly—picture fans throughout the country will see the star of vaudeville in all the costumes which she has worn during her many years of sensational success as a vaudeville headliner.

In "The Wild Girl" Eva Tanguay is presented by Harry Weber. It is a Selznick picture and will be distributed by Select Pictures Corporation.

"The Wild Girl" is the story of a little southern heiress left by her dying father to the care of a band of wandering Gypsies. Owing to the immense wealth, which she is due to inherit, her childhood is singularly free from restraint, the Cypsy chief realizing her inevitable value to him and the tribe. In time, forced to an undesirable marriage, she runs away, and the succeeding events which work out the tangle of her life make a dramatic and consistent story. As Firefly, unlettered, childishly appealing and hoydenish at the same time, Miss Tanguay has been given a role at once congenial and in tone with her peculiar gifts.

Exhibitors, who show this first picture production of Eva Tanguay, have an opportunity to cash in on the tremendous popularity which this little artist has enjoyed for a number of years. There is no one on the stage upon whom such vast sums have been spent in publicity campaigns. The Eva Tanguay picture should make a clean-up.

N. A. M. P. I. to Help Trace Lost Shipments

Held Up by Incomplete Addresses—Express Company Objects to Holding Large Quantities of Unclaimed Film

CARELESSNESS in the addressing of film shipments is causing much loss to distributors, exchanges and exhibitors, and one of the important express companies, having been unable to deliver many shipments, has requested the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, through its transportation committee, of which William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, is chairman, to lend its aid in an endeavor to assure more careful attention to shipments in the future.

E. E. Bush, traffic manager of the American Express Company, in a recent letter to the national association, states that these shipments have accumulated so rapidly of late that they have no further space at their terminals in which to store them. At the present time two safes are utilized for this purpose, but the shipments have accumulated so much that a surplus has built up around the safe constituting a serious hazard. In fact, this official states the matter is so imperative that it will be necessary to enforce a rule in their classifications applying to the transportation of explosives and other dangerous articles by express which provides that when shipments of this nature are refused and cannot be delivered within forty-eight hours after arrival, they must be disposed of by storage in a safe place or by sale or destruction, when it is evident that storage on the company's property will be a source of real danger.

With a view to relieving this condition, the distributors and exchanges are offered the facilities of the national association. The transportation committee of the national association is working in complete accord with the traffic departments of all the express companies, which have extended every courtesy to the committee. This service through the national association should prove of inestimable value to the exhibitors and exchanges throughout the country, acting as a central clearing house and incidentally saving the shippers much trouble and inconvenience, as well as the expense of sending telegrams to hundreds of express agents throughout the country.

Through the efforts of the national association a shipment from a well known company valued at $1,054.88 was located and immediate delivery made as soon as the necessary information was given to the express company, which was holding the shipment owing to incomplete address. Film shipments valued at many thousands of dollars are now being held by the express companies and the exchange managers are requested to check up their lists, forwarding a copy of the same to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Times building, New York City, which will advise the proper officials in the hope of making unnecessary the destruction of the films owing to the hazard and danger to the public involved.

Stage Stars on Mutual Schedule

Juliette Day and Ann Murdock Both Appear in Second Screen Plays on Mutual's October 15 Release Sheet.

TWO stars of the speaking stage, each in her second Mutual production, are listed on Mutual's schedule of releases for the week of October 15. Ann Murdock appears in "The Beautiful Adventure," a picturization of the Charles Frohman stage success, and Juliette Day, star in "Upstairs and Down" and other Broadway hits, comes to the screen in "The Calendar Girl," a five-reel comedy drama.

Clever Comedy Drama

"The Beautiful Adventure" is a pretty, romantic love story. It deals with a pretty French girl, in love with her cousin, but engaged by a scheming aunt to a methodical, statistic-loving "stick," but wealthy. On the wedding morning the girl runs away with her lover to the old home of her grandmother in the country. Her grandmother makes the natural mistake of thinking the lover the husband. The resulting complications afford wonderful opportunity for comedy and provide Miss Murdock with a role wonderously suited to her ability.

Miss Murdock is supported in the picturization of the stage production by a majority of the members of the original cast, which Mr. Frohman himself properly selected to support her at its first presentation. Her leading man is David Powell. Other members of the original Lyceum Theater cast who are seen in the screen production are: Edgar Norton, Edward Fielding, Marcelta Esmond, Robert Entwistle and Anton Ascher. Ada Boshell, who plays the part of "Granny," is "the grand old lady of the stage" in America. She has been a member of Miss Maud Adams' company for the last eight years. Carl Sauermann, a member of the cast, has appeared for several years under the management of David Belasco. Kate Sergeantson, also a member of the cast, is one of the best known women on the stage in America and England.

The production was staged at the studios of the Empire All Star Corporation, which is producing the Charles Frohman plays in pictures for Mutual release, at Glendale, L. I. It was directed by Dell Henderson, stage manager of the original production at the Lyceum Theater.

"The Calendar Girl"

Juliette Day scored heavily in "The Rainbow Girl" and her second Mutual release, "The Calendar Girl," is equally interesting and equally well produced. Miss Day has been at work for several months at the American studios in Santa Barbara on a series of productions for Mutual.

"The Calendar Girl" deals with the experience of a pretty model in a modiste's shop, who goes to the beach to display an attractive bathing creation and becomes involved in complications with a newspaper reporter, a calendar printer and a rich and handsome young lawyer.

"The Lost Express"

"In Deep Water," the fifth chapter of "The Lost Express," Helen Holmes' latest Mutual-Signal photonovel, is released October 15. Heavy bookings have been reported on the new serial and they are increasing rapidly as exhibitors are discovering the success with which first run exhibitors are showing the production.

Two New Comedies

There are two comedies on the Mutual schedule for the week. Billie Rhodes appears in the third of her new series of Strand Mutual one reelers, "For Sweet Charity." She is supported by Jay Belasco and a capable cast. George Ovey appears in "Jerry's Jam," another of the highly laughable one-reel productions in which the humorous George Ovey appears as Jerry. "For Sweet Charity" is released October 16 and "Jerry's Jam" on October 18. Reel Life, Mutual's one-reel film magazine, is released October 18. Mutual Weekly, the Mutual-Gaumont news reel, is released October 17.

Goldwyn to Distribute Big War Spectacle

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation announces to the trade that it will distribute "The Freedom of the World," one of the biggest productions ever made as an outgrowth of the world war.

"The Freedom of the World" was months in the making in Philadelphia and Canada, and thousands of Canadian troops in maneuvers, training and camp evolutions are shown in the picture prior to the time when the locale of the story switches to the French battle-line. It is in every respect a tremendous patriotic drama that will make the blood run fast, and United States army officers believe it will prove one of the greatest of aids in stimulating recruiting all over the continent.

This production carries a story that through sheer mastery in production plus those accidents that so often make films sensationally big in spots where only strong drama is looked for makes it take precedence over the stars—though "The Freedom of the World" has as its star E. K. Lincoln, supported by Barbara Castleton and Romaine Fielding.

The rescue of a wounded soldier by a coward who is given the alternative of bringing the injured man back from a shell-swept plain to the safety of the trenches or of being shot for obtaining promotion and honors through falsehoods, is one of the big, gripping scenes in the spectacular eight reels of realism.

Goldwyn is now shipping trade prints of "The Freedom of the World" to all of its branches for screenings for exhibitors and will be ready to release the picture for showings quickly.

Constance Talmadge has begun work on another of her Select pictures. This is an original story called "The Honeymooners" and was written by Lloyd Sheldon.

Vitagraph Studios Busy

Six Companies Started on New Productions Last Week—Release List Nearly Completed to Middle of February

SIX companies, each headed by one or more well known stars, were started on new productions last week by Albert E. Smith, president of the Greater Vitagraph Company, who announces that the completion of these pictures will fill his Vitagraph release list to about the middle of February.

By the addition of a number of well known players to the Vitagraph lists, Mr. Smith has brought Vitagraph up to a point in production better than it has known in many months. He also is sticking firmly to his "best authors" policy, as demonstrated by the fact that four out of the six authors represented in the list of plays on work has just begun are world-famous writers. They include E. Phillips Oppenheim, Earl Derr Biggers, Robert W. Chambers and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Earle Williams, directed by Paul Scardon, was chosen for the stellar role in "The Hillman," the first story by E. Phillips Oppenheim to be put into production by Vitagraph. Mr. Williams is supported in the play by an unusually strong cast, including Miriam Miles, Grace Darmond, Denton Vane, Julia Swanye Gordon, Templar Saxe and Robert Gaillard.

Harry Morey, who has just recently returned from a month's vacation, is playing the leading role in "His Own People," written by William Addison Lathrop and directed by William P. S. Earle. Morey, noted for his wonderful strength and rugged physique, is ideal for the role he plays.

Alice Joyce, whose last picture was "The Fettered Woman," an adaptation from the Robert W. Chambers novel, "Anne's Bridge," is to be seen in another Chambers story, "Between Friends." Marc McDermott will be co-starred with her, it being the plan of Mr. Smith to make a combination of these two popular stars for a series of unusual productions. Tom Terriss is directing them in this feature, which is said to be one of the most powerful stories Mr. Chambers ever has written.

Corinne Griffith, Evart Overton and Ned Finley are to be seen in "Heredity," a novel by Rex Taylor. John Robertson, who has directed some of the season's most successful photoplays, is in charge of the production.

Edward Earle, Betty Howe and Eulalie Jensen are being directed by Wesley Ruggles in "The Agony Column," the famous story by Earl Derr Biggers. This story, which ran in the Saturday Evening Post, created quite as much of a sensation as "Seven Keys to Baldpate," another story of which Mr. Biggers is the author. In obtaining the rights to "The Agony Column," Mr. Smith feels that he caught the legitimate stage producers napping. It is said that certain managers sit up late into the night watching for the Saturday Evening Post in the effort to pick out promising stage material and get to it first. In this instance it would appear that the Vitagraph chief sat up later than the others.

Edward Earle and Betty Howe will be remembered for their work in "For France," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature which has proved one of the popular program releases of the fall season.

Mildred Manning, Wallace MacDonald and "Daddy" Charles Kent are the principal players in "An Investment in Petticoats," a story by Cyrus Townsend Brady which is being produced under the direction of Ashley Miller. This is Mr. Miller's third picture with Vitagraph, he having produced "The Princess of Park Row" and "Next Door to Nancy," in both of which Miss Manning and Mr. MacDonald were featured.

New Ethel Clayton Play

Ethel Clayton's new World-Picture Brady-Made will be published October 22. Its title is "The Dormant Power," and it shows the reclamation of a young man of real ability who has allowed himself to drift until he faces a desperate emergency. As this is about to engulf him, a little girl of the mining camp comes to his rescue with the money she has scrimped and saved to buy a piano, and this act of self-sacrifice arouses the manhood that is in him. Montagu Love plays the big male personage who is in conflict with the young fellow stirred from his inertia by the heroine.

Heyes and Benham in Emmy Wehlen's Support

Two prominent leading men, Herbert Heyes and Harry Benham, will appear in the support of Emmy Wehlen, the exquisite Metro star, in her forthcoming Metro wonderplay, "The Outsider." "The Outsider" is a screen version of Louis Joseph Vance's clever novel, "Nobody," which has been adapted for Miss Wehlen's use by Charles A. Taylor. William C. Dowlan is directing "The Outsider," assisted by Benjamin S. Kutler.

Exhibitors Assured Newspaper Co-operation on Serial

Newspaper co-operation with exhibitors, of distinct value in promoting a serial, is assured through a new department established by Edward A. MacManus, head of Paramount's serial activities.

Earl Gulick has been a special traveling representative for the "Who Is 'Number One'?" newspaper campaign, and his specific duties are to tour the United States, making arrangements with newspapers for special service and to see that behind every exhibitor showing "Who Is 'Number One'?" the Paramount serial, is all the strength and all the co-operation of the newspapers running Paramount's serial advertising and story.

Mr. Gulick has just returned from a transcontinental tour, visiting Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Des Moines, Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Indianapolis and other cities. In each he arranged for the publication of the complete Anna Katherine Green story in the leading newspaper.

In every city he visited Mr. Gulick made special arrangements for exhibitor co-operation, so that theaters showing the Paramount serial will have every possible aid from the newspapers.

Mr. Gulick will keep in personal touch with all cities throughout the country, concentrating his efforts on helping the exhibitor to get the maximum amount of publicity.

Because of this unusually valuable advertising campaign that Paramount is putting behind "Who Is 'Number One'?" exhibitors throughout the country, Mr. Gulick found, were ready to sign the moment they were handed a contract. They were eager to give the patrons a fifteen-week Paramount serial. Paramount's advertising campaign on "Who Is 'Number One'?" is more extensive and has a vastly greater pulling power than that of any other serial.

Laemmle Takes Active Control of Bluebird

HAVING finally arranged his otherwise extensive film holdings so that he will have time to devote himself to his favorite interests, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has taken over the active control of both the production and distribution of Bluebird photoplays.

The increased activities in Bluebird affairs, which Mr. Laemmle now assumes, as managing director, will involve his full participation in the most important advances the series has made since its establishment, marking a broadening of policy that has for some time been contemplated, and the introduction of innovations still to be announced. Every matter of policy, distribution, production and advertising, in all essential details, will, in future, have his personal attention.

Mr. Laemmle said: "Simultaneously Bluebird enlarges its original scope to encompass not alone the dogma, 'The Play's the Thing,' but goes further to enlist a star in every production. That we may fully exploit our attractions to the mutual advantage of Bluebird and the exhibitor there will be inaugurated on Oct. 15 a campaign of national advertising that will employ billposting in all of the more prominent cities in every state from coast to coast. The schedule for this advertising has been prepared; the contract for posting has been awarded in every town on the list and there will be Bluebirds flying in climates and localities where the bird of happiness has never previously been a-wing during similar seasons."

G. P. Hamilton New Triangle Director

G. P. Hamilton, veteran of the stage and screen, with twenty-three years' experience as motion picture and dramatic performer, producer and director, has been added to the Triangle Film Corporation's large directing staff at the Culver City studio.

At one time Hamilton was general manager of the St. Louis Motion Picture Company. Prior to that time he was production manager of the American Film Company and superintendent of the Essanay studios and factories in Chicago. He also served five years with the Biograph in New York and Los Angeles.

Goldwyn Announces Second Four Releases

Mary Garden to Have Distinguished Directors and Supporting Players for Screen Debut — Maxine Elliott Scores Success in "Fighting Odds"

GOLDWYN'S second four releases, just announced for the exhibitors of America, are as follows: November 4, Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley," by Mary Rider; November 18, Mabel Normand in "Joan of Plattsburg," by Porter Emerson Browne; December 2, Madge Kennedy in "Nearly Married," by Edgar Selwyn; December 16, Maxine Elliott in "The Eternal Magdalene," by Robert McLaughlin.

"Sunshine Alley" gives Mae Marsh a role unlike anything she has ever had before in her career. The role is as plaintive and charming as her most recent role of Polly in "Polly of the Circus" and in addition there is a whimsical note that gives her the opportunity to reveal again what a really remarkable actress she is. Audiences everywhere will be delighted to find that in "Sunshine Alley" Robert Harron, Miss Marsh's famous team-mate under Griffith, is again her leading man and his entry into Goldwyn Pictures is certain to please both exhibitors and the public.

"Joan of Plattsburg," is Mabel Normand's first Goldwyn Picture and it brings this delightful little comedienne back to the screen after an absence of more than a year. Her first Goldwyn Picture is a comedy with a big patriotic touch and thousands of soldiers at the Plattsburg, N. Y., camp take an active part in the picture. First announced, a few weeks ago, as "Joan of Flatbush," the title has now been changed at the suggestion of Miss Normand herself to reveal to the country now familiar with the Plattsburg name in the date-lines that there is a patriotic tinge to her picture. In the cast with Miss Normand are: Robert Elliott, Wm. Frederic, Joseph Smiley, John W. Dillion, Isabel Vernon and Louis M. Sturey.

"Nearly Married" brings Madge Kennedy before the public for the second time. This picture is being directed by Chester Withey and Miss Kennedy is supported by Frank Thomas, Mark Smith, Alma Tell, Richard Barthelmess and Hedda Hopper.

"The Eternal Magdalene," from Robert McLaughlin's sensational play, gives Maxine Elliott a tremendous opportunity to attract the attention of American audiences. The direction of this picture was in the hands of Arthur Hopkins. He has made an unusual production which will attract attention from the critics everywhere.

"The Eternal Magdalene," on being viewed by the censors in Pennsylvania and the city of Chicago, succeeded in winning their temporary disapproval, though Goldwyn insistently denies all of the points they make against this great morality play of the screen. Marguerite Marsh, Donald Gallaher, Chas. Trowbridge, Maude Cooling and Chas. Dalton support Maxine Elliott.

Exhibitors Find Way to Increased Prices

In the past couple of weeks reports have been received at the offices of Goldwyn Productions from exhibitors of that brand of pictures, announcing that they are successfully maintaining a raised schedule of prices, in some cases unprecedented in the given localities.

J. W. Dusenbery, of the firm of J. W. and W. J. Dusenbery, operating the Grand Theater at Columbus, Ohio, writes that the management is playing Goldwyn for week engagements at a substantial increase in prices, a top price of 25 cents for matinees and 35 cents for evenings.

W. S. McLaren, manager of the Majestic and Colonial Theaters, Jackson, Mich., makes a comment much along the same lines in his house organ, The Weekly Film News, under the heading, "Why the Goldwyn Pictures are 15, 25 and 35 cents."

Distinguished Aids for Mary Garden in "Thais"

The mystery hedging about the director selected for Mary Garden's first screen play, "Thais," has been solved. Not one director but two are to take charge of the famous diva's debut. They are Hugo Ballin and Frank Crane.

In addition to his directoral share in various Goldwyn pictures, Mr. Ballin has designed settings for the large proportion of the productions.

Mr. Crane is a justly popular director, whose most recent work has been the direction of Mrs. Vernon Castle for the Pathe organization. Mr. Crane's experience also includes work for the World, Universal, Thanhouser and Lubin companies.

These two men will collaborate in the making of "Thais," Mr. Ballin giving more attention to the artistic phases of the picture, beginning with the settings and ending with the composition of the figures in the scenes, while Mr. Crane will handle the technical direction.

The problem of finding an actor to play the leading part opposite Miss Garden in a manner to satisfy the star's very definite conception of the role, has been solved by the securing of a well known player of both stage and screen, Hamilton Revelle, for the role of the monk, Paphnucius. For many years Mr. Revelle has appeared in the distinguished casts of managers like Charles Frohman and David Belasco, and in support of such stars as Mrs. Fiske and Frances Starr. His screen career has been equally distinguished.

Crauford Kent, a long-time favorite with motion picture audiences, and last seen on the screen in support of George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones," has been engaged to play the part of Lollius.

Among others chosen for the long cast of "Thais" are Lionel Adams, who will play Cynius; Alice Chapin, for the part of the Mother Superior, and Margaret Townsend for a nun.

"Fighting Odds" Has Rousing Send Off

The metropolitan premiere of "Fighting Odds," which marked the screen debut of the stage beauty, Maxine Elliott, at the Strand Theater, New York, September 30, received commendatory notice from the critics.

Most of the papers devoted space to the achievement of the celebrated star in a new medium and not a little praise to the authors for the vehicle that they provided. The unusual settings created by Hugo Ballin, the artist, also came in for a goodly share of attention.

Excerpts from the New York reviews follow:

New York World: Miss Elliott screens very well, and registers as if she had grown up with the movies, instead of having retired from the stage several years ago and devoted herself to war relief since the world war started.

New York Times: The still radiant Maxine Elliott who long since left New York and the stage behind her, returned to town yesterday in a new guise, that of a motion picture star. In her first film, exhibited at the Strand, she is more than frequently a stunning figure.

New York Tribune: "Fighting Odds" is a mighty good story, everyone would go to see it anyway, because the first thing the prospective spectator asks of the one who has already seen it is, "Does Maxine Elliott look beautiful?" Maxine Elliott does look beautiful, and even an occasional flash of close-up failed to reveal the fact that she is not so young as "When We Were Twenty-One."

New York American: Miss Elliott is very appealing on the screen; her eyes are as eloquent as ever. She wore a series of gorgeous gowns, and was always beautiful, majestic, but human. The entire production was dignified, well acted, well directed.

New York Herald: Although she has been absent from the stage several years, Miss Elliott played before the camera in a way that overcame the difficulties of the film with the same enthusiasm that she showed at the beginning of her career as a star. Miss Elliott wore an amazing number of exquisite gowns, to the great delight of feminine spectators. The stage settings were equally in good taste.

Tender Exhibitor Farewell Party

Exhibitors and Exchangemen of Minneapolis and St. Paul Give Dinner to David D. Rodgers, Who Becomes National Organizer for M. P. E. L.

MORE than fifty exhibitors and exchangemen assembled at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, on September 28 to wine and dine David D. Rodgers, formerly of the Nicollet Theater, now beginning work as national organizer of the M. P. E. U. of America.

James Giloski, president of the Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest, was toastmaster. Everybody who attended was called upon for some little speech.

Everybody said something nice about David. Some of the brighter and more humorous remarks were furnished by Fred S. Meyer, representing the Universal Film Exchange, Clyde Hitchcock, secretary of the Association, Messrs. Deeth, Breilein, Rowe, Sobelman, Reisman, Chamberlain and others.

Mr. Rodgers responded in his usual capable manner and just before breaking up, the music tax was discussed pro and con by the various exhibitors, in which the exchange and supply men took an active part and offered their assistance.

Among those present the following exhibitors came all the way from St. Paul.

James Giloski of the Rex and Alhambra Theaters, Wm. Sobelman of the Gem Theater, H. J. Breilein of the Verdi, Faust, Victoria and Arcadia Theaters; Julius Reisman of the Dale, Geo. Cranstrom and Joseph Friedman of the Park, Chas. Campbell and Oliver Rowe of the Blue Mouse.

Minneapolis was represented as follows:

Wm. B. Watson of the New Garden Theater, H. P. Green, representing the five theaters of the Lake Amusement Company; S. A. Louis of the Rialto Theater Supply Company, Ed Hinz of the Cozy Theater, Clyde Hitchcock and B. W. True of the Princess, J. Barnett of the New Home, P. Hayes of the Nakomis, D. W. Chamberlain of the American Amusement Company, representing five theaters; L. Cone of the Metro Film Exchange, Geo. Fineberg and L. Frances of the Teco Supply Company, Wm. Deeth of the American Theater, Fred S. Meyer of the Universal Film Exchange and D. W. Rodgers.

Bluebirds Regular at Broadway Theater, New York

Through an arrangement made with Stanley Mastbaum by Carl Laemmle, managing director of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., the pictures on that favorably established program will be shown regularly at the Broadway Theater, New York, starting with Mae Murray's first Bluebird feature, "Princess Virtue," Oct. 21. After a week's showing of "Princess Virtue," the bill will change, Oct. 28, to "The Savage," a Rupert Julian Bluebird, with Ruth Clifford, the star, and Monroe Salisbury, featured as her leading man.

Quintuple Exposure

Only those who have studied photography or have gone into it seriously can appreciate the full significance of the announcement that in "Conscience," Gladys Brockwell's new William Fox production, there is one scene which required quintuple exposure.

Because of the difficulties to be surmounted, even triple exposure is exceedingly rare in motion pictures. This is undoubtedly the first time that as many as five different exposures were made for a single scene.

Brenon Offices on Hudson Heights

Since breaking off his relations with Lewis J. Selznick, Herbert Brenon has given up his offices in the Godfrey building and, with the entire staff of the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation, has transferred his offices to new headquarters on Hudson Heights.

His offices on the Heights have been fitted out with all modern equipments and have been built with the idea of increasing their size as necessity demands.

Mr. Brenon's idea in transferring his offices across the river is to have the business end of the corporation run in absolute connection with his workshop, and to provide light and airy accommodations for his staff.

Evaporated Milk Educational Film

A large Chicago food concern handling evaporated milk as one of its products has made a moving picture film showing how milk is evaporated. Thousands of quarts of fresh milk are wasted daily through housewives purchasing more than is needed, and the use of more evaporated milk is urged as a conservation measure. More than 1,200,000,000 cans of evaporated milk are consumed in the United States yearly, and the product is put up at milk-condensing plants situated in the dairy districts under sanitary methods, which insure quality and prevent spoilage and waste.

The film showing the process will be exhibited at colleges and universities, as well as to the general public.

Director Albert Capellani Signed by Metro

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, announces the signing of Albert Capellani, famous French director, to produce super-productions with famous stars under the Metro banner. This is the third prominent director to be signed by Metro within a week, the others being Frank Reicher, formerly of Lasky, and William S. Davis, recently of Fox.

Mr. Capellani came to America about two years ago, after serving the first year of the great war as an officer in the French army. He was relieved from duty through illness contracted at the battle of Soissons, and as war conditions made it impossible for him to continue his profession in France, he brought his family to America.

It was not long before Albert Capellani won recognition in this country as a master of screencraft. His French production of Victor Hugo's great work, "Les Miserables," was acknowledged to be one of the greatest motion picture masterpieces. As director for Clara Kimball Young, he produced her most famous successes, "The Common Law," for Selznick-Pictures; "Camille," "Trilby," and others for World-Pictures. His most recent production is "The Richest Girl," starring Ann Murdock, for Empire-All Star, and released by Mutual.

Mr. Capellani was trained as a director in the greatest of all motion picture schools, the old Pathe Company of Paris, a pioneer in the art. He was with this concern twelve years, or practically during the entire development of the motion picture, from the days of the three-hundred-foot comedies to the ten-reel spectacle.

Many exhibitors are printing attractive programs with the aid of the cuts borrowed from MOTOGRAPHY.

This big spectacle opens on Broadway, New York, on October 15 at the Lyric Theater. A long run for it is already assured.

Theda Bara in "Cleopatra" on Broadway

THEDA BARA will make her first Broadway appearance at the Lyric theater, in New York City, on Monday night, October 15, in the film drama, "Cleopatra," as portrayed by Shakespeare and Sardou. The picture is a most sumptuous production. It was photographed last summer in California.

Many months were spent in the filming of the subject. J. Gordon Edwards, one of the veteran directors of filmdom, who screened more than a score of Fox successes, including "Romeo and Juliet," was in charge of the picturized "Cleopatra." The scenario was by Adrian Johnson.

The completion of the drama, according to the statement by Fox Film Corporation, represents the co-ordinated playing of 30,000 men and women and a large expenditure in the erection of Egyptian and Roman cities and paraphernalia true to historical type.

The story depicted takes place in Rome and Alexandria and covers the period from Cleopatra's meeting with Caesar through the various episodes in her life, to her tragic death in Alexandria.

An elaborate musical setting has been arranged to accompany the presentation of the picture.

Bessie Barriscale on New Paralta Play

Bessie Barriscale and Raymond B. West have begun work on the filming of her latest Paralta Play, "Within the Cup," written by Monte M. Katterjohn, which will follow the release of "Madam Who" and "Rose o' Paradise."

Miss Barriscale will act the role of "Thisbe Lorraine," an erratic young literary woman and artist, who attempts to make a career for herself. The opening scenes are laid in the Latin Quarter in Paris and change to old Greenwich village in New York City, which has become the great Bohemian center of American artistic and literary life.

For several weeks Paralta has had scenic artists seeking locations and making sketches in Greenwich village under the guidance of noted artists and writers who make their homes in this unique little separate world of art and letters established within the greatest city in America.

Constant progression in value as entertainment, magnitude of production and artistic merit is the avowed purpose of the Paralta organization. Cost will be entirely disregarded to attain the desired result—actually great pictures.

In a recent number of the Hearst-Pathe News appear some very interesting scenes taken on board a Chilean submarine.

Community Pictures in Chicago Suburb

Riverside is a suburb of Chicago with a population of about 2,000. Twice moving picture concerns experimented with shows in the Town Hall, but they were abandoned, not having the support or approval of the village. Community gatherings at the school house had been found impracticable by the educational department of the Woman's club, and the idea of managing community pictures was evolved.

However, the thought of the films being educational was one which had to be overcome during the first few months. The committee made a special effort to secure donations for the equipment from everybody that all the community might feel an interest in the project. The Woman's club became incorporated under state laws in order to be the owner of the machine.

The "shows" have now been held for three years, with experiments in almost every direction, until the plan now in force is as follows:

Pictures every Friday night except during July and August, and four weeks during the busy Christmas season. Occasional special "shows" as on election night, for example.

Prices: Fifteen cents, and ten cents for those under sixteen years of age. The aim is to give for fifteen cents what it would have been necessary to pay 25 cents to see the previous week in the city, and not to make money but to give the best show possible for the price.

Bookings for about two months at a time are made with different companies by the chairman and a few of the committee.

Every show is in charge of three of the committee in turn. The secretary and treasurer of the committee maintains an account at the bank in the name of the committee and looks after the business end.

When the idea first started the club thought the busiest time would come in spending all the receipts judiciously. Those dreams were soon abandoned, and now the committee is thankful at the end of the year to come out with enough money in the bank to start another year.

Forty-Star Picture Free of Rental

Ten Companies Distribute Liberty Loan Production—Exhibitors Urged to Secure and Advertise Films at Once

COMPLETE plans for the distribution of the All-Star feature production which has been made for the purpose of boasting the second liberty loan have been perfected by the committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry appointed to co-operate with the secretary of the treasury in this important work. The production consists of five distinct episodes, each five hundred feet in length and of each of which there will be one hundred prints. Many national celebrities, including the President of the United States, appear in the picture together with more than forty of the greatest artists of stage and screen.

Handled by Distributors

Distribution of the finished product is placed in the hands of the committee, of which Adolph Zukor is chairman, the other members of which are Marcus Loew, J. B. Brulatour, W. W. Irwin and George K. Spoor. This committee has arranged for ten of the largest distributing concerns, all of which are members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, to handle the actual distribution of the pictures through their various exchanges. In order to avoid any possibility of confusion each episode has been assigned exclusively to two of the ten companies as follows: The first episode will be handled by Universal and Vitagraph; the second by Metro and Paramount; the third by Fox and Goldwyn; the fourth by Pathe and Triangle; the fifth by World and Select. Each of these ten companies will have fifty prints of the particular episode which it has been designated to handle.

Under this arrangement it will be necessary for any exhibitor who desires to run all five episodes to get into immediate contact with either concern in the respective five groups which are handling the distribution. In other words, if he wishes to run all five episodes he must obtain the first either from Universal or Vitagraph, as he finds more convenient; for the second he must apply either to Metro or Paramount; for the third either to Fox or Goldwyn, and so on until he has completed the five episodes.

It is pointed out by the committee that there is no order or sequence in these five episodes and that they have been numbered consecutively only for a matter of record and in order to facilitate their distribution and identity. The fifth can be shown first just as well as that which has been designated number 1, and any exhibitor who finds it impossible to show all five reels can show any one of the five.

Reels Cost Exhibitor Nothing

Exhibitors are earnestly requested to facilitate the handling of these pictures to the greatest possible extent and it is particularly called to their attention that the pictures are distributed to them absolutely without any cost to themselves, inasmuch as there is no rental charge and the express charges are borne by the respective exchanges.

In view of the fact that the campaign will close on October 28 it would be a very serious matter for any exhibitor to delay unnecessarily the forwarding of the print from his house to the next one in which it is to be shown and the committee is very anxious to impress upon all exhibitors the great importance of handling the entire campaign with the greatest speed possible.

Inasmuch as there is absolutely no cost to the exhibitor, either for rentals or express charges, the committee takes upon itself the liberty of urging that every exhibitor advertise this production to the greatest possible extent, both for its patriotic value and because of the undoubted prestige which such an action will give his theater.

Many Notables Take Part

It has been pointed out that the production itself is one of the greatest drawing cards that has ever been issued for the screen and that the artistic talent which it presents has no parallel in screen history. Herbert C. Rawll directed the actual staging of the production in which the following notables and stars appear: President Wilson, Secretary of the Treasury William C. McAdoo, Dudley Field Malone, Ex-Collector of the Port of New York; Thomas A. Edison, DeWolf Hopper, Raymond Hitchcock, Douglas Fairbanks, Julian Eltinge, William S. Hart, Wilton Lackaye, David Warfield, William Courtleigh, Clifton Crawford, Leon Errol, Edmund Breese, Jack Hazard, Jefferson de Angelis, Hal Forde, Paul Everton, Jed Proudy, Tom McGrath, Will Rogers, John Drew, Barney Bernard, Mary Pickford, Lillian Russell, Mabel Taliaferro, Beverly Sitgreaves, Mrs. William Courtleigh, Billie Burke, Pauline Frederick, Ann Wheaton, Nance O'Neill, Ethel Barrymore, Elsie Janis, Laurette Taylor, Marguerite Clark and Lillian Walker.

For any information which cannot be obtained from the exchanges apply to Al Lichtman, sales manager of Paramount Pictures Corporation, 485 Fifth avenue, New York.

"Draft 258" Successor to "The Slacker"

"Draft 258," Metro's forthcoming special patriotic production de luxe, is described by those who have seen it as the logical successor of this firm's sensational box office success, "The Slacker"; and, as "The Slacker" has already done, will further crystallize patriotic enthusiasm through the country. Directed by William Christy Cabanne, the man who made "The Slacker," and written by him in collaboration with June Mathis, it takes up the situation of America today exactly where "The Slacker" left off.

"The Slacker" is intended to arouse men to volunteer in the service of the country. "Draft 258" deals with the situation after the inauguration of the draft system. It recognizes the fact that many men who have failed to enlist and who have been called in the draft have tried to claim exemption when they have no moral right to it. Bravery and cowardice, patriotism and treachery, are frankly arrayed against each other in "Draft 258," and the right side wins.

"Reaching for the Moon" Next Fairbanks Picture

Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, has announced that the title of the new Douglas Fairbanks picture will be "Reaching for the Moon" and that work on this photoplay is now well under way in California at the Lasky studio. In fact, it was for this production that the entire Fairbanks producing organization crossed the continent recently in order to get New York scenes. After two days the entire organization again returned to California to produce the balance of the picture.

Eugene Ormonde, well known for his recent work in Famous Players pictures, arrived in Los Angeles shortly after the return of the Fairbanks troupe, to join this company. Mr. Ormonde started work immediately in "Reaching for the Moon," playing an important part in this film.

Goldwyn Starts Big Campaign

To Introduce Its Stars and Productions to the American Public Through Saturday Evening Post Beginning October 13

GOLDWYN PICTURES, now securely launched throughout America, will be further introduced directly to the American people through the inauguration in the Saturday Evening Post, beginning October 13, of a tremendous advertising campaign to back up the exhibitors everywhere who are playing, or are about to play, the Goldwyn productions.

Despite the fact that by the contracts and responses of the public Goldwyn has already proved the drawing power of its stars and the productions thus far announced, Samuel Goldfish felt that there was still one big step to be taken to focus the attention of the nation's population on the theaters in which these productions will be seen in all communities. The Saturday Evening Post campaign is therefore the direct development and outcome of this feeling.

This campaign is but the beginning of a vast plan of introduction and further popularization of the six great stars thus far announced under the Goldwyn imprint—Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, Mary Garden, Jane Cowl, Mabel Normand, and Maxine Elliott, with other stars of equal magnitude to come.

This campaign covers an extended period of time, the second of its announcements appearing on October 27.

In conceiving and carrying out a national campaign Goldwyn follows the sane and careful policy which has marked the career of the company from the beginning, with emphasis laid on the fact that this advertising was not undertaken or promised in advance to encourage exhibitors to book the Goldwyn productions, but is carried out at great cost after exhibitors have signed as evidence of the company's intention of adding to the appeal and drawing power of its productions.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

Shipman Establishes State Rights Clearing House

ERNEST SHIPMAN, who has established a New York clearing house for feature pictures, states that he will handle none but the best, as quality and not quantity will be the slogan of his output. Then, too, the owners of the pictures must agree to a fair and reasonable market price being asked for them before Shipman will place them before the state rights buyers, as he will be no party of boosting false values.

Inflated quotations not only delay operations, but in a great may cases, lose first and best opportunity for a quick sale.

Buyers are becoming wise by experience. Their time is valuable. First impressions are best, and quick campaigns are the most effective ones.

Mr. Shipman being interviewed, stated: "I am to handle pictures which have been so constructed to prove good money getters from the start, and would rather exploit a limited number of successes than choke up my avenues of distribution by a lot of medium product.

"Last week I looked at twelve feature pictures (so called). Nine of them would never have been made if the producers had considered the demands of the market before manufacture. Two others were being held at too high a price by the owners. When a reasonable 'profit basis' has been agreed upon, I will be only too glad to exploit them, for they are both splendid and will get money for the state rights buyers and exhibitors."

Metro Films of Canada

ONE of the most important transactions of the past month in the motion picture distribution field was concluded between M. H. Hoffman, Inc., and the Metro Films Service, of Canada. M. H. Hoffman and J. J. Unger, representing their respective organizations, arranged for the distribution of the entire Hoffman-Foursquare product in Canada through the Metro Films Service, whose principal exchanges are situated in Montreal and Toronto.

"This arrangement," said Mr. Hoffman, "could not be more satisfactory if I had installed entire staffs in both Toronto and Montreal exchanges. For Mr. Unger's organization is so well equipped to serve Hoffman-Foursquare Canadian patrons that I would add nothing to what he has, and is preparing to include, in both his exchanges in order to handle our product in the same way we would handle it if we had no affiliations whatsoever.

"The advantages in establishing such a co-operative arrangement with Mr. Unger's distributing company are of peculiar advantage in Canada and will work to our advantage. Knowing all this I feel particularly gratified, because Canada could not be more advantageously handled under any different plan.

"The first pictures to be distributed in Canada will be 'The Bar Sinister,' 'The Sin Woman,' 'Madame Sherry,' 'The Silent Witness' and 'The Fringe of Society.' With the increasing demand among Canadian motion picture patrons for elaborate features in which strong, vital stories are uppermost I believe Hoffman-Foursquare product will find a ready welcome."

Klever Komedies Sold

The Victor Moore Klever Komedies have been booked in the William Fox and Marcus Loew theaters, also Max Spiegel's New Newark theater at Newark, N. J. The rights for these comedies in Scandinavia and Russia have also been disposed of.

Rosenthal Buys "The Lust of the Ages"

Isaac A. Rosenthal of the Western Civilization Company closed a contract with the Ogden Pictures Corporation for the rights to "The Lust of the Ages" for the territory of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

Mr. Rosenthal intends sending out six prints of the production to be exploited as a road attraction.

Among the original ideas to be used in the exploitation of this attraction is street car advertising in the big cities, where the production is to play.

A contract was also closed with the Photoplay Exchange of Salt Lake City on the same production for the territory of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico. A. L. Stallings, vice-president and manager of the Photoplay Exchange, reports that in a showing of the production to exhibitors he received bookings which will keep three prints of that production working until the first week in January. The Alhambra Theater at Ogden, Utah, a house with a seating capacity of 2,500, immediately booked the production for a full week's run, beginning October 18.

The Photoplay Exchange also intend to inaugurate an extensive advertising campaign and will make prolific use of the film card novelty issued in connection with the production.

This novelty contains strips of film tinted and toned, showing actual scenes from the production and when hung in the lobby of the theater in front of an electric light creates an unusual effect.

Rex Ingram Joins Paralta Forces

Mr. Rex Ingram, the well known photoplay director, who has been responsible for many of the most notable Bluebird successes, has been engaged by Robert Brunton, director of productions at the Paralta studios in Hollywood, California, to direct the making of "His Robe of Honor," in which Henry B. Walthall will make his debut as an independent star-manager under the executive direction of Paralta Plays, Inc. Mr. Ingram, while one of the younger directors, is looked upon as one of the most capable men of the Western coast.

In securing the services of Rex Ingram as a director the Paralta organization can boast of another man of really exceptional worth who will be added to their galaxy of directors, which now consists of such noted men as Reginald Barker, Raymond B. West, Oscar Apfel, Emmett Flynn and Wallace Worsley, all of whom are working under the eye of Robert Brunton, who is the manager of the productions being pictured at the Paralta studios.

Secure Billy West

The Bee-Hive Exchange, with offices in the Godfrey building, New York, has secured the state rights in New York and New Jersey for all Billy West King-Bee comedies. Nat. H. Spitzer will be general manager of the Bee-Hive Exchange.

Allens Get Select Films for Canada

SELECT Pictures has closed a contract with Jule and Jay J. Allen, the eminent Canadian exhibitors, whereby their important chain of theaters throughout Canada will play all Select Pictures.

The signing of this contract makes the Allens probably the largest single distributor of pictures in the industry. This firm now controls the rights for Canada to Artcraft, Paramount, Famous Players, Select and Monarch pictures, as well as a number of important individual productions. Their houses in Canada have built up big patronages by presenting these quality pictures, the long list of attractions available on account of the contracts held with the producing firms above mentioned giving the Allens the widest choice of absolutely top-notch photo-plays for their houses.

They have recently added to their list of theaters the splendid new Allen theater at Toronto. This house is similar to the well known Majestic at Detroit, and was built at a cost of $250,000. It ranks as one of the finest houses in Canada.

By their Select Pictures contract the Allens obtained the Canadian rights to the entire Select Star Series, including eight productions in the coming year by Clara Kimball Young and her own company, the first of which, "Magda," is now being released; the Norma Talmadge pictures beginning with "The Moth," which was released last week; the Constance Talmadge pictures, including her first starring vehicle, "Scandal," which is scheduled for early distribution, and the pictures starring Alice Brady, the newest star on the Select list. They have also obtained the rights to a number of the special single productions distributed through the Select exchanges.

A. E. A. Directors Hold Session in New York

A business meeting of the directors of the American Exhibitors' Association was held at their offices in the Times Building, New York, October 4. Among those who attended were I. M. Mosher, Buffalo, N. Y.; William Fait, Jr., Utica, N. Y. W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis, Minn.; Guy Wonders, Baltimore, Md.; Peter Jeup, Detroit, Mich.; M. Levy, Norfolk, Va., and Charles C. Pettijohn, who held proxies for the other directors who were prevented from attending because of previous business engagements.

President Jake Wells, of Richmond, Va., who is opening a new theater at Atlanta, Ga., and was unable to be present, kept in touch with the meeting by long distnce telephone. The meeting was adjourned until October 11, to conclude business.

"The Burglar" Draws Crowds and Praise

"The Burglar," a World-Picture Brady-Made starring Carlyle Blackwell and featuring Madge Evans and Evelyn Greeley, is in its second week at the Park Theater, New York, where the attendance has been very large and recognition of the merits of the performance most cordial.

The Evening Sun calls the entertainment "a treat." The American asserts that "nothing has been lost of the romance, the pathos, and the beauty of the original theme in the screen adaptation. A splendid cast enacts the principal parts." The Evening Telegram says: "'The Burglar' is a real thief. He steals your heart and forgets to return it to you as you are leaving the theater."

Campaign Book on "Who Is 'Number One'?"

Paramount is sending to exhibitors and exchanges one of the most comprehensive campaign books ever issued on a serial. The book tells everything about "Who Is 'Number One'?" the Paramount serial, that the exhibitor wants to know.

An artistic double-page spread shows scenes from the fifteen-episode serial. Another page is filled with miniatures of a few of the newspaper ads that will be used in the campaign.

A small reproduction of Frederic Dorr Steele's twenty-four sheet poster, that will be posted by Paramount in 150 cities, illustrates the article outlining the billboard campaign.

Other pages are devoted to Anna Katherine Green, who wrote the story, which is to appear in full in America's greatest newspapers, and to Kathleen Clifford, star of "Who Is 'Number One'?"

Big Cast for Herbert Brenon's "Empty Pockets"

Herbert Brenon is recruiting the characters for his latest production, "Empty Pockets," from the novel of Rupert Hughes, from the ranks of the Jewish actors and actresses from the East Side, also from the ranks of Broadway's foremost actors.

As has already been announced, Bert Lytell, who made his screen debut in "The Lone Wolf" with such success, will be seen again in this picture, while Barbara Castleton is to play Muriel Schuyler.

Mr. Brenon has now added to his list Kitty Galanta, as Maryla, Malcolm Williams as Perry Merrithew, Susan Willa as Red Ida, Henry Leone as Angelo Angelillo, Ben Graham, Thorton Baston, Frank Nelson, Joseph Chailles, Germaine Bourville, Inex Shannon, Peggy Betts, Mr. Ackman, Mr. Rothstein, Nathan Marcus, Ethel Kaufman, Peggy Shaw, Mrs. Mandel and Mrs. Rosen.

William S. Hart Film Next Artcraft Offering

OCTOBER 15 is the release date of William S. Hart's first Thomas H. Ince photoplay to be distributed through Artcraft Pictures. In addition to making his debut as an Artcraft star, "Big Bill" on this day discloses his initial efforts as an author, the story of the photoplay which marks his first Artcraft offering having been written by the star himself.

"The Narrow Trail" is the title of Artcraft's initial Hart-Ince subject, which presents the well known star in the role of Ice Harding, an outlaw of the plains who falls out with his gang because of his horse, a conspicuously marked pinto that discloses the identity of the bandits wherever they go. The outlaw's great love for his pony causes a rupture between him and the men, with the result that Harding leaves the gang and conducts his raids alone. Various touching scenes between master and beast are portrayed by Hart and his popular pinto, "Fritz," who appears for the last time on the screen in this picture. In a thrilling scene for this picture "Fritz" narrowly escaped death recently, whereupon Hart decided to retire his horse because of his fondness for the pony. The story for "The Narrow Trail" is practically written around the famous animal and presents many startling incidents in which "Fritz" plays an important part.

A stirring romance between Ice Harding and the daughter of a dive keeper on the Barbary Coast is also presented in this production, as are various spectacular scenes in which a thousand people took part. The play contains the fiercest screen fight in which Hart ever took part. (See illustration above.)

As leading lady to the star appears Sylvia Bremer, the beautiful Australian actress who has recently made such pronounced successes in Ince pictures.

Clarine Seymore in Toto Comedies

Rolin has signed for Pathe's "Toto" comedies Clarine Seymour. She has already started work in these comedies as Toto's leading woman and Director General Hal E. Roach is confident that in her he has found a girl who will make her mark.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

IN Pasadena they are trading motion picture theaters for farms. During the week the Clune Theater was traded for fifteen hundred acres of land near Bakersfield, California, and the Crown Theater for one hundred and eighty-three acres of land near Chino, California.

The Lehigh Theater at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, has been purchased by L. F. Heiberger and Charles F. Oldt from a syndicate for $50,000.

The Bijou Theater at Birmingham, Alabama, one of the Loew string, is being used on Sunday mornings for the purpose of holding community "sings."

A contract giving operators of Scranton, Pennsylvania, a $3 a week increase in wages to run five years was signed September 24 by all Scranton movie houses, excepting one.

Men operating machines in Scranton have been receiving $18 a week and under the new contract, effective October 1, will receive $21.

The Chemung Theater Company, Inc., of Elmira, New York, has been incorporated with the secretary of state. The directors for the first year are: William R. Gantley, Frederick J. Meagher and Reuben Cohn.

The corporation has been organized to conduct the Lyceum Theater in Elmira. Mr. Gantley is president of the corporation.

The Cantonment Amusement Company plans to erect a motion picture theater that will seat 1,000 persons at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. The building is to be 60x115 feet. The same company contemplates erecting a billiard room and a building containing ten bowling alleys on the grounds.

Feature moving pictures are being shown three times a week at every Y. M. C. A. shack in Chickamauga Park, Tennessee, being free to the soldiers encamped there. The pictures are often accompanied by lectures, and are of such a nature as will tend to elevate the standard of morals at the camp.

Swift Current, Saskatchewan, now has a lady exhibitor in the person of Miss P. Lauzliere, who has assumed the management of the Princess Royal Theater after being associated for two years with the Regina Theater of Regina, Saskatchewan.

It has been decided by the Quality Amusement Company of Nashville, Tennessee, operating the Lincoln Theater for negroes under the new management, to add vaudeville to its moving picture programs. It is specifically announced, however, that under no circumstances will the pictures be removed, and that high-class films will continue to hold the screen as a leading inducement to patrons.

Judge N. B. Neelen and Jacob S. Grauman of Milwaukee, members of the citizen commission on motion pictures, have sent their resignations to Mayor D. W. Hoan. Judge Neelen says his duties on local draft board No. 15 occupy too much of his time, while Mr. Grauman resigned as he is about to engage in the business of handling films. Henry Trintz, of the Columbia Theater, and Ernest Langemack, of the Colonial Theater, have been named to fill the vacancies.

The Pitt Theater management announces a change of policy from big pictures to the legitimate drama. It will be the aim of that famous Pittsburgh playhouse to present meritorious dramatic productions and a few big pictures as well as special attractions such as grand opera, the Russian Ballet and others. The opening date is set for October 9, and the first production will be new in Pittsburgh.

The old Indiana Theater of South Bend, Indiana, has opened up, rejuvenated, rechristened and rehabilitated. It was an old vaudeville house with a reputation none too good. Twelve thousand dollars was spent remodeling it and Manager Barnett is sanguine as to the results to be attained under the new picture policy. The house has been renamed the New Castle and ought to do a good business.

Construccction on another important Los Angeles building, the large fireproof playhouse projected by Col. J. B. Lankershim for the Miller Theater, will be started at once, the contract for the excavation work having been let during the past week. The theater will stand on the east side of Main street between Eighth and Ninth. The structure will be one of the finest of its kind in the city and will represent an investment of about $150,000.

This is the sort of notice the Theater Louisiana at Baton Rouge served on its patrons last week in announcing a raise in prices:

JUST A WORD IN CONFIDENCE.

What must we do? We ask you, dear patron, when 10 cents admission, in cities the size of Baton Rouge, won't cover the operating expense of a first-class picture theater? This is not our experience alone but that of every theater in the south, or the country, for that matter. The facts are that there is just so much possible business. There are just so many picture fans, and we hardly think anyone would deny that we get our share of these, and our business has steadily increased. Yet operating costs have increased faster. Just to cite one item: film service three years ago cost this theater $60.00 per week; today it is $250 and going higher. Any fair-minded person will admit we are entitled to a profit, and when we say we, we mean theaters in general. A profit at 10c admission is impossible, therefore raised admission is the only solution. That is the reason you see an increased number of days at 15 cents.

Also we are obliged to charge admission for all children occupying seats. This rule is effective at once.

The government has decided to use a number of huge tents at the mobilization points throughout the country where the War Department's commission on training camp activity has found itself unable to supply the soldiers with the necessary amusement facilities. A new department, with Harry Harrison of Chicago as chairman, is to take over the task of providing this temporary tent entertainment for the troops, while the work continues on more permanent theater projects under way at the various cantonments. The big canvas play houses will each have a seating capacity of about 3,000.

LeRoy Hodges, representative of the United States food administration, has appointed C. D. Cooley, of Tampa, president of the Florida Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, to assist in the work in that state. Mr. Cooley is head of the Florida committee designated by William A. Brady to co-operate with the government in its war propaganda from the various departments.

Through the assistance of the league, Mr. Cooley will set work in motion to display slides in the various picture theaters over the state exploiting the food conservation campaign leading up to "Food Week," which is to take place late in October.

The ministers and church people of Richmond, Virginia, are unanimous in their determination to fight the proposal to allow the opening of motion picture theaters, and the sale of certain goods on Sunday for the accommodation of visitors and soldiers. It is understood that some proposal is to be made to the City Council. The ministers and church people are standing solidly for the strict observance of the Sabbath and the enforcement of all laws for its observance.

A great deal depends on how an exhibitor puts across a picture. Manager Clarence Robson of the Toronto Strand made a huge success of "The Public Be Damned" by an extended advertising campaign in the local Saturday and Sunday papers; by the use of striking banners on the front of his house and by a very special lobby display during the week of the picture's presentation. For two weeks all that appeared in the newspapers was the title of the feature without the name of the theater or other clue. One week previous to the booked date came the full announcement in all papers. Then on the Monday

Exhibitors Notice

We do not see how any live exhibitor can afford to be without MOTOGRAPHY. In our opinion it is worth more to the exhibitor than any magazine we have ever had our hands on yet.

Yours, for we surely watch for each issue.—S. A. Campbell, Electric Theater, Bixby, Oklahoma.

the lobby of the theater was transformed into a huge grocery store with high prices on all goods, while a farm set was also placed in the entrance to the house.

A picture show party was given a few days ago by A. W. B. Johnson of Birmingham, Alabama, to fifty children at the Alcazar, where the popular children's picture, "Jack and the Beanstalk," was being shown. Mr. Johnson's guests were composed of child employees of the Avondale Cotton Mills, and were chaperoned by the mill superintendent.

The Lookout Theater at Dyer Field, Chattanooga, Tennessee, recently booked "The Eleven Countries at War," a war feature, which was shown under the personal supervision of Count de Besa, lecturer, traveler, and war correspondent. The pictures have the endorsement of commanding officers at West Point and other military establishments over the country.

The police department of St. Louis, Mo., acting on instructions issued by the prosecuting attorney on September 23, seized the film, "Birth," which was to be shown at the Gem Theater, 16 South Sixth street, and arrested the owner of the film, John H. Semler, and the manager of the theater, Louis K. Ansell.

Semler and Ansell gave bond to answer any charge that may be preferred. The theater was crowded when the police stopped the show.

The Dodge City (Iowa) Amusement Company, a corporation which will conduct a movie theater at the army cantonment, has been incorporated. W. W. Sears is president; Joe S. Zwart, vice-president; B. F. Kauffman, treasurer; W. J. Riddell, secretary. Ralph P. Bolton and Norman Wilchinski are members of the directorate. The company plans to erect a $35,000 theater at once. Elbert and Getchell will manage this theater.

Manager Harry Sudekum of the Princess Theater at Nashville, Tennessee, began his fall opening week October 1, at which time he placed an unusually strong program before his patrons. To celebrate the event and to create interest in the opening week a large mechanical "airship" was sent up from the theater to make a flight over the city, to which were attached fifty free theater tickets. These tickets were dropped from the machine and distributed over the city. Much interest was created through the plan, which was given publicity through the press.

The following is a list of Chicago loop theaters and the features they used as drawing cards last week:

Alcazar, "The Tar Heel Warrior," with Walt Whitman.

Auditorium, "The Eyes of the World," drama.

Bandbox, "The Spy," with Dustin Farnum.

Bijou Dream, "Sirens of the Sea," with Louise Lovely.

Boston, "Lost in Transit," with George Beban.

Casino, "Every Inch a Man," with William S. Hart.

Castle, "Double Crossed," with Pauline Frederick.

Kozy, an O. Henry drama.

Lyric, "The Siren," with Valeska Suratt.

Orpheum, "The Whip," drama.

Pastime, "The Disciple," with William S. Hart.

Rose, "The Countess Charming," with Julian Eltinge.

Star, "The Lamb," with Douglas Fairbanks.

World, "The Maiden of the Surf," with George Walsh.

Ziegfeld, "Bab's Diary," with Marguerite Clark.

Judge Daniel E. Bird, of the Kansas City circuit court, granted a temporary restraining order September 23 to the Goldwyn Distributing Company against F. F. McClure, motion picture censor, and other city officials, to prevent them from interfering with the production of "Baby Mine," at the Twelfth Street Theater. Though the play, from which this film was made, was shown at a local theater and no objections then were raised, the movie censor and the board of appeals declared the film adaptation to be objectionable. The censor rejected the picture merely because of the wording of three sub-titles.

The same reel had been passed by the three women composing the Kansas censor board. The court action now permits the film to be shown without molestation by city officials or the police.

To advertise "The Slacker" in an unusual manner during the week of October 1, Manager Mitchell of the Regent Theater, Toronto, flew two large airplane kites from the roof of the handsome structure. From the kite strings were hung long streamers bearing the name of the Metro feature. Incidentally Manager Mitchell has been able to abolish the inconvenience of having a second lot of tickets for the Government War Tax by securing permission from the Ontario authorities to print the tax on the reverse side of the regular admission tickets sold from the box office. Manager Mitchell makes regular returns to the Government according to the receipts of the house in the usual way.

The progressive Victoria Theater of Buffalo, New York, takes the following manner of announcing to its patrons an increase in prices:

Today an economic problem besets the Victoria—one that has been brought about by conditions beyond our control—that of the rapidly increasing cost of the high class productions exhibited at this theater and everything else pertaining to the operation of this institution.

This condition has led to a necessary slight rearrangement of prices in the forward portion of the house.

The following plans have been decided upon and we feel confident will meet with the approval of our patrons—namely to provide 1,000 seats at 10 cents and 500 seats at 15 cents, children 10 cents, boxes and loges 20 cents. This slight advance in a portion of the house will barely cover the increased cost of operation.

Use Motography Cuts Free

AS we have stated before, you are welcome to use MOTOGRAPHY cuts free of all charge. Simply go through the magazine each week and select the picture or pictures which you would like to use in your program or other advertising. Then write "MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago," as soon as possible and the half tones will be loaned to you gratis.

Important

It is impossible to keep the cuts run in MOTOGRAPHY on file for more than four weeks after the date of the issue. Therefore in order to be sure to be able to get the illustrations you desire, make your request shortly after you receive your paper—the sooner the better. We cannot guarantee to furnish cuts later than four weeks from date of issue in which the illustrations appeared.

It is to be remembered that MOTOGRAPHY cuts are of very fine screen, not adaptable for use in newspapers. They are, however, of great value in making a program attractive.

If you don't see the cut you would like to use, ask us anyway and we'll do our best to furnish it for you.

"The Adventurer" Set for Release October 22

"The Adventurer," next of the Chaplin-Mutual specials, will be released October 22.

This announcement was made by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, upon receipt of a telegram from Los Angeles announcing that the film, completed after weeks of delay, was on its way to the Mutual's executive offices in Chicago.

"The Adventurer" has met with innumerable adventures in the course of its completion. Just as the final scenes were about to be shot Mr. Chaplin was taken ill. He was well enough to appear in the studio for only a few days when Edna Purviance, his leading woman, was forced to go to the hospital for two weeks.

After the last scenes were finished and Mr. Chaplin began his task of cutting the 20,000 feet down to 2,000, it was found that certain of the scenes, destined to remain in the film, were not done to the satisfaction of the comedian and he ordered retakes.

"The Adventurer" portrays Mr. Chaplin in the bestriped garb of a convict and many of the most comical situations in the film occur during his pursuit by the prison deputies over the Sierra Madras.

Balshofer Engages "Johnny" Waters

Fred J. Balshofer, president of Yorke Film Corporation, has engaged John Waters as his assistant director for Harold Lockwood's next Metro wonderplay, "Love Me for Myself Alone."

"Love Me for Myself Alone," the first production on which Mr. Waters will assist Mr. Balshofer, is a picturization of a story by Francis Perry Elliott, the same novelist who wrote "The Haunted Pajamas," from which was made one of the most successful pictures of the year starring Mr. Lockwood.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THE Indiana State Federation of Labor convened at Anderson, Indiana, on September 26, for a three day session. This was the 33rd. annual convention and was attended by delegates who represented nearly every craft in the state. The I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. was represented by the following delegates. Local No. 30—Indianapolis, J. E. Smith and Leon Louiso; Local No. 106—Marion, Harry K. Otis; Local No. 133—Hammond, W. Wagner; Local No. 194—Indianapolis, Benner and E. C. Scobey; Local No. 628—Anderson, Chas. Hartly. Chas. Fox of the United Mine Workers of America was re-elected president; Arthur Lahr of The Building Trades of Lafayette, first vice-president; Joel Messick of the Glass Bottle Blowers Association, second vice-president; D. J. Williams of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, third vice-president; J. A. Lechler of the International Association of Machinists, fourth vice-president; Alden B. Hattery of the Typographical Union No. 1 of Indianapolis, fifth vice-president; Adolph J. Fritz of the International Moulders of North America was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Third vice-president Williams is an active member of Local No. 49 I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. of Terra Haute, Ind.

Trouble With Inspection

Projector Department—I am an operator working in a small town where there are three theaters. The booth that I work in is equipped with two Simplex machines and a generator set. The booth is fire-proof and has all ports protected with heavy iron doors held up by a ma-ter cord and each door has a film link attached to the master cord so that in case of fire in the booth the doors will be released immediately.

I have visited several of the first class theaters in the larger cities and the booth that I work in will compare with any of them in construction and protection against fire. One of the other theaters here is equipped about the same as this one only they use Power's machines where I have the Simplex. Another house has one machine over four years old which has none of the latest improvements—not even a fire shutter.

Three weeks ago there was a small fire in this house and it came very near causing a panic. This fire was caused from poor equipment and an inexperenced operator. The operator at this house is a boy of fifteen years old and had about three months experience. We have no building inspector in this town but the chief of the fire department comes around every month or so and "inspects" our booths. When this fire occured the operator grabbed the burning reel of film and threw it out into the house and then jumped out ofter it.

Now here is where my kick comes in: —this fire chief comes around after the fire and orders my manager to close off the balcony, where my booth is situated, so that no one can be seated there while the show is going on. He claims that it is dangerous to have people seated near the booth. But he lets this other house keep right on runinng and they are still using a machine without a fire door on it and the same operator that they had before.

I do not think that this is right or fair. Is there any way that we can get some one with higher authority than the fire chief of this town to condemn this kind of action? Is there any law that will compel the manager of a house to install the right kind of machinery in the booth or is there any law that will allow a fire chief to close a balcony in a theater when the booth is properly equipped? If you can give me any information on the subject I would like to hear from you.—V. I. N.—Iowa.

In answer to your questions I can only say that I would advise you to take up the matter with the State Fire Marshall of your state. I believe your state has such an official. If they do not, however, have your local insurance agent give you the address of the Board of Fire Underwriters at Des Moines or Council Bluffs and they can refer you to the proper parties. You are situated just the same as others on the question of having to contend with an inspector who knows absolutely nothing about his business. It is very disgusting to an operator who tries to be careful and to a manager who tries to protect his patrons to have some one come into the house and booth and either condemns something or orders it changed when the so-calleed inspector knows nothing about the business except what he has read in some insurance book. But that is a condition that exists in the majority of towns or cities.

The different officials will tell you how dangerous it is to handle film and then they will appoint some man to the job of inspector that has worked all his life as a plumber or stone mason and who up to the time of taking the job has never seen a film before. But he has the authority vested in him to compel you and the manager to do what ever he imagines ought to be done.

A new theater was opened several weeks ago and I happened to be in the booth when the inspector called. The operator had used short pieces of film instead of the metal fuse links to connect his port hole shutters to the master cord and this inspector insisted that he take out the film and install the regular links.. The only argument that the operator or myself could get out of him was that the insurance book called for a metal link. Anyone that has had any experience at all around a booth or who has ever tested a metal link knows that film will release port doors considerable sooner than the metal link will release them and in my opinion that is the vital point in a film fire in reference to the audience.

As you say the fire that occured in your city nearly caused a panic and my contention is that had the booth been properly equipped with doors over the ports and connected with fusible film links and a vent to the outside of the building, and last, but not least, had the operator been experienced, there would have been no cause for a panic. The day is coming, when inspectors will have to know their business and operators will be licensed. There are enough laws on the statute books of every state and city to cover and recover everything that pertain to the theater and booth, and when that time arrives that men, not boys, are handling the booths and men who know the business are appointed as inspectors we will get results. Our troubles of today are not from lack of laws but from lack of enforcement. Every state has its own laws governing theaters and for that reason you will have to take up the matter of closing the balcony of the theater with the proper official of the state which I think would be the fire marshall.

An order has just been issued by Postmaster-General, A. S. Burleson to the effect that magazines will be forwarded to our soldiers and sailors by the post office officials providing periodicals have a one cent stamp placed on the front cover and that the magazine is not wrapped or addressed. Readers of magazines are requested to place a stamp on the magazine when through with it and hand it to any postal employee that it may go to the boys at the front. Quite a few of the operators throughout the country have answered the call to the colors and a magazine or trade paper sent to them will help them to pass the time while at the training camps.

Machine Slows Down

Projection Department—I am having trouble with the speed control on a Simplex machine that I am using. I had one of the old style outfits, with the control on the motor but changed from A. C. to D. C. current and had to change motors so got the new style speed control with the new D. C. motor. After the machine has run for a while, say two or three reels, then it commences to slow down and I can't get it to speed up again. The trouble seems to be in the control for I have watched the motor and it does not seem to vary any. Can you help me out with a suggestion as to what may cause it?—H. A. A.—Kentucky.

If you are quite sure that the motor is all right then examine the friction disc and the bronze disc and be sure that there is no oil on either of them. The least bit of oil will cause them to slip and that will cause the speed of your machine to slow down. In oiling the parts on the speed control watch that none of the oil gets on these discs and I think that you will have no more trouble.

Enlargement of Studio Facilities for Pathe

Increase of Production Due to Announcement of Pathe Plays—To Take Over Three New Plants

THE big increase in production of Pathe features necessitated by the announcement of Pathe Plays, commanding the enormous resources of the company, means an enlargement of studio facilities.

In addition to the four studios used by the Astra Film Corporation in Jersey City and Fort Lee, and the Rolin Studio in Los Angeles, three new production plants have been taken over in whole or in part for the making of Pathe pictures. They are the former Sanger Studio, 134th street and Park avenue, New York; the Norma Talmadge Studio in 48th street, New York, and the Kalem Studio in Los Angeles.

Coupled with the factories at Jersey City and Bound Brook, known as the best anywhere, and the studios abroad, this makes Pathe a producer in a scale that shows the strength of an organization built on solid rock, and backed by unlimited capital.

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has a habit of taking out a pencil, and, using the knowledge which long experience has given him, coupled with an analytical instinct that is his by nature, calmly figuring out what will make a reasonable profit both for his company and for its customers and what will not—in other words, "where he will get off."

Owing to the enthusiastic reception accorded to the first of the series of Pathe Plays, Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Stranded in Arcady," released October 14, particular interest attaches to the statement made by the official quoted above, that this box office star has been accorded the honor of having another of her pictures chosen as the second of the Pathe Plays.

This is a five-reel feature of extraordinary power, produced by Astra under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, "the man who never makes a failure," and it marks Antonio Moreno's first appearance opposite the charming and popular Mrs. Castle.

It is further stated that the other big new stars already signed for Pathe Plays—Fannie Warde, Frank Keenan, Bessie Love and Bryant Washburn—are making final arrangements to begin work at Pathe studios, each surrounded by a producing organization equal in every way to the splendid one gathered for the making of Mrs. Castle's picture.

Vivian Rich Again with Western Fox

The popular Vivian Rich is again with the William Fox forces in the West. She will appear soon in an important role in a feature production now in the making.

Miss Rich has been in motion pictures for years. She played opposite William Farnum in "The Price of Silence," and made an appealing heroine in this powerful photo-dramatization of a child labor story. Miss Rich is a native of Boston and began her theatrical career as a member of a stock company. Later, she played on Broadway in "The Country Girl."

Farrar-Artcraft Spectacle Oct., 22

Producers Predict Greater Triumph Than "Joan the Woman"—Most Spectacular Subject Yet Released by Artcraft

THE initial Geraldine Farrar film, "The Woman God Forgot," appears October 22. A greater triumph than experienced even with "Joan the Woman" is predicted by the producers for the new Farrar cinema spectacle, and a special exploitation campaign is being prepared by exhibitors throughout the country who have already booked this picture.

In announcing the release of the first Farrar-Artcraft subject, Mr. Greene said: "In the photodramas in which Geraldine Farrar has appeared she has established herself as the leading emotional actress of the film. Her first appearance, 'Carmen,' and her more recent production, 'Joan the Woman,' have been the sensations of the photodramatic world.

"Jeannie Macpherson, who wrote the story of 'Joan the Woman,' is also responsible for the authorship of the 'The Woman God Forgot,' and also for Mary Pickford's recent production, 'The Little American' and 'A Romance of the Redwoods.'

"For her theme in 'The Woman God Forgot,' Miss Macpherson has taken the story of a princess who sells her country for the man she loves. The whole story is taken from a chapter in the early history of America, telling how the Spanish invaded Mexico and of their conquest of Montezuma. She falls in love with a handsome young Spaniard, which role is played by the ever-popular star, Wallace Reid.

"The production is one of the most elaborate and beautiful ever made by Cecil B. De Mille. The work of this famous director is too well known to require comment. Noted as the creator of artistic effects, his last work is considered his best.

"The reproduction of the famous Aztec pyramid of Teocalli, as seen in 'The Woman God Forgot,' is one of the largest settings ever built for a photodrama, the pyramid being nearly 200 feet in height and an exact reproduction in every detail of the famous temple to the Aztec gods. More than a thousand men took part in the thrilling battle scenes, and the effects of the first few cannon with gunpowder are graphically shown.

"The cast supporting Miss Farrar, besides Wallace Reid, includes such prominent names as Hobart Bosworth; Theodore Kosloff, the famous Russian dancer; Raymond Hatton, James Neill and others of equal popularity."

What Food Control Really Means

Question of Many Exhibitors Who Are Lending Government Their Screens Answered by Arthur S. Friend

HERBERT HOOVER, Food Administrator, has been highly elated over the manner in which the thousands of exhibitors have come forth and offered their co-operation in spreading the propaganda of the Food Administration in its campaign to have people waste less and to have one meatless and wheatless day each week.

One question that has come from many exhibitors in answer to the request to co-operate is "What Does Food Control Really Mean?" Arthur S. Friend, treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who is the chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the Food Administration, is answering this question by telling exhibitors what Mr. Hoover himself had to say on the subject recently at a meeting of the State Food Administrators and his personal staff, when he gave a striking explanation of the part that food control plays in war.

He said European nations went into the war giving little thought to the subject of food. Even Germany with all its preparations had not foreseen the significance of this factor. With millions of men taken from production, and thousands of square miles of fertile fields laid waste by armies, the world's cupboard quickly began developing a bareness like that of Mother Hubbard's.

This made it necessary to organize food supply and distribution, and the various countries tried different methods. They fixed maximum prices, and minimum prices, regulated the production and distributing trades, and put their people on rations. Those countries which established the earliest and best methods of food control secured the greatest efficiency in war. The best system, on the whole, is still that of Germany, and she has been able to maintain efficiency with a food supply which in some of her enemy countries might be most embarrassing. Russia, with perhaps the greatest possibilities of food production in Europe, did nothing at all, and out of Russia's food situation grew her revolution.

Mr. Hoover said, that whether we like it or not, we must deal with the food problem of war in one of two ways. There is not enough food to go around if we stick to the lavish methods of peace times. Rising prices, coupled with depreciation of money, due to issues of war bonds in every country, which make the purchasing power of money shrink, compel us to adjust the food supply to the world's appetite, either by controlling that supply in ways that lead to economy and make it suffice, or by having wages rise as prices rise, to keep pace roughly with fluctuations. Even an amateur economist can see at a glance that food control is better than wage increase, because wage increase is a crude force operating slowly, unevenly and with great injustice and suffering to millions of workers. The wages of many workers do not rise—the professional men, clerical workers, public employes, and so forth. Russia tried the experiment of letting wages adjust themselves to the diminishing food supply, and it did not work—Russia was brought to a state bordering on anarchy by the intolerable pressure of the food situation on the ordinary peaceful citizen.

Tom Mix Stars in Five-Reel Fox Drama

William Fox anounces as the latest star of the Fox Exclusive Feature Series, Tom Mix, popular cowboy of motion pictures.

For the last ten months, Mr. Mix has been starring in comedies on the Fox program.

Tom Mix's fame as a cowboy assures him certain success in this newest move. The type of drama in which he will appear, will be largely western, and will afford Mix ample opportunity to display the daredevil "stunts" which have gained him a place in the film world.

Tom's picture work is merely a chapter from the adventurous story of his life. Born on the Texas plains, of a family noted for its daring and bravery, Tom early manifested his roving spirit. He enlisted, when the Spanish-American war began, and served for some time as chief of scouts in Cuba. Thereafter, he worked in a similar capacity in the Philippines, and carried on the difficult task of organizing the natives there into American army units.

At the time of the Boxer uprising in China, Tom was there, attached to the Ninth U. S. Infantry. He was wounded at the Battle of Tien-tsin.

Well again, Tom resigned from the army and joined the Texas rangers. He was leader of the band who hunted down and captured the notorious Shont brothers, a group of men engaged in running horses across the Mexican border.

After that, Mix became deputy marshal in that state. Then he heard of a meeting of cowboys who contemplated going into motion picture work. Tom joined them, and immediately became their leader.

Judge Grants Restraining Order

Judge Charles M. Hough in the Federal District Court of New York has granted a temporary injunction restraining the Export and Import Film Company, Inc., Ben Blumenthal and Isaac E. Chadwick, during the pendency of the action, from advertising, publishing and exhibiting the motion picture play, entitled "The Tyranny of the Romanoffs."

This injunction also comprehends the reproduction of any photograph of Sergius Michailoff Trufanoff, otherwise called Iliodor, the Mad Monk, in any costume worn in Herbert Brenon's photoplay, "The Fall of the Romanoffs." The use by Messrs. Blumenthal and Chadwick or the film company of a title similar to "The Fall of the Romanoffs with Illiodor" is also enjoined.

New York League Discusses Soldier Admissions

The Commission on Training Camp Activities sent a representative before the executive committee of the New York branch of the Exhibitors' League, which held an important meeting at its headquarters, the afternoon of October 3, to ask the co-operation of the league in a plan which contemplated the admission of soldiers and sailors to picture shows at half price.

Action on the proposition, however, was deferred until Mr. Fosdick, head of the commission, had been consulted, for he has hitherto refused to give the motion picture industry the recognition that is due it.

Owing to the repeated refusal of the operators' union to arbitrate their demands the committee decided to no longer treat with their union but to let each exhibitor settle with them.

Hospital Cot Good as Office Chair for Brenon

From a bed in the Postgraduate Hospital Herbert Brenon has been busily engaged in mapping out his producing campaign for the next few months.

It is characteristic of the producer that he is not wasting a single moment of his enforced rest, following an operation for appendicitis. Almost from the moment of the operation he has been in telephone connection with his studio at Hudson Heights, N. J.. where everything has been prepared to complete Rupert Hughes' mystery romance, "Empty Pockets," as speedily as possible when the producer returns to work.

Mr. Brenon has mapped out his forthcoming production of Hall Caine's novel, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," and is naturally anxious to get back in harness again. He is still undetermined upon the star who will play the big feminine character role, a part running the whole gamut of emotions.

Edward Knoblock's "Kismet," in which Otis Skinner will make his screen debut, awaits the completion of the Hall Caine visualization.

He has adopted a policy of getting into direct and personal touch with exhibitors throughout the country by means of letters. The director is keeping up a big correspondence from his hospital cot. In fact, some of the most cheering letters Mr. Brenon has received during his convalescence were business communications from theater managers throughout the country anent the way "The Lone Wolf" is being received. Brenon believes that this personal study of the needs and desires of exhibitors will be a vital factor in the progress of his producing corporation.

Praise Laemmle's "Best Cartoon" Plan

Telegrams from Governors, Senators and Other Notables Show Wide Interest in Universal's News Novelty

CARL LAEMMLE'S recently announced plan of co-operation with fifty or more leading newspapers of the United States, so that the three best cartoons published each week in the various dailies that have entered into the agreement will be recreated on the screens of all theaters using Universal service as the outstanding feature of Current Events, is arousing the interest of many personages of note. Already the plan seems destined to become the biggest news novelty of the year, and the resulting publicity and patronage will undoubtedly make the arrangement a practical success from the start.

During the past ten days, the following telegrams have been received by Mr. Laemmle, and it is safe to say that no recent move by any film company has aroused the same interest on the part of men high in public esteem.

"Carl Laemmle, 1600 Broadway, New York. Note with interest your article on cartoons on screens, morning telegraph. This is an excellent move and I congratulate you on its consummation."—Rothapfel.

"Accept my congratulations on your new step in screen progress."—Wm. A. Brady.

"The press is now the tribune of the people. You are making the screen the tribune of the press."—Henry L. Myers, United States Senator.

"Together the newspaper press and the motion picture screen can bring to bear an influence for good that is incalculable."—James D. Phelan, United States Senator.

"The current thought of the hour is pithily expressed by the newspaper cartoon and in showing the best ones on the screen you have blazed a new trail."—John K. Shields, United States Senator.

"Congratulations. Linking press and screen will link north and south, east and west."—Emerson C. Harrington, Governor of Maryland.

"To consider every public question from every point of view by means of screening newspaper cartoons is an idea of such magnitude as to challenge the interest of all. Congratulations."—Reed Smoot, United States Senator.

"Of the many notable achievements of the screen the joining of forces with the largest newspapers in every city will mark a red letter day in the cinema calendar."—James H. Brady, United States Senator.

"Interest of all thinking men are challenged by the plan to publish on the screens before millions the newspaper cartoons that have proved effective. May I wish success and extend my warmest felicitations."—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House.

"The screen has borrowed the most powerful weapon of the press. I know you will wield it effectively."—Chas. Curtis, United States Senator.

"The newspaper cartoon and motion picture screen are two of the most powerful engines of our day in generating and influencing public opinion. Congratulations on uniting them."—Ed. S. Johnson, United States Senator.

"The Universal indeed renders a unique and helpful service in extending the influence of the newspaper cartoon."—James M. Cox, Governor of Ohio.

"Regard welding of press and screens as an achievement of first importance."—Arthur Capper, Governor State of Kansas.

"Regard wedding of newspapers and motion pictures as a real accomplishment."—E. L. Phillip, Governor of State of Wisconsin.

"Cartoons now speak to thousands; on the screen they will appeal to millions."—Francis E. Warren, United States Senator.

Another Display of Keystone Beauty

Triangle-Keystone Director William Beaudine has finished the first comedy under his direction at the Triangle-Keystone studios and has started on another which will feature Peggy Pearce, Paddy McGuire, Joseph Belmont and Fritz Schade. The new story calls for considerable "water stuff" and the immense Keystone plunge has been fitted for the opening scenes. Keystone's shapely bathing beauties will be very much in evidence.

Blackwell at Work on 400th Screen Play

CARLYLE BLACKWELL, popular star of World-Pictures Brady-Made, is at work upon his four hundredth screen play, in each of which he has acted the principal male personage.

Carlyle Blackwell, who has made 400 photoplays during his career.

To commemorate the occasion, which is entirely unique in cinema history, the World Film Corporation has adopted measures to provide a souvenir for every feminine member of each assemblage that witnesses this particular picture in all theaters where it is shown.

Mr. Blackwell has been a screen player for seven years and is entering his eighth. The first film drama in which he appeared was the Vitagraph version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a feature production considered altogether immense at that early period. He remained with Vitagraph for nine months, appearing in pictures of one and two reels apiece.

The actor then joined Kalem for a term, and afterward had a long engagement with Paramount-Lasky-Famous Players, spending a part of his time in New York and the rest in California. In December he will have been for two years with World-Pictures Brady-Made, which confines itself to the production of features, each of five reels or more.

The name of the photodrama to the feminine patrons of which special souvenirs are to be given will be announced shortly. The reason for the delay is that the play is being prepared under a working title which serves merely to identify it in the process of production as against the other six in the making at the World studio.

A permanent name may not be decided upon until the drama is fully completed. Mr. Brady does not permit his output to be finally titled until all the members of his staff have had a chance to make suggestions based upon viewing the finished film.

He believes that fully half the value is in the name and that motion pictures have changed the times since Mr. Shakespeare wrote.

New Metro Studio on Coast in Full Swing

Production work is now well under way at the Metro West Coast studio, former home of Charlie Chaplin and his comedians, at Hollywood, California. B. A. Rolfe, Western manager, selected this studio after studying, from every angle, production on the west coast.

The studios comprise five acres of ground, with adjoining land available if required. There is at present one stage, 150 by 70 feet, which is to be enlarged, making it one of the largest stages around Los Angeles. The contract has already been let to make this mammoth stage glass-enclosed.

A spacious scene dock and property room adjoin the stage. Other buildings include a fully equipped carpenter shop, paint shop, and sculptoring department, a modern laboratory, office building, dressing room building, and a building to be devoted exclusively to the directors, their assistants, and the scenario department.

C. W. Thomas, who has been identified with Metro for some time, has been made studio manager. J. E. Newman, who has been associated as technical director with several coast companies, has been engaged in the same capacity at this studio. Daniel Hogan, formerly at the New York studio of Metro, is head of the property department.

Frances Guyhan and H. P. Keeler have joined the scenario department. Miss Guyhan was until recently a member of the Balboa scenario department. Mr. Keeler has been identified with Ince-Triangle productions for the past two years. Both of these writers are at work on stories for Viola Dana and Edith Storey.

"Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp"

Second "Fox Kiddies" Picture Gets Rousing Reception. Reviewed by George W. Graves

PEOPLE fortunate enough to witness the new Fox Kiddies picture which is now enjoying its initial run at the Globe Theater, New York, are finding that, as far as the intimate contact with the children themselves is concerned, the second "Kiddies" picture is more fascinating than "Jack and the Beanstalk." The children seem to be much nearer the audience because a great quantity of closeups and semi-closeups are employed, all of these affording the spectator the keenest delight in watching the expressions of the youngsters.

Scene from Fox's remarkable kiddie spectacle, "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp."

The directors, C. M. and S. A. Franklin, surely have handled and supervised the work of the little players with a degree of skill that bespeaks the finest kind of sympathy with and understanding of their differing histrionic capacities. Such expressions as "The most wonderful child actors I ever saw," "The most adorable kiddies I have seen on the screen," etc., were heard around us in the theater from all sides. The work of little Francis Carpenter and Virginia Corbin is truly exquisite. These children were certainly born actors; their mimicry of the actions and feelings of older people is amusing in the extreme. Violet Radcliffe, as the deep-dyed villain, stands out as prominently as she did in "Jack and the Beanstalk." These children register anger, sorrow, passionate love, apprehension, etc., like veterans. Gertrude Messinger, as the lady in waiting to the princess, registers all the way through with bits that are quite different from the rest. She makes a very considerable "hit."

The luxurious sets with all their atmosphere of the far east show taste. Most of these sets required skillful construction and extensive, costly building, since very little natural scenery was used. As in "Jack and the Beanstalk" many beautiful effects were secured by "shooting" from the distance.

"Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" is truly as the program describes it—"mystery, romance and thrills blended for young and old." Those who love children can find no more delightful way of sharing a wonder-filled two hours with some of the most beautiful children alive than by attending the showing of this picture. Its whole conception and production marks it as a special—one of the biggest specials William Fox has yet released.

"The Silence Sellers"

Five-Part Metro Drama Released September 24. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THE "Silence Sellers," from a story in Snappy Stories by Blair Hall and featuring Mme. Petrova, is an offering dealing with professional black-mailers who prey upon innocent victims of society. The action of the play is brisk and the interest is keen throughout. It is a relief to have the final big scene come as a complete surprise after so much that is obvious in pictures. Next to having the villain foiled, an audience likes nothing better than being foiled itself, and there is enough of this element of trickery to absorb the interest of the most fastidious.

Madame Olga Petrova in a conventional role charms by the intelligence and refinement of her work. The story is of a young girl, Laura Stutphen (Madame Petrova) who breaks her engagement with Don Loring (played by Mahlon Hamilton) because he is still sowing his wild oats. While motoring one day her machine breaks down just as a storm is coming up. She takes shelter in the country home of some friends who have gone to the city. Herr Von Kollnitz (Wyndham Standing) comes to the house to pay a call. Both are forced to stay in the house over night. The only witness to this is Don, who happens to be walking to a distant hunting lodge and who stops upon seeing a light, but he does not remain for fear of causing embarrassment to the girl.

After the incident has been forgotten the girl receives word from a libelous paper to the effect that the story is to be published. She suspects Don of having repeated the story, and feels sure of it when she sees him coming out of the newspaper office.

At a house-party where Laura, Don and Von Kollnitz are congregated, after much manoeuvering of situations, it turns out that Don is in the employ of the Secret Service and that Von Kollnitz is the real blackmailer, so Laura and Don take up the threads of their life together. The supporting company is good and the director, Burton L. King, is to be highly commended for the success with which the scenes were staged.

"Shall We Forgive Her?"

World Film Melodrama in Five Parts Released Oct. 15. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS melodrama tells the not altogether new story of the innocent girl who goes west to meet her sweetheart when he sends for her, only to find that he is a drunkard and gambler and that the expected minister is conspicuously absent. How the girl struggles to escape but is compelled to stay, how the villain still pursues her when she finally makes her way back to New York, and how she eventually marries a worthy young man, is all told with plenty of interest and many tense scenes. There is some real heart interest in the story, which at times is plainly an appeal to the emotions rather than the intellect.

The introduction of a baby is always received well, although one finds it a little difficult to believe that a woman would maliciously give the wrong medicine to an innocent babe, even if doing so from the most jealous of motives. This is a bit overdrawn and unnecessary even in this kind of melodrama, but as it brings about the happy reunion of husband and wife—and we were very much interested in these two normal people—we close our eyes to this license of the screen.

There is a thrilling fall down a sand-hill in the desert, done by George McQuarrie, and there are a few hand-to-hand struggles which are startlingly realistic. The work of June Elvidge as the heroine is so convincing that we wonder that her husband could ever have doubted her for an instant. The supporting company is good, the work of Arthur Ashley as the profligate miner being especially effective.

The story in detail is of a sweet and innocent girl, Grace Raymond (June Elvidge), who goes west after an engagement of two years, to join her sweetheart, Neil Garth (Arthur Ashley). Neil has been steadily traveling the downward path and is a drunkard when not worse. Grace, upon seeing him, is struck by his uncouth appearance and the squalor of his cabin. Learning that there is no waiting minister, she starts to leave, but is driven back by three rough men, who have been lying in wait for her. A year passes and Grace loathes the man with whom she has been compelled to live. One day she saves the life of James Stapleton, a miner, and receives the assurance of his friendship and a bag of gold. After a struggle with Neil, she strikes him over the head with a bottle and escapes to New York. There she meets, loves and marries Oliver West (James Bowers) without telling him of her past. Eventually Neil puts in an appearance and demands "hush-money" of Grace. She gives him a check she has just received for a magazine story. Jean, the housekeeper, who is in love with Oliver and is jealous of Grace, informs Oliver of Grace's past. The shock blinds him and he turns Grace from the house. Grace sells another story and pays for an operation on Oliver's eyes without his knowing from where the money comes. The operation is successful. The friend in need proves himself a friend indeed by making Neil confess that Grace was an unwilling victim, and Oliver, horrified to think of what Grace has suffered, gladly takes her back. The direction was by Arthur Ashley.

"The Girl Angle"

First of Anita King Horkheimer-Mutual Features. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

ANITA KING'S first appearance in a Horkheimer production, released through Mutual, is in a refreshing outdoor story, a western comedy drama. It is a good example of the right star in the right story, and Miss King plays very cleverly. The majority of patrons will make a mental note to see her coming pictures. There is plenty of life and humor in this, and there is a "different" twist to it, partly because the story is well handled, partly because of the whole-hearted manner in which Miss King plays.

Julian Lamothe wrote the story, in which humor predominates but which contains plenty of human interests and the required love element. The photography is good and the locations are well chosen. All in all, this is a first rate offering of a light, pleasing type. The exhibitor can make an advertising point of the fact that the heroine is a "lady-farmer," a profession of special interest to women in war time. Her costumes, her achievements and adventures will interest any other women who have a longing to "get back to the land."

west. She refuses to allow any man to aid her and builds her own house and tills her own fields. The local sheriff and "Three Gun" Smith, a desperado, both fall in love with her. Smith's bashful wooing amuses the girl, but her mind is poisoned against him by the sheriff. When Smith's gang knock over her shack she is ready to believe anything bad of him. She believes she has proof that he is a thief and she reports him to the authorities, while he, in reparation, has set up a portable bungalow in place of the ruined shack. When she learns this, she repents her betrayal. Smith is apparently in danger of being lynched when he reveals his true office of secret service man and proves the sheriff the real bandit. Later Maud is persuaded to revise her judgment of men, and she admits her love for Smith.

Mary Miles Minter in Patriotic American-Mutual Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

MARY MILES MINTER and patriotism will put this play across in the average theater. Although Miss Minter plays a role similar to others she has taken, the play itself is different. It is not one of Miss Minter's best pictures, but in its patriotism it may be considered as the star's contribution to the spirit of the times. There are several exciting situations and the exploits of the little star when she arouses the soldiers in time to check the invaders will win applause in the average neighborhood house. In fact, for theaters where Miss Minter is popular, and that means most theaters, "Her Country's Call" is a safe "bet." Miss Minter is as appealing as ever, and the story, which deals with a situation on the Mexican border, is not of the usual war type. It contains no harrowing scenes. Several historical events are visioned during the course of the play. There isn't a great deal of plot but there is enough to interest the casual fan.

Charles T. Dazey wrote the story and Lloyd Ingraham directed it. Alan Forrest, George Periolat, Margaret Shelby, Ashton Dearholt, Spottiswood Aitken and others are in the cast. The release date is October 1.

The Story: Jess Slocum, a little mountain girl, lives in a rough mountain cabin with her father, Jim Slocum. Sometimes she wonders why he hates the soldiers and the flag so much. Once when she brought the field glass to the window to show him the soldiers of the Flagstone Home guards drilling in the village below, he shook his fist angrily at them. He explained that fifteen years before he had been beaten and drummed out of camp on the charge of having sold liquor to the soldiers. He boasted of a revenge; but refused to tell her what it was.

Jess wants pretty clothes such as the town girls wear, especially after she has met handsome young Captain Neville fishing in a mountain stream. Her fond dad gives her the money for new clothes, and while she is gleefully trying them on, the secret service men trail Jim to the cabin and fire on it. They hit poor little Jess in the shoulder and take away her dad to prison for bootlegging.

She is cared for in the home of Captain Neville by his maiden sister. He teaches her to love the flag and the old doctor who attends her teaches her to sound the bugle calls. She would be happy but the town girls will not play with her. They coldly remind her that her father is a jailbird.

Jess starts back to the little cabin; but on the way she sees John Reynolds, a strange visitor in the town, insult the town flag and haul it down. He has planned a raid of the border ruffians on the town while the soldiers are at a dance at the armory; but Jess shoots him and calls the soldiers to arms with a rousing bugle call. And then Jim Slocum confesses that his revenge had been to steal her from her father years ago—Colonel Tremaine.

"The Fighting Trail"

Episode Five, "Torrent Rush." Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THE fifth episode of this thrilling Vitagraph serial comes entirely up to expectations. The scenery is remarkably beautiful, holding one spellbound by its grandeur, and there are thrills galore to please the most jaded fan. Nan is first seen struggling for her life in a rushing mountain torrent, and from then on, until Gwyn and Cut-Deep are shown clasped in a death-struggle on the edge of a precipice, one sits breathlessly following the action. The continuity of this picture is remarkably good.

Nan and Gwyn, after a genuine western wedding, start for their new cabin on the mountain. Here they are surrounded by Cut-Deep and his gang, who overpower Gwyn and attempt to carry off Nan. They are prevented from doing this by Gwyn's following of cowboys, who have come to the cabin to give the bride and groom a rousing welcome. Gwyn makes a sensational leap through a window after Cut-Deep and pursues him to a rocky ledge where they engage in a terrific struggle.

It is all splendid melodrama so adroitly told and well pictured that the interest is held throughout. William Duncan and Carol Holloway are consistently good in their work in this serial.

"One-Shot Ross"

Triangle Release of October 14. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS is an exceptionally good western picture with a punch in every scene, a smooth-running story, beautiful photographic effects and a hero who is real. We can believe implicitly in "One-Shot" Ross without being ashamed of our faith. There are many western pictures, and so many of them bad, that when we witness one which rings true we are more than thankful.

The sub-titles, written in true cowboy vernacular, are a genuine treat, affording half the pleasure derived from the picture. As an ambidextrous hero of the guns Roy Stewart charms immeasurably, and when he pretends to have lost his mind, or as he puts it to be, "locoed," he does a very clever bit of character acting.

The story is of "One-Shot" Ross, who decides to give up killin' after witnessing the grief of a child, the daughter of the man he "got." On a journey through a desolate country, bound for civilization, his stage is held up by bandits and he is injured. He is taken to Sheridan's ranch, which is nearby, and is carefully nursed by Mary Sheldan, who is the belle of the community. Sheridan is killed by the bandits, and some stain is attached to his name as having been connected with the band.

Upon hearing this, "One-Shot," whose name tells a story, decides that the bandits must be run down and, in order to gain evidence against Jim Butler, the leader of the gang, he pretends to have lost his mind. He of course worsts the bandits in regulation style, and wins Mary, for his bride. While the story is not great, it is told in a unique way and appeals to one's acumen

The photography deserves especial mention. Some of the effects are conspicuously noteworthy, the wild western atmosphere being gloriously pictured. Cliff Smith directed the picture, on which Captain Crane was the cameraman.

"The Love Doctor"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Released October 8. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THAT it is possible to meddle with nature and interchange the desires and passions of people by transposing bits of their brain, but that it is highly inexpedient, is the theme of this rather improbable picture. Whether the story is scientifically plausible or not, it presents an interesting study in psychological developments and depravities due to the surgeon's scalpel, and gives wide scope for some clever characterizations.

Two young women of widely different natures—one in whom the sex instinct is undeveloped, and one in whom it is predominant—are operated upon by a surgeon who thinks he can strike a balance between the two. But he overshoots the mark, somehow, and the two natures are merely reversed, in one case with a vengeance. After this we are inclined to get rather mixed-up, trying to decide just where our sympathies should go.

The idea of the picture holds so much food for thought in spite of its improbability that interest is well sustained although the action is at times a little slow.

Earle Williams plays the "love" doctor with sincerity and force, and makes himself at all times a sympathetic character when we might only have been disgusted with his blunderings. Patsey de Forrest shows much ability in portraying the girl with two widely different temperaments. Corrine Griffiths as the other victim of the surgeon's knife is remarkably pretty and Webster Campbell and Adele de Garde ably fill minor roles.

The story tells of Doctor Brandt, a brain surgeon who is in love with Rose Demming, a girl whose sex-instinct is apparently undeveloped. Blanche Hildreth, the young wife of an invalid husband, is infatuated with Doctor Brandt and uses every sex lure to attract him. Rose is injured in an automobile accident and her only chance for life lies in an operation for concussion of the brain. Doctor Brandt conceives the idea of transposing to her brain some of the love-cells from the brain of Blanche, feeling that he has the right to give to one the power to love while freeing the other from herself.

Science does more than was expected, and Rose becomes the victim of unrestrained passions. She responds to the Doctor's love for a while, but finally runs away with another man and then sinks lower and lower.

She is finally discovered in the slums, injured. An operation is necessary to save her life. Doctor Brandt, who has had to give up practice through grief and remorse, stands willing to sacrifice part of his brain for the operation. "Remove all moral weaknesses from her brain and restore them to mine. I have the will power to withstand them," he orders the surgeon. Rose spends the rest of her life in a convent and the Doctor marries Blanche, whose love and loyalty deserve a reward. Paul Scardon directed the picture.

The World Film Corporation has presented several of its photoplays to the United States battleship Missouri.

different families. The older girl becomes a household drudge, runs away dressed as a boy, kidnaps her little sister, is eventually adopted into a better home, blossoms quickly into a young lady and marries the heir of the family. This plot, with a few variations, has been pictured numberless times. There is nothing distinctive about this version. It is produced in a routine fashion. If your patrons have liked this type of play in the past, they may be entertained by this. If they crave originality or real drama, they will not find it here. There isn't much of the humor which frequently redeems this sort of play, and pathos is laid on heavily.

Violet MacMillan is the abused, be-curled heroine. She plays with feeling. She is best when masquerading as a boy. Eugene Moore directed the play from a story by Judge Willis Brown. The cast includes P. L. Pembroke, Charles Mailles, Gertrude Aster, L. M. Wells and others. The acting is generally satisfactory. Photography is good.

The Story: Nancy and Baby Ellen are left orphans when their mother dies. At the orphan asylum, the two are separated, and later Ellen is adopted by a wealthy family, who neglect her. Nancy is adopted by a woman who wants a servant. Tired of this life, Nancy, dressed as a boy, runs away. She finds Ellen and takes her with her. For a little while, she supports herself and the baby, but the authorities learn where the children are and take Ellen away. Nancy is aided by a young man who takes her to his own home. His parents adopt her and later find and adopt the little sister also.

Gladys Hulette in Pleasing Pathe Comedy-Drama. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

GLADYS HULETTE at her best in a humorous story, well produced, with funny situations and clever subtitles makes an offering good for any theater, especially fine for the neighborhood theaters and well fitted for a children's matinee performance. Miss Hulette is so well known in roles similar to this that one has only to say that she is at her best, and that the story is worthy.

Tom Cushing wrote this story, which William Parke directed. The production is good in every respect. Paul Clerget, William Parke, Jr., and J. H. Gilmour have important roles in support of the star. Exhibitors lucky enough to have this offering on their schedule should boost it in advertising.

The Story: Mary Flynn is an accomplice of Syd Flynn, supposed to be her father. He had rescued Mary from a fire and trained her to believe theft justifiable. Flynn and Mary are caught breaking into the home of Clifford Cannon, a young man who has recently inherited great wealth. Mary escapes, but Flynn is sent to prison. Mary returns to the city, where she must now both hide from the police and live. First she blacks boots, then develops a remarkable trade of opening doors and locks which have stuck or to which the owners have lost their keys. It is through this trade that she again meets Gifford Cannon and because of circumstantial evidence he is convinced of her unworthiness. She loves children and finds a "ready-made baby" which she adopts. It turns out to be Gifford's little cousin, and through it, in unusual manner, a happy ending is brought about.

"Wild Sumac"

Triangle Release of October 14, Featuring Margery Wilson. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS clever new star deserves a large following. Her work is so brimfull of spontaneity and intoxicating youth that she charms whenever on the screen. There is a flavor of the great northwest in this picture with the characterizations so splendidly portrayed that one can afford to overlook a few little flaws in production.

Parts of the mediocre story are somewhat intangible and the action is not always smooth, but it is a picture decidedly pleasing to the eye with an ineffable something which appeals.

As "Wild Sumac," a little wild creature who is continually being brow-beaten by a worthless father, Miss Wilson has splendid opportunities to display her delightful personality and screen ability.

This picture is not quite up to the Triangle's high standard of a well-told picture, and the good acting throughout saves it from being unattractive. Frank Brownelly as Jacques and George Chesebro as Lupine are splendid in their respective roles, while the photographic effects obtained by Eddit Gailer are especially worthy of note.

The story, in brief, is as follows: A half-breed called Lupine returns to the village of St. Croix, after an absence of fifteen years. With him are his Indian wife and his daughter, Wild Sumac. At the same time there comes to the village Jacques Fontaine, a genial gypsy, who is fleeing from a nearby settlement because he has killed a man. Jacques and Lupine meet and indulge in card games together at the latter's shanty, where Jacques has a chance to see and befriend Sumac, who is a very lonely little person.

Armand de Fere is constructing a railroad near the village and his dissolute young son Pierre also plays cards with Lupine, who always wins because he cheats. Pierre makes rough advances to Sumac, but she repulses him. One day she innocently tells Pierre why Lupine always wins at cards. Pierre, in rage, protests to Lupine, who kills him. As Sumac is found clasping the revolver when the police arrive she is held under arrest and is in danger of being mobbed. Lupine, anxious to have suspicion turned from himself, gladly fastens the blame on her.

Then Jacques starts in to prove Sumac's innocence. In one of the best fights ever seen on the screen he overpowers Lupine, learns the truth from him and arrives in time to save Sumac from being burned at the stake by the angry mob. To make the ending doubly happy, or perhaps to try the patience of the audience, we learn that Sumac is in reality the long-lost niece of Armand de Fere, who thereby gets a niece for the son he lost, and Jacques a bride for his trouble. The play was directed by William V. Mong.

Ann Murdock in Empire-Mutual Release of Stage Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

ANN MURDOCK in this picture appears in the role in which she won fame on the speaking stage. The play has a light, amusing story, decidedly French and rather risque. It is prettily produced, in settings, costumes and acting. Ann Murdock is charming, and David Powell is an excellent choice for the part opposite. The cast as a whole is well chosen.

We believe six reels is too long for the story, both because the plot is insufficient for so long a production and therefore drags, and because the fanciful mood of the play is difficult to sustain for six reels. The average audience will like this just as well as it likes Ann Murdock. She is at her best, and gives the picture its chief charm. Some of the lines from the play are kept in the subtitles, and these are good. As a whole, the play is suited for audiences which prefer light, pretty plays to heavier offerings. The picture will draw in high-class communities because of its stage history.

The Story: The story is laid in France. Helene, the heroine, is engaged to marry her cousin, Andre d'Eguson, but a scheming aunt has Andre sent away and destroys the letters written by the lovers. Helene, believing Andre untrue, becomes engaged to Valentine, whom she does not love. On the morning of the wedding, Andre returns and the lovers are reconciled. Andre persuades Helene to run away with him. They go to the home of Helene's aunt in the country. The aunt believes Andre is Helene's husband and Helene fears to tell her the truth. A number of complications naturally arise. In the morning, Valentine and the others arrive and the aunt learns the real situation. Then objections to the marriage of Andre and Helene are put aside.

"The Public Defender"

Harry Raver Presents Well-Acted Drama with Substantial Theme. Reviewed by George W. Graves

FRANK KEENAN, who certainly needs no introduction to picture theatergoers, is the featured actor in this picturization of a book written by Lawyers Mayer C. Goldman and Frank W. Harris, whose subject matter is absolute justice in law courts to poor as well as rich. The story points out the inefficiency of present systems, advances a remedy, and, through a series of dramatic situations, shows how in a particular instance the remedy proves its efficacy and justice. This, of course, makes the picture more or less of a propagandic subject, although the producers have not built their drama along conventional lines followed by this type of picture. As soon as the picture once gets under way there is no dearth of exciting situations, the action is swift, the direction painstaking and the acting most intelligent and realistic—all of which removes the offering far from the dullness of mediocrity. The theme used as the picture's basework—impartial justice to the poor in law courts—has found its way on the screen before, to be sure, but the counteracting remedy for present inadequate usages as found in the picture is a novel one and worthy of serious consideration.

Frank Keenan's portrayal of the soulless district attorney prosecuting the case for the state without regard for the meting out of impartial justice, is frought with interest for the spectator, inasmuch as Mr. Keenan makes his heavy role realistic to the point of perfection. The admirers of Mr. Keenan's art will surely be gratified at his art in this. Alma Hanlon, who by this time must have acquired quite a name with the theatergoers, plays daintily the part of a stenographer who has a vital connection with events in the story, and Robert Edeson as the "public defender" gives a very notable characterization. The three featured players, as the supporting cast, members of which are J. K. Roberts, John Sainpolis, and Florence Short, constitute an array of ability that cannot be lightly passed over by the exhibitor who wishes to present to his patrons stars who have already gained their seal of approval.

On account of the fact that "The Public Defender" has a story with real depth, developed with interest and even with "grip," enacted by a competent cast and given direction of a very fine sort, it seems to us that the picture is big enough to make a good place for itself in the state rights field.

"The Calender Girl"

Second Juliette Day American-Mutual Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS picture will probably meet varied receptions in the various theaters which will run it. If your patrons liked Juliette Day in her first picture, they will enjoy this. If Miss Day did not win them before, they may not care for this, since it depends largely upon the star's personality for its attraction. As a costume model, it gives Miss Day many chances to pose in pretty gowns and bathing suits. The story of the picture is not very remarkable, but serves its purpose. It is well photographed. As a whole, the offering is satisfactory as a light, pleasing entertainment, depending chiefly upon the appeal of the star. It is not especially strong either in humor or pathos, but it is pretty and will distract tired minds from heavier problems.

The release date is October 15.

The Story: The heroine is a model in the salon of a fashionable modiste. Her employer sends her to the beach, wearing a striking bathing suit, as a means of getting publicity. The girl plays her game cleverly. A photographer snaps her picture, and later wishes permission to use it on a calendar. The girl's employer gives him the right, but the girl and her mother refuse. A millionaire falls in love with the girl at the beach and has an amusing and exciting time finding her again. When he does, he wins the mother's gratitude by aiding them in their fight against the calendar company and finally wins the girl's love.

"Bondage"

Dorothy Phillips in a Fine Bluebird Production. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

"BONDAGE" is a feature above the ordinary Bluebird standard. It is simply but intelligently set forth by its director, Ida May Park, and it is excellently acted by Dorothy Phillips, William Stowell and the supporting cast. It is the type of emotional story which appeals to the average audience, especially the feminine portion. The story was suggested by Edna Kenton and put into scenario form by Ida May Park. It follows the fortunes of a clever and interesting woman, Elinor Crawford, whom Miss Phillips makes very convincing. She seems to live the part. It is one of her best roles and in it she adds another to the growing list of fine screen characterizations.

The fact that the play is set forth in a direct manner, with no unnecessary complications, adds to its strength. All padding is cut away, with the result that the action is smooth and the interest held and satisfied. The subtitles are worth noting. These are short and few, but each hits its mark. The story has plenty of good plot material, and it is so sincerely handled in directing and acting that it is convincing. William Stowell is an excellent foil for Miss Phillips. His restrained yet forceful acting aids the play greatly. The photography and settings are up to the best Bluebird standard. The picture as a whole is very worth while.

The Story: Elinor Crawford is a newspaper woman who writes sensational stories and is losing her refinement and moral standards. She meets Evan Kilvert, a prominent lawyer, whom she had know as a boy. Kilvert has old-fashioned ideas about women, and Elinor and her friends shock him. Elinor is angry with him and in a sarcastic mood, makes him the subject of a scathing article. She submits it to the magazine of which Bertie Vawtry is editor. Vawtry is fascinated by the article and its writer. He and Elinor become good friends.

Vawtry marries a wealthy woman but wishes to continue his love affair with Elinor. Disgusted and realizing how far she has gone, Elinor leaves her friends. They believe she has gone with Vawtry. By chance she meets with Kilvert again. He falls in love with her and they are married.

Before a year is over Elinor is restless in her new home and longs for her old Bohemian life. She goes back to her old friends and meets Vawtry. The old feeling returns and she considers running away with him. But she cannot quite persuade herself to and at the last moment goes away alone. Her husband believes she is with Vawtry but when he meets her sometime later, ill and alone, he takes her back to his home. His generous act reveals to Elinor the true nobleness of his character and she realizes that she loves him. Then Kilvert learns that Elinor had at no time been guilty of anything worse than unconventionality, and the picture ends with their entire reconciliation.

"Conscience"

William Fox Melodrama Released October 7. Reviewed by George W. Graves

"CONSCIENCE," whose story was written by J. Searle Dawley and Bertram Bracken, is a rather novel picture in the lights of its allegorical treatment and the general moral points it strives to bring home. Also the picture is very much out of the ordinary in its photography, as much as five exposures being employed in one scene.

As the story is told, it takes the form of lurid melodrama, rather too lurid and distasteful, perhaps, for a sensitively refined audience. The sheer wickedness of the heroine, leading her to captivate men and to spurn them with fiendish pleasure, is not particularly delectable food for the thought of entertainment seekers, especially as it is not made genuinely dramatic. But the picture, of course, has its place on the market for there are those who joy in this vivid exaggerated melodrama.

Gladys Brockwell handles all of her work with fine ability. First, the cold and devilish delight of the woman with her pas-

Triangle Five-Reel Moonshiner Drama Features Margery Wilson. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS is a moonshiner story built along routine lines and made very enjoyable through the acting, direction and fine atmosphere. The picture as entertainment is nothing especially out of the ordinary, but it averages as a very fair program release. There is one very big black blot on the face of the picture's entertaining qualities—the forced comedy brought in at most inopportune moments. The center of this comedy, or what was meant to be such, is a big negro who is allowed to overact terribly.

Margery Wilson and Charles Gunn, both of whom should by this time be good drawing cards, are featured. Miss Wilson is, of course, dainty and attractive and she has several very good bits of acting in the picture; but Mr. Gunn takes the acting honors in this particular picture. Charlie Gunn is making quite a record with Triangle. Others in the cast are Al W. Wilson, Jack Richardson, Aaron Edwards and Mary Boland.

The story was written by Julian Josephsen and Monte M. Katterjohn. Thomas Heffron's direction (outside of the negro comedy) is an exceedingly big asset of the drama.

Moss Goes Ahead With Theater

B. S. MOSS hastens to announce that the statement in a trade paper to the effect that he will not go ahead with the erection of his contemplated $1,000,000 theater at 181st street and Broadway, New York, is entirely erroneous and absolutely without foundation.

The assumption of this baseless report was probably brought about by a distortion on someone's part of the new-fangled "building zone" law, which temporarily affected Moss' new theater as well as some new theaters proposed by the B. F. Keith Company. The so-called "building zone" restriction, which prohibits a theater within 100 feet of the main thoroughfare in certain districts, has been circumvented by Moss with plans for an adjoining apartment house.

Mr. Moss wants to emphasize the fact that once the way is clear of the red tape, which is all that stands in the way of construction, the new theater will be built and ready to open in the early fall of 1918.

The "Wilson," as it is proposed to call the new house in honor of the President, will take in 200 feet on 181st street, running east to west, 178 feet from the north to the south, and a Broadway frontage of 100x178. The seating capacity will run to 3,000. The policy will be in line with the other Moss houses of vaudeville and photoplays.

Music in Mexican Theaters

By Vice-Consul William P. Blocker, Piedras Negras, Coahuila.

A prominent motion- picture theater in Piedras Negras has installed one of the latest pipe organs of American manufacture. The instrument is valued at $6,500 United States currency, f. o. b. Eagle Pass, Texas, and is one of the first of its kind in the Republic of Mexico. In addition to the regular pipe-organ features it has a 30-piece orchestra, mocking birds, tom-toms, and other instruments used to produce various sounds required in connection with performances by the actors in the films.

Since the organ was installed the house has been filled to its capacity each night.

Player pianos, electric pianos, etc., have never been placed on the Mexican market to any extent, and manufacturers of such instruments now have an excellent opportunity to obtain some business in these lines. Many motion picture shows will be opened as conditions improve. The Mexican people are great lovers of music and theatrical exhibitions, especially comedy, which gives electric pianos, with attachments for sounds appropriate to expressions on the screen, a preference over the Mexican orchestra of four to six pieces. The American one-step also has gained favor in the ballrooms over the old two-step during the past year, and ragtime music is gradually finding its way into the home, where only sentimental pieces were permitted before.

The Mexican duty on musical instruments is $0.60 Mexican gold per kilo (13.6 cents United States currency per pound), including packings.

from Harold Bell Wright's novel, at the Auditorium, Chicago.

The original date for the first showing was set after conference with contractors who are redecorating the big theater. The W. H. Clune representatives in Chicago were assured that the house would be in readiness by the opening night. But the contractor failed to reckon with the call of the National Army men to service. He had planned to employ one hundred decorators, but was able to obtain the services of only twelve.

An extensive advertising campaign, embracing not only the ordinary channels but several hundred newspapers in towns surrounding Chicago, had been carried out in connection with the presentation, entailing a loss of perhaps $10,000 to the Clune organization.

Crystal Installs Electric Chair

Manager W. H. Wassman recently had an electric chair placed in the lobby of his theater, the Crystal, on Fifth avenue, Nashville, Tennessee, charged to the hilt with electric current, but nevertheless harmless except for furnishing power to an electric globe and buzz-box to attract attention. Attention it did attract, and the pavement was packed for several days with curious onlookers, many of whom found their way to a cool seat inside.

Plan to Lease Birmingham Orpheum

A proposal by Robert Lawrence is under advisement by the City Commission to lease the Orpheum Theater, Birmingham, Alabama, at a monthly rental of $200, for use by community singers during the winter season. It will be necessary for the City Commission also to purchase about $1,100 worth of chairs for use in the auditorium. These chairs, however, can be removed from the building in the summer and placed in Capitol Park.

R. L. Coffee of the Standard Film Service of Dallas, Texas, has just returned from the North, where he had gone to play "Fighting in France" in Indiana, his company owning state rights there. While away Mr. Coffee purchased the entire Unicorn exchange at Indianapolis, and had the 1,000 reels shipped to Dallas. This purchase puts the Standard in position to book customers for a regular weekly program or a feature program.

James Q. Clemmer, manager of the Clemmer Theater, Seattle, has added six pieces to his eight piece orchestra. Some of the musicians which now compose Guterson's Russian Orchestra are internationally known and Mr. Clemmer is advertising his theater as the "House of Music."

Three daily concerts are given, and on Friday and Tuesday afternoons special concerts consisting of five or six selections are featured. These are proving very popular among Seattle motion picture patrons. With the addition to his orchestra Mr. Clemmer raised his admission price to 20 cents in the evening, 15 cents remaining as the matinee price.

Mary Charleson Opposite Walthall

Mary Charleson, the fascinating young woman, who has won a host of friends while appearing opposite Henry B. Walthall in many of his greatest successes of the Essanay Company has been engaged as leading woman with the Henry B. Walthall Pictures Corporation whose productions will be made under the executive direction of Paralta Plays, Inc. Miss Charleson has won the distinction of appearing as leading woman for this illustrous star after a wide and varied experience in the hall of dramatic fame. Her father was one of the famous "heavies" on the stage of Ireland, the country in which she was born, and she made her first appearance behind the footlights as a baby in arms. Since that time she has been connected with the stage until her entrance into motion pictures.

Mary Charleson, charming Paralta star.

"It was about seven years ago," said Miss Charleson, "that I first went into pictures playing with the old Reliance Company in New York. After which I joined the Vitagraph forces, remaining with them for two years and then went with Lubin. I have appeared in a number of feature pictures for the World Film Company and for the Selig Company and joined the Essanay Company, where I received my first opportunity to play leads with Mr. Walthall. That was about a year ago."

Among some of the pictures in which Miss Charleson has appeared with Mr. Walthall are "Burning the Candle," "The Saint's Adventure," "The Truant Soul" and "Little Shoes." She has also appeared in "Mr. Barnes of New York," "The Prince Chap," "Sealed Lips," "Passers-By" and "The Country that God Forgot."

New Globe Films Manager

Bert Lubin has been appointed general sales manager of the territory embraced by Western Canada, acting in this capacity for the interests of The Globe Films, Ltd., a new organization of prominent Canadian exchangemen and financial lights. Globe Films, Ltd., has recently acquired the rights to "The Warrior," starring Maciste, of "Cabiria" fame.

New Universal Comedy Company

The latest addition to the directing force at Universal City is Edwin Frazee, well-known producer of comedies who will direct two-reel subjects.

Frazee is the director of a number of successful Keystone comedies, including "Crooked to the End," "The Village Vampire," "An Oily Scoundrel," "Bathtub Perils," "Love Will Conquer" and "A Favorite Fool," in which Eddie Foy and the Seven Little Foys were starred.

He also produced "Social Pirates" and other comedies for the Fox company.

A new company of players has been organized by Production Manager McRae for Director Frazee. The principal comedian is Stanley Laurel, who recently was one of the featured players at the New York Hippodrome. Rena Rogers, who has been appearing in Vogue comedies, will play the leading feminine role, and Neal Burns, who is well known through his work in Christie comedies, will be the juvenile man.

Dorothy Bernard with Fox

Dorothy Bernard has returned to the Fox forces in the Eastern studios at Fort Lee, N. J. Miss Bernard is before the camera in the role of Eponine in "Les Miserables," the massive production starring William Farnum. Jewel Carmen plays Cosette. Frank Lloyd is the director.

Miss Bernard's last production for William Fox was "Sporting Blood," which was made by Bertram Bracken, now directing Gladys Brockwell in California.

Eleven pictures stand to Miss Bernard's credit. In some of these she was featured. Her screen record for Fox Film Corporation includes: "A Soldier's Oath," "Fighting Blood," "The Bondman," "A Man of Sorrow," "The Broken Law," "The Little Gypsy," "The Song of Hate," "Dr. Rameau," "Princess Romanoff," "Sins of Men" and "Sporting Blood."

Largest Stage Under Way

What will probably be the largest motion picture stage built is now in course of construction at the Triangle Film Corporation's Culver City studio. It covers a ground space of 400 by 60 feet and will be of reinforced concrete and glass. It is to be used exclusively for comedy productions, and upon its completion the Triangle-Keystone forces now working at the old Fine Arts studio on Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, will be moved to Culver City.

This is the first step in the building campaign outlined for the sixteen acre addition recently made to the Culver City plant. The plans for these improvements represent an outlay of nearly one million dollars and will make the plant the largest in the world.

New William Fox Plays

Work has begun on a new William Fox production in the West Coast studios. Richard Stanton will supervise it and the cast will include Enid Markey, Frankie Lee and Fanny Midgley. Miss Markey was George Walsh's leading woman in "The Yankee Way"; Frankie Lee was in "Sins of Her Parent," "One Touch of Sin," "Durand of the Bad Lands," and "The Soul of Satan," and Miss Midgley has been on the stage since she was fifteen years old.

Mr. Stanton's most recent films were "The Spy" and "The Yankee Way."

The last named production, incidentally, is one of the cleverest and speediest comedy-dramas William Fox has yet produced. The picture fits George Walsh, the star ebullient, like the proverbial glove. George is now working in a production under the direction of his brother, R. A. Walsh, called "This Is the Life."

Mr. Fox has opened "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" at the Globe Theater, New York. This is the second of the Fox Kiddies' Features to be shown. The same children who enacted "Jack and the Beanstalk," the first of the series, appear in the chief roles of "Aladdin." Francis Carpenter has the title role, that of the son of Mustapha, the tailor, who aspires to the love of the beautiful princess, portrayed by Virginia Lee Corbin.

The next Fox special feature—for the week of September 30—will be Gladys Brockwell in an allegorical film called "Conscience," in which Miss Brockwell essays half a dozen characters. It demonstrates finely her splendid histrionic abilities. Bertram Bracken is the director and Bertram Grassby appears opposite Miss Brockwell.

New Washburn Play

Bryant Washburn's new comedy-drama, "The Fibbers," will be released by Essanay October 15, on the Perfection Picture program. Trade showings of the five-part picture are now in progress at George Kleine's branch offices.

"The Fibbers" is announced as another typical Washburn production, presenting the star in the same subtly humorous type of characterization which made the Skinner pictures famous. Virginia Valli, who has been seen with Mr. Washburn in numerous of his former productions, and also enacted the leading feminine role in Taylor Holmes' initial Essanay production, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," played the woman's lead in "The Fibbers." The picture has a screen time of sixty-four minutes .

Dancer in Big Vs

Florence Curtis, the sprightly little dancer who was with the Cohan Revue last season, has abandoned the musical comedy stage for motion pictures and now is engaged as leading woman in the Big V comedies produced by Greater Vitagraph. Miss Curtis has done so well on the screen that Lawrence Semon, director and leading comedian of the Big V company is now engaged with Graham Baker, scenario writer, in producing a script that will give Miss Curtis an opportunity to display her skill as a dancer.

The engagement of Miss Curtis was part of the plan of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company, to make pretty girls a distinctive feature of the Big V comedies in future. There now are a score of them in the Big V "beauty squad."

Types in "Empty Pockets"

"Empty Pockets," the mystery story by Rupert Hughes which Herbert Brenon has chosen for his next picture, is composed mainly of types. For this production there will be no star, but a typical Brenon cast will be headed by Bert Lytell, Barbara Castleton, Galanta and Susanne Willa.

Mr. Brenon has had considerable difficulty with his types. His casting director presented to him one character actor after another, till in desperation he went to the east side district of New York. It was there in the Jewish theater that he found the necessary material and Mr. Brenon is now satisfied. The scenes in the sweatshops are acted by people from the sweatshop district and Mr. Brenon is satisfied.

Industry's War Committee Meets

At a recent meeting of the war council of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, comprising the chairmen of the various sub-committees which are acting in conjunction with the federal departments, plans were discussed for extending the scope of the work of the war co-operation committee with a view to providing more effective co-operation with the government in the prosecution of its war policies.

The motion picture liberty loan committee, of which Adolph Zukor, president Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is chairman, reported that the treasury department had approved a liberty loan film comprising five distinct subjects with patriotic appeals for subscriptions to the second loan, and which is to be supplemented by a series of colored slides and distributed among the 16,000 motion picture theaters throughout the country.

Captain Edward C. Kavanagh of the U. S. Army addressed the committee, soliciting the support of the industry, as represented by the National Association, in raising a fund to supply tobacco to the soldiers as they embark on the transports. The request was granted immediately, and a committee appointed consisting of S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto Theater, New York; J. A. Berst, vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Lee A. Ochs, president Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, to co-operate with the quartermaster's department of the United States army.

Essanay Men Drill

Although many Essanay actors and studio employes either enlisted in the army or navy or were selected for the new national army, those remaining behind are intent on "doing their bit."

President George K. Spoor has turned over Studio C of the Essanay plant for drilling purposes two nights a week. Nearly a hundred actors and other Essanay employes drill several hours. They represent a unit of the new Illinois Home Reserve Guard, organized by the state officials to replace state militia units called for war service.

Virtually every man in the Essanay organization who could qualify is a member of the organization. Uniforms are being provided as rapidly learning the business of being soldiers. Copies of the United States Infantry Drill Regulations are the most popular reading matter among men of Essanay these days.

Titles All-Important, Says Smith

Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, in a recent discussion of the various factors that enter into the work of "putting over" a picture, expressed the conviction that half the battle is won with an effective title. This fact, he says, appears to escape the notice of many manufacturers.

"To estimate the true value of a title," said Mr. Smith, "you have only to ask yourself a few simple questions. What is the first influence that sways you in the choice of a book or the play you are going to see? The title. What is the first thing that attracts the picture palace patron? The title of the star film. What is the first thing that catches the eye of the film buyer? The title. What first catches the eye of the film renter? The title. And to come back to the script itself, what is the first thing that the scenario editor reads? Again, the title.

"So you will readily realize when you come to consider the matter that the title is a big factor in the career of a photoplay from its very conception. Indeed, the conception itself very often hangs upon the title. Personally, I keep a notebook containing hundreds of titles and very often one of those titles itself has suggested the possibility of a story. And that is the first essential of a title, that it should contain a suggestion and that it should immediately suggest a wealth of possibilities to the reader.

"A good title should rouse certain emotions in the reader, notably those of curiosity and imaginative excitement. And it should be remembered that the value of the title holds from the beginning, commencing with the reader or scenario editor, right through to the producer, buyer, renter and exhibitor, till it reaches the audience. Many a comparatively poor scenario has sold on its title alone; and while equally many a good script has been returned to its owner because it did not answer to a good name.

"The essential of a good title is that it may be 'punchy' and carry a suggestion of just what the picture is about."

"Best-Dressed Man" of Screen

Kathleen Clifford, the dainty star of "Who Is 'Number One'?," the Anna Katharine Green story that Paramount has made into a serial, has had an extended career as a musical comedy star and vaudeville headliner. She gained great fame for her impersonations of boys and men, and is known as "the best dressed 'man' on the stage."

Until she appeared in the Paramount serial, Miss Clifford never had been in motion pictures. She was born in Charlottesville, Va., in 1894 and was educated in England, but she's an American through and through.

She was a very young lady when she returned to America and decided she would became an actress. She approached Charles Frohman.

"What can you do?" he asked the tiny miss who was seeking a career.

"Nothing," she answered promptly. And he immediately signed her.

"You'll have nothing to unlearn," he explained, and he put her into the cast of "The Top O' the World" where she immediately established herself as an actress of ability.

This engagement was followed with important parts in "Little Dorrit," "Little Boy Blue," "The Follies Bergere," "The Winsome Widow," "Everyman's Castle," "A Pair of Queens," "Business Before Pleasure" and "The Heart of a Child." In between these engagements she toured in vaudeville and became as popular in the "two-a-day" as she was on the legitimate stage. Most of her vaudeville acts, songs, lines, and music are her own work.

Versatility to Mark Charlotte Play

The screen drama, now in the making, in which Charlotte, the faomus skater, is starred, should be a winner. During the unfolding of this story, she is called upon to run the gamut of physical tests, showing that she not only is a genius of the stage, but also a sportswoman of great daring. She will not only present her skating feats, but will also dance, dive, swim, ride a horse at breakneck speed, operate a wireless machine, try her hand at the wheel of a speeding yacht, and race in an automobile.

Censor Tells Troubles

THIS letter from a state film censor contains information interesting to the trade in general and valuable to producers in particular as throwing light on the workings of the censorial mind—and scissors. We reproduce it verbatim. A copy of the censor report mention may be had upon application to the Censor State Board of Review, Old City Hall, Kansas City, Kansas.

MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago;

When I sent you the repart of the Kansas State Board of Review, I thought you would use it in your publication. I sent it to you with that hope because I wanted to get your viewpoint. Now, most of the scenes that you list in your editorial as ludicrous are scenes that have been ordered by the National Board of Review. Many companies do not make the eliminations on copies which are sent into the states where there are legal censorship. I have always been very careful to order the eliminations as made by the National Board. I admit that they do seem comical when just reading a few words pertaining to such scenes.

Comedies Hard to Censor

I also find the hardest thing to censor is comedies. You probably see one comedy now and then. I see thirty to fifty reels a day and it seems to me that the directors of comedy all have the same idea that when every thing else fails some man or woman must lose their clothes. Often times, the scene is very vulgar and suggestive and the humor of this certainly does rest on the film producers and as long as I am a member of a Board I shall order such scenes eliminated.

I admit often times there is more comedy in the projection room than there is on the screen, especially when comedies are being reviewed.

Too Much Suggestiveness

I sent these reports to all producers hoping they would take time to glance over our work of the past three months as shown in this report. If they would only study their pictures and give them more of the human touch—do away with all these suggestive scenes—these horrible struggles and melodramas—long drawn out, tiresome love scenes—less infidelity shown in the pictures would be a great improvement. So many pictures of broken homes and betrayed girls are unnecessary and not entertainment. For when all is said and done, all the public wants is entertainment. They go there to forget all the day's worries and to live in the land of make believe and to leave rested and happy. When a picture does this, it is certainly worth while, and just at this time with the conditions of the country, such pictures are a blessing to everyone.

I, personally, now am editing these reports beginning this month. I want them to show the demand of the people of this State. I realize my responsibility. I know that "nobody loves a censor," but as long as we have the State law, let us be fair and just to everybody.

I have many friends in the film industry. I want to help them and I want them to help me. I want to co-operate in every way possible. I have always tried to give a fair, unprejudiced opinion and to stay with my decision when once given. I have always been for that great play, "The Birth of a Nation" and always will be. I will try to improve on these reports from week to week and if you are interested and have any suggestions to offer, I will greatly and deeply appreciate anything you may say.—Yours sincerely—Carrie H. Simpson, Kansas State Censor.

Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman, under the direction of William Wolbert, have begun the production of the five-reel feature, "Captain Sunlight," which is one of mountain-banditry, and so striking a resemblance between a noted western hold-up man and who is vacationing in the West, that interesting confusions result. Alfred Whitman is the "Captain Sunlight," of the story and Mary Anderson, in this picture, has one of the best roles of her "Sunshine Mary" career.

BAR HARBOR GETS EYE FULL

Annette Kellermann Walks Tight Rope in Teeth of Gale—Dives 85 Feet in "Queen of the Sea" Scene

Accustomed as blasé Bar Harbor is to the unique and unusual, it received two thrills recently when Annette Kellermann walked a tight wire and dove 85 feet into the ocean and when a massive tower was destroyed by dynamite.

The scenario of the new William Fox sub-sea photofantasy "Queen of the Sea" called for these two stunts and society waited a whole week for them to come off. Miss Kellermann, as in all of her work in pictures, refused to be doubled in the wire-walking scene, insisting upon doing it herself.

The wire on which she had to walk for the camera was stretched eighty-five feet above the ocean. It had a stretch or span of 150 feet and despite guy ropes and the use of a dozen falls it could not be kept taut.

Undaunted by the difficulties which beset her, Miss Kellermann announced that she was going to walk the wire. She practiced and waited days for a favorable wind, but every day for more than a week the wind blew a gale. The waiting got on Miss Kellermann's nerves and she finally announced that she was going to walk the wire the next day, no matter how hard the wind blew.

When the time came for the difficult feat there was a strong wind and she was almost blown from the top of the tower to which the wire was anchored. Five cameras were focussed on her. From the beginning it was a supreme struggle against the gale which was blowing. Partly protected against the full force of the wind by the tower Miss Kellermann's first few steps were perfect, then the fight began. Twice before she had gone the prescribed distance it looked as though she would be unbalanced. And finally in spite of wind and all she made a beautiful dive into the water 85 feet below.

Society which had asembled on the shores gave her rounds of applause, not only for her masterly feat, but for the nerve she displayed in making the walk against the wind.

Two days after the wire walking and dive the massive tower, built for the picture, was destroyed by dynamite and Bar Harbor had its second thrill of the week.

Dexter Opposite Elsie Ferguson

Elsie Ferguson's next picture, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing," marks the return to the Artcraft fold of Elliott Dexter, whose last work under this trade mark opposite Mary Pickford in "A Romance of the Redwoods," is well remembered. In Miss Ferguson's second Artcraft photoplay, Mr. Dexter appears in the role of Donelson Meigs, the young artist who falls in love with Jennie Cushing.

In the supporting cast to Miss Ferguson are various other well-known players, including Fania Marinoff, Frank Goldsmith, Callie Delatorre, Mae Bates, Edith McAlpin, Isabel Vernon, Blanche Craig, James Cogan and Marie Burk.

"The Hungry Heart," by David Graham Phillips, has been accepted for Paramount and will be produced in photoplay form with Pauline Frederick in the leading role.

More Praise for "Warrior"

A. H. Sawyer, of General Enterprises, Inc., received a communication this week from Edward J. Meagher, chairman of the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing, New York, regarding the recent showing of "The Warrior" to the prisoners of that institution.

"About fifty-eight per cent of the inmates," says Mr. Meagher, "are Italians up here and they greeted the appearance of their hero and idol, Maciste, with tumultuous applause. We have perhaps the most critical and exacting audience to be found anywhere and a picture has to be "more than good" to get over here. We have but one projection machine and in the intervals of changing reels the assemblage manifested their approval of "The Warrior" by continuous hand clapping. It is a remarkable and wonderful picture and I wish to thank you in behalf of the entire prisoner body for your kindness in making this projection possible. If you have a photograph of Maciste we shall be glad to print same in an early issue of The Star of Hope."

The Mutual Welfare League at Sing Sing is the most potent factor in the prisoner's life during his incarceration and prison authorities count the motion picture as one of their most valuable assets in the work of diverting and educating the inmates.

Who Is Cleopatra?

To the general public of today there was only one Cleopatra, the siren of the Nile, whose life has just been put into a magnificent film drama by William Fox, with Theda Bara in the title role, was the only bearer of that name who has become famous. As a matter of fact, however, the great Egyptian queen was the seventh of the name Cleopatra. The first Cleopatra was the daughter of Antiochus, king of Syria. Cleopatra VII, the most noted of them all, was a daughter of Ptolemy XIII, nicknamed "Auletes," or the Piper. This pseudonym was bestowed on the Pharaoah because he found his chief amusement in playing the flute.

The great Cleopatra was the third child of "Auletes." She, in turn, had four children, one the son of Caesar, the others, of Mark Antony. According to the laws of Egypt, she was legally married to both men.

Famous-Lasky Buys Paragon Studio

The Paragon studio and printing plant at Fort Lee, N. J., have been purchased by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. For some time the producing companies of both these organizations have been working at the Paragon studio, but the actual purchase was not made known until now.

The studio is 200x200 and there is approximately 20,000 feet floor space, exclusive of the work rooms and offices. The glass roof at the peak is 75 feet from the floor. Underneath the floor boards is a concrete base which obviates danger of jarring, which sometimes ruins an important scene. There are two revolving stages and a steel bridge which travels the length of the studio.

O. Henry Filming Delayed

Completion of Greater Vitagraph's adaptation of "A Municipal Report," the O. Henry story which was made into a five-reel Blue Ribbon feature at the direction of President Albert E. Smith, was delayed several days on account of the non-arrival of the players' trunks from Baltimore. This company was on location for several weeks at the Galloway Stock Farms, a magnificent estate near Easton, Md., and through an error in transfer their trunks did not reach New York until several days after the players had arrived at the studio in Brooklyn.

Theater Named for Margaret Mayo

Those who are in need of testimony to what woman is doing in the world of art need only point to the announcement just issued from the offices of Selwyn & Company, New York theatrical producers, that they will open in West 42d Street, New York, a comodious new playhouse to be known as the Margaret Mayo Theater.

Miss Mayo will therefore prove, henceforth, the seeming paradox of a bright star of the motion picture world with a "speaking stage" theater named after her. With her present declaration that she will do no more work for the so-called "regular" playhouse, she is inclined to regard the new theater as being a sort of monument to past endeavor.

Metro Releases Five Features in October

"Draft 258" and Metro-Drew Comedies Not Included—Harold Lockwood, Emily Stevens and Madame Petrova Among Stars Listed

FIVE superb feature productions will be presented by Metro Pictures Corporation during the month of October, as well as the usual quota of Metro-Drew comedies. These are exclusive of the patriotic special production de luxe, "Draft 258."

Ethel Barrymore, Harold Lockwood, Emily Stevens, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, and Mme. Petrova are the stars represented in the October output. First on the list is "Paradise Garden," with Harold Lockwood as star, released October 1.

"Life's Whirlpool," the October 8 release, has the celebrated Ethel Barrymore as star. It is an all-Barrymore production, for it was both written and directed by the star's brother, Lionel Barrymore.

Supporting the star in this production is a cast of Metro favorites, including Alan Hale, Paul Everton, Walter Hiers, Ricca Allen, Reginald Carrington and Frank Leigh.

"A Sleeping Memory" is a seven-act Super-Feature starring Emily Stevens. It is a screen version of E. Phillips Oppenheim's splendid novel of the same name, and has been adapted for the screen by Albert Shelby Le Vino. "A Sleeping Memory" makes remarkable demands on the versatility and acting ability of the star, and no one but an artist of Miss Stevens's well-recognized talents could have emerged from the ordeal triumphant.

In "A Sleeping Memory" Miss Stevens has the part of Eleanore Marston, a rich girl who becomes penniless, and who, unable to cope with the poverty that confronts her, permits a scientist to perform an operation on her brain whereby all recollection of her past life is blotted out. By a further experiment, she is then hypnotized and made to remember her previous incarnations. Miss Stevens acts in turn the mate of Ulric, a Viking of old, a woman of the court of Catherine de Medici, and a girl of Salem witchcraft days. The most dramatic incident in the life of each is depicted on the screen. "A Sleeping Memory" has been given a superb production. Frank Mills plays opposite the star, and the supporting cast includes Walter Horton, Kate Blancke, Mario Majeroni, Richard Thornton and Frank Joyner.

"More Truth Than Poetry" is the October 22 release. Mme. Petrova appears in this five-part feature, which has been written by the star herself. It is a story within a story. Elaine Esmond, a novelist, is so absorbed by the theme of her new novel that she continues dictating to her stenographer hour after hour, "More Truth Than Poetry" being the child of her imagination. Vera Blair, the heroine of the story, aids her husband in winning the success that he could not attain without her assistance, and when he has reached the pinnacle of fame and fortune, he attempts to discard her in favor of another woman. Her treatment of this crisis forms the climax of the play. Mme. Petrova plays the dual role of the novelist and the heroine. Mahlon Hamilton has the leading masculine role, that of Ashton Blair. Others in the cast are Violet Reed, Harry Burkhardt, William B. Davidson, Charles Martin, Mary Sands and Anthony Merlo. Burton L. King directed the picture.

Metro's final release for October is "The Adopted Son," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars. "The Adopted Son" is a picturization of Max Brand's story of the same name appearing in the All-Story Weekly. Charles Brabin has directed this six-part Super-Feature under the personal supervision of Maxwell Kerger, and it has been adapted for the screen by Albert Shelby LeVino. "The Adopted Son" is a stirring tale of the Tennessee mountains, and of a feud of long standing between two prominent families, the Conovers and the McLanes.

A capable cast, including J. W. Johnston, Leslie Stowe, John Smiley, and Art Ortega, interprets "The Adopted Son."

Nazimova Company Goes South

Madame Nazimova, who has signed a long time contract with Metro Pictures Corporation to appear in super-productions, has left with Director George D. Baker and a large company for New Orleans, Louisiana, where the exteriors of her initial Metro photodrama, an adaptation of Mabel Wagnalls' "A Rose Bush of a Thousand Years," will be staged.

The members of Madame Nazimova's supporting cast who are accompanying her to New Orleans are Charles Bryant, her leading man; Frank Currier, Bigelow Cooper, John Sturgeon, Albert Hall and Philip Sanford. A large number of players will be engaged in the southern city for the ensemble scenes.

Much of the action centers around a monastery, which will be a large set constructed of masonry, that will equal in cost and size the great Tower of Babel set erected for powerful scenes in Metro's patriotic special production "Draft 258."

Shipman Discusses Independent Field

ERNEST SHIPMAN makes the statement that it is about an even break in responsibility between the producing and the exploiting ends of feature pictures.

This raises a much discussed phase of the industry, and each side of the argument will have its staunch advocates. Shipman, however, qualifies his statement by paying tribute to the creative genius of the producer and, while he contends that the volume of work and responsibility is about on a par, yet the creator of the product should be entitled to the lion's share of the profits. He says:

"This attitude, of course, refers to the independent producer, who constructs for the open market. It is somewhere among the unfettered directors that we are more apt to find the masterpieces.

"Creative genius requires to be surrounded with the safeguards of practical business, but in such a way as to foster the profits without warping the big thought of the producer.

"An eye to the world-wide appeal in the selection of theme is something which should not be overlooked, for while the God of War has temporarily checked some portion of our export trade, he is, at least, granting us a two-years' franchise for universal manufacture."

Mr. Shipman, with years of experience back of him, has announced that he has severed all connections with film producers for the purpose of giving his individual thought to exploiting a limited number of features in the open markets of the world, and has affiliated with Chester Beecroft for the export trade.

Mary Pickford's Director Drafted

Marshall Neilan, director for Mary Pickford and producer of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," has been drafted and last week received word to report to the concentration camp. The new Mary Pickford-Artcraft picture, "The Little Princess," adapted from the play and book of the same name by Frances Hodgson Burnett, is now being staged by Mr. Neilan and a short extension of time has been granted him in order to finish his work. Both Miss Pickford and the director are working night and day to complete the production before his time of leaving.

No Self Consciousness in Lee Kiddies

Exhibitors, especially patrons of Fox Film Corporation, view with evident relish the optimistic reports regarding progress of Jane and Katherine Lee, the William Fox "Baby Grand" film stars.

There has been always, and especially of late, a demand for juvenile film stars of big caliber, youngsters who would act naturally before the camera, act just as plain, everyday children, not as actors or actresses. In comedy roles they are scarce as hen's teeth. They are usually either utterly ridiculous, or absolutely flat.

Abetted by short-sighted directors, most of the juveniles appearing before the camera have destroyed rather than conserved the naturalness that makes children so attractive and beloved in real life. In trying to manufacture comedy instead of portraying it, they fail utterly.

The Lee "Kiddies"—Jane and Katherine, are exceptions, and their remarkable success in films, aside from their natural talent, can be traced to their ability to act just like real red-blooded kiddies would naturally act.

It is in this naturalness their chief charm lies.

Change in William Fox Releases

The little accident in William Fox's Eastern studios which gave dainty June Caprice a black eye (temporarily) and forced her into several days of idleness, has compelled another shift in the schedule of Fox releases for October.

Owing to the necessity which has now arisen for more time on "Miss U. S. A.," Miss Caprice's new subject, William Fox has transposed the release dates of "Miss U. S. A." and "This Is the Life" will be issued on October 21 and "Miss U. S. A." on October 28, instead of vice versa.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

LLOYD INGRAHAM will direct Margarita Fischer, newly acquired screen star for the American Film Company. Mr. Ingraham has recently completed a series of three productions, featuring Mary Miles Minter, who will be directed now by Henry King. The Minter productions are "Charity Castle," "Her Country's Call" and "Peggy Leads the Way."

Helen Holmes, the Signal-Mutual nerve-wringer, in her latest bathing suit, built specially for some of the "deep stuff" in "The Lost Express," her newest serial. Like to use this cut? Just say the word to "Motography, Chicago." There will be no charge.

Miss Fischer will first be presented as an American screen star in a timely five-reel feature dealing with modern questions, and called "A Daughter of Joan." It is a comedy-drama and was written by Beatrice Vander Pluym and William Parker, and adapted for the screen by Chester B. Clapp. Jack Mower will continue as her leading man. Frank J. Urson has been secured by the American Film Company to photograph the Margarita Fischer productions. Mr. Urson formerly worked under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham for several years and their long association in the motion picture field is expected to produce some excellent results in the Fischer productions.

If Little Mary McAlister's mother had not taken her to a photographer in New York two years ago, Essanay's child star probably would be learning her A. B. C.'s in school today instead of delighting movie fans by her acting. A moving picture producer's wife saw the child entering the photographer's rooms and, struck by the character of Mary's features, asked Mrs. McAlister to take the girl to the producer's office. Mrs. McAlister had not thought of making an actress of her child, but when the producer offered a contract she signed it.

Bryant Washburn, appearing in "The Fibbers," one of his latest Essanay pictures, declares he didn't have to rehearse a dish washing scene where he dons an apron and gives Virginia Valli, who plays the role of his wife, a lift with the kitchen work. Mr. Washburn says he always washes the dishes for Mrs. Washburn when the maid takes a night off or the cook leaves and another can't be found at once.

Vivian Martin is subjected to various exciting moments in her Paramount productions. Recently she had to engage in a fist fight in "The Trouble Buster." In a forthcoming production the script required that she be dragged through a mud puddle by several temperamental dogs. It spoiled a nice gown and splattered the star with mud—which she didn't permit to annoy her in the least.

Mary Pickford is being kept busy these days, mothering regiments, recruiting for the Canadians, appearing on behalf of charities and working. She is doing it all with the same engaging smile and if she gets tired out at times, she does not show it.

Vola Vale, the only girl playing in William Hart's second Artcraft picture, has been elected by Mr. Hart and his thirty or more cowboys as an honorary members of "The Horse-Opera Troupe," as Mr. Hart's company is called.

Tom Forman, Lasky leading man, who recently enlisted in the Coast Artillery Federal Reserve of California, as a private, is by way of becoming a second lieutenant, having taken the examination in company with several others.

The novel, "John Burt," is in the course of picturization by Director William Wolbert at the Vitagraph Hollywood plant. Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman play in the principal roles. The story is of the 1893 period and the action is laid in New England.

Anita King is a frequent and popular visitor at the aviation camp in San Diego, where she has learned to fly a plane and is as expert with it as she is with her automobile. Miss King is completing her second Mutual feature at the Balboa studio.

When the Santa Barbara boys, one hundred and seventy of them, left for the training station at American Lake, Washington, Margarita Fischer was early at the station to bid them a cheery "Godspeed."

Monroe Salisbury is being featured by the Universal as Anthony in Samuel Merwin's story, "Anthony the Absolute." Rupert Julian, the producer, has provided some most realistic Japanese and Chinese settings.

Ruth Roland is singing her way deep into the hearts of her audiences on the Pantages circuit and is appearing in Seattle, Portland, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. She is a tremendous favorite in the west.

Jack Warren Kerrigan is back on the lot once more. His leg still bothers him, but he would not stay in confinement any longer and is at work.

Grace Cunard is planning to make occasional trips to the California training camps during the next few months. She is vastly interested in the welfare of the soldier boys and believes that personal visits mean a whole lot.

Webster Campbell, the juvenile lead with the Vitagraph's eastern forces, first came prominently to the front in the "Beauty" pictures which were made at the American company at Santa Barbara. Later Webster acted with the western Vitagraph and the Lasky companies.

William Russell, for the past two months, has been using "Bull" Montana, Douglas Fairbanks' fighting partner, in Russell features up at the American studio at Santa Barbara. "Bull" became very fond of Mr. Russell and took every occasion to so inform him. "Duugalus," as the native of sunny Italy calls Mr. Fairbanks, "is very fine man, Bill, but I likea work for you!" But on coming down to Los Angeles on faithful and frequent intervals to see Mr. Fairbanks, he would remark: "Bill Russell, he vera fine man, but I lika work for you, Duugalus!" Mr. Russell and Mr. Fairbanks exchanged notes on the admiring "Bull" Montana and, getting him between them, had some fun as the result of his conflicting statements.

William Russell, American Film star, was formerly a professional boxer. He still likes this role. You can borrow this cut for the asking.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Pathe

Stranded in Arcady—(Five Reels)—Astra—October 14.—Lucy Millington is a dancing teacher and Donald Prime is a writer. Lucy has an opportunity to dance in Quebec and Donald is invited to visit his friend Gilder, who lives there. Lucy and Donald are drugged and wake up to find themselves marooned on an island in the Canadian woods. Although they are not acquainted at the time of the incident, they soon become fast friends. Lucy is compelled to rescue him from drowning, as he is apparently useless when it comes to looking out for himself. There are guards on the island that prevent them from leaving, and it seems as if there is nothing to be done but make the best of their situation. Donald becomes suspicious that his friend Gilder has had something to do with the affair, as previous to it Gilder has told him that he (Donald) should have an opportunity to study women. It later develops that the two are to inherit a fortune if they appear before a certain date, otherwise the money goes to another man. It is this man that has held them prisoners, having overheard a conversation in Donald's club. Lucy and Donald are rescued just in time by Gilder and claim their inheritance. Of course a speedy marriage follows.

The Torture of Silence—(Five Feels)—Gold Rooster—October 14.—The story is that of the young wife of a celebrated surgeon who is wrapped up in his profession and gives it such application that of necessity his home life suffers. The young wife is, in consequence, unhappy. Her only relief from a life which is fast becoming intolerable seems to lie in a handsome young man, the friend of her husband. He resists her pleadings to take her away with him, and writes her a letter to that effect, telling her that his friendship with the husband would not permit him to betray the confidence reposed in him. In a struggle at his house the young man is accidentally shot and dies. Some time later there is born to the doctor and his wife a child whom they idolize. Bound together by the child they are again happy together. A dealer in books has purchased the library of the dead man. Between the leaves of one of the books is found the letter of the wife urging the young man to elope with her. This letter is made the means of blackmail upon the woman. Horrified by the consequences of the folly of which she has now long repented, the wife agrees to pay the price demanded for the letter. It gets into the hands of the husband. Amazed at its contents and in doubts as to the true paternity of the child, he takes the boy to the country to a place which is unknown to the wife. There months later, after the woman has paid in full in suffering and tears for her folly, her husband at last learns the real truth and the three are reunited again.

Artcraft

The Narrow Trail—(Five Reels)—Artcraft—October 15.—Starring Wm. S. Hart. "Ice Harding" is an outlaw chief and has not been annoyed a great deal by the sheriff, owing to the fact that he has a very swift pony known as "The King." During his last hold-up he meets the girl who is to be the means of changing his career. Circumstantial evidence causes "Betty" to be suspected of being a crook, and only after many thrilling incidents are matters straightened out for the outlaw and his sweetheart.

World

Shall We Forgive Her?—World—(Five Reels)—October 15.—When a girl left her eastern home and went West at the request of the man she hoped to marry she found out that childhood sweethearts do not always make grown-up lovers. After a bitter experience she returns to the East only to find out that the past with its taunting ghosts continue to haunt her. Had it not been for the faithfulness of a friend whom she had befriended in that past she would not have been able to find peace and happiness at last with her husband and child.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

Dead Shot Baker—(Five Reels)—October 15.—"Dead Shot Baker" is the sheriff of Wolfville and the terror of the outlaws. He drives three of them from town without drawing his gun, and to get revenge they hold up the stage and kill the messenger and carry two girls away to the hills. After a struggle Baker and his posse overtake the bandits and rescue the girls, one of whom is the beautiful but wilful daughter of a Wolfville character who was once very wealthy but is now a penniless drunkard. Evelyn is indolent and will not accept the efforts of her new found friends to find employment for her. Moved by sympathy, Baker marries her, much against the sentiment of the place, which is that he is too good for her. The girl is anything but a loving wife and she is disliked by everyone. She shows great interest in the new postmaster, a dapper easterner, and they are seen together too much to please the people. A noted band of rustlers go on the rampage, and Baker leads his posse against them, and in a hand-to-hand fight with their leader, falls to apparent death over a cliff. The news of Baker's death arouses Evelyn, and filled with remorse she leads the posse back into the hills. The outlaws are routed and Baker is found and nursed back to life and happiness by Evelyn, now the heroine of all Wolfville.

Paramount

The Cow Jumped Over the Moon—(One Reel)—October 8.—Vic Moore. Vic gets the butcher bill and the total of it nearly knocks him off his feet. He decides then and there to put an end to the high prices. He starts out to purchase a cow and on the way he picks up a circular with a drawing of a cow, with directions of how to dissect her in the most economic way. He arrives at a farm house and buys a cow and starts homeward with her. En route he has no end of trouble, but eventually gets her home. The next morning at breakfast he is without cream for his coffee, and he figures here is where he beats the milkman. Out he goes to the cow, and knowing nothing about milking a cow, he thinks he'll "crank her." After much trying he finds the cow is "dry." He decides to be stylish and get a Dairy Maid for the cow, but his wife soon puts this idea out of his head. He then decides to map the cow out as per the drawing and take her to the butcher. He does, but he manages to get into an argument with the butcher, who throws him and the cow out of the place. The finish finds Vic without his cow and out the money he paid for it.

Mutual

Reel Life No. 78—Gaumont.—The Rocky Mountain Jay: Because it hangs around the cook tent, this bird has been called the "camp robber." It lays its eggs in the winter time, and therefore they are in great demand as curiosities by the museums. Then and Now, or How High Living Cost Wins the Race: When grandfather was a boy wages were less, but the dollar bought considerably more than it does today. An entertaining comparison of earnings in 1848 and 1917 is made possible by clever double exposure. Queer Trees of Trinidad: Three unusual trees are photographed. The Saman, or rain-tree, is so large that it takes a trolley car more than a minute to pass it. The second is a twin tree, a freak of nature, one fully grown tree growing on the top of another. The third is a tree planted by King George the Fifth when he was a boy. Dining on Wheels, How the American Traveler Is Fed: The greatest railway systems now pay as much attention to the commissary as to any other branch of service. Cooks and waiters are trained in special schools. Consequently the traveler dines as well and as economically at a mile a minute as he does at the best hotels. The Apparel and the Man: An animated drawing from "Life," which proves that man is not always what he seems.

Triangle

Mountain Dew—(Five Reels)—Triangle.—Featuring Charles Gunn and Margery Wilson. The story, by Monte Katterjohn and Julian Josephsen, tells of a young novelist who, invading the forests of the Kentucky moonshiners, is taken for a revenue officer, first by jealous enemies and finally by his sweetheart herself. The story reaches an exciting climax, with plenty of gun play, but the novelist is finally able to convince the dull mountaineers that he is only a harmless story writer. Thomas Heffron directed the picture. Reviewed in this issue.

Fox

Conscience—(Five Reels)—William Fox—October 7.—Featuring Gladys Brockwell. The story of this is in allegoric form, showing a woman, the reincarnated Serama, consort of Lucifer, working evil in the world at the present time, with the reincarnated Lucifer ever at her elbow, actuating her wicked deeds. But the woman, who has broken hearts promiscuously and caused anguish to many innocent souls, is finally brought up before the court of Conscience, receiving a penalty commensurate with her crimes. Reviewed in this issue.

General Program

The Fable of All That Triangle Stuff as Sized Up by the Meal Ticket—Essanay—(Two Reels)—October 13.—Once there was a heavy draft employe named Joe, who lived in a cold storage dispensary called a hash house. His bread pudding was dropped in front of him by the landlady's daughter Effie. Joe's fellow toilers regarded him as a mush-head because he stuck overtime. Joe got his promotion just when the wise Jimmies got the sidewalk. Effie looked to Joe like a million dollars worth of woman. Joe looked to her like a bushel of oats until he began to pull down at the works, then she and her maw suddenly fell to the fact that they were harboring a live one. Joe and Effie were married. Then one day the boss got the pipp and Joe took the reins. Effie, now in for highbrow stuff, regarded Joe as a handicap to her career. She could not help compare him with a literary gink she worshipped, who advised her to unhitch from Joe and marry him. While such a sympathy party was being staged one night Joe trotted in on them. Effie erupted all. Joe told the literary guy to stop trembling and there would be no scandal. He induced him to get his locks shorn next day, then took him before Effie. She took one look at her hero minus his Sampsons, then snuggled up to Joe. Moral: Many an aviator would look foolish sawing wood.

The Fable of the Film Fed Family—Essanay—(Two Reels)—October 20.—In one of the doubtful states was a city with more area than population where lived the Wiggamores. The main provider for the domestic plant was one Adolphus Wiggamore. Randolph, the first born, was employed in a bank. The daughter, Maidie, was undecided whether to be a barefoot dancer or a trained nurse. Then there was a kid brother. The Wiggamores saw no use in going to the theater, but kid brother went against the movies every time he could dig up a jit. The daughter slipped when she saw a poster with the name of her favorite star. About this time mamma Wiggamore was put on a club committee to investigate the movies. Then papa decided to do a little investigating himself. After a taste of the movies the Wiggamores found excuses to go often. Finally the cook got the habit and the Wiggamore bill for electric lights took a sudden slump, for the entire family sidled out to the nearest movie theater every evening. Moral: The principal ingredient of real entertainment is the absence of talk.

A Jitney Elopement—(Two Reels)—October 13.—Starring Charlie Chaplin. Reissue a general appeal. Chaplin is shown in the role of the favored suitor of an heiress, played by Edna Purviance. The girl's father, however, insists upon marrying his daughter to a poverty-stricken count, who demands $1,000,000 in addition to the girl. Chaplin calls and is mistaken for the count. The father hands over the money. While the three are at dinner the real count enters. There is a lively encounter in which the count, Charlie and the father take part. The fight is carried into the open, where several cops take part, only to be given a series of K. O. blows by Charlie. Finally, after a series of mirth-provoking adventures, Charlie and the girl reach an automobile, then the chase begins. Through mud holes, over ruts, and across formidable obstacles the two autos race at break-neck speed. When the machines reach a dock and Charlie is overtaken he used strategy to get rid of his enemies. He backs his car suddenly, pushing the pursuing machine and its occupants into the ocean.

Universal Program

The Wart on the Wire—Joker—(One Reel)—October 11.—Polly Piffle is the manager and sole owner of The Piffle Pickle Works. She is very joyful as she gazes on the announcement of the Wartless Pickle, which is the latest and most wonderful product of her factory. A messenger delivers a very mysterious letter which reads "Beware—beware—beware, divulge the secret of your wart remover or take the consequences."

It is signed, "The Wart." Polly rushed to the telephone and called up her friend and fiance, John Shirtless, the famous criminologist, and begs him to save her from "The Wart." Doctor Rainhole, although apparently a physician, is in reality a Man of Mystery. He is the inventor of the famous Wart Remover, and it will remove warts from anything on earth, pickles included. Having seen the ads of the Piffle Pickle Works, he feels certain that his formula has been stolen. The doctor has one foot that is much larger than the other, as have also his henchmen. By means of his wonderful psychic power he is able to dematerlize their bodies all except the odd sized feet, which is the only part that remains visible. The crooks enter the factory and force the men to tell that Polly is the owner of the secret formula. Polly hears them coming and just has time to gasp "The Wart" over the telephone wire to John before she is snatched away. By the means of an invention which he has attached to the phone he sees the entire occurrence at the factory. After many hair-raising incidents John captures the crooks and rescues Polly and they are united in happy anticipation of making a million out of the wartless pickle.

Hot Applications — Nestor Comedy — (One Reel.)—Eddie was fired and instead of getting his back pay he received three trunks of sample women's wear. He also had some more hard luck, for his aunt had died leaving him her business on condition that he was to manage it with his wife, but he had no wife. His pal Lee sees no reason why he cannot borrow some of Eddie's samples and be his darling wife, so together they decide to run the store. Asparagus Corners received the good-looking young manager and his smart city wife with all the excitement which was usually caused by the annual visit of the circus. Lee being a distractingly beautiful female, decided to open a beauty parlor and did a rushing trade. Trouble started when the wives of the village discover that their husbands are becoming altogether too interested in their physical appearance. Husbands found no supper on the table when they returned at night and began to suspect that their wives were becoming regular visitors at the beauty parlor. At last Mr. and Mrs. Dub chanced to arrive at the Beauty Parlors at the same time. Mrs. Dub was quickly smothered in hot towels by Eddie, and Mr. Dub was totally obliterated from view in the same manner by Lee. Then the two villains joined the hands of their victims and both went out to flirt with Kittie. Mr. and Mrs. Dub grew tired at last of mere hand-holding, and snatched off the sheltering towels, discovering each other! Then they leaped from the barber chairs and rushing into the front of the store, attached Eddie and Lee tooth and nail. Mrs. Dub won and getting her hands firmly embedded in Lee's blonde wig, she tore it from his head. Sensation! which was augmented when [illegible]m declared that as Eddie was not really married the store reverted to him. "If I'm not married, I soon will be," cried Eddie, leading forward the blushing Kittle, so all ended merrily as a marriage bell.

Universal Screen Magazine No. 40—October 12.—The Travels of a Check is the first subject of the Screen Magazine, Issue No. 40. These slips of paper plays an important part in our daily economic and domestic life, and sometimes travel through dozens of hands and thousands of miles. Some of these are illustrated. Making Maple Syrup is a subject which makes our mouths water. The real thing is made from the sap of the hard maple tree. We see the process from the tapping of the tree to the sampling of the syrup by a delighted small boy. Scenes in the Cincinnati Museum of Art come next. Reproductions of some of the greatest masterpieces of sculpture, from the ancient Greek to the modern Italian, are shown. American fashions have received a great impetus since the war. Some fashions created in our country are illustrated in the Screen Magazine. Madame Haverstick, one of the foremost dressmakers of the country, creates dresses before our eyes, Mme. Desiree Lebowska, the dancer, posing while morning, afternoon and evening gowns are draped upon her. A Miracle in Mud by the Screen Magazine's sculpor, Willie Hopkins, completes the reel. It is called "His Pipe Dream."

New Universal Serial with Eddie Polo

One of t[illegible] most widely known directors of pho[illegible]play serials—the man who staged "Who[illegible]ays," "Neal of the Navy," "The Grip of Evil" and "The Neglected Wife" for the Pathe program—has been engaged by the Universal to film a new serial which will soon be started at Universal City. His name is Harry Harvey, and he has been directing motion picture serials and other features for the past four years.

New England Exhibitors to Convene

The Copley Plaza Hotel at Boston, Mass., will be the scene of activity among picture men October 23, when the motion picture exhibitors of New England come together for a joint meeting and convention under the auspices of the Exhibitors' League of America.

A good deal of vital business will be brought before the assembly at this time and definite concerted action will be agreed upon in regard to the exhibitors attitude toward some of the big problems which confront them. The question of the music tax, it is reported, will consume a good deal of the time and thought of the meeting, and plans for the coming expositions will be discussed.

A joint open meeting and informal dinner will be held in the grill room of the hotel in the evening.

At the dinner, addresses will be made by Hon. Jas. M. Curley, mayor of Boston; Wm. A. Brady, national president N. A. M. P. I.; Lee A. Ochs, national president M. P. E. L. of A.; ex-Gov. David I. Walsh, Granville S. MacFarland, Stephen W. Bush, Louis Blumenthal, A. S. Black, C. H. Bean, E. H. Horstmann and others.

Loew's Newest and Finest House Opens

The opening of Marcus Loew's newest and finest house, the Victoria, at One Hundred Twenty-fifth street and Seventh avenue, New York, was a very successful event. Several thousand people tried to obtain admission but the entire house was filled with invited guests.

The house has a seating capacity of 3,000 and it said to have cost more than $1,000,000. Vaudeville and pictures are shown.

Elsie Ferguson was the guest of honor at the opening. She and "Fatty" Arbuckle addressed the audience. Mr. Arbuckle also directed the orchestra for one number. Irving Berlin sang some of his latest songs.

Among the notables in the boxes were Marc Klaw, Adolph Zukor, Walter Greene, Al Lichtman, general manager of Artcraft; Arthur Brisbane and many others.

Marcus Loew himself was present and, following Miss Ferguson's speech and in response to insistent demands from the audience, made an address of welcome. Mr. Loew was introduced as the man who was responsible for the theater and many others of a similar nature throughout the country, but this is believed to be the crowning triumph of his ten years of vaudeville endeavor.

Bobby Connelly Gets Warm Greeting at Theater Appearence

The National Board of Review and the National Committee for Better Films, in co-operation with Marcus Loew, have indorsed the Bobby Connelly Series, produced by Greater Vitagraph, as an ideal feature for children's entertainment, according to a statement by N. T. Granlund, of the Loew Enterprises, Inc. He says that the pictures were recommended to Mr. Loew by the National Board as the best for children's matinees and Mr. Loew has made them the feature of the Saturday morning matinees for youngsters in New Rochelle, N. Y.

In a letter to Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Greater Vitagraph, Mr. Granlund requested that little Bobby Connelly, the eight-year-old star of the Bobby series, be permitted to appear at the Loew Theater in New Rochelle and meet the kiddies of the town.

Bobby's coming had been heralded a day in advance and when he appeared in the theater he received an ovation. The theater was packed with 1,600 children and their parents or attendants, gathered to see Bobby and his picture, "Bobby, the Movie Director." This picture shows Bobby in his native element, the business of making pictures, and the youngsters got an insight into the studio when Bobby ran away from his director, picked up a bunch of his playmates and staged a picture of his own conception.

Drama and Comedy in U Releases

BELLE BENNETT is the star of the Gold Seal drama entitled "The Taming of Lucy," which heads Universal's regular schedule of releases for the week of October 15. It presents the theme of the unwilling bride married to the alleged caveman, whose reputation for rough virility acts as a bar to happiness. When the big test comes, however, the real man shines through. There are some unusual angles to this touch-and-go drama which seem guaranteed to give any spectator a real surprise at the climax. Val Paul, Betty Schade and Morris Foster are prominent in Miss Bennett's support.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will appear Tuesday, October 16, in a Nestor comedy entitled "Wild and Woolly Women," written by Fred Palmer and produced by Roy Clements. Edith Roberts takes the featured feminine role in this amusing commentary on life in a co-educational school.

The L-Ko comedy to be released Wednesday, October 17, bears the title, "Vamping Reuben's Millions." It was directed by Dick Smith under the supervision of J. G. Blystone, and details the many unusual occurrences in the life of an agriculturist whose good judgment of horses is only exceeded by his poor judgment of mortgages. Bob McKenzie, Eva Novak, Eddie Barry and Catherine Young are the principal funmakers. The ninety-fourth issue of the Universal Animated Weekly will be released on the same day.

Gale Henry and William Franey are the stars of the feature for Thursday, October 18, which is an uproarious burlesque on "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," entitled "The Cross-Eyed Submarine." Lillian Peacock and Milburn Moranti have parts well suited to their respective styles of humor, and the many mechanical novelties introduced in the course of "Prince Ducker's" ceaseless quest through the caverns of the deep for his kidnaped daughter will be sure to provide much genuine merriment. Dave Morris and Gladys Tennyson will be featured in a Joker comedy known as "The Magic Jass-Bo," released coincident with "The Cross-Eyed Submarine." Alfred Santell and A. F. Stater are responsible for the direction and authorship of this swiftly moving version of the art of slapstick, which exemplifies some of the best trick photography recently turned out at Universal City.

On Friday, October 19, Evelyn Selbie and Harry Griffith will be shown in a Victor comedy of English cockney life entitled "When Liz Let Loose," written by E. Magnus Engleton and picturized and produced by Ruth Ann Baldwin. The forty-first number of the Screen Magazine, containing several exclusive features of semi-news interest, will also be shown at the same time.

"The Temple of Terror," a Bison drama featuring Eileen Sedgwick and Fred Church, will be released Saturday, October 20. This is one of a series of short thrillers with wild animals prominent in the action that have aroused much favorable comment on the part of Universal patrons during the past four months. Gale Henry and William Franey will also be seen in a Joker comedy by R. A. Dillon and W. W. Beaudine, known as "Who Done It?" The mistakes of a jealous husband provide several hearty laughs in this exhilarating farce.

The week will also be notable in marking the closing episode of "The Gray Ghost" and the opening episode of "The Red Ace," Universal's new outdoor mystery serial which has already produced a remarkable impression for its vigor and well-timed suspense in Greater New York.

Olga Grey, Popular Charmer, Returns to Triangle

Olga Grey, who was once well known to Triangle patrons as one of the most alluring sirens on the screen, is back on the Triangle lot anxious to win new laurels in a field where she has already attracted considerable attention.

Olga Grey, who has returned to Triangle.

Miss Grey, who is known in her native Hungary as Annshka Zacsek, came to New York from her birthplace, Budapest on the Danube, when a mere child. Because of her father's wishes, her early ambition was not realized until chance gave her a small part at the old Fine Arts studio while she was travelling in the West with her parents. It was no small achievement for her to break the bonds of her musical training and enter the dramatic field, however, and she was not immediately secured to the screen.

Miss Grey has been cast for the role of the adventuress in Director Raymond Wells' new story, "Fanatics," where she will have an unusual opportunity to display her emotional ability. William V. Mong, who recently took a leave of absence from the Triangle playing forces to direct "Wild Sumac," also has an important role in this play.

Edwin Milton Royle showing Florence Reed how it's done in "The Struggle Everlasting."

Author Aids in Production of Rapf Film

Edwin Milton Royle, the playwright, in the screen version of whose allegorical production, "The Struggle Everlasting," Florence Reed is appearing for Harry Rapf, is at the studio daily, working with Miss Reed and co-operating with Bennett Musson, who is adapting the piece. James Kirkwood is directing the production, which is said to be mounted on a lavish scale. Miss Reed is supported by Milton Sills, Irving Cummings, E. J. Radcliff, Edwin Hoyt, Albert Hall, Wellington Plater and Fred C. Jones.

Philadelphia Exhibitors' League Holds Meeting

PRESIDENT O'DONNELL held the reins over a very lively meeting of the Pennsylvania branch of the M. P. E. L. of America, held in the Parkway building in Philadelphia on October 2.

The most important matter which came before the exhibitors was the report of the grievance committee on the alleged mistreatment of members of the League by one of the distributing companies. The matter will be further investigated and when a decision is reached the theater men will act in a body.

The League decided to move its headquarters to 1331 Vine street.

The dissolution of the Stanley Mastbaum Association of exhibitors was reported and it was announced that the members of this former organization desired membership in the League. After some discussion it was decided to bury the hatchet and admit all exhibitors who would tend to strengthen the League.

Following the meeting the men retired to Soula's Rathskeller for a luncheon.

New General Manager Student of Conditions

Since his recent appointment as manager of the New York City exchange of General Film Company, P. A. Bloch has been very busy organizing his forces for an enlargement of business by this branch and in establishing contact with the exhibitors in his new field. He comes to the metropolis after a highly successful regime as head of the Philadelphia branch of General Film, and has been from the beginning of his film career an energetic student of trade conditions in every phase of the industry.

Five Hundred Stars in Big "War" Pageant

THE silent and noisy stages combined their efforts in an extensive Red Cross benefit in New York last week in the form of a grand historical pageant of war.

Nearly 500 stage and film stars took part in the event, held at the Rosemary open air theater. It is estimated that the sale of seats alone netted the Red Cross $75,000. The motion picture of the pageant is expected to yield $225,000 more.

The event had been coached for weeks by some of America's most capable film and stage directors. Sousa's marine band of 250 men was one of the features of the occasion.

Five motion picture operators, under the direction of William Christy Cabanne, who recently staged "Draft No. 258," and had donated his services to the Red Cross, filmed each of the episodes from different parts of the amphitheatre. Between the first and second parts of the spectacle, they filmed the audience from the stage. The pictures will soon be shown in every city of the nation.

Chicago Notes

BALABAN and Katz are building a big 2,700-seat house at the corner of Twelfth street and Central Park avenue. The theater will be one of the most elaborate in the city and the presentations there will follow the general style ofr those of the Rialto in New York. It is expected that the house will be opened November 15. Further details concerning the new theater will be given later.

Albert W. Hale, director, passed through the city last week on his way to New York from the film coast.

The Monarch Film Company, whose offices were in the First National Bank building, has closed shop and the stockholders are wondering.

Frank Christoph, well known as the Indiana salesman for Pathe, was in the city last week on extended leave from the quartermaster's corps of the National Army.

Ralph A. Wettstein, manager of the Milwaukee Paramount branch in the Toy building, was in the city on business last week just in time to meet Fatty Arbuckle.

Earl Estes, the former crack organist who managed the big organ at the Crawford Theater, owned by the West End Amusement Company, has been drafted and is already attacking the earth at Rockford.

The $20,000 launch which was donated to the Government by Paul Armstrong of the West End Amusement Company is now in service somewhere on the Eastern coast. It is commanded by Mr. Armstrong's son, Horace.

Nicholas McDonald, cameraman with the Chicago Examiner, who made official Government motion pictures of the army activities on the border last summer, has received a commission as first lieutenant in the U. S. Signal corps and has left for a New Jersey training camp.

F. H. McMillan, who is handling safety projectors from the office of McMillan & Crowley on the fourth floor of the Consumer's building, last week made a trip to his company's factory in Duluth, where the new portable projector is made.

Things have been doing around the headquarters of the Operators' Union. The organization has sent forty men to the different camps, has won the new wage increase and escaped the serious fire that broke out in the building in which the union is located at Dearborn and Quincy streets.

Miss E. S. Corbett, better known as "Jim Corbett," has gone for a three days' stay on Bluebird business to South Bend, Indiana.

Sigmund Faller, manager of the Bijou Dream, reports that "Sirens of the Sea," the Jewel production featuring Louise Lovely and Carmel Myers, has broken all records for attendance.

Charles H. France, president of France Films, Inc., producers of a seven-reel feature about to be released, was in Chicago last week for a meeting of the board of directors of his firm.

Jesse L. Goldburg of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, Wednesdayed at the Hotel Sherman and made various negotiations pertaining to the new Lillian Walker play, "The Lust of the Ages."

The Ascher string of theaters continues to grow like the grass in the springtime. The latest additions to the chain respond to the names of the Grand Oak, a Hamburger house, and the Delphi.

M. G. Watkins, of M. G. Watkins, Inc., was in the city the first of this week on his return from a trip to Pittsburgh, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and other Eastern film centers. He will in the future make his headquarters in the Candler building, New York, where he is marketing special feature productions.

S. J. Stoughton has resigned as local Famous Players-Paramount manager and has been succeeded by Max Goldstine, former Artcraft manager. Mr. Goldstine is also district manager. It is said that Mr. Stoughton has returned to Pittsburgh, where he may become associated with another line of business.

Jack O'Toole, manager of the Fox exchange, is out and in most of the time these days, with the emphasis on the "out." He is making flying trips to towns and cities in the central district in the interest of the Fox Standard pictures and we understand that Jack is putting them over.

Chicago film folks who have not visited the Chateau Theater at Broadway and Grace streets, opposite the Bismarck Gardens, have missed something. The house, one of Ascher Bros.', seats 1,800 and is exceptionally beautiful and well arranged. The presentations are excellent, aided by a seven-piece orchestra and fine organ, a splendid stage setting and unusual lighting effects. Attendance at this house has been excellent since its opening a short time ago. Ten and 15 cents is the admission fee.

J. T. Rucker, head cameraman for Universal Current Events and Animated Weekly, directed the taking of pictures of the Sox-Giants series. He remained several days, and while here showed some new wrinkles in the way of making moving pictures of ball games.

H. A. Spanuth, president of the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, announces that the six-reel feature picture in which Charlotte, the ice skater, is being filmed, will be ready for release the latter part of October. Oscar Eagle is directing the production and Jack Meredith is the leading man.

It may not be generally known, but Louise Glaum, whose coming and goings are now so widely heralded, was once a member of a stock company at the Imperial Theater in Chicago. She received her first film experience at the Essanay studios in Chicago. Miss Glaum also made a tour with a company playing "The House of a Thousand Candles."

Watterson R. Rothacker, head of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, has been in Washington, D. C., on business connected with the war cooperation committee for the motion picture industry, of which William A. Brady is head. Mr. Rothacker is also a member of the advisory board of the American Red Cross Bureau of Motion Pictures.

R. W. Berman, manager of the New York Jewel office, is making an extensive trip around the country, visiting all the Jewel exchanges. He stopped over in Chicago for a day and was pleased at the results gotten by Eli Van Ronkel, the Chicago manager. Mr. Berman's next stop will be at Kansas City, where he expects to stay for several days.

In order to make the big ice skating scene in the six-reel picture now being filmed by the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation in which Charlotte is being starred, the Arena, Chicago's most famous skating rink, will be especially frozen over. In this scene a hundred skaters take part in carnival costume. Charlotte is also appearing at the College Inn every evening.

George H. Moore, manager of the Orpheum, is all enthusiasm over the new big feature policy that is being tried out in this popular "heart of the city" house. He has D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance" slated for the interim between October 10 and 14, and during that time expects to break house records. Any number of people, he says, have come to him and asked him when he expected to run that great spectacle film.

Among the visitors to the American Film Company plant last week was a committee from the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' Association, headed by Mrs. Frederick Michaels, chairman of the Better Film Committee of the Association. They spent an afternoon looking at the latest of the Mary Miles Minter pictures, "Charity Castle" and "Her Country's Call," and later took a trip through the many interesting departments of the plant.

M. Carzas is building a splendid new picture house on Sixty-third street.

Bryant Washburn, who has departed from the familiar Argyle studio to join Pathe, has removed with his family to Los Angeles.

At the meeting of the Motion Picture club at the Hamilton club last Monday evening Roderick Ross, the w. k. printer de luxe to the film trade, gave an interesting talk on war conditions in Canada as found by him on his recent trip to Halifax.

Charles E. Ashley, Essanay director, is in New York on his honeymoon. He was married September 24 to Miss Gretchen Frase, daughter of Mrs. B. M. Frase, of 1259 Victor avenue, Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Ashley will be at home at 3100 Leland avenue upon their return.

H. K. Somborm, general manager of the Longacre Distributing Co., producers of the Alice Howell comedies, dropped into town for a few days, interrupting his trip to the coast. Mr. Somborm is making what he calls a "pulse feeling tour" to find out what kind of comedies the exhibitors need to meet public demand. He expects to stop at all prominent cities and meet as many exhibitors as possible.

Solicitors for the second Liberty Loan found open doors and check books in their canvass of the Essanay plant at the launching of the campaign the week of October 1. When a delegation representing the Chicago committee called at the plant they were informed by George K. Spoor that the shop was theirs. A trip through the studios, offices and manufacturing plant earned a ready response and a substantial amount was gained.

Chicago Branch of A. E. A. Holds Meeting

The Chicago local of the American Exhibitors' Association held a meeting last week at its Windy City headquarters. It was one of the largest gatherings of exhibitors held in Chicago in several months. Seventy-one of the leading exhibitors turned out for the meeting, many of whom were not affiliated with any exhibitors' organization.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, addressed the gathering. His remarks made such an impression on the audience that the local's membership was increased sixteen members. At the conclusion of the meeting everyone expressed the opinion that it was the most successful assemblage of exhibitors they ever attended.

They all endorsed the businesslike principles of the American Exhibitors' Association, and the local turned over to the treasury of the national body of the A. E. A. a check for the annual dues of fifty-one members.

Universal City Stages Fire not in Scenario

UNIVERSAL City suffered a $10,000 fire loss last week as a rampant blaze broke loose and for a time threatened to sweep the whole city. It started outside of the buildings, but worked its way through the dry grass up to the big plant and before it could be stopped had cremated several sets of buildings erected for Western street scenes.

The Universal City fire department and the studio force battled with the flames as sparks from the burning buildings fell to one of the stages and set fire to a number of overhead diffusers.

Actors and actresses were forced to flee as flames sprang up about them. Valuable "props" and scenic effects were destroyed, delaying the production of pictures on which the Universal Company was working. The new electric-lighted studio, construction of which was launched only a few weeks ago, was threatened, but efficient fire-fighting saved it.

Plans for National Expositions

M. P. E. L. AND NATIONAL ASSOCIATION COMMITTEE MEET IN NEW YORK

THE industry is already laying its plans for the big national shows at which the annual displays of all kinds of picture wares will be made to the public.

As stated in MOTOGRAPHY some time ago, two national expositions will be held during the coming year. The first will take place in February in New York City and the second in Boston in July. The latter will be the regular annual convention and exposition held by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Joint Exposition Committee Meets

The members of the joint exposition committee, representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, have met at the headquarters of the National Association for the purpose of organization and for the consideration of plans for the 1918 exposition.

In the absence of President William A. Brady, chairman ex-officio of the committee, Arthur S. Friend of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation presided, and others present, representing the National Association, included J. A. Berst, J. E. Brulatour, Gabriel L. Hess, J. H. Hallberg, P. A. Powers, Walter W. Irwin, William L. Sherrill, and representing the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Lee A. Ochs, J. H. O'Donnell, Alfred S. Black, Louis F. Blumenthal and Ernest Horstman.

To Decide on Location

The committee considered two propositions which have been received for the New York exposition and decided to refer the selection of a location, as well as the direction of a show to a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Berst, Powers, Ochs and Blumenthal, with President Brady, chairman ex-officio.

A special sub-committee appointed to close arrangements in regard to the Boston show consists of Messrs. Brulatour, Irwin, Horstman and Black, President Brady, as chairman ex-officio. A committee consisting of President Brady, Ochs and Horstman was appointed to recommend a manager or managers for the New York and Boston expositions, this committee to report back to the joint exposition committee their recommendations for confirmation.

Exhibitors' Ball November 5

Communications were read from the ball committee of the Exhibitors' Association of the Bronx, requesting financial co-operation in connection with a ball to be held on election eve, November 5, and from the Manhattan Local of the Exhibitors' League, requesting co-operation in connection with a ball to be held on Thanksgiving eve. The committee decided that it could not recommend co-operation in either of these events and the executive secretary, Frederick H. Elliott, was instructed to notify the officers of the respective organizations accordingly.

Industry Aids "Food Week"

All the resources at the command of the motion picture industry will be used to insure the success of the "Food Pledge" week scheduled for October 21 to 28.

Plans have been completed by the motion picture committee appointed by William A. Brady to co-operate with the food administration and will be ready to be launched at the appropriate time. This committee is headed by Arthur I. Friend, counsel of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and its other members are Alex Pantages, who operates a big chain of theaters in California; Thomas Ince, of the Paramount Film Corporation; Donald J. Bell, of the Bell & Howard Co., and John Wiley.

The heartiest possible co-operation is to be given to the United States Food Administration in its endeavor to enroll the 22,000,000 families of the nation into a great food conservation army. Through the efforts of the committee the assurance of aid from the majority of the nearly 20,000 theater owners has been promised.

Slides showing the campaign slogans and posters will be displayed. A striking figure of "Miss Liberty" will appear on the inside and outside of every theater which is helping the food campaign.

Attached to the various news weeklies will be trailers carrying special food pledge features during the week of October 21.

To further the food campaign it is planned to produce scenarios which will advance the ideas Mr. Hoover wishes to impress upon the country. Care will be exercised, however, in excluding everything susceptible of the charge of being mere propaganda. Those in charge of the work are wise enough to realize that its value will be impaired if the scenario does not contain a certain amount of entertainment as well as instruction.

"War Tax Great Thing"—Selznick

BY LEWIS J. SELZNICK.

When I advocated open booking the film industry generally said I was crazy. In less than a year's time, however, I was proved right and open booking was the accepted order of the day.

Again the film industry is going to say that I am crazy when I state as I do now that I am most emphatically in favor of the government's tax on motion picture film. But I know that I am right and time will prove me so just as it proved me so in the case of open booking.

Aside from the patriotic purpose, which the tax accomplishes by providing revenue for the government, there is a great and everlasting benefit which the tax will bestow upon the picture industry. For it is such a burden upon the picture manufacturer that only those who make and market pictures of high quality and merit can hope to survive. In this way the tax becomes an agent for the cleansing and purifying of the producing end of the industry, by eliminating all the junk and the poor weak pictures which are being produced at the present time.

Let me explain a little more fully. The man who has to pay this enormous tax has to get a high price for his product in order to keep his head above water. Now, high prices can be obtained only for good pictures. The vast amount of junk which is being marketed today under the name of motion pictures does not bring a price sufficient to pay a profit on production cost after this tax is added. Therefore the manufacturers of this junk will be compelled to produce fewer pictures and better pictures in order to escape the disastrous effect of the operation of the tax, and this will be one of the best things that ever happened to the motion picture industry.

The case is similar to that of a man suffering from cancer. He dreads the surgeon's knife and yet his only hope lies in operation. Through the operation he has a chance to recover. It is a case of kill or cure. We may regard this government tax as the operation performed on motion pictures which will cut away the dead rotten tissue and leave behind only the healthy, vigorous body.

That is why I say that I am a firm believer in the motion picture tax and only wish that it were heavier. If it drives to the wall those whose methods of operation are so unsound and unbusinesslike that they cannot bear up under its burden—then so much the better for the industry. The keen, live producer will know how to re-adjust his output so as to actually benefit by the operation of the tax, and the keen, live producer is the only one that the industry has any need of.

So put me on record as saying that the tax on motion pictures is a blessing in disguise.

Rowland Discusses War Tax

By Richard A. Rowland.
President, Mutual Pictures Corporation.

Congress has seen fit to impose special taxation upon the motion picture industry and that settles the matter. The industry will pay the taxes and the patriotic thing for us all to do is to see that the Government gets as large an amount from the industry as it is possible to pay.

While the taxes are heavy, and in some cases undoubtedly a great burden, I see no reason for worry. As with everything else that is taxed the ultimate consumer, namely the public, will foot the bill. If the manufacturer now selling at the lowest price he can in a market keen with competition is forced to spend more money either in taxes or production, the price of his product must go up, or he must cease to do business.

Therefore, it will, of course, be necessary for the manufacturer to increase his price to the distributor, and the distributor must advance his price to the exhibitor, and the exhibitor must increase his price to the public.

In my opinion a five-cent raise in the price of motion picture theater admissions will cover nicely the footage and the admission taxes, and not impose a real hardship upon anyone.

The advance to the exhibitor will not exceed ten cents a reel per day, and ten five-cent admission advances will cover the feature show tax. This leaves all the rest of the admission advances for the theater, out of which their own tax can be met.

The situation lays the foundation for an advance in theater prices which is already needed, to continue after the war.

The whole matter in a nutshell is that the United States needs money and needs lots of it. We, as Americans, will endeavor to see that Uncle Sam gets as much as possible.

BUSTING THE GLORY TRUST

LISLE M. ALL-BRIGHT, for the past sicks months assistant and detriment to yourn truly, printer's devil and general office devil, has took his brains and pencil and went over to that sassafrass-colored sheet known by a few as the Motion Picture News. HINT TO THEATER BUILDERS

An usher in one of Chicago's largest semi-downtown screen houses has the following lament to register, together with supreme disgust:

"If the squirrels had any brains they'd stick around the movie houses instead o' the parks. A woman come up to me last night an' asked me to show her the 'bawth room'!"

Housework certainly does take up every minute of one's time.

Up at Jones, Linick and Schaefer's office nearly everybody that leaves via elevator turns the light on if it's off, and off if it's on.

This remarkable phenomenon is explained by the simple statement that the elevator button is right beside the light push button.

MYSTERY OF THE VAMP'S BUDOYER

Theda Bara barely visited Chicago last week. No, she was not in a "Cleopatra" costume, but just stopped here between trains so that she could see the modest writer.

Cleo held court in her budoyer on the Twentieth Century. She welcomed everybody indiscriminately, even admitting an army officer, Captain Fliedner of the horse marines, formerly assistant to Mr. Albright on Motography.

"Tell something funny about the filluming of 'Cleopatra,'" we asked, brightly.

"Well, for one scene I went to my wardrobe mistress and told her that I had to wear less than in any of the other scenes and she said it was impossible."

That seemed to satisfy the reporters and the interview was brought to a fitting clothes. The only miss-hap was that Eckhart and O'Toole didn't buy Theda any lunch and she had to ride to New York to open "Cleopatra" on Broadway on the Century and an empty stomach.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

THE Man from Painted Post, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A very good picture, a typical Fairbanks' production, full of action and wonderful stunts. Our patrons classed it as one of the star's best."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Good for two days or a repeat. Our audience liked it better than The Poor Little Rich Girl, which was very good. Some of the laughs it gets are as big as those given a Chaplin or Keystone comedy."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"It's great. Two days, and the second day topped the first."—J. Alden, Dime Theater, Globe, Ariz.

The Little Terror, with Violet Mersereau (Bluebird)—"A comedy-drama, which went over well. Fair business during bad weather."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Little Miss Nobody, with Violet Mersereau (Bluebird)—"A fair picture, good photography and a pleasing star, but Bluebirds do not get the money at this house for some reason or other though boosted big."—A. K. MacMartin, Empress Theater, Kamloops, British Columbia.

North of Fifty-three, with Dustin Farnum (Fox)—"It is a pity that the Fox Folm Corporation spoiled such a good story. The picture is fair but the star certainly does some acting. Business just good."—Spyros P. Skouras, Pageant Theater, St. Louis, Mo.

Her Greatest Love, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"A classy production. The star made a hit in a role totally different from her customary vampire parts. George Walsh was a heartily despised villain in this picture. Audiences anywhere will like this."—N. W. Huston, McGhie Theater, Columbus, Kansas.

Durand of the Badlands, with Dustin Farnum (Fox)—"Big business. Patrons pleased. Too much crude comedy hurt the picture."—J. H. McDonald, Strand Theater, Walla Walla, Wash.

Conscience, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"Photography and settings excellent, but the story is too lurid and distasteful for high-class neighborhood houses. Over 150 people left my house before the picture was over. Naturally my business was way off. I never heard more complaints since I have been in business."—Spyros P. Skouras, Pageant Theater, St. Louis, Mo.—In high class neighborhood.

The Yankee Way, with George Walsh (Fox)—"Chuck full of good, snappy comedy. Went over great. Business good."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Yankee Way, with George Walsh (Fox)—"A wonderful comedy-drama; capacity business. The star does remarkable acting and is getting to be a favorite here. Audience well pleased."—Spyros R. Skouras, St. Louis, Mo.—In high class neighborhood.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"Exceptionally good. Up to the Goldwyn advance notices."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

Baby Mine, with Madge Kennedy (Goldwyn)—"A very good picture, which satisfied everyone. Just a fair drawing card."—M. P. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Camille, with Helen Hesperia (Hanover-General)—"A foreign-made picture, worse even that the daily paper criticisms said it was. Foreign actors are absolutely null and void with the average audience in this country. The leading man in this is especially poor. However, the picture is drawing money."—H. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Barrier (Rex Beach Pictures)—"A good picture and story; drew well and pleased."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

On Trial (Essanay-First Exhibitors' Circuit)—"A wonderful production with appropriate cast, but no star of drawing power; therefore fair house."—Spyros P. Skouras, Pageant Theater, St. Louis, Mo.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"Good photography. Pleased capacity houses. Star always draws here. A different story from anything ever offered."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

The Lifted Veil, with Ethel Barrymore (Metro)—"Our audience did not care for this offering. The roles given this star are not just suited for her proportion or age."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Spell of the Yukon, with Edmund Breese (Metro)—"One of the most satisfactory pictures we ever showed, proving that the public wants more outdoor stuff."—N. W. Huston, McGhie Theater, Columbus, Kan.

The Girl Without a Soul, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"A nice little picture, not big, but pleased in proportion. Business better than the Barrymore special made by this company."—Jo. E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—High class clientele.

The Call of Her People, with Ethel Barrymore (Metro)—"Good program value, no special appeal here where the star is without following. Business fair."—Jo. E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—High class clientele.

Under Handicap, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"Would have been a great value in five reels. Padding to attain footage dragged badly."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoeniz, Ariz.—High class clientele.

The Frame-Up, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"An original story by the star. It is great. Brim full of comedy."—Guy D. Hammett, Theatorium, Portland, Ind.

The People's Tax—But the Exhibitors Are Responsible

PRESIDENT MORAN of the Michigan branch, American Exhibitors' Association, calls our attention to the fact that some exhibitors may have overlooked the government's provision for payment of the theater admission tax. The law says that the tax is "to be paid by the person paying for such admission;" in other words, by the public and not the exhibitors. He deduces from this that the theater man actually has no right to assume the burden, even if he were so disposed. We quote his letter:

> Just how the government will arrange for the public to pay this tax is something which the Treasury department of the government will have to work out. That is something the exhibitor need not concern himself about particularly. The only thing that really touches the exhibitor in this connection is the trouble and inconvenience to which the carrying out of the law will subject him.
> I think it would be a serious mistake for exhibitors to raise the rate five cents on account of this tax. To do so would make the patron think he was being compelled not only to pay a tax intended for the exhibitor, but double the tax to fatten the showman. This tax was intended for the patron.
> All exhibitors should begin at once a campaign of enlightenment among their patrons.

It is quite true that it is the patrons' tax.

BUT IT IS UP TO THE EXHIBITOR TO COLLECT IT FOR THE GOVERNMENT, AND TO KEEP THE BOOKS.

So it is hardly correct to say that the exhibitor need not concern himself about it. He must, indeed, concern himself to the extent of arranging an accurate accounting system that will not only show the number of taxable admissions, but that will prove its own veracity and reliability to a government examiner.

This is not an alarming task. It merely means a daily record of admissions and their prices (including children and dead-heads) with a monthly summing-up signed, certified and delivered with cash, money-order or certified check for the amount of the tax to the internal revenue officer of the district. That part of it is comparatively easy.

The problem of the individual exhibitor is whether to add the tax to the ticket price, or subtract it. It is idle to say the public must pay it, because the public pays everything anyway.

We still maintain, in spite of President Moran's excellent reasoning that the ten cent exhibitor should go to fifteen cents; not just on account of a one cent tax, but because that is his only hope of making real money. And we doubt if there will ever be a better time than now.

But in one thing, at least, we agree with Mr. Moran. No exhibitor should think of subtracting the tax from his present admission price—in other words, reducing his ticket from ten cents to nine. And to make sure that the people pay "their tax" with good grace, the "campaign of enlightment" should begin at once. We can think of no better way to start it than the card over the box office window that we suggested a couple of weeks ago.

And if you charge eleven cents, be sure to indicate that one cent is for the tax. An eleven cent ticket would call for a two cent tax.

The Chicago League's Music Lists

THE Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America continues to issue lists of non-taxable music—which lists MOTOGRAPHY, through the kindness of League officials, continues to publish.

On certain occasions we have exercised the editorial privilege of criticising the National League for its apparent lack of useful and effective action. That the medal has a reverse side, however, is splendidly demonstrated in this work of the Chicago League. It would be difficult to find a more typical example of association helpfulness and efficiency.

The compilation of these lists of music, designed to confound the musical tax pirates and disarm the royalty gatherers, is a labor that no single exhibitor could accomplish except at a cost greater than the royalties he saved. It is, therefore, a proper association function; but one that the officers could have neglected without criticism. That they did not neglect it, but worked diligently to present it to the whole exhibiting field (not merely to their own members) speaks eloquently for the character of the men in the League's Chicago office.

The music publishers who are demanding tribute have no claim for special consideration. They have court permission to collect royalties from picture theater men who use such music as they may control by copyright. Their technical legal right to do so leaves the ethical rights out of consideration—to say nothing of the questionable business sense of sacrificing unlimited publicity and free plugging for a doubtful promise of royalties.

There appears to be enough music on the tax-free list to satisfy the most musically inclined of exhibitors. That these employers of harmony will exercise their free choice in the selection of friendly music goes without saying.

Patriotic Pictures

A GOOD many patriotic people are unintentionally a little bit cynical about the other fellow's patriotism. They speak, for example, of the song writers' harvest. They think of the music publishers as opportunists who, like the munition manufacturers, are making hay while the sun shines. And the producers of patriotic films are, in their estimation, in the same class.

Of course any great national stress gives opportunity for a few cold, calculating souls to cash in on popular emotions. And of course some of those cold calculators are always present amid a large and varied population. But they are in the extreme minority. The average man, be he film producer, song writer or munition maker, is moved by the same emotion that YOU feel when the flag and the drums and the boys in khaki go by.

When latent patriotism becomes active, patriotic films and songs and products frequently become profitable. And the reason they are profitable is that everybody wants them. Why credit the customers with whole-souled patriotism and imagine the producer is moved by other motives—that he is different?

No. The producer, the manufacturer, is thrilled by patriotic emotions just as truly as is his employe, who gives up a good job to receive the pay of an army private. If there be profit in his activities, remember that good work deserves a profit. There is too much popular tendency to regard profit-making as selfish and even reprehensible. The wage of the laborer, the salary of the executive, and the profit of the capitalist are in no way different. All are merely pay for service rendered the public.

The exhibitor needs no assurance of extra profit before he runs patriotic pictures, nor the producer before he makes them. That there is profit in the proceeding merely demonstrates that these representatives of the picture trade are doing better than ever the thing they set out to do—pleasing the people.

The current news proves that profit is not the thought of either producer or exhibitor. For everywhere we find theater men giving up their houses for Red Cross benefits and curtailing their programs for Liberty Bond lectures. And on the other hand we see producers turning over their whole plant and equipment for the manufacture of training camp propaganda, recruiting aids and Liberty Loan boosters.

Just now the people want patriotic films, and the exhibitors want to run them, and the producers want to make them. That it is good business to do so is merely an incident.

Additional Non-Taxable Music

OFFICIAL LIST COMPILED BY CHICAGO EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

FOLLOWING are additional musical selections which can be used without being subject to the tax imposed by the Society of American Authors, Composers and Publishers.

This is the third list printed by MOTOGRAPHY in as many weeks. Look for additions from time to time.

When ordering music, state whether you desire it for orchestra or piano alone.

Any members of the M. P. E. L. wishing information regarding the music tax, or list of non-taxable music, can be obtained by calling on Miss Katherine C. Melcher at the headquarters of the Chicago League, 1416 Masonic Temple, Chicago.

Chicago Motion Picture Club Grows

THE last regular gathering of the Motion Picture Club of Chicago, held at the Hamilton Club Monday evening, October 15, shows the club steadily growing. Many of the best known film men of the city were present, including Richard Nehls, president pro tem; Edward Stoddard, secretary; H. E. Belford, treasurer; Joseph Hopp, Roderick Ross, George Berg, Charles Brandon, Dave Russakov, William McGrath, Motion Picture News, A. E. Curtis, MOTOGRAPHY, and several others. A fine dinner was served.

The idea of the Motion Picture Club has, from the first, when the Reel Fellows Club was dissolved, been to build a conservative organization whose main element would be permanence. To that end only carefully selected men are taken in. Four new members were admitted at the meeting upon vote of the board of governors.

The club will gather again at the Illinois Athletic Club, upon invitation of F. J. Flaherty, on the evening of Wednesday, October 24. Later on it will meet in its own quarters, fitted with the furniture held from the Reel Fellows Club. A general social event is also planned for the near future.

Schenectady Folks Petition for Sunday Shows

The people of the state of New York are out after Sunday pictures.

As an indication of the widespread sentiment in favor of the reopening of the picture theaters on Sunday in the city of Schenectady a petition containing the signatures of more than 30,000 citizens was filed with the City Trades Assembly asking the authorities to take action that will permit the giving of motion picture performances on the Sabbath.

Officials of the Assembly declared the workingmen of Schenectady look upon Sunday pictures as a necessity and the workingmen's most inexpensive amusement. Sunday picture shows have been closed in Schenectady following a court decision given by Justice Edward C. Whitmyer vacating a temporary injunction which restrained city officials from interfering with the operation of Sunday shows.

In his opinion Justice Whitmyer said he was following a decision of the Appellate Division, Third Department. Several months ago Schenectady police authorities arrested a number of the proprietors of the motion picture theaters for giving performances on Sunday.

No intimation as to what action would be taken by the Trades Assembly was given, but it was hinted a statement would be forthcoming from the Council today. It is expected the demand of the workingmen will be made so insistent and prolonged the city authorities will be forced to make some move to restore the Sunday films to the place.

It has been several months since Sunday shows were given in Schenectady.

Operators Get Wage Increase

AT the last meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Cleveland Emery Downs, chairman of the committee, appointed to effect a settlement, announced that the operators have agreed to accept a flat rate of 62½ cents an hour for all theaters in the Cleveland district. This provides a substantial raise for operators who are working in the forty-three houses running daily matinees, or even one matinee other than Sunday. The other 108 exhibitors are paying their operators at that rate at the present time.

They are affected only to the extent of an added 25 cents for the Sunday supper hour, the operators getting $1 instead of 75 cents, and a raise of $1.75 for extra matinees. It amounts approximately to $25 a year. But more important than all else, the settlement on this basis indicates that the operators are standing on the brink of a new era. When 108 exhibitors, who are not called into the fray, volunteer to meet a proposition that will work to the advantage of the forty-three who are vitally affected, it means that henceforth exhibitors are ready to submerge their personal advantages to the common good of all. The new wage scale will be dated back as going into operation on October 1.

Site of Red Cross Benefit Filmed in "Persuasive Peggy"

When the American Red Cross desired the most artistic and beautiful spot in the country for their pageant which was presented recently with such marked success, they decided upon the estate of Roland B. Conklin at Huntington, L. I. All the renowned artists who lent their efforts to this event, agreed upon the choice of the location, declaring it was doubtful if a more beautiful place could be found.

This statement caused the officials of the Mayfair Film Corporation much satisfaction for early in the summer they had used this site as a background for a number of important scenes.

Not only the scenes in "Persuasive Peggy," with the background are worthy of praise for throughout the entire production they are all that could possibly be desired and mark an epoch in the selection of exteriors.

Explains Origin of A. E. A.

President Jake Wells Writes to MOTOGRAPHY Giving Facts of Exhibitors' Organization

THE American Exhibitors' Association has attracted considerable amount of attention in the picture industry since its formation at the last Chicago exposition. There still are a number of people interested in the matter who are not familiar with the exact nature of its origin.

The following letter from the association's president, Jake Wells, of the Colonial Theater, Richmond, Virginia, to MOTOGRAPHY, will throw some light on the beginning of the new national exhibitors' organization, and particularly upon the connection the president of the association has had with the new body from the beginnng. This letter, in part, follows:

"I regret the unfortunate situation that came about at Chicago. However, I will not go into detail in connection with the same, as you are no doubt quite as familiar with it as I am. I did not go to Chicago to become identified with any factional fight or disagreement. In fact, my trip was purely accidental. I didn't make up my mind to go until forty-eight hours before arriving in Chicago.

"It was a trip intended in a small way for pleasure and to have the pleasure of meeting a few old acquaintances; also with a certain amount of curiosity to know just how the motion picture national organization was conducted and what benefits were to be derived from it, so far as the individual theater exhibitors throughout the country were to be benefited.

"I knew none of the candidates running for office, so therefore was absolutely unbiased. After a day and a half put in at the convention, I came to the conclusion that it had no value and intended leaving Chicago Wednesday afternoon and would have done so but for the fact that I had been very earnestly requested by a number of friends to serve on a committee of five which had been appointed to wait on the convention and make an earnest appeal that the big dissatisfied minority would be given fair treatment on the convention floor, and in the selection of the officers for the ensuing year.

"All of what happened thereafter you are familiar with, and these happenings kept me in Chicago the balance of the week, during which time I became actively identified, owing to the unfair treatment which brought about the organization of the American Exhibitors' Association.

"In conclusion, I desire to state that I have become quite interested, and I might say enthusiastic, in the future prospects of the new organization, as I hope to see it become an exhibitors' business association conducted by and for motion picture exhibitors only."

Mme. Sonia Markova, New Fox Star

WILLIAM FOX announces a new star in the person of Madame Sonia Markova.

Raised in Libau, revolutionist at heart, she escaped from turmoil on an ammunition ship and arrived in America. Letters of introduction through the Russian embassy brought her to Mr. Fox.

Mme. Sonia Markova, new and unusual Fox star.

Mme. Markova has beauty of an unusual type. She has wonderful grace of movement and large jet eyes. Her father was a music teacher and an orchestra leader in Libau. Her mother was Gypsy. From the one, she has the heritage of an amazing knowledge and appreciation of music; from the other the restlessness that is characteristic of all nomadic peoples.

Because of her originality and her genius for pantomimic expression and her impressive personality, Markova's screen creations will stand out with distinctness. Her love of acting came from her daily attendance at the rehearsals in the big playhouse where her father was orchestra leader. She came to the United States from Petrograd, whither she had gone to continue her musical studies, when the first signs of the revolution manifested themselves.

"See Your Boy in the Army." Under this slogan the Hearst-Pathe News announces its plan to show motion pictures of all National Guard and National Army cantonments.

Good Cast in "His Robe of Honor"

From shyster lawyer to an upright justice of the Supreme Court of the state of New York—this is the career of the hero of "His Robe of Honor," from the pen of Ethel and James Dorrance, which will mark the debut of Henry B. Walthall as a Paralta star. The story is full of revelations and carries its auditors into the upper reaches of the underworld, its doors unlocked, the lights turned on. The hero grows with his opportunities, however dishonorable the means he employs to his end. That end itself he makes worthy, thanks to the ambition awakened in him by the love of a woman.

When the story appeared in book form, a short time ago, it created quite a furore and was endorsed in most complimentary terms by many of the foremost judges and reformers of the country. In visualizing the story it will be possible to present it with a wider range and with broader strokes than were possible in type, and it promises to be the crowning achievement of Mr. Walthall's illustrious career.

Miss Mary Charleson, who has already achieved much distinction appearing with Mr. Walthall in many of his former screen portravals, will be seen in the role of Roxana Frisbee, a part of exceptional versatility which will afford her many rare opportunities for exceptional work of the kind that has won for her the popularity she now enjoys. Lois Wilson, whose work in "A Man's Man," in which she appeared with J. Warren Kerrigan, received the highest praise, will be seen in the role of Laura Nelson, a young society girl, whose high ideals and noble nature win back the manhood of the man who is about to become a tool in the hands of a graft permeated political machine. "Boss" Nordhoff, who typifies the brutal political leader, corrupting the judiciary to further his ends, has been given to Noah Beery, Jr., who has established a wide reputation for this kind of work with screen audiences.

Author Praises Film Version of "Mother"

George Loane Tucker, who directed the McClure Picture, "Mother," in which Elizabeth Risdon plays the title part, has just received a cablegram from London from Eden Philpotts, the author of the book from which the scenario was taken, as follows: "Heartiest congratulations—great difficulties triumphantly conquered and picture is splendid."

U. S. Films to Show Our Boys in Battle

MOTION pictures of General Pershing's troops on the Western battlefront will be shown in virtually every theater in the United States just as soon as Uncle Sam's forces move into action.

This has been made possible by the Government, which, following the step taken by our allies, as well as Germany, is assigning official photographers to film the American battle line.

Hundreds of thousands of persons have turned out to view pictures of the "Battle of the Marne," "The Retreat of the Germans at Arras," the French war pictures around Vosges, and the Italian pictures of the Isonzo front, and it is safe to say every true American will flock to the theaters to see his own troops in action.

One of the first photographers to be appointed by the Government is Lawrence J. Darmour, of Flushing, L. I. He was notified last week of his commission as a first lieutenant in the Signal Corps, U. S. R., and ordered to report forthwith to do duty at Camp Vail, N. J., where he will be assigned to the photographic division to make motion picture films on the battlefront, "somewhere in France."

"The Bottom of the Well," Greater Vitagraph's adoption of the novel by the same name. This Blue Ribbon will be released on October 22 with Evart Overton, Agnes Ayres, Adele de Garde and Alice Terry.

Vitagraph Releases "Bottom of the Well" October 22

In line with Vitagraph's recently inaugurated policy of placing on the Blue Ribbon program screen versions of popular novels by such eminent members in the world of letters as Robert W. Chambers, Alfred Henry Lewis, Frederick Upham Adams, Earl Derr Biggers and Cyrus Townsend Brady, Albert E. Smith announces as the Blue Ribbon feature for October 22 "The Bottom of the Well," from the widely read novel by Frederick Upham Adams.

"The Bottom of the Well," which is replete with novel twists, combines romance, mystery and intrigue to make a photoplay of unflagging interest, culminating in a thrilling climax. It tells the story of a brilliant young lawyer, Stanley Deane, whose lineage is shrounded in mystery and who champions the cause of the oppressed workman in the mills owned by Buckingham, a despotic capitalist, with whose daughter the lawyer is in love. Through his activity in behalf of the workmen, the barrister gains Buckingham's enmity and the latter forbids his daughter's marriage to Deane after a series of cumulative dramatic events in which Buckingham is charged with his own murder, which brings forth the startling denouement. Dean's cause is vindicated and he claims his reward.

The cast that interprets the numerous characters in "The Bottom of the Well" is aptly termed all-star and embraces such favorites as Evart Overton, last seen in "Soldiers of Chance," Agnes Adele de Garde, whose work in "Within the Law" elicited lavish praise from trade and newspaper critics, Alice Terry, former Washington Square player, Ned Finley, the old Vitagraph favorite; Herbert Pryor,well-known character actor, and Bigelow Cooke.

"The Bottom of the Well" was directed by John Robertson, producer of some of the season's most notable features.

Kalem Aids Liberty Loan

The Kalem Company and General Film Company, producers and distributors respectively of the "Grant, Police Reporter" and "A Daughter of Daring" series, are co-operating to help push the big Liberty Loan drive to a successful conclusion. The former is issuing patriotic trailers for all of its General Film releases in which stirring appeals are made to enlist the support of the picture fans.

Vitagraph Chiefs to Take the Field

WITH the entire Vitagraph distributing organization working at high speed, owing to the number of bookings on its various units of service, A. W. Goff, assistant general manager, the eastern division manager and the western division manager have gone into the field on a general tour of inspection. In many places the Vitagraph branches are working night and day in order to keep their prints moving and the purpose of the sales chiefs in making their trips at this time is to see that there is no let-up in the working of the machinery.

One of the chief contributing factors in the Vitagraph volume of business, according to an announcement made by the company, is the extraordinary number of bookings on "The Fighting Trail," the big outdoor serial which was started on its fifteen-week course September 10. It has been booked or shown in every town of 10,000 population or more in the country and extra prints have had to be made in order to supply the demand.

"Vengeance and the Woman," the next Vitagraph serial, will follow closely on the run of "The Fighting Trail," being scheduled for release late in December, and a great many exhibitors have already begun booking it on the strength of the success of "The Fighting Trail."

New Chaplin Play Ready for Release

"THE ADVENTURER," next of the series of Mutual-Chaplin specials, is ready for release on October 22. The first print of the two-reel comedy has been received at the Mutual executive offices and the original screen proved that it was fully up to expectations. It has been pronounced by the studios as the masterpiece of Mutual's comedian.

Charlie makes his entrance through a pile of sand, garbed in the bestriped uniform of a convict. He creates endless amusement in his efforts to escape the pursuing guards and finally steals a bathing suit, in which he emerges at the beach just in time to rescue fair Edna's mama. As a reward he is taken to Edna's home, where he enters society, but his identity is revealed by jealous Eric and the guards come after him.

Perhaps the funniest touch of the hilariously funny 2,000 feet is the incident of the awkward dish of ice cream. Charlie hoists the big gob of cream out of the dish and in his efforts to drink what has melted, loses the frozen mass off the spoon. It drops in the gaping belt of Charlie's pocket, whereupon he undergoes seven different varieties of agony until it emerges out of the leg of the trouser. To cover his embarrassment and his suffering, Charlie kicks the offending piece of cream off the edge of the balcony, where it drops down the low cut back of one of the women bridge players below. There ensues an embarrassing and exciting few minutes while the suffering woman retains her modesty and her clothes.

There are several million picture fans throughout the length and the breadth of the land who have been waiting with eager and impatient expectancy for many weeks for the coming of the next Chaplin.

Half of the theaters in the land will have Chaplin lobby displays during the week of October 22. Chaplin's name will be more in the public prints during that one week than the name of any other celebrity, political, military or civil.

Exhibitors Urged to Book One Reel War Film

"Who Leads the National Army" to Show Efficiency of Officers—To Epitomize Camp Life and Training

THE War Department, through the Military Training Camps Association of the United States, is giving the motion picture exhibitors of the United States the opportunity to become the publicists to show that the men comprising the National Army are under highly trained, efficient officers who are capable of taking care of the men under them in every exigency.

It is believed if the thought that the officers are highly efficient is driven home that those persons who have had relatives called in the draft will not suffer the same anguish at the parting when they know that their relatives will be under the care of men of high moral character who have the proper training.

The method by which the exhibitors are requested to contribute to the cause and spread the propaganda of "Efficiency of Officers" is through the booking of the one-reel picture entitled "Who Leads the National Army!"

Unlike many one-reel pictures, "Who Leads the National Army!" has a story running through it.

The picture opens with a scene at a club and the decision of one of the club members to apply for registration at the officers' training camp. Then follows, in sharp, snappy action of splendid direction and photography, the mental, moral and physical examination; acceptance of applicant; arrival at camp with hundreds of other applicants; panorama of camp: setting-up exercise; manual of arms; signal practice; bayonet charge; going over the top; digging trenches; attacking trenches; President Wilson reviewing the candidates; redeeming the War Department pledge of a square deal; Secretary of War Baker signing commission, and finally, well trained, efficient officers ready to lead the National Army.

The picture was made at all of the officers' training camps, including Plattsburg, Forts Sheridan, Harrison, Meyer and Niagara, after which it was turned over to a practical film editor, who assembled it and brought it to perfection.

Immediately upon ascertaining the object of the presentation of the picture, the Triangle Distributing Corporation volunteered to undertake the distribution throughout the country and also volunteered to return to the Military Training Camps Association every cent received through the rentals in a furtherance of the idea of universal military training, especially among the younger generation.

The motion picture exhibitors are asked to book the picture in exactly the same manner as they would book any other one-reel subject and their attention is called to the fact that they may be patriotic and spread the propaganda absolutely without cost to themselves. The great majority of the motion picture theaters of the country make it a practice to place some sort of a one-reel subject on the program, and the suggestion is made that instead of booking the usual subjects that "Who Leads the National Army!" shall be substituted.

In order to make the proposition even more attractive to the exhibitors, the Military Training Camps Association has caused the members of its two thousand influential committees throughout the United States to make an active canvass and obtain promises from hundreds of thousands of persons that they will attend motion picture theaters during the run of the one-reel subject. Many persons who have given the promise say they never have been inside a motion picture theater heretofore.

Forty-two prints of the picture have been made and the release dates and distribution have been arranged in such a manner as to allow the greatest possible concentration in order to get the crowds to the theaters. It is the desire of the persons behind the movement that every person in the United States see the picture.

"Public Be Damned" Again Endorsed

Again "The Public Be Damned," the great conservation screen play, which is being distributed by Select Pictures, has received the unqualified endorsement of a big national organization. The National Nonpartisan League through its president, A. C. Townley, has set the seal of its approval upon this stirring drama.

New World Brady-Made

"A Maid of Belgium" is a new World-Picture Brady-Made in which Alice Brady is the star actress. It is to reach the World program November 5, but will be seen by pre-lease immediately. There are some war scenes in this drama of the screen which are said to be exceedingly realistic showing the ruthless battering down of a Belgian village by the invading army, driving the young heroine to madness as her relatives are butchered around her.

Florence La Badie, widely known star, who is dead from an automobile accident.

Florence La Badie Dead

MISS FLORENCE LA BADIE, the widely known Thanhouser-Pathe star, died last Saturday, October 13, at the Ossining, N. Y., hospital as the result of an automobile accident. She was 24 years old, and was soon to have been married to Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman of New York, formerly of Springfield, Illinois. She was born in Canada, and in her early career studied art, painting, and sculpture.

With her fiancee, Miss La Badie was driving to her residence in New York City two months ago. Near Ossining their automobile's brakes failed to work and the car upset. Miss La Badie was injured internally.

Miss La Badie, besides playing the lead in "The Million Dollar Mystery," took part in more than a hundred productions for the Thanhouser company. Her last picture was "War and Women," for Pathe. She is survived by her mother, with whom she lived in New York.

Tax Hits Stage and Screen Folks

Klaw and Erlanger Assessed $20,000 for War—Geo. M. Cohan and Selwyn and Co. Pay Uncle Sam $10,000 Each—Abrams, $25,000

WELL up on the list of those persons and corporations, tentatively assessed for a personal tax next year, are to be found many of Broadway's leading theatrical and motion picture producers, as well as stage and film stars. While it would be impossible to record every person and corporation known along the Rialto listed by the Tax Department, examination of the records showed the Klaw & Erlanger Amusement Company headed the theatrical corporations with an assessment of $20,000.

Selwyn & Co. and the George M. Cohan Film Company next appear with a tentative assessment of $10,000 each. These two corporations are followed by the Metropolitan Opera Company, and the George M. Cohan Theatrical Company with assessments of $5,000, the Cohan & Harris Theater Corporation at $2,000 and Hurtig & Seamon and Wagenhals & Kemper Company $1,000 and $1,500 respectively.

Leading the producers is to be found George Broadhurst with a personal tax assessment estimated at $50,000. Hiram Abrams is assessed on a similar amount. Broadway's song writer, Irving Berlin, J. Stuart Blackton, and Henry W. Savage are each assessed at $25,000. Lee Shubert does not appear on this year's list. Neither does Sam Bernard.

Amelia Bingham, the actress, and Charles B. Dillingham, the producer, the list shows have each been assessed at $20,000 for 1918. William A. Brady then appears with a $15,000 assessment after his name.

In the $10,000 column are to be found David Belasco, Arthur Hammerstein, George H. Nicolai, Joseph Hurtig, Samuel Hurtig, Gus Edwards, Samuel H. Harris, E. F. Albee and Saul Abraham.

Theda Bara, who was tentatively assessed for $20,000 on the 1917 roll, and swore off all but $5,400, appears on the 1918 list for $5,400.

Chaplin Delights Rookies

Harry King Tootle, formerly publicity man for the Gaumont company, keeps his eye on the motion picture industry, although he has been two months a soldier at the officers' reserve camp at Plattsburg, N. Y. Here is his message: "Charlie Chaplin in 'Easy Street' was shown last night to 3,000 Plattsburg rookies till the dust flew off the rafters. It seems to me there is a mint of money in these pictures for any exhibitor, even if he has already shown them."

Mabel Condon Trips to New York

Mabel Condon, widely known on the celluloid coast as the head of the Mabel Condon Exchange, has taken temporary leave from the sunshine state to make a business trip to Manhattan.

Variety of Pictures on Mutual Schedule

Chaplin's Latest Picture, "The Adventurer," on October 22 Program — Olive Tell and William Russell Also on Program

FOUR big stars in a variety of pictures make up Mutual's release schedule for the week of October 22.

Charlie Chaplin's latest picture, "The Adventurer," a two-reel comedy of the most ludicrously funny kind, is released on Monday, October 22.

Olive Tell is presented on October 22 in the first of her appearances in Charles Frohman's stage successes in motion pictures, "The Unforeseen," a five-reel drama.

William Russell comes to the screen on the same date in "The Sea Master," a red-blooded drama of Barbary coast and the sea.

The sixth chapter of "The Lost Express," Helen Holmes' latest photonovel, is also released on that date.

The week's schedule includes two comedies, both one-reelers, "And Along Came Mary," starring Billie Rhodes, and "Jerry's Soft Snap," starring George Ovey. The list carries two topicals, Mutual Weekly and Reel Life.

"The Adventurer" Eagerly Awaited

Chaplin's forthcoming comedy, "The Adventurer," has been eagerly awaited for more than two months by exhibitors. The production is long overdue, owing to the invasion of the Lone Star studios by illness, and Mutual's branch offices have been besieged with inquiries for weeks as to the release date of the forthcoming mirth maker.

Chaplin's box office value is so well established—the demand from the hosts of Chaplin fans to see the Mutual funny man on the screen is so insistent—that the release date of a new Chaplin-Mutual special is an event among exhibitors.

Olive Tell in "Unforeseen"

Olive Tell, the well known Frohman stage star, makes her first appearance in Frohman stage plays in "The Unforeseen," a picture presentation of one of Charles Frohman's most successful productions. "The Unforeseen" was originally staged at Mr. Frohman's Empire Theater, New York, in 1903, and enjoyed a long and highly successful run.

Miss Tell is supported by an able cast, headed by David Powell. The picture was directed by John B. O'Brien. It is from the pen of Capt. Robert Marshall, a celebrated playwight.

"Sea Master" Thrilling Drama

"The Sea Master," the release of October 22, starring William Russell, provides the athletic hero of American-Mutual dramas with one of the most sensational roles of his screen career. Russell is cast as the skipper of a Pacific coast tramp of doubtful reputation, with an ugly and hybrid crew. The opening scenes are laid in the notorious Barbary coast, where the rough-and-ready skipper rescues a pretty girl from the clutches of a dive keeper. His efforts to make her his woman failing, he makes her his wife, and it is not until the last scenes of the picture that he wins her trust and love. "Big Bill" Russell as "Bull" Dorgan, master of the ship, does some fighting which will add to his reputation as a screen scrapper of first magnitude.

Chapter VI of "Lost Express"

The sixth chapter of "The Lost Express," the Mutual-Signal photonovel starring Helen Holmes, brings the thrilling mystery picture closer to its climax. Director McGowan has put a big wallop into "High Voltage" and Helen performs a number of her thrilling and death-defying stunts.

Comedies and Topicals

"And Along Came Mary" is the fourth of the new series of Strand Mutual comedies starring pretty Billie Rholes, supported by Jay Belasco. The new Mutual-Strands filled a distinct want in the industry and the bookings have been exceedingly heavy. "And Along Came Mary" is scheduled for October 23. The Cub comedy release of the week, "Jerry's Soft Snap," is scheduled for October 25.

Mutual Weekly comes to the screen October 24 with pictures of the world's latest news, including scenes among the American troops in France. Reel Life, the weekly film magazine, carries the following subjects: "Queer Trees in Trinidad," "How the American Traveler Is Fed," "High Cost of Living Wins the Race," and an animated drawing from life entitled "The Apparel and Not the Man Guilty."

The Universal Screen Magazine, No. 44, to be released November 9, depicts a new method of teaching the violin, evolved by Dr. Mitchell, of New York University.

Brenon Up and At It Again

Will Make Fine Big Productions in Next Twelve Months—"The Woman Thou Gavest Me" and "Kismet" Already Chosen

TAKING pictures by day and making plans for the future by night seems to be the plan of action at the Brenon studios on Hudson Heights, where both workshop and business offices are now located. Not a moment's time is wasted, so that between completing "Empty Pockets" and attending to the business end as well, it looks as if Herbert Brenon's plans for the future will soon be settled.

Within the next twelve months Mr. Brenon plans to make five productions, maintaining in each the high standard which has always characterized Brenon productions. Two big subjects have already been secured, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," the novel by Hall Caine, and "Kismet," with Otis Skinner. Mr. Skinner will begin his work in "Kismet" next summer. Otis Skinner, it is further announced, has consented to appear in one production only, so from all accounts in "Kismet" this great actor will make his first and last appearance.

With these two subjects to begin with, it leaves three more yet to be chosen. Many manuscripts are submitted, but few are chosen or even considered, so that by no means the easiest of Mr. Brenon's tasks these days is finding suitable material with which to work. Mr. Brenon believes that the story is the one indispensable tool of producer without which nothing can be accomplished. He counts no hours wasted that are devoted to finding a suitable subject, and no pains does he spare to get possession of his subject once he discovers it is what he wants.

At the present time "Empty Pockets" is progressing at full sway at the studio. It will not be long before Mr. Brenon's second venture into the realms of melodrama will be produced.

At the same time, Mr. Brenon plans to add one or two scenes to "The Fall of the Romanoffs," which has scored such success at the Broadway Theater and which will soon be shown in all the big cities.

Small Towns—Come In!

Motography, Chicago:

Am enclosing herewith check for $3.00 for Motography.

"What the Picture Did For Me" department is the best thing I've seen lately. However, this is a small town, and a picture that would go big in Chicago might fall flat in a small town, so hope you will be able to show some reports from towns of from one to five thousand population. I believe it would be a good idea for small towns to show the population. Yours very truly, I. B. Webb, Manager Red Circle Theater, Zwolle, La.

Arthur Hoyt Engaged by Triangle

Arthur Hoyt, for sixteen years prominently identified with the legitimate stage as actor, stage manager and director, has been engaged as casting director at the Triangle Film Corporation's Culver City studio.

For six years previous to coming to Southern California, Hoyt was with the Henry W. Savage production interests. He has been in the motion picture business for a year and a half, having been featured recently in several big productions.

While on the legitimate stage Hoyt was identified with such brilliant actors as Viola Allen, Eleanor Robson, Henry Dixey and Henry Kolker.

The "Letter of Cheer," originated by Mae Murray, as one means of sending to the men in Pershing's army a word of encouragement from the folks at home, is going on a travel tour throughout the country, starting in the east and working westward in charge of a guardian. The album itself is a most elaborate work of art, but the signatures it contains makes it a most valuable compilation. Senators, governors and men of high public confidence have signed the "Letter of Cheer."

World Pictures Successful on Broadway

"The Maid of Belgium," in which Alice Brady is featured, is the third in a row of World-Pictures Brady-Made to be independently exploited on Broadway before going to the World program at the regular program price.

"These special productions in New York," said Director General William A. Brady, "had several purposes in view. In the first place, we had contended that the regular price World-Pictures were of equal moment in everything but length with the special price pictures of greater mileage sold on the state rights plan, and the Park Theater showings enabled us to test the proposition through responses from the public.

"We began with 'Rasputin, the Black Monk,' a seven-reel feature—published in that number of reels, because it contained so much really vital material that we could not possibly condense it into smaller space. We presented this on three or four days' notice and without a quarter of the volume of advertising almost invariably preceding the launching of a state rights venture.

"The public broke down our doors in a futile effort to get in at the opening, and thronged the theater thereafter. Apparently our contention was being upheld. But 'Rasputin' was in seven reels. Perhaps length counted, after all.

"So we presented 'The Burglar,' in six reels—a photoplay reflex of the stage drama of the same name by Augustus Thomas, which had enjoyed country-wide popularity years before. This, too, was launched with little or no preliminary ostentations. It was received with the greatest of favor by the public and the newspapers."

"Prince for Tonight" Screened

Jack Cunningham of the Triangle's Culver City scenario force has just completed the picturization of Eugene Manlove Rhodes' story, "Prince for Tonight," for early Triangle production.

Nat Stronge With Training Camps Association

Nat Stronge, who recently severed his connection with Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., after having inaugurated a business basis publicity department in that organization, has been drafted by the Military Training Camps Association, which is working in conjunction with the War Department, in presenting a one-reel motion picture entitled, "Who Leads the National Army!" In seeking a man thoroughly acquainted with the selling, distributing and promotion end of the motion picture business the name of Mr. Stronge was given to the authorities as the most likely to whom a patriotic appeal would cause him to cease all other activities until he had placed the picture on the way to financial success.

After doing all possible in the line of his patriotic duty Mr. Stronge will become actively engaged in the film industry in an executive capacity with one of the large distributing companies.

New Fox Comedies Soon

William Fox Soon to Begin Release of His Sunshine Comedies—Gloria Swanson and Bobbie Vernon Among the New Comedy Players

AFTER months of work, the several companies making Sunshine Comedies for William Fox, under the direction of Henry Lehrman, have prepared for release a large group of what will probably be voted the most remarkable comedies ever made.

The three comedies shown at the Globe Theater on Broadway, New York, as curtain-raisers for "Jack and the Beanstalk," "The Spy" and "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," will be the first releases. These are the titles and the dates of the trio of pictures:

November 11—"Wedding Bells and Roaring Lions."

November 18—"A Milk-Fed Vamp."

December 9—"His Smashing Career."

Acting on William Fox's instructions, Henry Lehrman, who is supervising the entire output of the comedy productions, has engaged a dozen of the chief figures in the realm of screen comedy. The first of these to be announced are Gloria Swanson and Bobbie Vernon, famous throughout the country for their excellent work.

Tom Mix, the most noted cowboy in the world, who has just been added to the roster of stars in Fox exclusive features, made one of the comedies in addition to the three named now awaiting distribution. In the cast are Gertrude Selby, Charles Conklin, Victor Potel, Frank Hayes and Tom Wilson.

All of the pictures have been done on a scale larger than their length would imply.

More Exhibitors Praise First Goldwyn Releases

FURTHER evidence that Goldwyn's first releases are more than fulfilling the promises made for them and that exhibitors throughout the country are showing them to business in many instances unprecedented is contained in telegrams and letters that continue to come in to the Goldwyn home offices in New York City.

It is the nearly unanimous opinion of exhibitors that if the Goldwyn standard holds up to that set by "Polly of the Circus" and "Baby Mine" there can be no doubt of the success of the company and the complete and enthusiastic satisfaction of the men who buy the productions and the audiences who witness them.

John Cooney, proprietor of the Union Square Theater at Pittsfield, Mass., telegraphed to Goldwyn as follows:

"Congratulations on Goldwyn's 'Polly of the Circus,' a corking production breaking all box-office records. Strong opposition and mission at biggest church, but turning hundreds away on second night of 'Polly's' engagement. Please extend booking four days instead of three, if possible."

J. W. and W. J. Dusenbury, owners of a string of theaters in Columbus, O., wrote:

"We did a fine business yesterday and our patrons were much pleased with 'Baby Mine.' There is no question concerning the success of Goldwyn Pictures if they are all up to the standard of 'Polly of the Circus' and 'Baby Mine.'"

Sam Newton, Jr., of the Broadway Theater, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., says:

"I am pleased to say that 'Polly of the Circus' has given great satisfaction. If you can turn out such consistent pictures you may well call yourselves 'The best producers of the best pictures.'"

Benjamin E. Pickett, manager of the Keith Theater in Lowell, Mass., is another "Baby Mine" enthusiast. He wrote:

"'Baby Mine' went over fine. It is a very good comedy. Kept the audience in laughs throughout and held them till the finish."

H. L. Weil, owner of the Majestic Theater at Port Huron, Mich., telegraphed:

"Please accept my congratulations. I ran the first of your releases, 'Polly of the Circus,' today and yesterday to near capacity houses. More power to you, your stars and the splendid corporation you represent. Near capacity means something at Majestic, and naturally your success means my success."

Filmcraft Completes Fifth Walt Mason

The A. Kay Company announces that the Filmcraft Corporation, producers of the new Walt Mason stories, has completed the fifth Walt Mason Story entitled, "I Remember, I Remember."

One-Reel Military Booster

Recruits for Training Camps to Be Reached by Patriotic Feature, "Who Leads the National Army?"

IN line with the general effort being made by the film industry to back up the Government in its recruiting and financial activities, the Triangle Distributing Corporation has volunteered to take charge of the distribution of the patriotic one-reel feature, "Who Leads the National Army." The picture was prepared under Triangle supervision in cooperation with the Military Training Camps Association of the United States, which is promoting the picture through a central board of chairmen and small units of half a million influential citizens throughout the country.

The picture, which was authorized by the War Department, shows the intensive training of officers of the National Army from the time of registration on entering the camps until commissions are granted.

The appeal to exhibitors in the rental of this picture is purely patriotic, the money derived from rentals to be used wholly in furthering co-operation with the Army. The theater booker is thereby enabled to do a patriotic act without expense to himself or his employer simply by substituting this one-reel patriotic feature for some other one-reeler, such as a scenic, which he must book in order to fill his program. The Military Training Camps Association believes that it will not be difficult to find some patriotic citizen in each theater community who is interested in the great work of the association and will be glad to pay the exhibitor's film rental, if necessary, in order to have his fellow citizens see the picture.

Forty-two prints of the negative have been made by Triangle for distribution to its exchanges. Artistic paper will be supplied with each print. The release dates in different sections of the country are as follows:

October 22—New York, Buffalo, Boston, and New Haven exchanges.

October 29—Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

November 5—Chicago and Milwaukee.

November 12—Cleveland and Cincinnati.

November 19—Detroit, Minneapolis, Kansas City and St. Louis.

November 26—Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas and Washington.

December 3—Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco, Salt Lake City and Denver exchanges.

The week directly following the release date of each exchange will be shown as Training Camp Week in all picture theaters of that territory. Within a few days members of the Military Training Camps Association all over the country will be busy interviewing exhibitors for the purpose of presenting the advantages of showing "Who Leads the National Army." Further information may be had from Mr. Y. F. Freeman, general manager, Triangle Distributing Corporation, 1457 Broadway, or Nat S. Strongo, Military Training Camps Association, 19 West Forty-fourth street, New York city.

Vitagraph Substitutes Chambers Story for "Tenderfoot"

Greater Vitagraph announces that "Who Goes There!", a powerful story by Robert W. Chambers, will be released on November 26 in the place of "The Tenderfoot," the second Wolfville story previously scheduled for that date. In making this change, the company declares that "Who Goes There!" is substituted for the Alfred Henry Lewis picture chiefly because of its special appeal and timeliness. "The Tenderfoot" will be released one week later, December 3.

"Who Goes There!" is a love story set in devastated Belgium, and while the war atmosphere is faithfully presented, there is a total absence of battle scenes. Harry Morey is featured, supported by Corinne Griffith, and the cast includes Mary Maurice, Anne Brody, Arthur Donaldson and other Vitagraph favorites.

This picture was produced to be released as a super-feature, but in line with the Vitagraph policy of putting special features on its regular program at intervals, it will go out as a Regular Blue Ribbon Feature.

Morey plays the role of an American who was visiting the little country at the outbreak of the war and was caught in the rush of the invader. As the price of his own life and that of thousands of poor Belgians, held as hostages by the Germans, he undertakes to go to London and get the daughter of the German commanding general. His journey back to Belgium is filled with exciting episodes, one of which is the destruction of a battleship by a U-boat just as the warship holds up Morey's vessel, preparatory to arresting him as a spy. This is said to be one of the most realistic naval warfare scenes ever put on the screen and it has a peculiar interest because the ship on which Morey worked his scenes was the Kristianafjord, which was wrecked a few days after it left New York.

Exhibitors' Co-operative League Changes Name

The new organization of exhibitors and exchange men which has been calling itself the Exhibitors' Co-operative League will change its name to that of the United Exchanges, Inc., it was decided at a gathering of members at the Hotel Astor in New York last week. This change has been made at the behest of a majority in the belief that the latter title more nearly approximates the aims of the newly formed combination.

Immediately following the adjournment of the meeting, the following men were appointed to temporary office, pending a final gathering in about two weeks: David A. Lourie of Boston, chairman, and L. C. Chard of Newark, treasurer.

The meeting was attended by a large number of film men from all parts of the country, but a list of membership will not be given out until after the final meeting, set for the end of this month.

Gladys Leslie and Grace Darmond Join Vitagraph

Among the new players who have been added to casts of Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features in the last week are Gladys Leslie and Grace Darmond. Miss Leslie, formerly with Thanhouser, is to be seen in support of Harry Morey in "His Own People," and Miss Darmond will appear with Earle Williams in "The Hillman." Miss Darmond, a blonde beauty, who received her training on the legitimate stage, has been with Selig, Pathe, Technicolor and Astra.

Fox Enlarging Foreign Field

THE latest announcement of William Fox that "A Daughter of the Gods," as well as all other Fox Standard Pictures and Special Features have been contracted for in South Africa and other British possessions throughout the world, emphasizes the rapidly growing ramifications of the Fox concern.

Fred Lange is foreign manager of Fox Film Corporation and his offices on the fourth floor of 130 West Forty-sixth street, is a busy place for buyers for the foreign film markets. The foreign department of Fox Film Corporation has been recently enlarged and a suite of ten offices is established for the handling of the foreign trade. Trade representatives from all parts of the world make their headquarters in Mr. Lange's office, where they receive their mail and are otherwise made welcome.

Fox-made films will be as potent in spreading the gospel of an international spirit and peace as any peace congress can hope to accomplish. It is interesting to realize that the Fox picture-plays that are shown on Broadway and picture houses of the United States will also be viewed in all climes, from Nome, Alaska, to the tropical islands of the Antipodes, on the far-distant steppes of the Siberian desert, and the veldt of South Africa.

Spain and Portugal have been recently opened to Fox pictures.

Fox pictures are being shown in Lima, Peru, in Bolivia, and Chile, of the South American coast. A cable just received at the Fox offices announces the great enthusiasm and success of the Theda Bara and William Farnum pictures. In Central America, despite the handicap of delivery, Fox pictures are delighting the natives of those countries.

The Fox forces are negotiating with exhibitors in India, and in Egypt, Burma, Ceylon and the Straits Settlements—and in countries where there are more denizens of the forests than humans. Fox pictures have been opened to the Fox clientele of world-wide cosmopolitans, emphasizing the fact that Fox films are universal and literally do encircle the globe.

Scandinavia and Russia are being sold in part, as are other parts of the civilized world. The attention of the wise foreign buyer is called to this fact. The harbinger of Fox pictures in the lands mentioned will serve as additional stimulus for those yet to come. "Jack and the Beanstalk" is offered the enterprising foreign buyer with all the Fox Standard Pictures and Special Features.

Triangle Production Moving Fast

Triangle Features Completed for Advance Schedule Dates—Variety of Subjects Keeps Large Directoral Staff Busy

WITH seven directors working on new pictures, four waiting for or preparing stories, over one hundred performers cast and others being added to the playing forces as the need arises, the first week in October threatened to break all production records at the Triangle Film Corporation's Culver City studio, where H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager, is directing the general policy of production and expansion.

Four pictures, "The Firefly of Tough Luck," "The Stainless Barrier," "Doing Her Bit" and "Fighting Back" were shipped and five pictures are completed and ready for final editing. These are: "The Fuel of Life," featuring Belle Bennett, "Easy Money," with Charles Gunn and Laura Sears, "Medicine Man," with Roy Stewart, "Regenerates," featuring Alma Ruebens and Walt Whitman and "Indiscreet Corinne," with Olive Thomas.

Director Thomas N. Heffron will soon complete his latest picture, "Gentility," the vehicle in which William Desmond will next be starred. This is a winsome story of an Irish lad who rises from village blacksmith in old Erin to the head of a mansion and rich estate in Chicago, through the death of his uncle. He is also appointed guardian of a minor child and the way this child puts him through his paces, knocking off the rough edges in passing, is said to be highly amusing. Desmond, a true Irishman, is well cast in this picture.

Thus far Director William Gittens has experienced many unexpected difficulties with the tide and storms in his sea picture, whose working title is "The Everlasting Mercy," but has succeeded in obtaining some remarkable water stuff in the harbor district of San Diego. The Triangle three-masted barkentine, "Fremont," is being used, and last week a realistic thrill was given the whole company when "The Fremont" caught fire during a scene where real flames were not intended. Only heroic work by the crew saved this veteran of the motion picture industry from destruction.

Director Raymond Wells is making good progress on his latest story, "Fanatics," in which J. Barney Sherry, popular character actor of the Triangle force, is being featured. Olga Grey, who recently joined the Triangle playing force, is also cast in this picture, playing a modern adventuress.

"Up or Down?", Director Lynn F. Reynolds' latest masterpiece, featuring George Hernandez, will offer something new in the way of Western drama. Reynolds and Hernandez have just returned from Santa Barbara, where many shots of rare scenic beauty were obtained. While in the north, the director took advantage of the vast cattle range near Santa Barbara to get some unusual western stuff.

The story of "Up or Down?" concerns an ex-convict in the process of evolution, assisted by the kindness of an author without an idea.

How "Dollar Mike" finally furnishes the "big idea" and aids the author to win the woman of his choice gives a surprising turn to the plot, which is said to have an especial appeal for students of psychology.

Using thirty stock players and more than a hundred people in the open scene, Director G. P. Hamilton, newest addition to the Triangle directing force, has begun work on "The Maternal Spark." Among those cast are Irene Hunt, Josie Sedgwick and Rowland Lee.

Director Cliff Smith and Roy Stewart, Triangle Western star, together with forty punchers, have just returned from the O'Neil ranch, near Oceanside, Cal., the largest cattle ranch in the southwest. Sixty-three thousand head of stock bear the O'Neil brand, and these, together with the O'Neil ranch cowboys, were voluntary actors in the opening scenes of Stewart's new picture, "The Learnin' of Jim Benton."

Belle Benton, Triangle star, who last appeared as a vampire in Director Walter Edwards' new picture, "The Fuel of Life," has been cast for the leading role in Director Jack Conway's new picture, "Because of the Woman." Conway has already begun work on this feature.

Many Offers for "The Public Defender"

Harry Raver has received many unusual offers for his big screen production, "The Public Defender," since it was shown at the Hotel Astor. While the picture is scarcely a week out of the laboratory over two hundred requests from civic betterment leagues and kindred organizations have been received asking that it be shown in their towns and cities. These organizations feel that "The Public Defender," according to what they state in their letters, will do a great deal to create a better understanding of the movement which has resulted in the establishment of twenty odd public defenders in the United States. In addition to the serious purpose contained in "The Public Defender," it is said to be a particularly entertaining drama of real life as well. Its cast is of the all star variety containing Alma Hanlon, Frank Keenan, Robert Edeson and other players of equal repute.

"Sports and Splashes," a Pretentious Short Reeler

Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, announces as the latest Big "V" comedy, "Sports and Splashes," written by Graham Baker and directed by Lawrence Semon, who is also seen in the chief comedy role.

"Sports and Splashes" is regarded as one of the most pretentious short-reel subjects ever issued, its cast including twenty-five people, all of whom take an active part in the fun making. The major portion of the action transpires in a cabaret, and Director Semon, at the personal instruction of Albert E. Smith, secured the services of a troupe of genuine cabaret performers, including a jazz band.

Petite Florence Curtis, who before her advent into motion pictures was a well-known society ballroom dancer, in the role of the star dancer in the cabaret, is given an opportunity to display her terpsichorean ability.

The cast also includes the Big "V" riot squad, composed of Earle Montgomery, Joe Simberg, Pietro Aramondo and Harry Cooper, and the Big "V" beauty squad, whose complement is a bevy of the prettiest show girls seen in one brand of productions in some time.

Sturdy Little Missouri House

One of the sturdiest little theaters of Missouri is the Schnell of Harrisonville, in charge of Manager Charles Schnell.

The house is of brick, steel and concrete, fire proof and modern in every way. The ground floor is equipped with 628 chairs. The latest Motiograph machine is used, with a gold fiber screen. There is a fully equipped stage and dressing rooms in the basement.

Ten 60-inch ceiling fans are used and two large 4-foot ventilators. Large double doors on the sides, front and back of the house make it possible to turn the theater into a sort of airdome in the summer.

The Schnell has enjoyed splendid business ever since its opening. The bills are drawn from Paramount, World, Vitagraph, Pathe and General.

Harry Segal, general manager of the Globe Feature Film Company of Boston, announces the booking of the Berg production, "A Man's Law," throughout the entire Poli Circuit of New England.

November Important Month for Bluebird

EXHIBITORS of Bluebird will be interested in the announcement that the expected arrival of Mae Murray, as a Bluebird star, eventuates November 12. Carmel Myers, another star new to the series, will be introduced a week earlier, when Bluebird's "star-cycle" gets under way. Franklyn Farnum and Ruth Clifford also contribute to the November offerings and the "cycle" will be completed when Dorothy Phillips and Violet Mersereau appear in December. Hereafter every Bluebird star will contribute to the series at stated intervals of six weeks, in plays especially selected to fit the individual star.

Carmel Myers' offering, November 5, will be "The Lash of Power," a good old-fashioned melodrama, teeming with sensations and fraught with exciting episodes. Her leading man will be Kenneth Harlan. Harry Solter directed the presentation from J. Grubb Alexander's story and Fred Myton's scenario.

Mae Murray will take her place among Bluebirders November 12 in "Princess Virtue," directed by Robert B. Leonard, who directed Miss Murray in Lasky features whence she comes in transference of her artistry to Bluebirds. "Princess Virtue" was created, in scenario form, by Fred Myton from Louise Winter's magazine story. Wheeler Oakman will be her leading man.

Bluebird No. 100 will be distributed November 19 on the regular program. Ruth Clifford is its star and its title is "The Savage." Before this feature reaches the series it will be exhibited on pre-release at the Broadway Theater, New York.

Star Returns to Pictures in Frohman Play

Olive Tell, the gracious, stately actress whom Charles Frohman made a star, returns to pictures in "The Unforeseen," a Frohman success, released by the Mutual Film Corporation on October 22.

Miss Tell comes to the screen as a star with a wide following. She has a string of dramatic successes to her credit, the latest of which was the principal role in "The Intruder," which was one of last season's biggest successes on Broadway. She appeared previously with Julian Eltinge in "Cousin Lucy," and with Lou Tellegen in "The King of Nowhere."

Miss Tell is supported in "The Unforeseen" by a notable cast of actors, recruited from the speaking stage and the silent drama, including such well-known folk as David Powell, Warburton Gamble, Lionel Adams, Fuller Mellish, Eileen Dennes and Helen Courtney. Miss Dennes' dancing is one of the features of the screen presentation.

The picture deals with the experience of a beautiful young woman, of family and education, who, on the eve of her elopement with a man of the world, is seen in his apartment by two of his friends. Financial reverses within an hour of the ceremony prevent the marriage and the groom-to-be ends his life. One of the friends who has seen the girl goes blind, meets and marries the girl.

Triangle Schedule for October 21

Alma Ruebens in "Firefly of Tough Luck" Heads Program for Week—"Cassidy" Also Good Drawing Card

THE Triangle program for October 21 will carry two big features which should prove to be good drawing cards, one a Western play featuring Alma Ruebens with Charles Gunn, and the other an adaptation of one of Larry Evans' Saturday Evening Post stories with Dick Rosson in the title role.

How a dainty sprite of a cabaret singer is forced by her ne'er-do-well husband to go out to a Western mining camp to fill an engagement gives the opening scenes of "The Firefly of Tough Luck" an unusual touch of human interest, which is sustained throughout the ensuing action. Leaving a private train which carried him Westward with a party of joy-larking companions, Danny Ward (Charles Gunn) stumbles upon the firefly (Alma Ruebens) in the desert near Baxter City, a boom town long past the heyday of its glory and claiming the faith of only one citizen, its founder, an eccentric character portrayed by Walt Whitman. The old man's hopes are given a sudden impetus by the discovery of pay ore nearby, and with the location of a missing vein he and his companion become the nucleus of a revived settlement. Just as Danny's love ripens into a proposal of marriage the worthless husband appears; but by his own self-interest the man is disposed of in a way which makes the final fade-away a satisfactory conclusion to the plot.

In the second release of the week, "Cassidy" an unusual study of derelict types, is made. The youth Cassidy arrives in San Francisco hungry and broke, a sorry picture of discouragement. Realizing that his health is gone, he attempts to rob the house of the district attorney in order to make his way back home to New York. He is caught, and by an unexpected turn in events is permitted to save the attorney's daughter from gangsters in return for a freedom which soon liberates his spirit to the "girl back home." Frank Currier, Pauline Curley and Mac Alexander are members of the supporting cast.

The double life of the city editor of a newspaper by day who assumes the role of "Swami Swobodi," crystal gazer, by night to fool his wife and the public, is the entertaining plot of "A Hindu Hoodoo," the two-reel Keystone comedy of the week, in which George Binns, Maude Wayne and Dale Fuller lead the merrymaking.

"His Busy Day" and "A Modern Sherlock" will also be released October 21 as one-reel Triangle Komedies on the regular program.

Olive Tell in "The Unforeseen," a Mutual production for Oct. 22.

New Pauline Frederick Play

David Graham Phillips was one of the foremost American novelists, and at the same time the possessor of more than ordinary ability to search out the depths and shallows of human emotions. "The Hungry Heart," which was one of his most popular stories, will be Pauline Frederick's next Paramount vehicle, released November 5.

Earle Fox Constance Talmadge's Lead

Earle Fox has been chosen as leading man in "The Honeymoon," the new Constance Talmadge picture, which is now being filmed. Mr. Fox though one of the youngest men on the screen has come rapidly into prominence during the past year. His most notable work has been with Mae Murray, Pauline Frederick and as Gerard Mordaunt with Norma Talmadge in "Panthea."

Miss Talmadge and her company are now in Buffalo, where work on "The Honeymoon" is being rapidly pushed. This is an original comedy drama by Lloyd Sheldon, with a scenario by Eve Unsell, and is the last word in up-to-the-minute smart comedy.

It was during Miss Talmadge's work on "Scandal" that her director, Charles Giblyn, discovered her comedy capabilities, and persuaded her to choose a vehicle suitable for their exercise. This has been procured in "The Honeymoon," which is a delightful tale of two young people off for their wedding trip in Niagara. The action is replete with complications and presents no end of amusing situations which Miss Talmadge makes the most of.

"A Man's Law" Sold

The rights to "A Man's Law" for New York and Northern New Jersey have been sold to the Mammoth Film Company, and the rights for New England to the Globe Feature Film Company of Boston.

The next Pathe serial, following "The Seven Pearls," will be "The Hidden Hand," with Doris Kenyon, among the youngest and declared to be one of the most beautiful actresses in the world.

Norma Talmadge, Clara Kimball Young and Rita Jolivet, Select stars. The oval shows Miss Young in "Magda," her newest play.

Attack Exhibitors' Shipping Problems

Unusual Transportation Conditions Threatening Film Men Subject of Special Triangle Study

THE recent two-day embargo by the express companies on shipments in and out of New York city was the first public confession by the carriers of an unusual stress on facilities. This extraordinary condition threatens to work havoc with the film business unless remedial measures are immediately adopted.

During the past summer, Y. F. Freeman, general manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, seeing the handwriting on the wall, engaged Mr. M. J. Mullin as traffic manager, as he realized that in order to serve exhibitors properly it was imperative to have a special organization to see to it that prompt deliveries of films were made in all territories. Mr. Mullin has had several years' traffic experience, both in the freight and express branches, having been connected for the past five years with the traffic department of the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. He has just returned from trips to Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh and Cleveland, where the situation has been almost as acute as in New York.

An exhaustive study of the abnormal conditions throughout the country has extended over several months with results which will be of interest to producers and exhibitors alike, especially the man who is absolutely dependent on prompt deliveries for his box-office receipts. With over twenty branch exchanges, each handling hundreds of shipments a week, exclusive of advertising matter, paper, etc., the tremendous size and importance of the transportation problem to the distributor is readily appreciated.

Some of the important work now being accomplished is the readjustment of territorial bounds for each exchange in order to facilitate rapid and economical transportation, and the compilation of a complete routing order system from each branch to every town of five hundred or more in its territory, for the guidance of shipping clerks in the various exchanges. This is a unique advance along the path of service often promised but seldom backed up with scientific, businesslike methods. In investigating the complaints of exhibitors and endeavoring to harmonize the company's requirements with existing conditions,, over which the express companies have little control, strict definition of territorial bounds was found to be indispensable to economical promotion by the selling forces. Accordingly, each center of distribution was given only as much of a selling field as could be best covered, from the standpoint of time and expense, from that city. The resulting itineraries will mean improved service and a financial saving which will accrue to the interests of the exhibitor.

"The Co-Respondent" to Be Backed by Publicity Drive

One of the most important advertising deals of the autumn was consummated last Saturday when final arrangements were made to exploit Jewel's production of "The Co-respondent," starring Elaine Hammerstein, in a series of attractive half-page and quarter-page advertisements to appear in a chain of some seventy-five leading newspapers of the United States, from New York to San Francisco.

"The Co-respondent," which is the first Jewel production to be featured in an advertising campaign of this magnitude, tells a thrilling story of American life. It has been selected for extraordinary publicity work because it has a universal appeal and should attract patronage from all classes of theater goers in all sections of the country. As the heroine, Elaine Hammerstein does the best work of her career. She is supported by Wilfred Lucas, who provides a forceful and finished characterization of a metropolitan newspaper editor.

This big publicity compaign is but the latest step in a series of progressive moves that have put Jewel Productions, Inc., on the map as one of the most important distributing agencies in filmdom within less than two months. The organization opened business offices at 405 Mecca Building on August 20. By the latter part of September, selling rights to six superproductions of marked box-office possibilities had been secured, including "Come Through!", "Pay Me!", "Sirens of the Sea," "The Man Without a Country," "The Co-respondent," and Lois Weber's heart-searching story of city life, "The Price of a Good Time."

Fred Church Joins Fox

Fred Church, one of the best-known and best-liked players on the West Coast, has been enrolled with the William Fox forces. This is Mr. Church's first affiliation with Fox films.

Mr. Church is a Canadian by birth, having been born in Quebec. He came to the United States when a young lad, and, after a course at the University of Michigan, entered vaudeville. His collegiate training was not intended to prepare him for the varieties, it should be stated.

Vaudeville was followed by a season in stock, after which Mr. Church came west and began his motion picture work with the first company in Los Angeles. He has been such a valuable acquisition to the silent drama that he has not been allowed to leave.

New Jersey League Convenes at Newark

THE closing convention of the New Jersey League of Motion Picture Exhibitors promises to be one of the biggest events held in the east in some time. Dr. Hespe has got tentative promises from Governor Edge, Senator Freylinghysen and Senator Hughes, Congressmen Hamill and Eagan to be present at this meeting. Ex-Governor Fielder, the present Food Administrator; McCormick Blair, chairman of the publicity department of the Four-Minute Men of the Council of National Defense, and speakers from the Motion Picture Industry are expected to address the convention.

The opportunity to present to the legislatures the advisability of repealing the moving picture tax, the presenting of the reasons for Sunday legislation to the government and politicians of the state, and also the chance to show patriotism and fealty with the men engaged in the national work should be appreciated by every exhibitor and a record crowd is expected. Last but not least the music tax situation will be thoroughly gone over. The meeting will be held in Achtelstetter Hall in Newark, October 17.

Injunction Bars Hart Picture

NEW York Motion Picture Corporation, through its attorney, Walter N. Seligsberg, brought suit last week against Artcraft Pictures Corporation, Thomas H. Ince, C. Gardner Sullivan and Lambert Hillyer, to restrain all of them from further interfering with the business of the plaintiff.

The basis of the suit is the fact that prior to the first day of July, Thomas H. Ince was the general manager of the plaintiff, and that as such general manager he had made contracts on behalf of New York Motion Picture Corporation with Messrs. Sullivan and Hillyer and many other employes. That when Mr. Ince left the employ of New York Motion Picture Corporation, he induced many of its employes to leave its employ and among them the very persons with whom he had made contracts on behalf of the company, although he knew that those contracts had not expired.

That Sullivan's contract had not expired but that Sullivan continued to work for New York Motion Picture Corporation and to draw pay from them, and at the same time had an office with and drew pay from the Ince organization, and that Sullivan wrote the scenario upon which the first William S. Hart release made by Ince is based, viz., "The Narrow Trail." That not only was "The Narrow Trail" based upon Sullivan's scenario but it was directed by Hillyer and acted in by Sylvia Bremer, all of whom were under exclusive contract to work for New York Motion Picture Corporation, and that all of these facts were known to all of the defendants.

An application for a preliminary injunction came up before Judge Whitaker in the New York Supreme Court for hearing October 11, and after argument by Martin W. Littleton for the New York Motion Picture Corporation, and Elek J. Ludvigh for the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, a further hearing was set for Monday, October 15, and in the meanwhile a preliminary restraining order or injunction against the showing of the picture in the State of New York was granted upon the New York Motion Picture Corporation filing a bond for $7,500. The bond was filed the same day and "The Narrow Trail" cannot be shown in the state of New York until the final determination of the injunction motion covering the whole United States.

At the office of the New York Motion Picture Corporation it was stated that similar injunctions would be applied for wherever the picture is being exhibited.

Thrilling Scenes in Goldwyn War Pictures

"For the Freedom of the World," Ira M. Lowry's big production which is being released through Goldwyn Distributing Corporation offices, comes closer, it is said, to showing the actual conditions of European warfare than any of the productions ever achieved for the screen.

The several million persons who witnessed the parade of 30,000 women nurses in the Red Cross down Fifth avenue, New York, last week, will in "For the Freedom of the World" see the Red Cross nurses under fire, at work in the rear of the battle line, in the field and base hospitals and fulfilling their errands of mercy under conditions exactly similar to these that confront them in battle.

One of the greatest thrills ever seen in a motion picture is given to every spectator when the coward in the drama rushes across a shell swept field and rescues a wounded man and brings him safely back to the trenches. This scene has never failed to bring the spectators to their feet and at one showing of the picture a few days ago to an audience of exhibitors the spectators sitting in a darkened projection room cheered when the rescuer returned wounded to the trenches, pitching his human burden in ahead of him.

Trade prints of this production already have been inspected and shipped to Goldwyn Distributing offices in North America and special exhibitor showings will be held next week to facilitate the prompt booking of this war panorama.

Novelty Coming from Essanay

Exhibitors soon will be offered a novelty by Essanay. The title is, "Men Who Have Made Love to Me." It is an elaborate comedy-drama, starring Mary MacLane herself, the authoress of unconventional books and magazine articles, and the writer of the story on which the picture is based. The authoress appears in the role of vampire, but the picture is far different from the usual type of vampire stuff. It might be called a sparkling comedy-drama with a vampire playing the lead, but with the fangs extracted.

Essanay and Exhibitors Aiding U. S.

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, is busy organizing exhibitors throughout Illinois in the interests of Food Director Hoover's food economy campaign. Mr. Spoor, who is chairman of the Motion Picture Bureau of Food Administration of Illinois, is doing the work at his own expense.

The state has been divided into districts, with an exhibitor appointed in each district to arrange with other theater owners to show the food economy films. Two hundred feet of film will be shown each week. They will show how to prepare foods in an economical manner, how to peel potatoes with the minimum of waste, how to live on less meat, the relative food values of various commodities, etc.

In addition, each week "Four-Minute Men" will visit each of the theaters in the food economy circuit and deliver four-minute talks on the importance of conserving food to help win the war. Mr. Spoor is organizing this force now in Chicago, and has fifty speakers on his rolls.

Each theater in the circuit will be supplied with one sheet in six colors advertising the pictures and the food economy lectures.

Another form of patriotism was in evidence about the Essanay studios a few days ago when Richard C. Travers, formerly Essanay actor, now in the second officers' training camp at Ft. Sheridan, marched into the plant at the head of two hundred companions.

William Fox's big spectacle-drama, "Cleopatra," with Theda Bara. The opening in New York, Sunday, October 14, was a striking success.

Exaggerated Advertising to Go

Committee of One Appointed by Associated Motion Picture Advertisers to Eliminate Dishonesty in Ads

JUDGE WILLIAM L. RANSOM, fusion candidate for district attorney of New York, and James Quirk, publisher of Photoplay Magazine of Chicago, were the speakers at the last weekly luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., which was held at Keen's Chop House on West 44th street, New York.

The candidate for district attorney, during his address, placed himself on record as declaring that he and the balance of the fusion ticket in New York City depended largely upon the motion picture exhibitors of the greater city to make the election of the ticket sure. He explained this by declaring that the motion picture is the greatest vehicle for propaganda because it reaches persons that may be reached in no other way.

Mr. Quirk devoted most of his remarks to the advertising situation and bewailed the fact that there was not more honesty in motion picture advertising. Even with this stricture, he acknowledged that the advertisng of motion picture producing and distributing companies had improved 100 per cent during the last year or two. He scoffed at the use of the superlative in motion picture advertising and declared that the use of the superlative made the advertising dishonest on its face.

President Arthur James, of the A. M. P. A., called the attention of Mr. Quirk to the fact that the use of the superlatives, especially by the representative companies of the industry was fast being discarded and predicted that the time is not far distant when they will be discarded altogether.

As a result of the discussion on dishonesty in advertising, as well as at the request of the Board of Review, Victor Johnson was appointed a committee of one to confer with the members of the Board of Review and with the Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, with the idea of inaugurating an active campaign to stamp out dishonest advertising, even to the extent of bringing criminal prosecutions when advisable under the "Printers' Ink" law.

It also was decided to hold a beefsteak dinner on November 8, which is to be the first of the monthly beefsteak dinners to be held by the association during the winter months.

Pauline Curley Supports Harold Lockwood

Dainty, golden-haired Pauline Curley has been engaged by Fred J. Balshofer as leading support to Harold Lockwood, Metro Star, in the forthcoming Metro-Yorke production, "Love Me For Myself Alone," a screen version of Francis Perry Elliott's story of the same name, published in Smith's Magazine. She will have the part of the "wonder girl," Beatrice Forsythe.

Miss Curley has recently won approval as the Princess Irene in the Brenon production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs." She has also appeared in numerous Triangle, Fox, Famous Players, Pathe, Reliance, and Pilot features.

"Only Camera Can See War"—Griffith

D. W. GRIFFITH, now affiliated with Artcraft Pictures, has just paid his second visit to the front in France. He is now in the field with the British armies.

"No single human being has ever actually seen a battle in the present war," said Mr. Griffith recently. "The individual is too small and the fighting is on too vast a scale. A soldier goes over the top and he may last throughout a terrible battle, but what he sees is only an infinitesimal part of the fighting.

"What the general sees, plus what his colonel's see and what his majors see and the captains, lieutenants, sergeants, corporals and privates see, added up, would give a fair idea of what great modern battles look like. In other words, it takes 10,000 eyes to see such a battle—and no living creature has that many eyes. Only the motion picture camera has 10,000 eyes. Thus only the motion picture can 'see' the war."

Griffith, with a staff of assistants, has been on the actual firing line for several months letting his camera "see" the war. Some of his stars were brought to England and France to be screened amid ruined villages and battlefields. Both the British and French Governments granted exceptional facilities.

New Elaborate Fox Kiddie Feature

ANOTHER elaborate motion picture version of an age-old story now rests in William Fox's film vaults and will soon have its screen presentation. The new Fox spectacle is a cinema offering of the famous fairy tale, "The Babes in the Woods," and is several reels more than ordinary feature length.

Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, who created the leading roles in Mr. Fox's tremendously successful "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," both of which were exhibited at the Globe Theater, on Broadway, give the same amazing demonstration of dramatic ability that distinguished their first two productions.

Alan Dale, one of America's foremost and best known reviewers, says of them in cold type:

"None of the proud 'movie' stars at colossal salaries can hold a candle to wonderful Francis Carpenter and Miss Corbin. The boy has a smile that is most captivating and that actually lights up his winsome little features. As for the facial expression of the girl, it is almost beyond belief, and a joy to behold. Their performances disarm all criticism, and I assert that theatergoers should make it a point to see them."

New Farrar Picture a Winner

Representative Gathering at Private Screening Proclaim "The Woman God Forgot" Greater Than "Joan"

A TELEGRAM received last week by Adolph Zukor, head of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, from Jesse L. Lasky, who is at present at the West Coast studios, expressed great enthusiasm over the forthcoming Artcraft spectacle starring Geraldine Farrar, "The Woman God Forgot." A private screening of this production was given at the Lasky studio last week, to a representative trade gathering and the consensus of opinion among those present was that the new spectacle staged by Cecil B. De Mille in many respects surpasses even "Joan the Woman," last season's De Mille-Farrar triumph. Jeanie Macpherson, author of "Joan, the Woman," is also responsible for the story of the new production thus offering the same trio in the way of star, producer and author of "The Woman God Forgot" as in the case of "Joan."

Immediately after the private showing in California, Mr. Lasky sent the following telegram to Mr. Zukor: "Just witnessed Cecil De Mille's production of Geraldine Farrar in "The Woman God Forgot." I consider it from every standpoint one of the finest motion pictures ever produced. It is an intensely interesting dramatic story and contains the most perfect photography and beautiful lighting effects I have ever seen. The cast are all remarkable. Geraldine Farrar gives a superb performance as does Wallace Reid, Theodore Kosloff, Hobart Bosworth and Raymond Hatton. The opinion of a large audience who witnessed the running of the picture was that it rivals and in many respects surpasses "Joan the Woman." Mr. De Mille in this production has climaxed every other production of his career. Kindly convey to our exhibitors that in "The Woman God Forgot" we are sending them a picture of mammoth importance that in every sense is good enough for a special release. Besides the points mentioned above it is as elaborate and spectacular as any of the biggest productions ever shown on the screen."

Kansas Exhibitors Hold Convention

The state convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' league of Kansas was held in Manhattan, October 15 and 16.

During the convention the delegates debated the means to be taken to fight the music tax, the regulation of abuses arising under the advance deposit system, and other matters of importance to the members.

Among the social features were a trip to Fort Riley and Camp Funston. The big event, however, was the movie ball in the college gymnasium. The motor club and the Commercial club lent their services toward the entertainment of the visitors.

Eltinge Packs 'Em In

"The Countess Charming," Julian Eltinge's first Paramount picture, released recently, opened a week's engagement at the Clemmer Theater, Seattle, Wash., September 22 and stood 'em up every day at 20 cents admission.

Edna Goodrich in "Daughter of Maryland"

Miss Edna Goodrich, who is admitted to be the typical American girl of the American stage, has never had a better opportunity to demonstrate her right to the title in versatility of characterization than is offered her in a new Mutual production, "A Daughter of Maryland," to be released October 29.

In this charming little drama Miss Goodrich is a patriotic southern girl, surrounded by all the passion and chivalry of the south—a part that admirably suits her rather southern type of beauty.

The locale of the piece and its action, affords Miss Goodrich the opportunity to wear some particularly stunning gowns, as well as to illustrate anew her subtle grasp of the quaint little turns and twists of southern girl character—one minute the gentle smiling beauty of the ball room, surrounded by beseeching beaux, the next a woman, defending her beliefs and birthright with all a woman's determination and finality.

"A Daughter of Maryland" was written by Samuel Morse and scenarioized by Anthony Kelly, author of "The Great Divide," "The Walls of Jericho," and other famous productions. It is one of the happiest characterizations in which Miss Goodrich has so far appeared pictorially.

Artillerymen at Studios

Prior to their leaving for the cantonment at Linda Vista, Calif., the other day, a delegation of Battery F, 1st California Field Artillery, visited the Thomas H. Ince studios and were escorted about the plant by Mr. Ince, personally. A number of the boys in khaki posed with Dorothy Dalton, who is to be seen October 29 in "The Price Mark," a Paramount release, for a scene, with the Stars and Stripes as a background. A print will be sent to the soldiers, "somewhere in California" with a bundle of personally autographed photographs of the beautiful star.

Silent and Spoken Plays to Come Out

H. M. Horkheimer to Produce Stage and Screen Version of "The Right to Live" at Same Time

ONE of the foremost women stars of the stage and screen is about to be presented by H. M. Horkheimer in a new play that will have the novel distinction of being offered on Broadway simultaneously both as a spoken and silent drama. It is called "The Right to Live" and promises to arouse a good deal of discussion among theater-goers.

The play is from the pen of a new dramatic writer who received his inspiration for it from as strong a short story as has appeared in the magazines in years. The film version will be done in seven reels, at the Balboa studio, where the stage production is also being built.

"I have had this play for four years now," said Mr. Horkheimer, while discussing his novel project. "Production has been delayed for the want of the right star to play the leading role. At last I have found her. Meanwhile, the play has been worked over and over until today I believe that I have one of the most promising pieces of dramatic material ever evolved.

"The original short story had a big idea which has been developed in a masterly way. A number of different titles were considered and finally 'The Right to Live' settled upon, because it conveys the theme of the piece—something that touches intimately the lives of nearly all men and women who really live.

"In all dramatic literature, I do not believe there is a tenser story of the inexorable fight for human happiness. As a photoplay, there are unlimited pictorial possibilities in the piece and an acting role for the star which has never yet been surpassed on the stage, while the spoken version teems with lines and situations which are bound to grip. I am not announcing the identities of star or author, as yet, for they are reserved to be sprung as a surprise, when both productions are ready to give the public.

That Mr. Horkheimer has hit upon a novel idea in presenting his new piece on the stage and screen at the same time is unquestionable. People who see either one will more than likely wish to see the other, particularly since he promises to offer the same star in both versions.

Work is already in progress on the photoplay production. By the time that the seven reels have been filmed and made ready for release, the stage play will have been whipped into shape and the same cast rehearsed in it. Then the two will be revealed for the first time. In this way, it is expected that one will help to advertise the other.

Frank Losee Renews Contract with Famous Players

Frank Losee, who is known as one of the most versatile and accomplished character actors upon the screen today, and who has appeared in many Paramount and Artcraft productions, has renewed his contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for two years and will be seen in some of the notable forthcoming productions. He is at present enacting the role of Bab's father in the "Sub-Deb" stories, starring Marguerite Clark, which are being released by Paramount.

Polly Moran, Lady of Slap-Stick

In "Roping Her Romeo," which is the second of the new Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies, released October 21, Polly Moran demonstrates that she is one of the very few real "ladies of the slap-stick" in existence. The peculiar quality of comedy involved in characterizations of this sort is the most difficult to achieve. There is far more art in it than the average person imagines.

Pelzman Handling "Italian Battlefront" in New York

THE distribution of the Royal Italian Government's emotional war pictures, "The Italian Battlefront," for Greater New York, New York state and New Jersey, is being handled for the Fort Pitt Theater Company, which controls the American rights to this picture, by S. D. Pelzman, who recently became associated with the New York office of this organization.

Mr. Pelzman, who is widely known among exhibitors in these territories, has, for a long time, been connected with the Universal Company, where he handled state rights releases and other special productions.

A progressive type of exchangeman, whose business gospel is founded on helping an exhibitor make the most out of a picture, Mr. Pelzman may be relied upon to give exhibitors who present this picture, that quality of personal service which insures the most far-reaching results.

"The Italian Battlefront" is reported to be in strong demand in New York City, as the result of its sensational success at the Forty-fourth Street theater and exhibitors planning to present this picture will do well to get in touch with Mr. Pelzman promptly, at the offices of the corporation in the Times Building.

New Series of One Reel Comedies

Essanay has completed the first of a new series of one-reel slap-stick comedies featuring A. Rastrelli, noted French film comedian on leave of absence from the trenches.

Rastrelli is widely known in France, having been on the speaking stage there for years both in drama and comedy. He had a part in the first two-reel picture produced by George Melies, the father of the film industry abroad.

He has a unique make-up which will be used throughout the series. His first offering, "Hard Luck John," is a fifteen-minute scream. He has the support of a staff of artists that helped make previous Essanay comedies famous and a most interesting series of "rough stuff" one-reelers is promised.

Rastrelli was associated with Max Linder, when he won fame in France, and has many tricks in his bag of pantomime and comedy which are sure to make America thankful to the French government for granting him this furlough to work with Essanay.

Film Industry Growing in Chicago

The Chicago Commerce, official bulletin of the Chicago Association of Commerce, states in a recent issue:

"Chicagoans must never lose sight of the relations of the film industry to this great industrial city. One of the film magnates living in Chicago is Samuel S. Hutchinson, who believes that in the next five years there will be a gathering of film production and distribution in this city that will thin out the business somewhat which New York now controls, and effect something more like a balance of power. In other words, Chicago in a few years will be the logical point for film distribution.

"Already the American Film Company produces forty-eight features annually. Five companies are employed constantly in the making of pictures. The negatives of these productions and other allied concerns are shipped into Chicago, where laboratories turn them into positive prints at the rate of 1,500,000 feet per week. Then the complete film is shipped to the four corners of the earth.

"Recently, Richard R. Nehls, manager of this company, signed the largest contract for serial and feature plates for Russia, Norway, Sweden and Denmark ever entered into. The agreement calls for the export of 60,000 feet of positive film per week, the money represented being over $200,000. Besides this, there go out of Chicago weekly to China and Japan 10,000 feet of serial and feature films, while the same company also has contracts for large amounts with Spain and Portugal."

There are also a number of producing concerns now active in Chicago.

Universal Light Studio Number Three Building

Work has begun upon the construction of another electric light studio at Universal City.

When this building is completed there will be three similar studios at the film capital. Unlike the others, the new structure will be built entirely of wood and there will be 125,000 feet of lumber in the building. Its hundred-foot trusses have been designed to carry heavy loads and experiments made with them indicate that automobiles can be suspended from the trusses without their weight affecting them in the least.

The new electric light studio will be one hundred feet wide and three hundred feet long, just one hundred feet shorter than the largest studio where the directors work at night and in inclement weather.

Young Holds Up Car

Tammany Young, known to the screen as the foremost portrayer of gunman roles and recently seen in Famous Players' "The Amazons," has been forced to give up picture work for a short period because an automobile couldn't find enough room for passage on Forty-seventh street without his help. The machine, driven by a woman surrounded by beautiful furs and not so much driving ability, ran over Mr. Young's foot just as he was about to board a car. It took a full-grown traffic officer to get him out of the pavement.

Because of the accident Mr. Young has had to give up a six weeks' engagement in a big feature. But the thing that he regrets most is his enforced absence from the opening games of the World's Series in Chicago.

"A Mormon Maid" Sold for Pacific Coast

The rights to "A Mormon Maid" have been sold to Southern California and Arizona by T. L. Tally, head of the Tally Interests, Los Angeles. Turner & Dahnken prominent exhibitors of San Francisco, have secured "A Mormon Maid" for Northern California and Nevada. Both purchasers are very prominent in the councils of the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

Henry MacMahon Starts Literary Bureau

A novel idea of helpfulness to producers is put forward by Henry MacMahon in the establishment of his Literary Bureau, which was opened on October 1 at 321 West 55th street, New York. As he says:

"Every film executive and publicity manager needs outside help or information in a hurry now and again. The regular staff is tied up with other matters, or the needed facts are not available without digging in the libraries and some hours of journalistic interviewing. For instance, a point in history, drama, art or science baffles producing director or scenario chief; or there is an unusual number of writing orders to be executed; or perhaps it is imperative to get in touch with some important personage for an interview and a story. I purpose to meet this long-felt lack of supplemental service. Whatever your literary problem is, bring it here. I can solve it for you, or I can put you in immediate touch with the clews to its solution."

Having done extensive research work for D. W. Griffith and many other producers, Mr. MacMahon is peculiarly qualified for this branch of effort. His acquaintance with the theatrical and literary field of New York is second to none.

Globe Films Limited, Open New Office

Bert Lubin, recently appointed general manager for Western Canada by Globe Films, Limited, has opened a branch office in Winnipeg, in the Phoenix Block Building.

Lubin will make his own headquarters in Calgary, Canada, and has left for that point to arrange for the establishment of the main offices, through which channels all territorial and exhibition arrangements for Globe Film productions will be handled, embracing the western part of the Dominion.

The company which Lubin represents is rapidly extending the scope of its activities throughout Canada and already numbers among its clients several of the largest theaters of the country. In addition to "The Warrior," starring Maciste, the Italian screen star, and "Redemption," with Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, Globe Films, Limited, have recently acquired the two big Metro specials, "The Slacker," with Emily Stevens, and "The Call of Her People," featuring Ethel Barrymore.

Hawaiian Capital Withheld from Film Plans

By A. P. Taylor, Honolulu Correspondent.

Motion picture projects for Hawaii, so far as they relate to the launching of corporations with island capital for the general business of making photoplays and associated film products, have not materialized. While the Hawaiian field has been largely exploited in the production of filmed scenes, used principally for educational and lecture purposes, commercialized motion picture projects which thus far have been presented to the residents of the islands have called for local investment rather than the supply of capital by mainland projectors.

With a large percentage of days of the year free from clouds, and with sunshine and clear weather practically always dependable for the greater part of the year, films from Hawaii have been very successful, particularly in scenes of the ocean, the shore, and the mountains.

Several mainland promoters have come here during the past two years seeking to organize companies, but always with a view to obtaining island capital. Local citizens, however, have not felt that they are ready to enter the field. The conclusion has been drawn, it is stated, that until mainland promoters organize corporations and finance them from the mainland, giving their plans opportunity to be worked out so that results may be readily shown, attempts to finance such plans there will be unsuccessful.—Commercial Reports.

Brooklyn Theater Opens with "Lust of the Ages"

The Brooklyn Triangle Theater, which has been closed for a few months during the making of extensive alterations, will open October 8 with the initial production of the Ogden Picture Corporation in which Lillian Walker is starred, "The Lust of the Ages."

An augmented orchestra will be installed in the Triangle Theater and a full musical score especially prepared for "The Lust of the Ages" will be played during the run of that production.

First Blackton Production for Paramount

Timely from more than one point of view will be the release on November 19 of the first J. Stuart Blackton production for Paramount—"The Judgment House" by Sir Gilbert Parker. The story is in itself appropriate to the times because of the military flavor and the great battle scenes depicting incidents in the Boer War. In the former production Violet Heming, one of England's most distinguished and beautiful actresses, will appear in the role of Jasmine. Conway Tearle plays the leading masculine role while Wilfred Lucas and Florence Deshon complete what is virtually a quartette of stars.

Mrs. Vernon Castle in New Pathe

Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Stranded in Arcady," the first of the big new Pathe plays, from the popular novel by Francis Lynde, produced by Astra Film Corporation, directed by Frank Crane, scenario by Philip Bartholomae, will be released on October 14, with the following cast: Mrs. Vernon Castle as Lucy Millington, Elliott Dexter as Donald Prime, Pell Trenton as Edward Girder and Georgio Majeroni as Edward Blandish.

The picture has all elements of popular appeal. It is a fast moving story of the great outdoors dealing with the adventures of a young couple in the North Woods. It contains many thrilling stunts including a jump from a high cliff into the river below and the rescue of the hero by the heroine in the perilous waters of rock-infested rapids.

Housewives Indorse "Public Be Damned"

THE National Housewives League, an organization of vast influence throughout the country, through its president, Mrs. Julian Heath, has endorsed the film drama, "The Public Be Damned."

In her letter to Arthur S. Kane, general manager of the Select Pictures Corporation, Mrs. Heath characterizes the play as most opportune and destined to be of assistance in adjusting the present food control situations.

This endorsement by the housewives sets "The Public Be Damned" among the best sellers. With the National League instructing its branch members to co-operate with motion picture exhibitors throughout the country in an effort to give the picture a nation-wide showing, its success is an established fact. As the exhibitors can count on the co-operation of local committees whenever "The Public Be Damned" is the feature, packed houses will be assured wherever it is shown.

The National Housewives League has been characterized as "the greatest economic movement in this generation." Organized several years ago under the wing of the New York City Federation of Women's clubs, it has grown from a committee of seven on "Home Economics" to a great nation-wide organization with branches in every city.

Since its inception the fundamental basis for the actual work of the League has been the using of the organized consumer's power to effect and control conditions that pertain in any way to the home and under the leadership of Mrs. Heath, chairman of the original seven, and president of the present national body, it has revolutionized sanitary conditions in factories, markets, bakeries and the like. Its stamp of commendation is today a coveted mark of excellence and its approval of "The Public Be Damned" will be of great assistance to exhibitors who show the picture.

News of State Rights Productions

THE LATEST FROM ALL OVER THE INDEPENDENT FIELD

Exhibitors' Film Exchange Formed

THE Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Inc., under the management of Fred C. Quimby, one of the best known film men in the West, has opened offices at 1200 Fourth avenue, Seattle.

It has the exclusive rights of distributing all pictures released through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, of which it is a franchise member, throughout the territory of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Northern Idaho and Alaska. It will also buy the higher grade state right features. "On Trial," the massive seven-part production which enjoyed a spectacular week's run at the Liberty Theater, Seattle, and also played at the Rialto Theater, Butte, and the Liberty Theater in Portland, with marked success, is the first feature to be released through the Exhibitors' Film Exchange.

Fred C. Quimby, Manager, Exhibitors' Film Exchange, of Seattle.

This picture was the unanimous choice of the board of directors of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in selecting their first release. Bud Fisher's new Mutt and Jeff Cartoon Comedies and the Chaplin comedy specials now in the making, the first of which will be released about November 1 in two reels or more, are distributed through this new exchange.

The Petrova Pictures, starring Mme. Olga Petrova, are also released through the Exhibitors' Film Exchange. The first one, also to be released about the first of November, will be five reels or more. McClure publicity in McClure's big chain of magazines throughout the country, is backing Petrova's pictures, as Frederick Collins, president of the McClure publications, is also president of her corporation. Twenty of the largest exhibitors throughout the United States and Canada united to form the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. The Exhibitors' Film Exchange was fortunate enough to be asked to join and this Northwest territory was allotted to them. The aim of the circuit is to eliminate the middleman by selling the film direct from the producer to the exhibitor—at a lower cost of film and a higher class of production.

Secure Rights to Gerard's "Four Years in Germany"

A. and H. M. Warner have closed negotiations whereby they secured unto themselves the complete rights to the film version of Ambassador Gerard's four years' experience in Germany. Gerard's account has been made into a seven-reeler, which will be released on the state's right basis all over the world. H. M. Warner, who has been in California, where he submitted the film manuscript to Mr. Gerard for corrections and suggestions, passed through Cleveland on the Century train bound for New York. He will make immediate preparations for the release of the first authentic account of the causes leading up to the war which now involves practically the entire world.

Universal Handles Boy Scout Production

Universal has arranged with the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., of London, to handle "Boy Scouts—Be Prepared," the big eight-reel production devoted to the work of the huge army of wide-awake English boys headed by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, who are accomplishing so much in the way of home defense and auxiliary service while their fathers and brothers are at the front.

Indianapolis State Rights Concern Formed

A new state rights company has been formed and will soon open offices in Indianapolis and Chicago. It is known as the Doll-Van Film Company and was organized by Henry Dollman and D. M. Vandawalker, both of Indianapolis. The latter was formerly general film manager in St. Louis. The firm has purchased "Today," "The Mad Lover" and "The Cold Deck," and will distribute them in Indianapolis, Illinois and the surrounding states.

Firms Handling "Parentage"

"Parentage," the splendid Frank Seng production, is being distributed as follows:

Greater New York—Select Pictures Corp., 729 Seventh Ave., New York City.

New York State—Veribest Pictures, Inc., 47 West Swan St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Eastern Pennsylvania, South New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia—Peerless Feature Film Exchange, 1339 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Illinois and Southern Wisconsin—Central Film Co., 110 South State St., Chicago, Ill.

Northern New Jersey—Frank Gersten, Inc., 220 West 42nd St., New York City.

Hirsch Buys Hart Picture

Nathan Hirsch, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, 126 West 46th street, New York City, has purchased from the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc., the exclusive rights to "The Cold Deck," a William S. Hart feature, for New York, including Greater New York, and Northern New Jersey, including Trenton.

"The Cold Deck" is said to be one of the best pictures Hart has given to the screen. It is an adventuresome tale of Western life, full of thrilling action, in which Sylvia Bremmer and Alma Ruebens play the leading feminine roles. An unusual degree of photographic excellence has been achieved in the scenes among the dense shadows of the big redwoods of California.

Mr. Hirsch has already booked the feature for a long run at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, and is rapidly placing it in other sections of his territory.

First Charles Ray Paramount Picture

When Charles Ray makes his screen appearance October 22 in "The Son of His Father" it will be his debut under Paramount auspices. The Thomas H. Ince star has, it is said, outdone himself in this new picture which affords him material for red-blooded, virile action, a portrayal of a typical, young American, the sort that is making this a nation to be respected by the entire world.

The story is by Ridgwell Cullum, directed by Victor Schertzinger, and has as its leading features a tremendous fistic encounter in which Ray proves his prowess as a boxer; numerous sensational scenes and a plot that is original and full of splendid screen material. The story is based upon the successful effort of a youth, scion of a wealthy family, to turn five thousand dollars into a hundred thousand in six months. This is the task set by his father to prove his mettle. Vola Vale supports Mr. Ray, and is the only woman in the cast.

Next Pickford Picture Finished

The production of Mary Pickford's next Artcraft release, "The Little Princess," adapted to the screen by Frances Marion, from Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel, has just been finished at the Hollywood, Calif., studio. Once again "Our Mary" will be seen in a child part, such as she scored big success with in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and "A Poor Little Rich Girl." In characters of this type Mary Pickford always meets with public favor, her presentation of such parts being supreme.

Director's Own Special Production

"SHAME," the special production planned by John W. Noble as his initial contribution to the state rights market at a termination of his long contract with the Metro last spring, is ready for the screen after more than sixteen weeks spent in preparation, staging, cutting and titling.

Mr. Noble, whose more recent productions include Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "Romeo and Juliet," Valli Valli in "The High Road," Ethel Barrymore in "The Awakening of Helen Ritchie," and many other high class pictures famous for both their artistic and financial success, decided early last June to confine his efforts to the creation of only the most pretentious features. In order to succeed in his new undertaking, he arranged to allow himself at least three times the usual number of days required for the staging of a large production, as he maintains that the standard of motion picture productions is gradually being raised by the exceptional pictures which appear from time to time, representing the special effort of competent directors who concentrate upon a single big subject and take the time necessary for its proper presentation.

In spite of the remarkable success achieved by Mr. Noble, while forced to prepare a new story for screening before completing one he was at work on, and while continually haunted by the fact that each feature had to be ready for a regular fixed release date which limited the time for casting, staging, cutting and titling without regard for the difference in requirements of difficult stories, he holds that pictures so produced do not represent the best work of a studio. By allowing himself as much time as each subject really demands, he aims to set a new standard for pictures published at regular intervals, a standard which he believes will soon have to be maintained by all producers who wish to keep in the front rank of the art.

The powerful drama, "Shame," was prepared for the screen without regard for time or expense. Mr. Noble worked the story into scenario form himself and selected the cast with as much care as if producing a stage play for a year's run on Broadway. The staging of the drama was given as many weeks as the thorough rehearsing and artistic photographing of its seven reels demanded, while the all-important work of cutting and titling was also done by the director's own hands. Under these circumstances, it is natural that the announcement of the initial showing of "Shame" should be awaited by the motion picture fraternity with unusual interest.

Jules Burnstein, general representative for John W. Noble in the marketing of "Shame," promises to have his plans for its first presentation perfected at an early date.

Zena Keefe, Niles Welch, Jack Dunn, Lionel Belmore, Paul Daucet, Joyce Fair and Dell Bonne are prominent in the cast of the new Noble feature.

Nell Shipman, who has returned to Vitagraph.

Nell Shipman with Vitagraph

Nell Shipman is again to be featured by the Vitagraph Company, her return to the fold being in the George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester story, "The Eighth Great Grand Parent," which is now being produced at the Vitagraph Hollywood plant. Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, states that Miss Shipman's reappearance will be in the role of a hoyden daughter of a precise family; which family has in its background, however, an "Eight Great Grand Parent," whose spirit of mischief and recklessness lives again in the eighth great granddaughter, which role is played by Nell Shipman.

Miss Shipman will be remembered for her big success, the role of "the woman" in "God's Country and the Woman," Vitagraph's famous special feature and in "Through the Wall," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon release. After her Vitagraph engagement came respective ones with the Fox and Lasky companies, after which she went to the West Indies to write a feature story and a book, both of which will be given to the public within a short time. Alfred Whitman will play opposite Miss Shipman in the story, which William Wolbert will direct.

Foreign Rights Sold on "Grain of Dust"

Under the contract entered into between the Crest Pictures Corporation and the Ogden Pictures Corporation, the rights to the entire foreign territory were sold to the Crest Pictures Corporation on the next Ogden Pictures Corporation's extraordinary release, "The Grain of Dust," adapted from the novel written by the late David Graham Phillips and in which production Lillian Walker is starred.

The Ogden Pictures Corporation have been engaged in the making of "The Grain of Dust" three weeks and will require six weeks more to complete.

The Crest Pictures Corporation have advised the Ogden Pictures Corporation by letter that they have executed contracts for the exclusive exhibition rights for Scandinavia on "The Grain of Dust" for the sum of $1,500. Mr. Carle E. Carlton, the president of the Crest Pictures Corporation, further stated: "This is the largest purchase price for rights on a state right production registered to date in Scandinavia."

Harry Revier, director of "The Lust of the Ages," the initial Ogden Pictures Corporation's release, is directing "The Grain of Dust."

Shows Woman Suffrage Film

Willis Robards, who has brought east the big suffrage propaganda picture, "Mothers of Men," recently held a private showing for prominent buyers in the independent field and for representatives of the trade papers.

The picture, which features Dorothy Davenport, was particularly well received and Mr. Robards was heartily congratulated upon his excellent work.

Among those present was Joseph W. Stern, the publisher of the song, "Mothers of Men," which has been written around the picture by Gus Edwards and Will D. Cobb. H. J. Shepard, of Shepard and Van Loan, Mr. Robards' representative, has planned to use this song as part of the tremendous advertising campaign for the picture. The song will be displayed and sold by the largest syndicate of five and ten-cent stores throughout the country and will be released at the same time as the picture. Mr. Stern is most enthusiastic about the proposition and feels that the result can not fail to be successful.

Ogden Pictures Making "The Grain of Dust"

THE Ogden Pictures Corporation, who have lately completed their initial Lillian Walker production, "The Lust of the Ages," now being exploited on a state rights basis, are now actively engaged in the filming of their second Walker extraordinary production, "The Grain of Dust," adapted from the novel of the same name written by the late David Graham Phillips.

Harry Revier, producing director of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, is bending every effort toward new and original effects. The production will be replete with night scenes. For three nights the company has been working on exterior locations, employed in which were not less than 180 high-powered arc lamps. The cast, exclusive of extras and bits, calls for nineteen principals, and it is predicted by the officials of the Ogden Pictures Corporation that "The Grain of Dust" will prove one of the most pretentious modern society dramas ever staged.

Of two reels of the production which have been run off and which, however, did not contain any continuous scenes, one and a half reels embraced camera and light effects that of themselves are likely to stamp the production as extraordinary.

Every character used in the book as written by Mr. Phillips is employed in the photodrama.

It is expected that "The Grain of Dust" will be completed, ready for release, about November 1.

"Do It Yourself"

Manager Keene of the Bedford Theater, Brooklyn, Throws Some Vital Facts of Management and Valuable Hints Out to Exhibitors.

"THERE is a very old, but true saying," remarked Lionel H. Keene, the young manager of Fox's Bedford Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y., "to the effect that if you want anything well done you must do it yourself, and it applies directly to the theatrical manager, who must give his house his personal supervision and attention if he wishes it to become successful in the highest degree.

"There are so many minute details that appeal to his experienced eye, and so many minor matters which he, by his close observation, becomes cognizant of, that it is of vital importance that he do this constantly. It is true in many instances, these affairs are, when taken up, individually, of small consequence, but collectively they represent the difference between success and failure, and it is by giving each and every one of them the actual amount of attention that is due, that the manager is enabled to present to his patrons a photoplay program in its most perfect and refined form, and to eliminate and remedy those manifold little defects, and objections which are sure to appear with unceasing regularity.

"The manager who is—or should be—in closest touch with his patrons, wisely exerts his strenuous efforts to provide them with perfect pleasure, in which there shall not be the slightest flaw or shortcoming to mar their unalloyed enjoyment," continued Mr. Keene. "This indeed, is perhaps the greater part of his labors and study, and is generally his highest ambition. When he is able to see for himself that everything is right, and is satisfied in his own mind that his house is being conducted in the best possible manner, and is providing the best photoplay program possible, presented in the best possible style, his gratification is complete and his greatest capability reached.

Take Pride in Your House

"The enterprising manager is interested in his theater other than from a financial standpoint, just as the artist is oftimes in love with the picture he paints, and, in the magic of his art, feels a vast amount of personal pride in his work and satisfaction in his accomplishments."

Mr. Keene's experience has ranged from Shakespeare to films. His introduction into theatrical circles was with Frank J. Wilstach in advance of the E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe combination, followed by two years with the Poli Stock Co. at the Auditorium Theatre, Baltimore. It was at this time that he was induced to enter the vaudeville and moving picture field, taking hold of the reins of the Alhambra and Regent Theaters of Philadelphia under the direction of the Stanley Company. Last season saw him at the B. F. Keith's Riverside and Alhambra Theaters of New York.

Rothopfel's New Theater Called the Rivoli

The splendid new theater in New York which is to be under the direction of S. L. Rothopfel, at present managing director of the Rialto, has been named the Rivoli. This title was suggested by Hugo Riesenfeld, conductor of the Rialto orchestra. The new house is at the corner of Broadway and Forty-ninth street.

Mr. Rothopfel will continue to direct the policies of the Rialto.

New Impression of New York's Rialto

THE following impression of New York's Rialto Theater by Kitty Kelly of the Chicago Examiner is interesting and full of hints for the observing exhibitor:

In New York, S. L. Rothapfel thunders loud, accompanied by much electrical display. His Rialto, the school of how-things-should-be-done, is a Mecca of pilgrimage. One seeks it as a matter of duty and comes away from it in a state of astonishment.

Standing a Privilege

The astonishment begins right square at the door, where a waiting line is encountered, and a gold-braided person is busy announcing "Standing room only; 50 cents a ticket."

Within are many, crushed together inside some taped corrals at 50 cents per stand. Mr. Rothapfel was not in, but his assistant, Mr. Reece, answered queries in this wise:

"Well, this week it is Eltinge, and he is very popular and I give the star the credit; and last week it was Ferguson in 'Barbary Sheep,' and she's popular and I give the star credit for it, but still business has been picking up wonderfully. I have it like this at the matinees even," concluded he modestly.

The house is really very beautiful. Roomy, semi-circular and built on the cantilever plan that permits the omission of pillars, it affords good angle of seeing from everywhere. The orchestra, a thirty-five-piece one by the way, is happily submerged below the stage level so that the conductor's baton is not forever slicing across the picture. Beauty marks the stage itself, with its tall, simple pillars, its soft green silk curtains, roseated along the edges with a ruby-hued glow of light. Rococoness is almost missing. The totemlike small pillars and tall carved vases of artificial flowers only remain as a kind of rudimentary suggestion.

Rialto's Real Mission

The Rialto serves, however, a deeper purpose than that of ministering merely to comfort. It provides the motion picture with a dignified environment of entertainment. It recognizes the picture's deserts as a feature of interest, and surrounds it with enough atmosphere to command the attention for an evening's worth of time. A play without staging or costuming or music or lights would be as much a play from its inner thought idea, but it would not be much heeded if it had no glamour or romance about it, no feeling of festival.

That is what the Rialto gives to the photoplay, and the folks aspiring to stand for 50 cents indicate an appreciation of its policy.

Here is a picture of the kind of a theater many a manager would like to have—one that you climb aboard, draw up the gang plank, silence the calliope and let slip down the long drink to a town where folks have just received their monthly pay envelopes and are afflicted with spenditis. The Sunny South Floating Theater stops at towns along the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio rivers, playing as long as it is profitable and then going on. In winter this river show-house, with a seating capacity of 2,000, goes south and in the summer, north.

Soda Fountain in Lobby of Alabama House

By J. L. Ray.

A complete overhauling has been given the Orpheum Theater of Birmingham, Alabama, and many added improvements have been installed. A novelty in the theater field is a soda fountain and cigar counter which has been placed in the up-to-date lobby, where a first-class stock will be carried for the benefit of theater patrons.

After several weeks of darkness, the Orpheum is prominent by reason of its new decorations, and promises to have a most successful run. The management has announced that a new program service will be instituted regularly, including such brands as Selig, Kalem, Essanay; Universals, such as Nestor, Joker, Gold Seal, L-Ko and others, together with a line of short reels by Pathe, Vitagraph and Mutual. Many interesting educationals and travel pictures are included in the latter. Christie and Hoyt comedies have proven a popular drawing card in the past, and these two brands will be continued.

Pictures for the Sailors

By Joseph M. Elias, Yeoman, U. S. Navy, U S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois

Bugle call, eight bells and the command, "Fall in for the moving picture party," certainly stirs great commotion at the United States Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Illinois.

From every direction the jackies rush out of their quarters to obey the call, which, outside of mess call, is the bluejackets' favorite.

About 2,000 strong are lined up. Then at the command, "Squads right, MARCH!" (which at drill is sometimes found to be a very complicating function), the happy sailors obey without any difficulty and off they go in the direction of the "white sheet."

In view of the fact that at present there are, roughly speaking, about 10,000 men at the station, the use of the auditorium, which has up to the present time been used for all performances, has been eliminated, the moving picture plays now being held at the large drill field in front of the administration building. The screen is hung on the outside of the drill hall, thus enabling about 2,000 men to enjoy the pictures comfortably.

The program for the last month was as follows: World's "On Dangerous Ground," Mutual's "My Fighting General," Celebrated Players' "Captivating Mary Carstairs," also "The Slacker"; Greiver & Herz Film Co., "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"; Universal Film Co. presented "The Field of Honor"; Metro Film Co., "Her Grand Prize"; Unity Film Co. presented John Mason in "The Libertine."

On September 3 the Triangle Film Co. presented Douglas Fairbanks in "The Americano." This picture was especially liked by the bluejackets. "The Slacker" was also a favorite.

Knickerbocker Gives Election Returns

Manager Wassman of the Knickerbocker, Nashville, Tenessee, had a big week recently when he brought a fifty-piece band to his theater, to be used in connection with a feature picture starring George Walsh, in "The Yankee Way."

Another unique feature of the engagement was municipal election night which came toward the middle of the week. Arrangements were made to show the election returns on the screen as fast as they came in, which proved a very attractive scheme from a box office standpoint. It was practically the only place in town where seats could be had to get the election returns and it made a big hit, especially with the ladies. Admission was raised to twenty-five cents during the engagement of the band.

Live News from Theaters of Canada

By W. M. Gladish.

Special Correspondent for Motography.

MANAGER CLARENCE ROBSON has a "new and steadfast policy" for the Strand Theater, Toronto. To start the season of 1917-1918, he decided to book features on the open market, call his theater "The House of Big Stars," change programs twice each week, adopt an unvarying schedule of matinee and night prices and do a lot of newspaper advertising. Evening prices starting Monday, October 1, are 10c, 15c and 25c. Matinee prices are 10c and 15c. The Strand is one of the three large downtown theaters of Toronto.

Two hundred dollars was realized for patriotic purposes at the Temple Theater, Hamilton, Ontario, when Manager Wall staged a special children's benefit show under the auspices of St. Hilda's Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. The General Film Company loaned four reels of appropriate pictures for the occasion.

A booming small town in Ontario is New Toronto, where several large factories have recently been established. Several exhibitors have recognized the field there and T. J. Peart has started the construction of a two-story theater and office building to cost $20,000. The house is of brick construction and will seat 400 people. It will be finished before December, it is announced. J. F. Brown has also announced that he will erect a picture theater at New Toronto to cost $10,000.

The first picture to be presented by the Moving Picture Distribution Committee for the Dominion Government as a part of the Government's educational campaign for thrift was an English release of 1,500 feet entitled, "Everybody's Business," with an all-star cast. It was shown at the Regent, Shea's and Loew's theaters, Toronto, during the week of October 1. The official committee is made up of Clair Hague, president of the Canadian Universal, and Jules and J. J. Allen, who control the Famous Players Film Service, Limited.

Manager Minhinnick of the Grand Theater, London, is booking all the special features that he can secure. He has adopted the policy of showing nothing but state right features or other pictures of prominence and to these he is adding some vaudeville. This fall he has shown or has booked "Redemption," "The Public Be Damned," "Beware of Strangers," "Jack and the Bean Stalk," "The Honor System" and others. He is practically making the Grand a "road show picture theater."

Both the Patricia and Majestic theaters, London, Ontario, are giving "double-feature matinees." Two good five-reel features are presented every afternoon from two until five o'clock, while one feature is shown twice each night with a comedy or news weekly. The double-header matinees have served the purpose of increasing matinee crowds. The Majestic Theater changes programs three times each week.

$200,000 Fire in Dallas

A FIRE which broke out in the business section of Dallas, Texas, September 28 destroyed two theaters and a grocery store before it could be brought into camp and subdued. The Newport and Queen theaters were the victims of the $200,000 blaze which is thought to have started through defective wiring in the rear of the Newport Theater.

York Has 1,000 Seater

York, Pennsylvania, has a new moving picture palace which is in the last stages of construction. The Jackson Theater with Frank E. Barry, as manager, is a fine new house with a seating capacity that will comfortably accommodate 1,000 fans of the long celluloid.

Colonel Butterfield Plans Improvements

That the Garden Theater of Battle Creek, Michigan, would be enlarged and that two theaters would be built close to Camp Custer, was the announcement made recently at the office of Col. W. S. Butterfield of the Michigan city.

Plans for the improvements at the Garden have been approved by Messrs. Cross and Lipp and W. S. Butterfield.

Construction work will start at once, and the plans provide for extending the theater about 40 feet at the rear, moving the stage back.

In announcing that he had secured two theater sites at Camp Custer, Col. Butterfield explained that a good many of the boys are not able to pay their fare downtown every time just to attend the theater. "Building theaters at the camp will not only be a good investment, but it will also be an accommodation for the boys," Mr. Butterfield said.

The theaters at the camp will have a seating capacity of about 2,000 each.

Needs Bigger House

Manager Pollard of the Gem theater of Guthrie, Okla., has had plans drawn for a new house to be located on Harrison avenue. The deal for the site has not been closed as yet, but Mr. Pollard hopes to see a new house in course of erection within the next few months. The Gem has outgrown its present quarters, and playing as it does daily to capacity houses at popular prices, necessitates more room. Pollard's plans call for a modern up-to-date amusement structure.

Sunday Pictures Opposed by Churchmen

If ministers and church people can stop it the soldiers at Camp Hancock, Augusta, Georgia, will not see moving pictures on Sunday. However, the subject is still an issue. Following the council's recent action the ministers of Augusta drew up resolutions opposing Sunday pictures. At the fourth quarterly conference at St. Luke's Church one thousand citizens of the western section of Augusta went on record as opposing Sunday exhibitions. One of the main contentions of the ministers was that the men at Camp Hancock were Pennsylvanians who observed the Sabbath very faithfully and that the men themselves didn't want the picture lid tilted.

Tulsa to Have Big Theater

Tulsa, Oklahoma, is to have a fine new $500,000 theater to be located on Fourth street between Boston and Main. The new showhouse, according to O. W. Edwards, promoter and builder, is to have a seating capacity of 2,500. Work has already been started on the construction. The name, according to Mr. Edwards, will be selected later, probably by the popular method of inviting suggestions from the public.

Garfield Raises Prices

The management of the Garfield Theater at 2844 Madison street, Chicago, explained the raise in admission prices it inaugurated October 1 as due to the exorbitant salaries demanded by the film stars. The notice follows:

Our regular price of admission is 10 cents but on Sundays and on occasional stated week day evenings the price of admission to the "Garfield" will be 15 cents. This increase in the price of admission when big pictures or popular stars are shown is not actuated by any desire on our part to take advantage of your eagerness to see the best pictures. It is dictated by necessity. The explanation of this necessity lies in the fact that film actors and actresses who become popular favorites realize their drawing power and demand fabulous salaries. In turn, film producers demand high rental for the films and the exhibitor is thus constrained to increase the price of admission.

American Propaganda Abroad

The exportation of American films to foreign countries, according to the Chicago Examiner, is now a recognized factor in carrying on an American propaganda for political freedom and democracy. The editorial continues to state that while we are raising a great national army, and equipping a greater navy, for America's entrance into the world fight for democracy, we are not neglecting the work of spreading the gospel of political liberty among those who need it most in these trying times. We ought to give unstinted credit to the genius of America in its utilization of the film play along educational lines, as well as those of mere entertainment. Producers may make a lot of money out of the latter, but the propaganda of American ideals cannot fail of fruitage that is not measurable in dollars.

Louis Becht Takes Vacation

Louis H. Becht, pioneer picture man of Cleveland, Ohio, and president of the Mall Company has retired from business —at least temporarily. He has transferred his interests in the Mall Theater Company to his partners, Edward P. Strong, Fred Desberg and Joseph Laronge, while he takes a vacation trip to California. Mr. Becht's retirement is really no retirement at all because he is already planning to erect a high-class picture house in Lakewood, his home, as soon as he gets back from the Coast. He is Cleveland's oldest exhibitor.

Enlarging Johnstown House

The firm of Sherer & Kelly has taken a lease from the Pythian Temple Association of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, on the theater on the first floor of the Pythian Temple building. Work has been started to enlarge the theater from its present seating capacity of 500 to 1,000. It is planned to throw the new Temple Theater, as it is to be called, open to the public about the first of the year.

To Hold Children Showings

As a result of efforts of the Parent-Teachers' Association, the American Theater of Enid, Oklahoma, is showing special children's pictures every Saturday morning, beginning at 9 o'clock. The entertainment is to be made up each time of a fairy tale, an educational reel or a good clean comedy.

Receiver Appointed for Muncie Theater

Frank R. Wilson has been appointed receiver of the Muncie Theater Company, following a suit filed by Frank Hollander, who alleges the company is indebted to him to the extent of $500 for acting as its agent in the sale of stock. Other defendants in the case are local business men, the majority of whom have withdrawn from the project. The concern was organized to establish a large picture theater to be owned by a number of stockholders living in the city.

Hope to Avert Strike

Although moving picture operators of Cleveland, Ohio, expressed confidence that the threatened strike of operators would be settled to the satisfaction of both sides, there have been no new developments in the situation as yet.

A general increase of 10 per cent in wages will probably be offered operators by their employers to avert the strike.

Hamlin Touring Northwest

Thomas J. Hamlin of Minneapolis, general manager of the new association of theaters in the Northwest, is addressing a series of local meetings throughout the Dakotas. Theater managers of Aberdeen, South Dakota, and surrounding territory came together on September 27 for the purpose of discussing the advisability of securing their films direct from a state exchange, thereby eliminating the middleman. Mr. Hamlin also stopped in Huron, Mitchell and Sioux Falls.

A. J. Obreshk to Manage Whiting House

The Star Theater of Whiting, Indiana, reopened September 29 as a high-class picture house under new management. A. J. Obreshk, manager of theaters at Gary, has taken over the house.

Seligman Leaves Loew Theater

After a long service as assistant manager, Abe Seligman, one of the best known New Orleans theatrical man, left Marcus Loew's Crescent Theater, Saturday, September 29. Mr. Seligman's resignation has been in the hands of Manager T. C. Campbell for several weeks. He will probably remain in New Orleans as part of the Tulane Theater executive staff. Mr. Seligman has been assistant manager in charge of the Crescent for many years, during part of which time he inaugurated and operated the Lafayette Theater, which was the first large house to be devoted to moving pictures in the South. The Lafayette for more than three years enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most successfully operated moving picture theaters in America.

T. H. Turner, a prominent Eastern newspaper writer and former manager of Marcus Loew's Baltimore Theater, took charge of the Crescent to succeed Mr. Seligman.

Exhibitor Is Inventor

L. J. Pico, manager of Saenger's Theaters in Vicksburg, Mississippi, has invented an attachment for moving picture cameras which, when patented and placed on the market, the inventor believes, will save miles of film from spoiling. Generally speaking, the attachment will prevent exposed film from accumulating in the bottom of the camera and becoming fogged, torn or spoiled. After securing a patent, Mr. Pico will submit the idea to a camera manufacturing concern.

Work on Theater Progressing

Work is rapidly progressing on the new and beautiful Woodlawn Theater at Sixty-third street and Maryland avenue, Chicago. The new house is to have a seating capacity of 1,750 and will cost about $250,000. The interior of the auditorium will be decorated with a series of mural paintings showing the development of the beautiful Woodlawn neighborhood, and will boast a splendid pipe organ. Manager Karsas of the Woodlawn Theater Company is the man in whose hands will rest the guidance of this new addition to Chicago's list of beautiful entertainment temples.

Red Splash in Advertising

The Palace Theater of Waterloo, Iowa, lighted up the town in a blaze of glory recently in advertising the big spectacle drama, "The Garden of Allah." A number of placards printed in dazzling red announcing the coming of the de luxe production were pasted advantageously about the city, with the result that to go near them was to stop and read. A special symphony orchestra was enlisted for the occasion and the production of the picture proved the effort spent in advertising was far from wasted.

Theater De Luxe Boosts Ante

With an imposing list of the pictures booked for the near future and justifying its action on the general high cost of exhibiting such superior productions, the Theater De Luxe, at Alvarado and Orange, Los Angeles, through the medium of a special folder inserted in its regular program, has informed patrons of an increase in prices. The new scale will go into effect October 14, with matinee seats all 15 cents instead of 10. Evening admissions will be 15 cents, with the rear sections 20 and the loges 25.

Appreciates Free Motography Cuts

Motography, Chicago:

I am returning to you today the cut of Norma Talmadge loaned for my program and inclosng a copy of the first fall issue of my little paper.

I am under obligations for the cut and certainly appreciate the same.

I see that you are going to have cuts for release that I surely will be glad to have. On page 762 of this week's Motography, October 13, the four at the bottom of the page I can use—Eva Tanguay (oval), Constance Talmage, scene from Moth, and Alice Brady on the right.

I will use these in the first issue after their arrival if you will be good enough to send them and if it is not hogging, you can also send me such as you see fit of "The Love Doctor," on page 761 of same issue.

I want that Liberty Loan film that is to be distributed free. This week's Motography has the story and I am going after the same. Will wire you for that cut if I get it.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am, Fraternally—Jo. E. Rickards, The Hip, Phoenix, Ariz.

Yoder Buys Interest in Two Houses

W. F. Yoder, representative for the Universal Film and Supply Company of Oklahoma City for the past two years, has just purchased a half interest in the Quality and Broadway Theaters at Elk City, Oklahoma. Mr. Yoder, who had several years' experience as an exhibitor, took active management of both houses October 1.

Army Camp Brings Prosperity

Exhibitors of Tacoma, Washington, are enjoying a spell of unexampled prosperity at present, largely as a result of their proximity to the big army cantonment, Camp Lewis. Hotel accommodations can scarcely be procured and the theaters are playing to capacity audiences every day. Several prominent exhibitors have tried to get concessions from the Government for a theater in the camp, but have not been successful.

To Handle U. S. Films

The United States Department of Agriculture has signed a contract with Universal to distribute motion pictures illustrating the work and activities of the department during the coming year. One of these features will be released every two weeks bearing the notice, "Official Film of the United States Department of Agriculture." Any scenes that are of particular timeliness will be utilized in issues of the Animated Weekly, Current Events and the Screen Magazine.

Chicago Theaters and Features

The following is a list of theaters and the features they used as magnets last week in the loop district of Chicago:

ALCAZAR—"North of 53," with Dustin Farnum.

BANDBOX—"The Sin Woman," with Irene Fenwick.

BIJOU DREAM—"The Moth," with Norma Talmadge.

BOSTON—"Shall We Forgive Her?" with June Elvidge.

CASINO—"Sirens of the Sea," with Louise Lovely.

CASTLE—"Bab's Diary," with Marguerite Clark.

LYRIC—"The Innocent Sinner," with Miriam Cooper.

ORPHEUM—"Intolerance," drama.

PASTIME—"The Penny Philanthropist," with Peggy O'Neil.

ROSE—"Camille," with Helen Hesperia.

STAR—"Reputation," with Edna Goodrich.

WORLD—"Not My Sister," with Bessie Barriscale.

ZIEGFELD—"The Man from Painted Post," with Douglas Fairbanks.

New Jewel Packed with Action

Action of the most exciting and intensely dramatic sort, absorbing suspense, highly spectacular effects and camera work such as has seldom been attempted in motion pictures—all of these qualities have been incorporated in generous measure in "The Boss of Powderville," the new Jewel special feature production which is nearing completion at Universal City under the direction of Ida May Park.

The cast is exceptionally capable. Dorothy Phillips plays the leading feminine role and William Stowell is the hard-hearted boss of the western town. Jack Mulhall appears in the part of a young and adventurous New York newspaper man, and Lon Chaney has great opportunities for characterization as an old restaurant-keeper. Evelyn Selbie and Alfred Allen also have important roles.

One tensely dramatic moment follows closely upon the heels of another in the story, building up to a thrilling climax.

New "Daughter of Daring" Stunts

Helen Gibson, feminine disciple of deeds of daring, is to return in a new series of her General Film one-reelers, known as "A Daughter of Daring." The Kalem Company, which produces the new series in which the fearless star is featured, has announced five subjects for release in November and December.

No more popular railroad stunt pictures ever have been released than those which have appeared under the general title of "A Daughter of Daring." Since the close of the last series the clamor from the public and exhibitors has become so insistent that Kalem has decided to amplify the series for the popularity stakes in filmdom. The first of these sensational features to be released will be "A Race to the Drawbridge," which will be ready November 7. Others to follow under consecutive weekly release dates are: "The Munitions Plot," "The Detective's Danger," "The Railroad Smuggler" and "The Deserted Engine."

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

Gets Keystone Focus

PROJECTION Department: I am having some trouble with my projection and would like to have you help me out if you can. I am using two Power's 6A machines and the booth is situated 40 feet behind the screen. I have been on the job for one week and this is the first time I ever worked on rear projection so I would like some help. The booth sets on the floor level and the screen base is four feet above the floor level. One of the machines is directly behind the center of the screen, while the other is set almost at the edge of the screen. The machine that is placed in the center gives very good projection, but the one on the side is causing me trouble. I cannot set the shutter so the picture will not streak. I have tried to set it every way that I know but it streaks either up or down or both and I would like to know what to do with it. Both machines give a keystone effect on the screen and the one is placed at one side gives a keystone effect both ways, that is—it is narrower at the top than at the bottom and narrower on one side than on the other, and it is impossible to focus it at top and bottom at the same time. If you can help me out in this I will be much obliged. I forgot to tell you that I am using A. C. current, 110 volt and 60 cycle, and I am using a compensarc and a rheostat and use the rheostat to heat the lamp and the compensarc for projection purposes. —W. Wm. Mc—Indiana.

I would say that your shutter trouble was caused by one of two things—either the gears are badly worn or else the blades on the shutter are not wide enough for the wide angle lens. If the gears are worn they allow lost motion in the shutter shaft. That would cause the shutter to streak either up or down at times, but if the shutter is streaking up or down both at the same time the main shutter blade is probably not wide enough. I take it for granted that you are using a two-blade shutter on the A. C. current and that when you set the shutter, you set it in as close to the lens as possible. On account of the short throw and the wide angle lens you will not be able to set the shutter close enough to the lens to cut the light rays at the proper point. Examine the following gears and be sure that they are not worn: No. 633, small gear meshing in driving gear; No. 634, large gear for front shutter; No. 635, small gear for front shutter.

If you find these gears in good condition your trouble lies in the shutter itself. If, however, you find them worn have new gears put in. Do not attempt to put on new gears yourself—send the mechanism to some first class repair man or to the factory. If the shutter blade is at fault take the shutter off the shaft and remove the three screws in the shutter bushing and remove the shutter from the hub. Use the shutter for a pattern and lay it on a piece of stiff cardboard and mark out a shutter on the cardboard, but make the blades on the cardboard at least one-half inch wider on each side than the original shutter is. Cut out the pattern from the cardboard and mount it on the shutter hub and time this new shutter. To time the shutter, loosen the screws in the outer hub and allow the outer hub to revolve on the inner hub. Loosen these screws just enough so that the shutter may be moved, but not enough to allow it to revolve freely.

Test for travel ghost with title showing on the screen. Keep moving the shutter away from you until no streaks show up on the title at the top, then, with a pair of scissors trim off the lower edge of the main shutter blade until streaks show at the lower edge of the title. Trim off a very small part between each test so that you can tell by the title just when the blade is narrow enough to cause the streaks to appear. When this point is reached, remove the shutter hub from the machine and take the paper pattern from the hub. Take it to a tinner and have him cut you a shutter out of heavy tin or light weight galvanized iron. Paint the shutter a flat black or some dark color. Mount the metal shutter on the hub and time it.

Another way to get the proper width of the shutter blade when the blade is too narrow is to use a strip of gum paper or slide binding. By applying it to the edge of the original shutter blade you can get the width for the new blade and then cut the new one from the pattern. The keystone effect on the screen may be taken out, first, by filing the aperture and second by tilting the screen so that it sets at the same angle to the perpendicular as the machine. The way that your machines are setting will necessitate your filing both plates on the sides. On the machine to one side the plate will have to be filed top and bottom also.

The whole trouble lies in the fact that the booth and machines are not located in the proper place in respect to the screen. The lens of the machine should be as near center both up and down and sidewise to the center of the screen as possible. If it is possible I would advise you to have the booth moved and raised. That will do away with the keystone effect and the out of focus effect that you now have. If you cannot move the booth you will have to file the aperture plates or tip the screen. Fill in the edges of the aperture with solder and file the aperture until it assumes its normal shape on the screen. Remove one of the condensers so that the spot will not be too hot to work in and then work with the light on the aperture so that you can see effect of the filing on the screen. Use a fine toothed file and work slowly. The filing of the aperture will correct the outline of the picture on the screen, but will not correct the out of focus effect.

Has Trouble Switching

Projection Department: I would like to have you help me out on the trouble that I am having with my light. I have two Simplex machines with a motor generator set and a compensarc. The generator set is not large enough so that I can use both lamps at once, so I use the compensarc to heat up one lamp while I use the generator set on the other one. The compensarc and generator are connected to a four-pole double throw switch so that I have A. C. on one machine and D. C. on the other, and vice versa.

My trouble comes when I change from A. C. to D. C. I start my show using the D. C. from the generator set and toward the end of the reel I light the lamp on the second machine on A. C. from the compensarc and as I change from the first machine to the second I throw the four-poled switch so that I have the D. C. on the second machine. About every other time that I change over the light will go out and I have to throw the carbons together several times before I can get the D. C. to light. Why is it that the D. C. will throw over one time and not another? Can you offer an explanation for this? —E. W.—Illinois

The only explanation that I could offer you would be that you light up on the second machine too soon and allow the carbons to burn long enough on the A. C. to form a crater on the lower carbon and at the same time you carry too wide an arc on the A. C. at the time you throw over to the D. C.

Try lighting the second lamp at about one-half a minute before you make the change over and carry a short arc on the A. C. until after you change over. Then draw the carbons apart slowly until you have the proper arc on the D. C. Examine the generator for loose connections at the fields.

Gets Junk Film

Editor Projection Department: I have read in MOTOGRAPHY what you had to say about operators who punched film and about operators putting reel bands on the right reels and I agree with you, but I want to register a kick against a Film Exchange of your city, Indianapolis, for the way that they are sending out film. I received a five-reel feature, "The Alster Case," and this is the condition that it was in when I received it: Two frames in title of part one, two frames in title of part two, no title on parts three, four or five. No part title on end of any of the reels but the third one. There were five mi-frames in the five reels and in the third reel part 3 appeared on the screen after one hundred feet of film had been run off. Two reel bands were marked part 1, one marked part 2 and two marked part 5. When I saw the condition that they were in I called the manager of the theater up to the booth and showed them to him, and he said that he would take it up with the film exchange. I have not heard from him since but I think that there should be some way to compel film exchanges to either send their films out with proper titles and in proper condition or else junk them. —R. H. G.—Indiana.

The only thing I can say is that as long as managers deal with exchanges that send out "junk" such as you are complaining about just that long will operators have to put up with it. I will send a copy of your letter to the main office of that company.

New York's 71st Goes "Over the Top"

THE 71st New York Regiment, now at Camp Wadsworth, S. C., and soon to be in France, has already been "over the top," and they have been over the top in true fighting fashion, in France, and all without going farther from New York than across the Hudson to Jersey.

Seventy-first Regiment goes over the top for Fox's "Les Miserables."

In Fort Lee, N. J., William Fox, has in preparation a film version of Hugo's "Les Miserables." Standing on the big studio lot is a reproduction of the San Antoine district of Paris, nine city blocks in extent.

Men with real military training were needed to impersonate the guard for those scenes in "Les Miserables" depicting the Revolution of July, the fighting in the streets behind barricades, and the clashes between the citizenry and the National Guard of France. Through the courtesy of the officers of the 71st, Frank Lloyd, under whose direction William Farnum is making the picture, obtained the services of a battalion from that regiment. The troops donned the blue and red and white uniforms of the French Guard. They make splendid and stirring figures in the film.

They worked from nine o'clock one morning until two p. m. the following day. Just a half hour before quitting time came the climax. Right over the top of a twelve-foot barricade they went as hard as and as fast as they could go.

While, of course, the whole affair was mimic warfare and the soldiers were not for the moment clad in the khaki of their country, that battalion from the 71st went over the top as though the Boche were on the other side and they were determined to "get" him.

After the cameras had ceased to grind, the men were drawn up and Captain Schroeder of Company A, of the 71st, made a speech. He thanked Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Farnum in behalf of his men for the royal treatment they had received and especially for affording them the opportunity of going over the top.

Exhibitors Sued by Music Concerns

ASKING that a number of exhibitors be enjoined from playing their music, and that they be fined $10 for each offense, several of the big New York music publishers filed suits October 4 in the United States District Court, through Nathan Burkan, in which they allege theater proprietors are permitting musical compositions to be played without the consent of the publishers.

Watson, Berlin & Snyder, M. Witmark & Sons, G. Ricordi & Company, Inc. and T. B. Harns & Francis Day & Hunter are the firms which claim their music has been played without their consent. The defendants are Thomas Cassese, proprietor of the Roma Theater at 178 First avenue; Varieties Photoplay Company, operators of the Varieties Theater at 112 Second avenue; Schuyler Amusement Company, owners of the Schuyler Theater at Broadway and Eighty-second street; Second Avenue Amusement Company, operators of the Majestic Theater at 15 Second avenue; Novelty Theater at 214 Bowery; National City Amusement Enterprises, operators of the Palace Theater at 1326 St. Nicholas avenue; Max Grund, manager of the Model Theater at 940 Freeman street, and Israel Suckman, proprietor of the Golden Rule Theater at 125 Rivington street.

Vitagraph Men to War

The latest men to bid farewell to their associates in the Greater Vitagraph plant in Brooklyn are T. J. Gallagher of the purchasing department, and D. Hoffman of the Receiving Department. Both are sergeants in the new National Army now under training.

Social Upheaval in "Her Second Husband"

American metropolitan life, the pitfalls it holds for the young wife in society, and the follies of social custom as observed in certain metropolitan circles, are very pointedly and effectively dealt with in a new Mutual photodrama, "Her Second Husband," in which Miss Edna Goodrich is starred.

The new play was written by Hamilton Smith, who also wrote "The Vampire" and "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel." It is based on actual happenings that have cropped up in connection with the social upheaval created by the amassing of enormous fortunes in "war brides," as a result of which great numbers of hitherto unknown names began to appear in the social register and exclusive doors were thrown open to men and women who never in their wildest dreams had expected to enter them on any social mission.

Miss Goodrich believes "Her Second Husband" to be a play of great power, and one that must needs exert a salutary influence on American life.

Mae Marsh in Tailor-Made Role

Persons who are aspiring to write scenarios for the motion picture screen will learn a great deal about characterization from the new Goldwyn picture starring Mae Marsh, "Sunshine Alley." This photoplay, by Mary Rider and developed into continuity by Emmett Campbell Hall, was especially written to fit the quaint capabilities of Mae Marsh, and is said to be one of the most close-fitting vehicles that has ever been provided a picture star.

This is a remarkable tribute to the discernment of the two capable writers responsible, particularly so because Miss Marsh is known in the world of the motion picture alternately as "the whim girl of the screen" and "the girl of a thousand faces." One may readily imagine from this simple statement, that writing a photoplay for Miss Marsh—one that will give every opportunity for her peculiar emotional range—is no mean task.

Same Vehicle Serves for Opera and Screen Debut

The long standing friendship between Oscar Hammerstein, the man who gave so much to musical New York in the days of his Manhattan Opera House, and his greatest star, Mary Garden, brought a message of welcome and encouragement to the diva on her first day in the Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee, N. J.

By a curious coincidence it was in "Thais" that the singer made her first American appearance, and the famous story by Anatole France will likewise serve for her debut on the screen.

Miss Garden begins work on "Thais" under the joint direction of Hugo Ballin, the artist, who has given his entire attention to picture work since the founding of the Goldwyn Picture Corporation, and Frank Crane, the well known moving picture director. In Miss Garden's supporting cast are Hamilton Revelle, Crauford Kent, Charles Trowbridge and Lionel Adams.

direction, photography and settings. It is a play which leaves the audience in a pleasant frame of mind. It will doubtless draw well because of the popularity of the star, and it will not disappoint. In short, it is a clean, pretty play in Essanay's best style. Fred E. Wright directed.

The Story: John Cort (Bryant Washburn), a young architect, and his bride, Barbara (Virginia Valli), are in financial difficulties which are increased when, in a charitable impulse, they offer to care for a hobo who is injured in a train wreck near their home. Despite the doctors' bills, John and Barbara nurse the outcast back to health. In an attempt to raise some money, Barbara decides to try to sell a play she wrote at school. The hobo suggests she send it to Phillip Allen, a big producer. She does and to her amazement it is accepted. Simultaneously, John gets a commission from Mrs. Stoddard, a wealthy society woman. In attempting to conceal good fortunes from each other for the surprise of their glorious fulfilments, many misunderstandings arise between Bab and John. She sees him with Mrs. Stoddard and believes the worst. He sees her with Allen and suspects her perfidy. The breaking point almost is reached when Bab's play comes out a tremendous success. John reads of it and his wife's authorship in the newspapers, then reveals to her his success. The two are brought to a happy reconciliation with the hobo as their fairy godfather. For it develops that it was through his former friendship with Allen that Bab's play was accepted; and also that Mrs. Stoddard in reality, is his daughter.

"The Man from Painted Post"

Artcraft Fairbanks Subject in Five Reels. Reviewed by George W. Graves

MELODRAMATIC action, with thrills that deserve the name, excitement and suspense, are all properties of "The Man From Painted Post," the latest medium for the art of Douglas Fairbanks, scenarioized by himself from a story by Jackson Gregory, and directed by Joe Henaberry.

The ardent follower of the Fairbanks' pictures asks himself after each one of them, "When will wonders cease?" and "How do those connected with the making of these pictures keep so fresh on their originality?" There are lots of new stunts in Fairbanks' latest, among which figures the longest jump to a horse that he has yet made, and the story in its telling discloses a new store of originality, making for an interest that places the offering on a level with its predecessors.

The story has its locale in the West—the real desert West of Arizona, and it has to do largely with the rounding up of cattle thieves, the head of whom, to complete his joy, kidnaps the pretty district school teacher. But the latter fortunately has made friends with "Fancy Jim" Sherwood, a newcomer in the parts posing as an Eastern tenderfoot, better to accomplish his real mission of apprehending the cattle rustlers. Sherwood puts his real resources into play, and, in a most sensational, yet jolly manner, delivers the pretty school ma'am from the jaws of destruction. Then the rapid fire romance ends most auspiciously.

While the picture is generally hard and fast melodrama, there is of course a generous sprinkling of comedy of a very delightful sort, most of it springing from the situations where we find "Doug" outwitting the villains, but a good deal of it rising from his bashful and therefore human love-making.

In the support, Eileen Percy again makes a very favorable and dazzling impression as the schoolma'am. Which causes us to sadly reflect that school teachers were never like this in our day. Never! Frank Campeau is a first rate villain. Others in the very capable cast are: Frank Clark, Herbert Standing, William Lowry, Rhea Haines, Charles Stevens and Monte Blue.

"The Man From Painted Post" is a winner from the box-office standpoint.

"The Man Without a Country"

Thanhouser-Jewel Offering of Famous Patriotic Story. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

EDWARD EVERETT HALE'S famous story in which a disloyal officer is granted his wish, "never to see or hear of the United States again," and finds this eventually a terrible punishment serves as the basis for this six reel patriotic sermon. Those who are familiar with the original story may wonder how the producer found enough material in the plot for five or six reels. Evidently he did not, for a modern story forms a large part of the offering and the older story is dramatized as a dream of one of the leading characters. The reincarnation theory is also used, and the modern "slacker" is supposed to have been Philip Nolan, the traitorous officer. His remembrance of his punishment and suffering in his earlier incarnation reforms him and he hastens to enlist.

The production, we believe, will be a disappointment to those who expect to see the Hale story dramatized on its own merits. If it had been picturized as the hero read it, or even portrayed as a dream, it would have been more effective, but instead, the figure of the modern man, lead by the heroine, in classic robe, is dissolved into the historical scenes in a rather distracting fashion.

However, every means of patriotic appeal has been used, and if your patrons are touched by patriotic feeling, you will hear much applause during the presentation of this. And it will have strong drawing power, especially if advertised correctly. Florence LaBadie's name also will add to its attraction.

Philip Nolan was a traitor.

H. E. Herbert plays Philip Nolan. J. H. Gilmour, Sarcy Hastings, Ernest Howard and Charles Dundan are in the cast.

The Story: The picture begins shortly before war is declared with Germany. The heroine and her brother are very patriotic but their friends are not. However, when war has really come, they abandon their pacifist ideas and try to aid their country. One man, who is in love with the heroine, refuses to be converted, and the girl breaks off her friendship with him and goes abroad as a nurse. Later the man, urged to enlist, utters a curse against the United States. His friend hears him and begs him to read "A Man Without a Country," an account of another man who cursed the United States. As he is about to read the book, he has a vision in which the spirit of the heroine, who had been reported killed, leads him through the story. She tells him that Philip Nolan was himself. The tragedy of Nolan's wife reforms the "slacker" and when he awakens, he hurries to a recruiting office. Then he learns that the heroine had not been killed, that the report is untrue. A few days later, in uniform, he greets her as she returns home safely.

elders. Jack Pickford and Louise Huff do exceptionally well with their parts, as they have done with like parts in time past, and their impersonations constitute the picture's greatest value. Both bring out the ardency of youth with realism and both exhibit good emotional play.

The story—if one stops long enough to think about it—is not very satisfying, because it is so terribly unreal, but the stars with the help of a competent cast, and good direction, carry the whole very well and make the picture an offering of average entertainment quality. There is one very commendable thing about the story, that is, that the author has worked up a very nice element of suspense just prior to the final climax.

"The Ghost-House" is a very good offering for audiences composed largely of young people, but it will pass as average with the ordinary audience. In the cast are Olga Grey, James Neill, Eugene Pallette, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Horace B. Carpenter, Edythe Chapman and Lillian Leighton.

Beulah Marie Dix is the author, and Wm. C. DeMille the director.

Al Griffin, for five years technical director with the Essanay Company and later for some time with Rex Beach, has been secured by the Rolin Company as technical director on the "Lonesome Luke" comedies, the Harold Lloyd comedies and the "Toto" comedies, all on the Pathe program.

Conquest Program No. 9

Excellent Number in This Edison-Kleine Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A dramatization of Stevenson's "Kidnapped," in about four and a half reels, a one-reel burlesque of a Roman play, a silhouette production of the Little Red Riding Hood story, scenes from Provincetown on Cape Cod, and views of microscopic pond life comprise this Conquest program for the family group. After viewing this number, one cannot help hoping that these group programs will have a wide distribution. Every school child should have an opportunity of enjoying them, and adults will like them equally.

"Kidnapped" is given a beautiful production. Settings, costumes, photography and tinting are beautiful, and the story of course is full of action and excitement. It is a worth-while production for any program. Everyone will enjoy it. Raymond McKee is excellent as David, the hero, and Robert Cain and Joe Burke are well chosen for their roles. Alan Crosland directed.

The humor of this program is furnished by "Friends, Romans and Leo," a clever and very funny farce, dealing with "Mulius" Caesar, his beautiful daughter, and her suitors. A comedy arena scene, with a "lion" as chief actor, will win many laughs. Subtitles also are good.

The silhouette of Red Riding Hood's adventure is dainty. It will appeal to the littlest patrons. The travel pictures and educational topic which complete the number are very interesting. As a whole, nothing less than excellent describes the offering.

Conquest Program No. 10

"Family Group" Offering Released Through Kleine System. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is an exceptionally good offering, serving its purpose admirably. It consists of eight reels, two stories of three reels each, a one-reel fairy story, and one reel of scenic and educational pictures. It is diversified and so well balanced that everyone will be entertained.

A three-reel play based upon Anna Sewell's famous "Black Beauty" story is the chief number of the program. Don Fulano, a pretty and clever trick pony, has the star role, with Pat O'Malley as his owner. Peggy Adams has the leading feminine role. The play is cleverly presented, and is quite out of the ordinary. It will please everybody. The photoplay is beautiful, and there are several fine outdoor locations used.

"A Duke for a Day" is a fine little comedy-drama in two reels. Raymond McKee is at his best. This young actor is a very pleasing player. He has a bright future in screen work. The people who follow the Conquest series will certainly like him.

"The Pied Piper of Hamelin" will appeal to school children and their teachers. It is a prettily produced one-reel version of the old legend and follows Robert Browning's poem.

Beautiful photography is a feature of the travel and educational numbers which complete the program. This number, the tenth, will be of special interest to humane societies because of the "Black Beauty" play. Interest your local society in it. It is just the sort of picture they will be enthusiastic over.

"The Burglar"

World Film Release of October 29. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

WILLIAM A. BRADY has given this screen version of "The Burglar" from Augustus Thomas' well known play a noteworthy production. The finished product proves to be a gripping picture, intelligently told and excellently acted. The story, so well known to the theater-goers, has a wide human appeal and will be enjoyed by patrons of widely diversified tastes. It is consistently interesting throughout, while there is that ever-effective tug at the heart strings which stimulates interest and makes the play appear to be running on greased wheels.

Careful attention has been given to details and a few improbable bits are cleverly concealed by directorship. There is a clever scene of a bank robbery where one looks down at the layout from above and sees the whole gang at work.

The trio of stars appearing in this picture would attract notice anywhere. Carlyle Blackwell does some splendid work as the impotent youth who is more unfortunate than bad, and Evelyn Greely, in a very sympathetic role, is delightfully dainty and wholly suitable. Little Madge Evans is in a class by herself. She pleases immeasurably by her natural winsomeness whenever on the screen.

The story covers a period of five years, beginning with the college days of Will Lewis, a reckless youth who cares more for wild parties than for his studies. He accidentally shoots a policeman one night while under the influence of liquor, and to escape the consequences runs away from home. His moral backbone weakened, he falls in with bad companions and is in a fair way of becoming as dissolute as they, when he meets the girl of his choice and takes a new grip on life. He marries the girl, the daughter of a wealthy bank president, and there is a year of wedded happiness which brings an offspring—the idol of them both. Then an old companion turns up with threats of spoiling the youth's happiness by telling of his past, so the youth, to spare his wife the knowledge that he is sought by the law, helps the old-time companion to rob the safe at the bank. He is caught and sent to prison. Years pass, he escapes from prison, but has become a moral wreck. One night he breaks into a gorgeous home for a haul. He is surprised by a little girl who is delightfully friendly with him and who offers him all of her jewels. He learns from a picture on the table of his wife that this is his own child, and of course his joy at seeing her again is unbounded. As he is about to leave the house he is shot by a policeman, but before he dies he has a chance to clasp his daughter once more in his arms. Harley Knoles directed the picture.

"Bab's Diary"

Paramount Picture Featuring Marguerite Clark. Released Sept. 24. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

IN "BAB'S DIARY" it is hard to say which pleases more, the scintilating personality of Marguerite Clark or the delightful way Mary Roberts Rhinehart has unfolded her story. The "Sub-Deb" stories, long familiar to all Saturday Evening Post readers have made material for a charming picture. The efforts of Bab to be impressive when insistently treated like a child are screamingly funny while the complications which arise from her imaginative qualities are side-splitting.

The picture is thoroughly modern and Bab is a thoroughly modern girl. Probably all girls have suffered as Bab did and it is this healthy normal note which makes it so refreshing. Bab is real, we are all acquainted with her and we will all enjoy seeing her on the screen. The story is unfolded in a unique way, the sub-titles being pages from Bab's own diary with the spelling entirely phonetic. This causes a great deal of merriment.

Marguerite Clark as Bab is Bab from start to finish.. The part might have been written for her. She is ever dainty and delightful and her comedy is highly amusing. Her supporting company is all that could be desired and the production is in every way noteworthy..

Bab is a "Sub-Deb," a debutante in the making, a girl who has not yet "come out." She is not satisfied with this state of affairs. She is not taken seriously enough by her parents, and when they try to force high-necked party dresses on her again she rebels openly. To make them aware of her importance she tells them she has decided to get married and end it all anyhow. Her parents are furious! Who is the man? She must give him up! Now there is really no man at all but Bab, seeing the impression she has made, and revelling in her new importance quickly invents one and chooses his name from off a malted milk tablet—Harold Valentine. She buys flowers and has them sent to herself "from Harold" and writes him passionate notes which she feels sure will never be mailed. Then she magnanimously tells her parents she will give him up for a low-necked party dress. At this time however Carter Brooks arrives on the scene. Realizing that Bab is "faking" her love-affair he decides to have some fun with her and tells her that he knows Harold Valentine well, that he is an old college chum and that he is in town. He arranges for Bab to meet him at the junior dance that evening. Bab is all mixed up, she doesn't know which way to turn, but she goes to the dance. Carter Brooks has inveigled a friend of his, an actor, by the name of Grosvenor to impersonate Harold. It was Grosvenor's picture which Bab had on her dressing table. She had purchased it at an art store, finding it necessary to have a picture of her lover.

Bab arrives at the dance, meets Grosvenor and is in a quandary. Having read that letters are always incriminating she decides she must get the letters she wrote to Harold at any price. She hires a taxi and goes to Grosvenor's apartments. She subsequently gets into the wrong rooms, has a hard time explaining what she is doing there, and then accidentally sets off the burglar alarm. Wildly she rushes into the bathroom where a bath has been drawn, and slipping on the rug, falls into it. When the police arrive she decides to pretend she is drowned. She is finally taken home in an ambulance to her waiting parents where everything is explained by Carter Brooks. J. Searle Dawley directed the picture.

"The Fighting Trail"

Episode 7, "The Ledge of Despair. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THERE is excitement in this episode with a vengeance! We are taken with such lightning-like rapidity through so many hair-raising scenes, that we can only hold our breath and gasp as the picture leaves us suspended in mid-air with the hero! There is some good human comedy relief in this picture—not the slap-stick variety—and the thrills are many, and suspense terrific, while the action doesn't lag for a minute.

After the struggle on the cliff, Gwyn and Cut-Deep both jump into the torrents below, but Cut-Deep is enabled to get away by swimming under water. Thinking themselves safe for a while, Nan and Gwyn visit their mine. The outlaws follow them and close the entrance with boulders so they can not escape. After adventures in the mine with snakes and mountain lions, Gwyn and Nan find an outlet on a rocky ledge overlooking a rushing torrent. They climb out and lower themselves by a chain to a narrow trail, but the trail leads nowhere. At the entrance to the cave is the mountain lion. Thus the picture leaves us. It is a splendid ending for a serial episode. This continued play, in which the Vitagraph favorites, William Duncan and Carol Holloway are featured, has so far lved up to its claim of being the greatest serial attraction produced to date.

"'49—'17"

Butterfly Production With Western Thrills and Adventures. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE "old west" is dying hard in pictures. There is a certain kind of thrill and action that only a wild west setting provides for a photoplay. But directors now resort to various excuses for introducing it. In this story, we have a wealthy old man reconstructing one of the deserted western mining camps. He commissions his secretary to gather together a group of western "bad men" and dance hall girls. The secretary finds a troup of western characters at the Exposition giving a representation of the old days and persuades them to inhabit the reconstructed village. With these characters, the story is worked out and the usual action and thrills introduced. The puzzling title refers to the years which are connected in the story, the days of the "forty-niners" and the modern time.

Witting. The acting is uniformly good. The photography and settings are satisfactory. The picture, while not remarkable, will satisfy audiences with a taste for western melodramas.

The Story: Judge Brand sends his secretary, Tom Robbins, into the west to reconstruct Nugget Notch, an old mining town. Tom brings a group of cowboys and girls from a wild west show. Among them is Ann Bobbett, with whom Tom falls in love. Judge Brand comes from the east. He finds that he has known some of the characters in the old days. For the judge had once been a miner. He had told Tom a story about his former partner, whose daughter had been lost and if found would inherit a fortune. It looked for a time as though Ann Bobbette was the heiress, and Tom began to grieve because the fortune would come between them. However, a great deal of concealed history is brought to light, and Ann is not the heiress. But the villain of the play gets his just deserts in spectacular fashion and Tom is the discoverer of a new gold mine, and becomes wealthy and marries Ann.

"Dead-Shot Baker"

action, too, but the chief charm lies in the very natural characterizations. The life of Dead-Shot Baker is shown after marriage and shows us the hard time he has with his very wilful little eastern wife. The little wife is a helpless bundle of loveliness and is looked down upon by the community because of her inability to "fit in." She leads her adoring husband a sorry chase before he is finally convinced of her love. The costumes of a past period are very quaint and picturesque and add much to the presentation. There is plenty of the brisk action which we have come to depend upon in western pictures and simply as a thriller with its delightfully human quality left out it would still be a highly entertaining picture. The character of Evelyn Baldwin is one of the most typical and amusing seen in pictures in a long while and as portrayed by Carol Halloway it is a masterpiece. William Duncan in the title role does some very good work.

Dead-Shot Baker is the sheriff of Wolfville and his name tells the rest. Some bandits hold up the stage and after plundering it, they carry away two women to their mountain home. Dead-Shot leads a posse after the bandits and rescues the women, one of whom is the daughter of the town drunkard, who has been brought up in the east in the belief that her father is wealthy. The father dies leaving her a helpless charge on the good townspeople. They try to think of all sorts of work that she can do to earn her living but the girl seems satisfied to do nothing at all but let others look out for her.

Dead-Shot Baker in a dilemma as to what will become of her proposes marriage and is accepted, much to the disgust of the townspeople who think he is too good for her. The girl proves a sad disappointment as a wife, taking no interest in anyone or anything but the village postmaster, a dapper creature from the east. However, "Dead-Shot" is very much in love with his wife and wishing above all for her to be happy, he openly courts death so that she may marry the postmaster. At this time a noted band of rustlers goes on the rampage and the sheriff leads his posse against them. It is reported that he is killed and then the young wife, who really never cared for the postmaster, is roused to action. She leads reinforcements back into the hills and captures the outlaws. She then finds her husband and nurses him back to health and happiness. William Duncan directed the picture.

"The Fire-Fly of Tough Luck"

Triangle Picture Released October 21. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS is the usual western picture with the story written by J. G. Hawkes, who knows how to write them. It will find favor with all who like the regulation melodramas, there being plenty of action and many tense scenes. The western atmosphere is truly portrayed, and the outdoor scenes are very good. The characters are all conventional ones. The heroine is expectedly saccharine, the hero upright and the villain vile in regulation style, but the good acting saves them from being commonplace. Alma Reubens plays the title role in a very pleasing manner while Walt Whitman as Tough-Luck Baxter and Charles Gunn as Danny Warde are exceptionally good.

The story is of Fire-Fly, a little dance-hall girl of Baxter City who is married to Bert Wilcox, a worthless parasite. She is engaged by "Happy Jack" Clarke to perform in a dance-hall in Tough-Luck. Upon arriving in the lonely place she is overcome by lonesomeness and striking out for home becomes lost in the desert. Danny Warde, a member of a gay party crossing the desert in a private car, loses money at cards and having been refused a loan by his host he becomes angered and leaves the train at Tough-Luck. He comes upon Fire-Fly in the desert and carries her back to the town. He eventually becomes infatuated with her. When gold is struck a rush occurs and Tough-Luck becomes a roaring place. With the newcomers arrives Wilcox. Warde proposes to Fire-Fly and is told she is Wilcox's wife. Wilcox, hard pressed for money, breaks into the assayer's office and is caught. Instead of shooting him as they would ordinarily have done, they simply turn him out of the town for Fire-Fly's sake. Fire-Fly decides that her place is by her husband's side and she leaves with him.

In the desert Wilcox steals what little money his wife has and abandons her. Warde and Baxter, thinking that Wilcox would attempt something of the kind have followed and make a timely rescue. Wilcox falls into a pit where rattlesnakes abound and meets a deserving death. E. Mason Hooper directed the picture.

beautiful photography of especially fine outdoor settings, and likeable characters, all the elements of pleasing entertainment.

Rupert Julian's directing is clever. He also plays a character role very well, that of John Wesley Pringle. Monroe Salisbury is the featured player and he will be very well liked, we believe, by patrons of all classes. The role he takes is both interesting and sympathetic. Ruth Clifford also satisfies. The story, which is well adapted for picturization, is by Eugene M. Rhodes, put into scenario form by Elliott J. Clawson.

The picture begins with a wonderful panoramic view of the mountain and forest country. Then the hero is introduced, Christopher Foy (Salisbury), a charming outlaw, with a southern accent, as the subtitles show. Other characters introduced soon are Stella Vorhis (Ruth Clifford), her father, a southerner who has moved to the west, and Foy's disloyal partner. In the cast of players are W. H. Bainbridge, Milton Brown and Al Sears. The production as a whole may be classed as one of Bluebird's best.

The Story: Christopher Foy, escaping from the sheriff and his aids who have offered a reward for his capture, is injured and arrives in a weakened condition at the mountain cabin of Colonel Vorhis and his daughter, Stella.

Stella is moved by pity and aids him. Later her father, admiring the man's frankness in confessing his crimes of theft, and also because both come from Virginia, has him pardoned. For some time he follows an honest career. He and Stella fall in love. Then he is suspected of stealing cattle and again a reward is offered for his capture. A former admirer of Stella's, John Wesley Pringle, arrives in camp and learns that there is a plot again Christopher. He succeeds in aiding the youth and bringing his enemies to justice, because he knows Stella loves Christopher. He gives back to Stella the man she loves, because he loves the girl and wishes only her happiness.

"Camille"

Hanover Film Company Offering, Released by General Film. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

HELEN HESPERIS is featured in this screen presentation of the celebrated "Camille." Most everyone is familiar with the world-famous story of the courtezan whose great love redeemed her past life. For that reason alone this picture has great possibilities. The story is unfolded cleverly with bits taken from Dumas' original story. Helen Hesperia, a majestic type of beauty, plays the part of Camille intensely and effectively.

"Camille" tells the story of a woman of the world who is courted by many. A young lawyer, Armand, comes to Paris, falls in love with her, and neglects his work to pay her court. Camille returns his love and the two go to a country villa to live together. Armand's father, hearing of his son's conduct, becomes enraged, and, seeking Camille, begs her for the sake of his son's future to give him up. Realizing that the father speaks the truth and loving Armand with all that is fine within her, she consents to do so. She tells Armand that she has gone back to an old lover. Armand, in grief, travels to forget his sorrows but his thoughts are ever with Camille. One day he receives a letter from his father saying that Camille is dying. He hastens to her side, when she greets him affectionately, joyously, and then falls dead.

"The Trouble Buster"

Paramount Picture Featuring Vivian Martin. Released October 8. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

VIVIAN MARTIN is again seen in the role of a ragged little "Newsie," a role which suits her admirably. Parts of the picture will bring tears to your eyes, the efforts of "Blackie," the waif, to take care of his little charge "Mike" being particularly pathetic. The last part of the picture is not as good as the first and the ending is rather abrupt. Much more could have been made of it. It was as if the director said, "Now we have five reels—stop!"—so they did. The story is not new nor great, but it is delightfully sweet and charming, and as it has been given a splendid production, and as Vivian Martin's personality is irresistible, it will please all who see it. It is refreshing to see a picture and have all of your best emotions played upon, and this is what happens when you watch the two little waifs denying themselves everything for each other.

Vivian Martin makes a winsome boy, who is really not a boy at all, who proves her ability to take care of herself when she finds it expedient to use her fists. The ensuing tussle is highly amusing.

Michelna (Vivian Martin) is a little emigrant girl whose father dies almost as soon as he reaches this country, leaving his child alone and penniless. To escape "the charities," of which she is horribly afraid, she seeks protection from "Blackie Moyle" (Paul Willis), a little newsie, who shares his meagre earnings with her and offers her the protection of his piano-box home. Michelna, to avoid complications with the "tough" boys on the block, cuts off her curls and dons boy's attire. She also learns to use her fists. "Tip" Morgan, a clever confidence man, looking for a clever boy to use, sees Michelna, now known as Mike, and makes friendly advances to her. He discovers she is a girl and lures her to a room, where "Blackie" finds them.

In a fight which follows Blackie is hit on the head with a bottle and loses the sight of both eyes. Alone once more, Mike, in her spare time, copies some little clay models which Blackie has made and discovers a latent talent. She makes one in particular which she calls the "Trouble Buster."

One day she sees an advertisement of an art exhibit and takes her poor little wares to be shown. They cause much merriment until one enterprising man sees in the "Trouble Buster" a chance to make some money as with the Bilikens and Kewpies. Mike, hearing the Trouble Buster is going to make money gives the credit of it to Blackie.

Blackie, suddenly risen to fame, becomes a social pet with his fortune assured. Mike, seeing one of the dreaded "charity" persons again, flees without letting Blackie know where she is. Eventually Blackie goes to Paris, has his sight restored and learns that the "Trouble Buster" was not his model at all but Mike's. He goes in search of Mike, finds her, and when asked what he came for says, "For the love of Mike." Frank Reicher directed the picture.

"The Dormant Power"

World Film Release of October 22. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

WITH the characters more normal than those usually gracing the scenes of red-blooded melodramas, with a diversity of settings and a generous overflow of plot, this picture should please all who remain faithful to the old-style thrillers. The scene is first laid in the west with the usual western element paramount and then it shifts to the east, showing all the gorgeous splendor of a wealthy eastern home with its languorous influences. The picture is a finished piece of work, being well directed and photographed and consistently told, while the acting is good throughout.

Parts of the story which might make one incredulous are handled with such finesse and care that the general impression is one of speciousness. There is no doubt that the old style of melodrama is very popular with a certain class of moving picture patrons, and this offering is one of the highest of this class. It contains meat enough for six plays but of the kind that will quicken the pulse rather than give food for reflection.

The colorful interpretations of Ethel Clayton as Christine Brent and Montague Love as Maurice Maxwell please one decidedly while Joseph Herbert—Edward Langford—Muriel Ostriche and George Morgan complete the cast.

The story is of a girl, Christine Brent, who with her father is compelled to seek refuge in a western village because of an unjust law. Maurice Maxwell, a powerful man of affairs, comes to the village and becoming infatuated with Christine, tells her she should not be buried in that God-forsaken country: that she should have the world at her feet.

Carl Randolph, a nomad, whose will-power has remained dormant, drifts into the town saloon where they are holding a fourth of July celebration.

One of the Mexicans here insults an American flag and Randolph in a rage shoots him. He escapes and seeks refuge at Catherine's home. He confesses to Catherine that he is a failure, but she tells him no man has the right to acknowledge defeat, and giving him money tells him to start life anew.

Back east Randolph becomes a powerful attorney with his ideal ever before him. He is offered a position as General Counsel for the Maxwell Ammunition Company and accepts. Desirous of talking over some urgent business with Maxwell he calls at his house one night and there again sees Christine who is Maxwell's wife and his most treasured possession. Christine has regretted her choice and lives with the picture of Randolph ever before her.

Brinkerhoff, a clever inventor, brings plans of a valuable invention to Maxwell who attempts to copy them. Brinkerhoff discovers him in the act and in the tussle which follows is killed. Maxwell throws his body out of the window into the river.

Brinkerhoff's wife, becoming desperate over her husband's absence, goes to Randolph for assistance. He sends her to work as a maid in the Maxwell home. There she finds proof of Maxwell's guilt. Maxwell in fear tells his wife she must buy Randolph's silence at any price. There is a scene between Maxwell and Christine in which Mrs. Brinkerhoff, hearing a partial confession of Maxwell's crime, shoots the man who murdered her husband. At her trial, the jury, swayed by sympathy, brings in a verdict of not guilty. Christine and Randolph are happily reunited. The picture was directed by Travers Vale.

"Over There"

Select Picture Featuring Charles Richmond. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS picture is a great boom for patriotism and for that reason should prove very popular. Aside from its patriotic appeal, however, it tells an interesting story and has been given splendid production. Martial music with this picture will make it very stirring.

The story deals with the "slacker," in this case a brave fellow with an inherited fear of blood, who believes himself to be a coward. He simply cannot bring himself to enlist, even when his friends all turn against him for his cowardly qualities and when the girl to whom he is engaged breaks their engagement. How he finally enlists, overcomes his horror of things gory and wins a medal for unusual bravery while under fire, is told in a number of exciting scenes.

The battle scenes are especially thrilling and, we imagine, true to form, having been superintended by Lieutenant W. A. O'Hara, of the 24th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, who participated in the battles of the Somme, Ypres and Verdun. Charles Richmond plays the leading role and does good work in a very difficult part. Anna Q. Nillson is very pleasing as the patriotic girl who gives her services for Red-Cross nursing in France. She looks very fetching in her uniform. Some comedy is afforded by Walter Hiers who, as a patriot too corpulent for active service, finally gives his services in the only way he can be of assistance—hoeing potatoes.

The story is of Montgomery Jackson (Charles Richmond), a young man with an inherited fear of blood. When the call comes for volunteers he finds he is unable to offer his services—he has such a horror of war. In spite of the fact that his fiancee and friends urge him to enlist he remains adamant. He is publicly insulted at his club and shows such decided cowardly tendencies that his friends lose all respect for him. Finally his fiancee, Bettie Adams (Anne Q. Nillson), becoming embittered at his lack of a sense of duty breaks their engagement and sails for France as a Red-Cross nurse. She also announces her engagement to another man, one who has enlisted. Left behind, Monty finally enlists in despair.

He is sent to join a force commanded by Colonel Adams, Betty's father. At the crucial moment he is roused to action when he sees a comrade horribly injured. He rushes into the thickest of the battle, saves the lives of both Colonel Adams and the man Betty is engaged to, and is awarded a medal for bravery. Back home once more on leave, he meets Betty. The young soldier Betty was engaged to has given her back her freedom, knowing full well that she is really in love with Monty. Every thing ends happily with Monty making a rousing speech advocating enlistment and declaring that he is soon going back to stay "till it's over, over there." George M. Cohan courteously loaned the title of his popular song for the title of this picture. James Kirkwood directed the picture.

"The Heart of Ezra Greer"

Frederick Warde in Pathe-Thanhouser Gold Rooster Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A STORY similar to many which have been picturized but which, in spite of its obviousness, may have a certain appeal to some audiences serves as the latest Thanhouser vehicle for Frederick Warde's good acting. The production, under Emile Chautard, is up to the Thanhouser standard. Pretty outdoor scenes are a feature of the early part of the picture. Two attractive children add to the enjoyment of the latter part of the story. The neighborhood houses, especially those which like pathetic plays which end happily, will be entertained by the release. On the whole, it is not very strong. Frederick Warde's acting may draw a certain class. The work of the supporting cast is good.

Leila Frost has an important part. Others are George Froth, Carey Hastings, Thomas A. Curran, Lillian Mueller, and the Badgley children, Helen and Gerald. Lloyd Lonergan wrote the story.

The Story: Frederick Warde has the title role, that of a kindly old valet, whose one treasure is his pretty daughter. By stinting and saving Ezra is enabled to send her to a co-educational college, where she falls in love with a wealthy fellow student and elopes with him, believing that he means to make her his wife.

hWen disillusionment comes, she is ashamed to return to her father and supports herself and child by sewing. Ezra enters the young man's employ, not knowing of his past. Unwittingly he fights his daughter's battles, reforms his employer without being aware that the woman the boy wronged is is own daughter and in the end, with the help of his little grandchild, he succeeds in bringing happiness into the life of her whose happiness is everything to him.

"Cassidy"

Triangle Picture With Dick Rosson. Released October 21. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

"CASSIDY," taken from the story in the Saturday Evening Post, by Larry Evans, is anything but a pleasing tale. It is sordid from the beginnig to the end, but it is real, it is gripping, it is vital. The story is unfolded with a natural sequence of events, there is nothing forced about it, and the ending is logical. The action at the beginning is slow while we are given a chance to become familiar with the character of the hero, "Cassidy," but rather than being a detriment to the picture the splendid acting of Dick Rosson makes it not only desirable but out of the ordinary. "Cassidy," the pitiful, dying, little bum who "never had a chance" is a figure we can feel for from the bottom of our hearts. He holds the center of the picture throughout; we are shown an episode in his life and the other characters merely revolve around him. The picture is well produced and photographed, the scenes in the rain being very effective.

"Cassidy" was a man with "God's own soul who never had a chance." He landed in San Francisco one night, sick, broke and horribly lonesome for "N'Yawk," Coney Island and "Maimie." It was pouring rain and "Cassidy" was so sick at heart and sick in body that he just had to get money to get back to N'Yawk before he cashed in. He decided to rob a house. After breaking into the District Attorney's home he eagerly warms himself by the fire until a light is suddenly switched on. It is the District Attorney himself who is waiting for his daughter to arrive on the midnight train from boarding school. He plays with "Cassidy" for a while keeping him in horrible suspense, until he sees that the boy is really very ill. He asks him from where he came to which "Cassidy" replies so proudly "From N'Yawk" that the District Attorney gives him money and tells him to go back there before it is too late for him to ever see the place again. "Cassidy" leaves and goes into a nearby saloon to get dried out. The front part of the saloon is empty but from the back comes the noise of scuffling and loud voices. He investigates and finds that the owner of this resort has been expecting the arrival of some girls but owing to the stupid blunderings of the taxi driver the wrong girl has been brought. The girl happens to be the District Attorney's daughter so they must do away with her. "Cassidy's" chance has come at last. He rescues the girl, takes her home and in a dying condition on the porch tells the girl to tell her father to thank "Cassidy" "of N'Yawk." He is never able to get back to "N'Yawk" and "Maimie." It is a very pitiful story but very well enacted. It was directed by Arthur Rossen and photographed by Roy Overbaugh.

Show Picture to French

In accordance with an offer made through M. Tardieu and M. Stephen Luzanne of the French High Commission in America, Rita Jolivet, star of "Lest We Forget," and her husband, Count Cippico, have arranged personally to take Miss Jolivet's picture, "Lest We Forget," which is now nearing completion, to France, after prints have been made for the American theaters. Miss Jolivet proposes to show the film in all the large centers of military occupation behind the French front. This will include the concentration camps of the American troops as well.

Smashing Campaign on Serial

The Chicago Tribune and the New York Sunday World are among the big newspapers of the country that have bought Anna Katharine Green's newest mystery story—"Who Is 'Number One'?"—which Paramount has made into a serial, starring Kathleen Clifford. Both will print the novelization in their fiction sections, co-incident with the release of the fifteen episodes of the motion picture, and will conduct strong drives for circulation on the basis of the story.

Throughout the country Paramount is placing "Who Is 'Number One'?" in newspapers, such as The Chicago Tribune and The New York Sunday World, which have rejected scores of other motion picture serial stories and which broke their standing rule because they realized the value of an Anna Katharine Green story and because they knew the Paramount trademark guaranteed a motion picture production of unusual quality.

O'Garry Picture in November Re-issue

AMONG the November programs for Favorite Film Features, under which name Greater Vitagraph is re-issuing selected pictures from its vast library, there will be one of the celebrated O'Garry pictures in which Edith Storey and Ned Finley, supported by strong casts, made such a strong impression. The first one of the O'Garrys to be reissued will be "Strength of Men," an Alaskan subject which created a sensation when it was first released a few years ago.

The lightings in this feature, it will be recalled, were exceptionally good and, with the insertion of present-day titles it is declared this two-reel story will stand the test of comparison with the best short length pictures now being offered to exhibitors.

A noteworthy fact about the Favorite Film Features is the excellence of the stories they tell. Sent forth as one and two-reel subjects, and made before five-reel features became the standard of the trade, these Vitagraph productions are crowded with good material and are action from start to finish for the men who made these two, three or four years ago faced the proposition of how to get all of their story into the short footage to which they were limited.

Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, is giving his personal attention to the preparation of the Favorite Film Features and none is permited to leave the studio unless it is mechanically and technically perfect. This means that all new prints are being shipped, the films are thoroughly re-edited, present-day titles inserted and the action made as smooth as those features which are being produced under the most up-to-date methods of picture-making.

"Favorite Film Features," said Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the distributing organization of Greater Vitagraph, "now occupy just as important a place on our program as any other unit of our product and we are satisfied that they are filling a long-felt want of exhibitors. They receive the same amount of care in their preparation before shipment as our biggest features and the fact that thousands of exhibitors now are using them as regular parts of their programs convinces us that the exhibitors appreciate them."

Mabel Scott Doing "Bit"

Mabel Juliene Scott, who plays the leading female part in Edgar Lewis' new picture, "The Sign Invisible," has just returned from Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, where she went to present sweaters to the soldiers. Miss Scott succeeded in having 200 woolen sweaters made by the Woman's Auxiliary, of which she is president. The enthusiasm of the men in uniform so impressed Miss Scott that she wired to her eighteen-year-old brother in Minneapolis to come on to Ayer and enlist in the hospital unit. He is now in uniform.

Mabel Julienne Scott, in Edgar Lewis' "The Sign Invisible."

Miss Helen Spencer, a well known comedienne, has been added to the King-Bee Film Corp. and will assist Billy West in the making of King-Bee Comedies. Miss Spencer was featured in all the Vitagraph "O-Henry" comedies.

Kellermann Makes 85 Foot Dive

Two of the most sensational features of "Queen of the Sea," Annette Kellermann's new marine spectacle for William Fox, were put into celluloid form at Bar Harbor, Maine, when the diving Venus walked a long tight wire and then plunged 85 feet into the ocean beneath; and when a massive tower was blown up for the film by 250 sticks of dynamite.

These five-starred events marked the finish of the episodes in the sub-sea picture which were made at Bar Harbor, and thousands of cottagers and vacationists lined the shores. John G. Adolfi, who has charge of the production, and the entire supporting company had returned to New York City to arrange for screening the second part of the subject, so Miss Kellermann personally directed the "thrillers."

New York Regiment Goes "Over the Top"

The 71st New York Regiment, now at Camp Wadsworth, S. C., and soon to be in France, has already been "over the top," and they have been over the top in true fighting fashion, in France, and all without going farther from New York than across the Hudson to Jersey.

In Fort Lee, N. J., William Fox, the motion picture producer, has in preparation a film version of Hugo's "Les Miserables." Standing on the big studio lot is a reproduction of the San Antoine district of Paris, nine city blocks in extent.

Men with real military training were needed to represent the guard for those scenes in "Les Miserables," depicting the Revolution of July, the fighting in the streets behind barricades and the clashes between the citizenry and the National Guard of France. Through the courtesy of the officers of the 71st, Frank Lloyd, under whose direction William Farnum is making the picture, obtained the services of a batallion from that regiment. The troops donned the blue and red and white uniforms of the French Guard.

Film Beautiful Estate

Madame Olga Petrova and the cast of the first picture now being made by the Petrova Picture Company, have been spending the greater part of this week taking many beautiful exteriors on the estate of George Pratt at Glen Cove, Long Island. Several of the scenes of this scenario, which was written by Mme. Petrova herself, are laid in the Kingdom of Belmark, where the love scenes between the crown prince (Thomas Holding) and the beautiful American girl who later becomes his morganatic wife (Petrova), takes place in the Royal Gardens.

Says Public Wants Big Stars in Big Plays

"THE remarkable success which has been attained by Ann Murdock in 'Outcast' and Julia Sanderson in 'The Runaway' convinces me beyond a shadow of a doubt that the public appreciates and wants to see celebrated stage stars in picturizations of big stage successes."

This was the comment of John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, as the first reports began to reach his desk of the box office records of the first of the Charles Frohman plays in motion pictures.

"It is a singular and significant fact," Mr. Freuler said, "that 'Outcast' has proven a far greater success than any of Miss Murdock's previous screen productions and that is due to the fact that 'Outcast' is from a great play with a great star.

"The same thing is true of 'The Runaway,' the first of Julia Sanderson's pictures. It is a most hopeful indication in the industry, an evidence of a solid and substantial future for motion pictures. I am highly gratified with the public's verdict.

"Both 'Outcast' and 'The Runaway' are playing to big houses and long runs. That is most gratifying, too, for I have felt for a long time that longer runs will help solve the exhibitor's problems. He can't have long runs on inferior productions. The public wants big stars and quality pictures. People today would much rather spend fifteen or twenty-five cents and be entertained than to spend a nickle and feel that they had wasted their time."

"Outcast," produced by the Empire All Star Corporation and released September 8 by Mutual, scored spectacular runs in big houses in big cities.

Manager Landau of the Butterfly Theater, Milwaukee, booked the production for a one day run and had the first standout matinee in the history of his house. Before 6 o'clock that evening he had arranged for a four-day run and at half past nine on the fourth day of the showing there was a crowd which extended past the curb in front of his theater waiting for a chance to see one of the last two runs of the film.

The Gaiety Theater at Springfield, Ill., booked "Outcast" for Saturday, Sunday and Monday, September 29, 30 and October 1, and before Monday morning the manager got in touch with the Chicago exchange and arranged for the fourth day's booking.

All Clara Kimball Young Pictures at Rialto

"MAGDA," Clara Kimball Young's first Select picture, was presented at the Rialto Theater, New York, the week of October 7. S. L. Rothapfel has just signed a contract giving him the initial presentation in New York of all the pictures made by Clara Kimball Young and her own company in her series to be distributed by Select Pictures.

There are to be eight of these productions during the coming year. Under this contract the patrons of this pre-eminent photoplay house will be the first in New York to see all of the new Clara Kimball Young productions. "Magda," the first of these, is being shown during the week beginning October 7.

The production of "Magda" has been under the capable direction of Emile Chautard, and Miss Young is supported by a notable cast. Her leading man is Thomas Holding, whose work with Pauline Frederick won him distinction, and the part of Major Shubert, Magda's father, is played by Miss Young's own father, Edward Kimball.

In the role of "Magda," played in the past by Bernhardt and Duse, Miss Young is seen at her best. As the strong-willed daughter who refuses to accept her father's unreasonable dictates, and who works out her own career in a thoroughly dramatic manner, she is given every opportunity for big emotional moments. The climax is a gripping one and comes as a consistent finish. "Magda" as a screen production touches high water mark, and is sure to be a winning feature at the Rialto.

Sawyer and Lubin in New Arrangement

Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, prominent film executives, who have acted as intermediary in several important contractual arrangements during the past few weeks, announced on Monday the successful conclusion of negotiations between Phil Kauffman of Globe Films, Ltd., of Toronto, Canada, and Richard A. Rowland of Metro Pictures, whereby Mr. Kauffman's company becomes the Canadian owners of two big feature productions.

The deal, which was entirely engineered by Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin, involves the sale for the Canadian rights of two of the biggest Metro specials for the year, "The Slacker" and "The Call of Her People."

Activities in General's Foreign Department

The recently established foreign department of General Enterprises, Inc., under the supervision of M. R. Fink, expert market analyst, is making rapid strides in the disposal of the several features which it has undertaken to handle for distribution outside of the United States.

Mr. Fink reports the sale this week of the five-part screen version of "Excuse Me," the Henry W. Savage, Inc., popular stage success of a few years ago. Through the transaction in question, the General Film Company, Ltd., of Canada, becomes the owners.

Music and Novel Boosts "Mother of Men"

H. J. Shepard, of Shepard & Van Loan, the representative of the Willis Robards feature, "Mothers of Men," announces a novel scheme for the exploitation of the big suffrage propaganda picture. In fact, it is the first time that an advertising campaign of this kind has ever been attempted in the industry.

Joseph W. Stern, one of the largest music publishers in the business, and one of the most successful in the exploitation of popular songs, is putting out a number written directly around the picture. It is entitled, like the picture, "Mothers of Men." In addition to the above, a popular and well-known author has been engaged to novelize the picture, and that also will be put on the market as an addition to the advertising program.

Noble Announces Cast of "Shame"

With his first special production for state rights, "Shame," in the final stages of cutting and titling, John W. Noble announces that Zena Keefe will be seen in the leading role of Mary McDermott, supported by the following well-known players: Niles Welch as Dr. Donald Strong, Jr., Jack Dunn as Dr. Donald Strong, Sr., Lionel Belmore as Farmer Peters, Paul Doucet as Guiseppi, Joyce Fair as Patricia Smythe, and Belle Boone as Gladys Morton.

Jules Burnstein, who is taking care of the business arrangements for the new feature, hopes to announce its initial showing next week.

New Goodrich Drama Hits at Modern Folly

A drama that illustrates in most effective fashion the folly of inviting casual business acquaintances home to dinner, is "Her Second Husband," by Hamilton Smith, in which Miss Edna Goodrich is to star.

The author of this play, who also wrote "The Vampire," "The Chests of Fortune,"

Edna Goodrich, Mutual star.

"Girl Detective," "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel," and many other well known film dramas, had Miss Goodrich in mind for the star part when he began this play, which is intended to show the folly of compelling a wife to receive in her home on terms of social familiarity, the acquaintances of her husband to whom he desires her to be nice "for business reasons."

Miss Goodrich is much pleased with the play, which she declares inculcates some highly important social lessons and at the same time possesses all the essentials of dramatic availability.

"Daughter of the Gods" to Exhibitiors

"A DAUGHTER OF THE GODS" will be released to the picture theaters of America on a rental basis beginning Sunday, December 2.

This remarkably successful production, whose box office value has been fully demonstrated in legitimate theaters all over this country, as well as abroad, at a scale of prices ranging from $1.00 to 25 cents, has not played anywhere at a lower scale. The Kellermann picture will be for general release through the Fox Film Corporation Exchanges, and is now available for booking. It will be released in eight reels.

"A Daughter of the Gods" with Annette Kellermann is without doubt the best advertised picture now available for booking by the exhibitor. The picture has been published as probably no other film production, and the result is everywhere evident. Practically everyone, in every town, large or small, knows something of "A Daughter of the Gods." They have read of it in magazines and newspapers; they have seen it billed all over the country when it played the legitimate theaters for long runs at top prices, and they have seen in almost every magazine pictures of the star and the production which have aroused curiosity and awakened nation-wide interest.

November to Be Artcraft's Banner Month

Walter E. Greene Announces Four Super-attractions—Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart and Elsie Ferguson All on Program

WALTER E. GREENE, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, last week announced the November schedule of releases for his organization which presents Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart and Elsie Ferguson in super-attractions. This schedule discloses the banner month for Artcraft, offering the largest number of big productions for release in one month since the inception of the company.

The first release will be Mary Pickford in her new production just completed in California, "The Little Princess." Staged under the direction of Marshall Neilan, this subject, as in the cases of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "A Poor Little Rich Girl," is an adaptation from a popular book and play affording Miss Pickford another child part similar to those in the Kate Douglas Wiggin and Eleanor Gates novels, "The Little Princess" was written for both the book and the stage by Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of many famous stories bearing on child life including "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

The second Artcraft release in November will be Elsie Ferguson's new screen play following "Barbary Sheep" and staged by Maurice Tourneur, "The Rise of Jennie Cushing." This is Miss Ferguson's second motion picture for Artcraft and is also an adaptation of a popular book.

Douglas Fairbanks' contribution to Artcraft's November schedule is "Reaching for the Moon." This photoplay, it is announced, presents another original idea in the way of screen stories and is now being staged under the direction of John Emerson. It was for this picture that the entire Fairbanks producing organization crossed and recrossed the continent between Los Angeles and New York, in order to spend two days filming scenes in the Eastern metropolis. Eileen Percy, the talented Broadway actress, again appears opposite Douglas in this photoplay.

William S. Hart in his second Artcraft picture, "The Silent Man," is the fourth November release now being staged in California under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. Hart's new production is from the pen of Charles Kenyon whose "Kindling" was played with such notable success by Margaret Illington. It is a story of the big Western country providing the popular star with the role of a miner who has prospected the vast desert for years. In this film Vola Vale, the pretty and accomplished leading lady, whose individual popularity further enhances the drawing power of the picture, appears opposite the star.

In speaking of Artcraft's November array, Mr. Greene said: "This is the first time in the history of Artcraft that we have scheduled for release in one month four super-attractions. Three big stars in master plays per month has been our record heretofore, but in November we give the exhibitor four of the most powerful box-office attractions ever released, all in one month."

Robert T. Kane Now in National Army

ROBERT T. KANE, vice-president of Paralta Plays, Inc., has become a soldier in the National army and is now in training at Camp Lewis, American Lake, Wash. Noted for his genial smile which has proved an inspiration to the entire company at the Paralta studios at Hollywood in many a busy hour since this institution was organized last May, he never lost it for a moment when called to the colors, notwithstanding the personal sacrifices military service imposes on him at this time.

Like a true American he only "smiled some more" when the call came and met the sympathetic remarks of his associates with the manly reply, "It's all in the day's work. The country needs us all. I'm for the ranks and will do what is required of me with all my heart. I hate to leave you and my work here, naturally; but I am needed."

The night before Mr. Kane's departure for Camp Lewis, the Paralta studios staff and producing companies gave him a farewell dinner at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. It was, indeed, a most flattering evidence of the esteem in which he is held by the Paralta studios organization. Nearly two hundred people were present and every branch of the company was represented, Nat I. Brown, general manager of the Paralta Plays, representing the New York interests.

Robert Brunton, manager of Paralta productions, presided, and, after the dinner, presented Mr. Kane with a handsome military wrist watch on behalf of the Paralta studios, staff and companies. Mrs. Pickford, who was among the guests, presented Mr. Kane, on behalf of Mary Pickford and herself, with a gold shaving set and with it expressed the hope of his early and safe return to the Paralta studios.

There was no derth of speakers and expressions of good will and good luck to the departing guest were made by Bessie Barriscale, J. Warren Kerrigan, Henry B. Walthall, Nat I. Brown, Howard Hickman, Mrs. Pickford, Reginald Barker and Raymond B. West.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Apfel, Rex Ingram, Wallace Worsley, Emmet J. Flynn, Miss Lois Wilson, Miss Clara Williams, Miss Rhea Mitchell, R. Holmes Paul, George Fisher, Edward Coxen, Miss Jesse Boothe, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Naylor, Mrs. Brunton, Mrs. West, Monte M. Katterjohn, Thomas J. Geraghty, Eugene B. Lewis, Julian Lamothe, Edward Hemmer, "Jos" Maxwell, N. William Aaronson, Elliott Howe, Thomas Little, Kenneth O'Hara, Albert Cody, W. E. Keefe, Robert B. Kidd, Clyde De Vinna, L. Guy Wilky, Robert V. Newhard, R. J. Kern, N. E. Kern, John Kreg, Clyde Tracy, Roy S. Sanford, Reeve Hauck, Wallace W. Kerrigan, Bennie Ziedman and J. E. Woodbury.

The next evening Mr. Kane left Los Angeles for Camp Lewis with about four hundred other young men going to join the army. The entire Paralta organization and producing companies were at the depot to see him off and the song, "Leve Your Smile Behind," was sung by all as they stood about him on the platform.

"Number One" Is Popular

THAT "Who Is 'Number One'?", the Paramount serial starring Kathleen Clifford, is an established success, is proved by the number of contracts that are pouring into the Paramount exchanges. The billboard campaign, the newspaper advertising, including the publication of Anna Katharine Green's story complete in such newspapers as the Chicago Tribune, the New York World and the Boston Post, have assured exhibitors that the Paramount serial will bring big business.

"Who Is 'Number One'?" is being booked by Paramount on the open plan. Theaters not on the Paramount and Artcraft programs are given the same opportunity to book the Paramount serial as are the regular Paramount houses.

Paramount's advertising campaign is unique in that it asks the exhibitor to do nothing more than to let the people know the days when his house is showing "Who Is 'Number One'?" He is furnished billboard advertising and newspaper advertising. He is not asked to do any general advertising. It is all done for him.

Paramount salesmen have been furnished books containing proofs showing part of the newspaper advertising campaign so that each exhibitor has before him in concrete form a sample of the advertising that Paramount will use to drive business into his theater.

The billboard and newspaper campaigns have been devised entirely for the benefit of the exhibitor, scheduled so that the advertising will sell the picture to the motion picture fan. It is not arranged, like many advertising campaigns, which sell the picture to the exhibitor and then leave to him the task of making the picture a success in his theater. Paramount's campaign follows up throughout the run of the serial.

A. Kay Gets Universal Rights to "Glad Series"

The A. Kay Company has just consummated a deal with the Jaf Film Corpororation whereby it becomes the universal distributors to a series of pictures to be exploited as "The Brighten the Corner Where You Are" pictures, or "The Glad Series." As the name of the series implies, the pictures are all of a lighter nature and touch upon the brighter side of life. The series is composed of seven one-reelers, each a separate story in itself, and yet the entire series of seven reels carries with it one purpose, and that is to "Brighten the Corner Where You Are."

"Baby Mine" Pleases Prison Inmates

Even penitentiaries have movie seasons these days, and the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation had the privilege and pleasure of inaugurating that of the federal prison in Atlanta with a showing of Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine" before an audience of 3,000 inmates.

In the Atlanta prison, as at Sing Sing, the Goldwyn product was received with the warmest enthusiasm and accorded an enthusiastic review in the publication of the institution, "Good Words."

Motion Pictures Is Romance

Mack Sennett, Producer of Paramount Comedies, Tells of Interesting Aspects of the Work

MACK SENNETT has plenty of ideas beyond the ones which concern exclusively the concoction of new stunts to make people laugh and the producer of the Paramount-Mack Sennett Comedies, which are carrying their good cheer message throughout the land, believes that it pays to philosophize occasionally on the subject in general. For example, he says:

"The business of making motion pictures is, in effect, the retailing of imagination."

He adds that this aspect of the work has always fascinated him and continues in the same vein:

"We often hear it said that we live in an unromantic age from which all picturesqueness has vanished. Yet once in a while it occurs to us that the age in which we live is in fact the most picturesque and romantic of all ages. When you come to think of it, modern industrial life is romantic to the very core."

Mr. Sennett agrees with Gilbert K. Chesterton, the noted English essayist and story writer, who says that the mere mailing of a letter is a drama in itself.

"In some such way," Sennett says, "the making of motion pictures is a task a whole lot more picturesque and interesting than were most of the occupations of the past that we think of as having been romantic."

Mary Garden Begins Work

WHEN Mary Garden motored to the Goldwyn Studios in Fort Lee last Saturday most of the traditions of the theatrical and screen stars were shattered.

Miss Garden has banned anything in the nature of a studio reception and except for the flowers that filled her dressing room and some news photographers around nothing about the big Goldwyn plant indicated that other than daily routine events were happening.

To quote Miss Garden's own words her initial day under the big glass-topped studio was the most important day of her life—a day to be taken quite seriously.

"Everything that I do before these cameras will register," she explained. "On the operatic or concert stage a false movement or a note off register occurs just once and can be covered over. Any artist knows how to cover slips or errors of this kind, but the motion picture camera is not the kind, sympathetic and forgiving public. It is a machine-possessing wonderful possibilities and capacities—and it has no sympathy. It can in a moment spoil a big scene or, through an artist's error, make her seem ridiculous. Do you wonder that I regard the making of 'Thais' as a matter of great gravity and import in my life work?"

Olive Tell Completes First Picture

Having finished filming "The Unforeseen," the five-reel feature to be released

Olive Tell, new Empire-Mutual star.

October 22, and that will introduce Miss Olive Tell as a motion picture star, the Empire All-Star are now engaged in making a picture from the play of "Her Sister," which Ethel Barrymore starred in under Charles Frohman's management, and which proved such a decided Broadway hit.

Miss Tell showed in "The Unforeseen" that the beauty that so distinguishes her on the stage, registers on the screen such a remarkable degree and her powers of dramatic expression lose nothing through being portrayed before the camera, that it was decided to hasten the release of her first picture by a whole month.

Accuracy in Mme. Petrova's First Picture

The first Petrova Picture which is to be released the latter part of this month through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit will mark the first time in the annals of American cinematography that a picture production is being put upon the screen with all the technical detail and requisite atmosphere worked out with the consummate skill of a connoisseur. The story, dealing as it does with court life, calls for several foreign settings of great beauty.

In these scenes, the "business" transacted is absolutely true to local and national custom—not guess work. There are scores of officers, diplomats, functionaries and dignitaries of all kinds, and all of them are correctly dressed and correctly mannered—not just a foolishly festooned mob trying to look "swell." The hussar is hussar all through, not infantry as to trouser legs and naval as to tunic. Baron Dewitz, the regisseur, and Director George Irving have taken infinite pains to comply with Mme. Petrova's desire to have all the details correct.

Story of Barbara Castleton

Barbara Castleton's rise in the film world has been almost phenomenal. Last year she was practically unknown and this year her name has blazoned forth in electric lights over most of the largest picture theaters in the country.

Miss Castleton is the type of beauty that screens appealingly, and she possesses every attribute necessary for the delineation of emotions in the silent drama—beauty, brains and the determination to succeed.

Her first venture was when she was engaged to play opposite Nat Goodwin in Mirror Films. Mr. Goodwin left suddenly and Miss Castleton was starred in "When Hands Are Idle." Then Herbert Brennon chose her from hundreds of aplicants to play an important part in the prologue of "The Daughter of the Gods." Her next picture was a lead for Fox, apposite Fritz Lieber in "Lure of the Primitive." Then came a lead with H. B. Warner in "God's Man." After that James Young chose her to play the lead in "On Trial." Then came "Parentage," co-starring with Hobart Henley, the lead in a patriotic film "For Liberty," with E. K. Lincoln, and a new production produced by Harry Berg.

She was on the legitimate stage previous to her experience in pictures, and possesses a voice of great promise which might carry her beyond the portals of Grand Opera should she choose to direct her efforts into that field. Louise Gunning, of light opera fame, is her cousin.

Quite a record when you consider that Miss Castleton is only twenty years old. Quiet, and unassuming, with all the simplicity of a debutante, Miss Castleton possesses a rare charm and personality that make her a very delightful person to meet, and instinctively one feels the force of her determination back of the desires that she possesses to reach the topmost rung of the ladder of success in the motion picture field.

The girls employed at the American Film Company plant in Chicago were not content with donning overalls and taking the places of the men at the intricate machinery of the film developing process when the boys answered the call to the colors.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

Olive Tell, now starring in "The Unforeseen," supported by David Powell and produced by the Empire All Star Corporation, is the latest beauty to be added to the stellar ranks of movieland, and has reached her present exalted rank in exactly two moves, for she has played in only two other pictures. One was leading lady with Robert Warwick and the other with Eugene O'Brien. Miss Tell was chosen by James Montgomery Flagg as the most beautiful American girl he ever saw. On the stage Miss Tell will be remembered as leading lady with Lou Tellegen in "The King of Nowhere" and last season was seen in the principal feminine role of "The Intruder."

Cards have been received at the Essanay studios announcing the safe arrival of Max Linder, the famous French comedian, in Paris.

Taylor Holmes sat through a performance of his first Essanay picture, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," and was the only person in the big audience who didn't crack a smile.

Little Mary McAlister, Essanay juvenile star will be seen on the screen very shortly in a travesty on the high cost of living entitled "Young Mother Hubbard." It is a five-part comedy-drama in which the poor dog again must go boneless because the modern Mother Hubbard needs all her money to buy fine feathers. No dog can eat feathers.

Ann Murdock will have for her second Empire-Mutual picture the delightful comedy, "The Beautiful Adventure," that was adapted from the French by Michael Morton. It was Miss Murdock's work in this play on the speaking stage that caused the late Charles Frohman to raise her to stellar rank over night.

Ann Murdock, the dainty Empire-Mutual star, loves simplicity in everything. Miss Murdock is never photographed laden with jewels. Her gowns are never conspicuous for their priceless lace, nor are her hats laden with rare plumage. On the contrary, while always beautifully gowned, it is a quaint, distinctive blending of colors and soft material hanging in long lines, that distinguish Miss Murdock's costumes and mark her as a creator of new styles, rather than costly fabrics and numerous gems.

Rex Ingram is directing Henry B. Walthall in his first Paralta picture.

Pearl White read in an English magazine an advertisement of a certain bullet-proof military cloth. "Great stuff," said our Pearl. "I'm thinking of having a dress made out of that material. Just think of the hard knocks it would save me in 'The Fatal Ring.'"

When the cry went up in Chicago for a more liberal response to the campaign for books for soldiers, Virginia Valli, leading woman for Bryant Washburn in "The Fibbers," made a canvass of the Essanay studios and raised $250 in one afternoon.

Olga Grey, who was once well known to Triangle patrons and has been seen to advantage in many striking vampire parts, is back on the Triangle lot and has been cast for the role of the adventuress in Director Raymond Wells' new story, "Fanatics."

Gilson Willets, well known as a novelist and traveler, has been engaged by Pathe for scenario work. Mr. Willets wrote the novel, "The Mystery of the Double Cross," from which the Pathe serial of the same name was adapted.

Margarita Fischer, the vivid American-Mutual star. You can borrow this cut for your program by simply asking MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago. There's no charge.

Mr. Willets comes to Pathe from the Selig Co., where he was scenario editor for several years.

It is announced that the much heralded and praised Russian Art pictures, which are the first features made and acted by the great actors of Russia to be shown in this country, will be distributed by Pathe. Mozukin and others of the highest celebrity in their native land enact these pictures, which are said to be a revelation in artistry.

Now it's the Sennett Skating Squad, superseding the Sennett Bathing Brigade, in Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies. They say that once seen, these gliding maidens can never be forgotten and that the bathing beauties, despite their charming costumes, will vanish from memory in the face of the latest display.

Suitable precautions are being taken by those living near the Pacific ocean to guard against a tidal wave when Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle dives into its placid depths. The burly comedian has followed the advice of the sage to "go west." His latest Paramount comedy, "Fatty at Coney Island," will be released shortly.

Mary Pickford was the reigning queen at a dance and farewell meeting to Battery F of the First Field Artillery. Little Mary is the adopted godmother of Battery F and is worshipped by that fine body of men. She was supported at the dance by a notable bodyguard, consisting of Doug. Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Charles Ray, Dustin Farnum, Herbert Rawlinson, Franklyn Farnum and Lou Tellegen.

From usher in a Chicago theater to the position of one of the best-known stars in the picture world, is some jump, but Bryant Washburn made it. He was born in Chicago 28 years ago, and after being graduated from high school got work as an usher in the old Chicago Opera House. A year later he was promoted to a box office position, during which time he studied acting. Then he joined Donald Robertson in stock. After one season with Robertson, he obtained a small part in "The Great John Ganton," a play by George Fawcett. Mr. Washburn next appeared in stock for one season at Lake Brady, Ohio, later joining a stock company formed by Percy Haswell in Toronto, Ont. The season following he was given the leading role in "The Wolf," and it was then he received an offer from Essanay. After a number of years with Essanay, Mr. Washburn has recently signed a contract to play in Pathe pictures.

Anita King, now a Horkheimer-Mutual star, was born in Chicago and educated at the Lakeview high school and the University of Chicago. She began her stage career with Lillian Russell and played with Richard Goldman. She has appeared in many notable Lasky productions.

Virginia Valli, who is rapidly winning popularity in Essanay productions, literally danced her way into pictures. An Essanay director needed a professional dancer for one scene in a picture. She must be skillful and capable of executing the most exacting interpretative steps. There were many good dancers among Essanay actresses, but no professionals.

Essanay scouts went abroad in the land. One of them saw Miss Valli billed at a Chicago theater in a dancing act. He saw her perform, then dashed behind the scenes without waiting to grab his hat. He explained that she could appear in the picture scene without interferring with her stage work, and the contract was signed. Then, when the picture was finished and given its first showing in the Essanay exhibition room, the director and all others concerned were amazed to see that Miss Valli photographed so well that she amounted to a real find.

Bright and early the opening day for the drive to sell the second Liberty Bond issue, H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa Feature Films Company, came to the studio and caught Anita King just as she alighted from her car for work. In one minute's time, he had signed her for $5,000 worth of Uncle Sam's democracy insurance. Mr. Horkheimer has always had a reputation as one of the best film salesmen in the industry. Now, his services have been requisitioned by the government.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Blue Bird

The Desire of the Moth—(Five Reels)—October 22.—Reviewed in this issue.

Butterfly

Society's Driftwood—(Five Reels)—Butterfly—October 22.—Lena Rogers and her sickly brother Paul are suffering from poverty. Paul is wrongfully accused of a petty theft and sent to prison. Lena, knowing the prison life will kill her brother, meets the judge and wins his friendship, hoping to help her brother. The judge is instigating a crooked franchise graft deal and Lena learns of it. She falls in love with the judge's brother and marries him. After exposing the judge she thinks she has lost her husband's love and so leaves him. Paul, just out of prison, finds a note to Lena from the judge, and thinking his sister has turned against him, he goes to the judge's house and kills him. Before the police arrive to take him he dies of a hemorrhage. Lena's sorrow unites her with her husband.

"49-17"—(Five Reels)—Reviewed in this issue.

Christie Comedies

Love and Locksmiths—(One Reel)—Christie October 8.—Betty loves Jay and Jay loves Betty, but Betty's papa does not approve. Unable to keep the lovers apart, he sends Betty to a girls' boarding school, but the resourceful Jay is equal to the occasion. Waylaying a new teacher bound for the school, he takes his clothes and leaves him clad in nothing but a barrel, while Jay, disguised with a mustache and side whiskers, proceeds to the school and is assigned to teach Betty's class. She is provoked when he orders her to stay after the class is dismissed, but her anger turns to joy when Jay removes his disguise and reveals his identity. As they are embracing, the janitor opens the class-room door, and runs to report the affair to the principal, who is later a witness to a repetition of the act. An Italian count, with the approval of Betty's father, has called at the school to press his suit, but is finally grabbed by an affectionate old maid. The professor notifies Betty's father of her conduct, and he goes to the school to investigate, while the real teacher, who has been arrested by the town constable for parading around in a barrel, escapes from the jail and also proceeds to the school. Jay, minus his make-up, is discovered in the garden with Betty, and her father finally decides that there is no course but to give his approval to their engagement.

Fox

This Is the Life—(Five Reels)—October 28.—Featuring George Walsh. Billy Drake refuses to take a very serious view of life, and Drake Sr. finally brings him down to earth by sending him to South America with a munitions shipment. Before he starts he sees a particularly beautiful girl and gets the idea that she is a motion picture queen. On board the boat he is shown a motion picture camera by Count Von Nuttenburg, who thinks it is some kind of a machine gun. The lovely girl is also a passenger and Billy is convinced that the whole outfit are mixed up in the motion picture business. He takes an active part in a revolution, and does not flinch when he is taken prisoner and condemned to death, thinking the whole thing part of a picture. At last he wakes up that some of it is mighty real and escapes, rescuing the girl as well. Federal troops overcome Von Nuttenburg's objections and Billy's smile overcomes the girl's.

The Spreading Dawn—(Six Reels)—Goldwyn—October 21.—Starring Jane Cowl. Georgiana Vanderpyl wishes to marry her soldier lover before he leaves for France, and is prevented from doing so by her aged aunt who dominates the family and is a disbeliever in love. Then she confides in her pretty niece the romance of her life. She had been Patricia Mercer Vanderpyl, a belle of New York society, and she had married her lover at the outbreak of the war. On a furlough he comes home and meets with death under circumstances that reveal him as faithless. The proud girl never relents, believing ever since that love is a mockery. There is a letter that has never been read and Georgiana insists that it be opened. It is the last word from Patricia's dead husband and reveals the truth about his death. Convinced that she has misjudged him, the aged Patricia sanctions the marriage of her niece and goes to meet Anthony in the Spreading Dawn.

Mutual Star Productions

The UnForeSeen—(Five Reels)—Empire All Star—October 22.—Starring Olive Tell. Margaret Fielding, on the eve of eloping with Henry Traquair, is accidentally discovered in Traquair's apartment in a New York hotel by two of his friends, Captain Harnes and Walter Maxwell. The conditions, although actually innocent, are of a compromising nature, so that Traquair introduces Margaret as Mrs. Traquair, anticipating marriage by a few hours. Harnes dines with the supposed bride and groom and notices the peculiar necklace Margaret is wearing. Traquair receives a telegram announcing the loss of his fortune and declines to proceed with the marriage. Margaret flees to her father's home and Traquair ends his life the following morning. In another three years Maxwell goes blind, meets Margaret and marries her. They are intensely happy and Haynes comes to visit them. He recognizes Margaret from the necklace. She denies it to him and he keeps silent to Maxwell. Maxwell undergoes an operation and his sight is restored. He knows her at once and accuses her. As he is packing to leave the house Haynes rushes in with a letter written by Maxwell before he ends his life, establishing Margaret's innocence.

The Sea Master—(Five Reels)—American—October 22.—Starring William Russell. Red Dorgan is the skipper of the Southern Cross, and the master of his men. Pedro is lustily beaten by the skipper and plots revenge. In a resort on the Barbary Coast, Dorgan and his men are spending the evening before sailing. They hear the cries of Emily Gordon, summoned to the bedside of a dying friend of other days, and now forcibly detained by the owner of the place. Dorgan and his men battle the owner and rescue Emily and the minister. Then he forces Emily to marry him, though he does not believe in her innocence. Next day he regrets his rashness when he finds her Bible and a note sent her by her friend. Then he tries in vain to win her forgiveness. On the eve of the birth of her child Pedro, still revengeful, tells the skipper that the girl and the minister have been too friendly. He refuses to believe it. The baby falls ill and Dorgan goes ashore in a small boat and gets a doctor. He finds Emily and the minister there under circumstances which convince him that Pedro is right. He proves his better self to Emily and is about to send her to God's country, when Emily is softened by his overpowering softness for the child, throws her arms around his neck and goes back to the cabin.

Perfection Pictures

Fibbers—(Five Reels)—Essanay—October 15.—Starring Bryant Washburn. Reviewed in this issue.

Paramount

Home Defense—(One Reel)—Klever Pictures—October 22.—Starring Victor Moore. Change-your-Manor is a nice little town where they go to bed at nine o'clock if they feel like it. The boys are fond of a little game of cards and it's the wee small hours for them until their wives break up the little game. Then the boys get busy and organize a Home Defense Unit, and drill at the clubhouse every night. The wives fall hard for this and the boys are free to go on with their game. But the wives get the first aid fever and proceed to go down to see our dear husbands drill. The boys make a great scramble to get uniforms and try to give the wives a little exhibition. Rastus is bringing up the refreshments when he sees the wives, drops the tray and rushes out. The kibosh has been put on the Home Defense Unit and the wives are wise. But Vic comes to the rescue of the husbands with a little ruse.

Pathe

The Heart of Ezra Greer—(Five Reels)—October 22.—Starring Frederick Warde. Reviewed in this issue.

World

The Dormant Power—(Five Reels)—World—October 22.—Starring Ethel Clayton, Montagu Love, Muriel Ostriche and Edward Langford. James Brent and his daughter Christine live in a Texas village on the Mexican border. Maurice Maxwell, a prosperous man of affairs, comes to the village. When she has given aid to Carl Randolph, whose will power is dormant, after he has killed a Mexican; her father is shot by mistake for Randolph. Then she marries Maxwell against her will. Randolph studies law and becomes counsel general for the company of Maxwell. Maxwell steals some plans of a gun invention and in the scuffle shoots the owner. Then he is shot by the owners' wife. Then Randolph wins Christine and everyone is happy ever after.

King Bee Comedies

The Candy Kid—(Two Reels)—King Bee—October 15.—With Billy West. Tony and Hugo are the proprietors of rival candy shops. They get into one altercation after another over the pretty cashier which draws trade for first one and then the other. Tony has a big bomb made to blow up Hugo and his store and advertises for a strong man to throw it. Billy wants a job bad and becomes an applicant. He lands the job, throws the bomb, but rescues Hugo's wife. For this he gets a job in Hugo's store and makes things generally lively. He and Hugo get into a fight and while this is going on Tony comes in looking for revenge and joins Hugo. Billy then fights the two of them with everything in the place, and escapes. Tony and Hugo get stuck in a keg of molasses which Billy has overturned and are helpless while he goes lightly up the street.

Fat and Furious—(Two Reels)—L-Ko Comedy—October 24.—Mert, the station agent, loved Al, the foreman, and Mert's father loved Al's mother, and Al loved Mert, and Al's mother loved Mert's father, but Mert's father did not love Al and Al's mother did not love Mert. Al found Mert's father making love to his mother and threw flour at him. Mert makes eyes at TERRIBLE TED, the he-vampire of the city. "TERRIBLE TED" breaks into a safe but his plans are frustrated by Mert. They pack her into a trunk and put her on a train. Al goes to the rescue by means of a hand car. As he is about to rescue her TED attacks them all with chloroform.

Little Mariana's Triumph—(Two Reels)—Star Featurette—October 25.—Mariana dances at an entertainment at the orphanage. She is seen by Peter Wren, ballet master at the Casino, who is delighted with her grace. It is decided that he shall give her lessons in dancing. One day Peter comes home weeping. He has lost his position. Marianna rushes to the theater. A child dancer is needed for a leading role. She pleads for the part and is accepted, but she stipulates that Peter must have his old position back.

The Tight Wad—(One Reel)—Joker Comedy—October 25.—Hubby is penurious with wifey and will not allow her to have a new dress for the party. Wifey orders new banquet lights for the party. Hubby arrives home and fires the electrician, deciding to do the wiring himself. He gets a shock and wifey's one dress is burned by the electric iron. Hubby is a changed soul after this and buys the new dress for the party.

The Getaway—(Two Reels)—Bison—October 27.—Rand Cleburne having been insulted by Bull Carter, slashes him with a knife, steals his horse and rides away. Carter leads a posse after Cleburne, but they are unable to find him. Cleburne, knowing that Harper lives alone, and having seen him ride away, enters his house in quest of food. After feasting, he starts to leave when he is surprised by a noise in the next room. A baby has upset a lamp and set the room on fire. Cleburne puts thoughts of safety aside and dashes to the rescue. Lucy, the sheriff's sister, rushes in and is hysterical in her gratitude. Discovering that Cleburne is the outlaw, she helps him to escape.

The Red Ace—Episode Two—(Two Reels)—The Lure of the Unattainable—Universal—October 22.—Kelly and Virginia start out in a canoe and land near the mine. "The Terror" drops from a tree onto Kelly. Virginia escapes and Kelly is left for dead. "Little Bear" shoots at the top of a cliff and frightens the "Terror" away. Virginia tells her story to Winthrop and they hasten to Kelly and revive him. The "Terror" watches the scene without being observed. Winthrop goes to an inn where Kate has donned the garb of chambermaid by Fouchard's orders. Kelly and Virginia start to the mine on horses. Kelly is ahead. Virginia is lifted from her saddle into a tree and her riderless horse goes on.

A Wise Dummy—(ONE REEL)—JOKER OCTOBER 27.—Max needing a new suit steals one from a clothing store dummy. He then enters the shop and gets a job as salesman. A fight ensues between Max and the boss. The boss goes out to get a gun. Max starts running but falls into the clothing store again and pretends he is a dummy. A young girl enters to buy a suit for her sweetheart and likes the suit Max has on. A spider descends in front of Max's face, he strikes at it, is discovered and chased out.

What'll We Do with Uncle (ONE REEL)—VICTOR COMEDY—OCTOBER 26.—Henry, thinking Flossie is untrue to him, decides to do away with his life. As he is about to hurl himself into a lake, a peddler of second-hand bodies approaches and offers him twenty dollars for his body to be delivered at five-fifteen. All day the peddler follows him, closely watching his prey. Henry spends the twenty dollars and goes to call on Flossie and tell her of his sorrow. She receives a telegram saying her uncle is dead and has left her a million dollars. She gives the uncle's body to the second-hand man and Henry is assured of her love.

The End of the Run—(THREE REELS)—GOLD SEAL—OCTOBER 23.—Portland Pete is caught in a baggage car by Giles Stafford, the brakeman, counting a large roll of bills. Giles demands half and learns that they are "phony." They both pass off "phony" twenties at a cigar stand. The police send William Craig to carry on an investigation. Giles is in love with Nona Durman, whose father keeps his money in a fruit-jar. Giles discovers the hiding place and substitutes the "phony" for the real money but drops his hat-band on the floor. Craig meets Nona and likes her, and although he has enough evidence to convict Durman, he believes in his innocence and allows him to go out on his run. Nona discovers the hat-band and jumping on her pony rides to tell Craig of her discovery. Giles is to meet Portland Pete in Denver, so climbs to the top of Durman's train for a ride. Nona races the train with her pony, climbs aboard, and holds up Giles with a revolver until Craig arrives on a hand-car.

A Fire-Escape Finish—(ONE REEL)—NESTOR COMEDY—OCTOBER 23.—Margie's father overhears her planning to elope with Vincent, who is not her father's choice. Father hires two husky dagos to grab Vincent as he ascends the ladder to get Margie. Gus, father's choice, out of pure curiosity, climbs the ladder to peek into Margie's room and is attacked by the dagos. Margie and Vincent escape to a hotel and are married by the parson before father can arrive to interfere.

Mutual Pictures

Jerry's Soft Snap—(ONE REEL)—OCTOBER 25.—Starring George Ovey. Jerry's sweetheart is cook for a newly-wed family and she tips him off to the fact that they have discharged their gardener and need a new one. He applies and is given the job by Mr. Newlywed, who gives him a letter of introduction. Mr. Newlywed's brother is coming to visit about the same time and he is wired an introduction to friend wife. The letters are mixed and Jerry is welcomed as the brother, while brother is put to work in the garden. The cook doesn't understand the attention Jerry gets and telephones for the husband. After he has pumped the gardener, Jerry and an intruding policeman full of bird shot, the mistakes in the letters are discovered.

And Along Came Mary—(ONE REEL)—STRAND—OCTOBER 23.—Starring Billie Rhodes. Mary is a hard working little woman with a lovable, but shiftless brother, Jay, who spends his time flirting and keeping out of a job. Billie goes to an employment agency, where she meets a woman of doubtful age who keeps a confectionery store at the beach. Jay, in a white coat, mixes ice cream sodas for the bevy of lovely girls, but the spinster becomes jealous. The climax comes when she closes the store that Jay may teach her to swim. Jay eludes the old girl time and again, but she shows up again and again, until Mary comes along. Jay makes a solemn promise that if Mary will only take him away he will go to work and stay there.

Reel Life No. 77—(ONE REEL)—GAUMONT—OCTOBER 18.—Goose Creek Church, a Colonial church of South Carolina, used only once a year, was saved from destruction during the Revolutionary War by the coat of arms of George III, which is mounted on the sounding board back of the pulpit. When Dishwashing Is a Pleasure: New invention which washes each dish separately and does not injure the most delicate hands. The Banana Industry: Interesting scenes on a 30,000-acre banana plantation in Panama. A Primitive Jeweler: The making of a bracelet by a negro. An Optical Illusion: According to this animated drawing from "life," it was not really the chorus lady who kicked off the parson's "lid."

The Adventurer—(TWO REELS)—OCTOBER 22.—Comedy starring Charles Chaplin. Charlie is an escaped convict, eluding his pursuers along the rocky seacoast. He dodges back and forth, eventually driven into the sea, where he swims alongside a boat in which a bather is struggling to shed his sweater. Charlie steals his bathing suit and emerges, garbed as a bather, at the beach just as pretty Edna's mamma is struggling in the water near the pier. "Big Eric," boastful of his strength, has been debating the advisability of attempting the mother's rescue when Edna jumps in. Charlie saves them both, and later Eric, who, seeing Edna's fond glances at the hero, pushes the rescuer back into the water. Charlie is himself rescued and taken to Edna's palatial home, where he dons an oversized evening suit and takes part in social events. It develops that Edna's dad is the judge who has sentenced Charlie, but he bluffs his way through this obstacle. Eric finds a newspaper announcing his escape and carrying his picture. He fools the rest of the family by marking whiskers on the picture, but Eric calls the prison warden and Charlie is pursued from one part of the house to the other until he lands in the grasp of a big guard. Edna comes onto the scene as the guard grips Charlie's shoulder. The prisoner introduces the guard to the fair miss, and as his captor reaches to take the girl's hand Charlie slips away.

High Violaters—(TWO REELS)—LOST EXPRESS SERIAL—OCTOBER 22.—Starring Helen Holmes. The drowning diver, encased in his heavy weighted suit, is rescued from his perilous position through the heroism of Helen Thurston, who is aided by Detective Murphy and ostensibly by the treacherous Pitts. Pitts plans to secure the box containing Thurston family archives from "The Lost Express" and to turn the contents to his own use. Pitts discovers through documents contained in the box that the Mountain King Mine, a Thurston property, has become suddenly valuable. Thurston, who has been on a sick bed, is still unable to talk, but he manages to convey to Helen the information concerning the mine. Helen undertakes to prevent "Harelip" from getting possession of the box, chasing him in an automobile.

General Program

Law and Order—(O. HENRY SERIES)—BROADWAY STAR FEATURE.—The old-timer remarks to Bud Oakley, a fighting cowboy of the old days, upon the change which has been wrought in the wild and wooly West by law and order, whereupon Bud starts out to tell a tale of the days when shooting irons decided all disputes. Twenty years before he had rescued a young woman from a runaway coach and took her to the ranch house, where she fell in love with the boss, Luke Summers. They married and Luke started a ranch for himself, with Bud as chief aid. Three years later a sporty chap from the east made love to Luke's wife and got shot for his trouble. Luke got a decree of divorce and the custody of his small son, but when he got back to the house his wife and son had eloped with the stranger. Twelve years slip by and one day with a party of sight seers from the East a youngster dressed up as a cowboy peppers Pedro with his gun. Luke sets out to avenge the dignity of the town and trails the party to New York. He brings back the culprit and Bud shows him a small scar on the forehead of the boy which proves him Luke's son. Luke then has a change of heart, says Pedro was half Mexican anyway, digs up the old order giving him the custody of his son and introduces his heir to the citizenry of Mojada county.

Camille—(SIX REELS)—HANOVER FILM CO.—Starring Helen Hesperia. At the opera Armand Duval, the brilliant son of a provincial family sees Camille, the reigning beauty of Paris. He falls in love with her at first sight and secures an introduction. He drops his law studies and lives openly with Camille until their affair becomes the scandal of Paris. His father, hearing of it, secures from Camille the promise that she will see no more of his son. She leaves a note telling Armand that she has tired of his love, and through his friends he hears that she has returned to another lover. At a brilliant social function he offers her his winnings at cards as the wealth for lack of which he thinks she has deserted him. But she will not yield. Griefstricken and weary of Paris, Armand travels and is again called to Paris by his father, who has found Camille ill because of the separation. He hurries back to her, finds her in a stupor on her couch, and sees her die at his feet after another display of emotional love making.

Feet of Clay—(FOUR REELS)—FALCON FEATURES.—Brandsby Mordant, a Scotland Yard detective with a brilliant future, in trying to extricate his nephew, Charles Eaton, from a band of crooks of which he is a member, is caught in a net of circumstantial evidence during a robbery, and with other members of "The Four" is sent to Dartmoor prison. The nephew escapes. The Four are double-crossed by some of their comrades who desire respectability. When opportunity for escape comes Mordant, never forgetting the desire of The Four for revenge, goes to America and begins his campaign, which includes mental torture for two of them and death for another. While he is showing Dorothy, Glenister's daughter, the feet of common clay of her father, he learns that she is the daughter of Eaton, whom Glenister has adopted to make reparation. Detectives are closing in on Mordant, and it it only through the quick wit of Marie Marat, who has accompanied him from Europe, that he finds safety and an opportunity for a better life.

A Night in New Arabia—(FOUR REELS)—BROADWAY STAR FEATURE. Jacob Spraggins, multimillionaire, goes around giving donations to hospitals, charities, and universities, and still fails to find happiness. At last he thinks his uneasiness is caused by a perfectly legitimate piece of business whereby he swindled one McLeod out of property worth ten thousand dollars. The grandson of McLeod is found and handed ten thousand dollars in bills. They are put right into his hand. The young man makes a hit with Jacob and he makes further advaces—even hints at a marriage between McLeod and his daughter Celia. But Thomas McLeod is already engaged to the parlor maid at a house on one of his rounds. Celia has donned cap and apron and set out to be loved for herself alone. Papa doesn't know it. Neither does Thomas McLeod. The ten thousand dollars sends them on their elopement rejoicing, and daddy gives chase, but takes it back when he sees who his son-in-law is. A year later old Spraggins ceases his charities. The poor working girls can keep on working for all he cares. Celia has a son and he must have an unprecedented fortune when he is 21. So Mr. Spraggins raises the price of vinegar three cents.

The Latest Film News of Chicago

BRYANT WASHBURN, now with Pathe in Los Angeles, formerly of Essanay, who was exempt from military service by the local exemption board, is again in danger of being subject to the draft as the local board has appealed his case to Washington.

Herbert Hoagland, well known in Chicago as former general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, also associated with Pathe for a number of years, is now connected with J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, as film editor.

Theda Bara was in Chicago last Saturday between trains. She was on her way from the celluloid coast to New York to attend the Broadway presentation of her big spectacle, "Cleopatra."

The Motion Picture Club of Chicago, of which Richard Nehls is president, held a lively meeting at the Hamilton Club last Monday night. Many prominent film men were present, including Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago branch of the M. P. E. L., who gave a talk on the World baseball series. The club is building a solid and conservative organization, to include most of the leading film men in Chicago.

The principals of the Chicago schools are to receive, each month, a copy of the list of films recommended by the Better Films Committee of the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' Association, of which Mrs. Fredrick Michael is chairman. Mrs. Michael is also delivering illustrated talks before various organizations and institutions on the subject of "Better Films."

The Atlas Educational Film Company, at 61 E. Adams street, has just finished the production of a film on poultry raising made under the direction of C. A. Rehm, secretary of the company. The firm is now working on a picturization of the dairy industry, after which the various phases of corn growing will be filmed.

Tom North of Pathe was in the city on business last week and held several conferences with Manager C. W. Bunn of the Pathe office.

Henry Dollman, of the firm of Doll-Van Film Company, a new state rights concern of Indianapolis, is soon to open a Chicago office. He was in the city concerning the project last week.

Griever & Herz, the lively little exchange on the fourth floor of the Consumers' Building, has made several big new hauls. They are now handling "Mother Love in the Law," a Crystal Photoplays production, featuring the well known Mrs. Dolly Matters; "Whither Thous Goest" with Rhea Mitchell, made by Thomas H. Ince; and "Trouper Forty-Four" made by the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation of New York and starring June Daye.

Albert M. Silverman, who was formerly with the "End of the World," is now hitting the high spots in town with "The Deemster" which is controlled by Warren & Clark, 305-7 Schiller building.

Marx and Goodman have added another playhouse pearl to their string in the form of the Shakespeare Theater at 941 East Forty-third street. This rapidly growing concern now has control of four fine theaters, all of which are in the big-house class. The new Broadway Strand is a house with a seating capacity of 1,000, which will open in about six weeks. The Orpheus with a seating capacity of 800 seats, is only a block away on Twelfth and Ashland.

The Marshfield Amusement Company, as these progressive exhibitors denominate themselves, are also the owners of the Marshfield Square Theater, one of the finest houses in the city. It has a seating capacity of 1,800.

C. A. Lynch, former Fox salesman in Pittsburgh, is now vending the same brand of goods for the local office.

Jacob Cooper, successful exhibitor on West Twelfth street, has booked "Intolerance" for a week's run at his big West side house.

Harry Willard, former booker of Triangle, who has recently been utility manager, auditor and film booker for Lubliner & Trinz has accepted a position with Fox Film Corporation. He left for New York October 10 on the Twentieth Century.

Charles O'Toole, of Minneapolis, brother of the popular Jack O'Toole, manager of the local Fox office, has sailed for France to do his bit with a company of engineers.

Arthur P. Desormeaux, is starting out from the local Fox exchange for a six weeks' trip with that well known picture, "The Daughter of the Gods" on his back. This big feature production has been cut down from ten to eight reels and having finished the big time is ready for the smaller houses throughout the country. It will be ready for release the first week in December.

Julius Stern, president of the L-Ko Comedies, was a visitor in Chicago this week.

The Austin Theater, 5619 W. Madison street, has again thrown open its doors, this time under the management of Edward Wright, formerly of Jones, Linick & Schaefer.

F. P. Dillon has been placed in charge to manage the Longacre Distributing Co., distributors of the Alice Howell comedies in this city and Illinois. Mr. Dillon was formerly connected with the V. L. S. E. and with the Jewel Productions.

Ben Lederer, who has been managing the Universal and Bluebird exchanges in Des Moines for the past seven years, was a visitor in this city for two days. While in town, Mr. Lederman was in conference with Mr. Laemmle, who was also in Chicago at that time.

Jack O'Toole, manager of the Chicago Fox exchange, got in from a three weeks' trip Thursday, October 11, after an extended tour of the big towns of southern Illinois in the interest of the Fox Standard Pictures. He was in town for three or four days or to the following Monday, to be exact, and then he left again for another three weeks' trip.

The American Film Company last week received $2,000 worth of new appliances for the Bell and Howell cameras. These are the latest devices for visions, iris and vignetting. This is in line with the policy of Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the Company, who returned from an inspection trip to the west coast studios and who plans to thoroughly equip every department of the studio, no matter what the cost may be.

Arthur McMillan, inventor of the American Projectoscope, which has just been put out by the American Film Company, was one of the first operators in the business. They used to have considerable fun with Mr. McMillan back in the old days when the exhibitor did not expect to put up over $200 to start in the picture game and Mr. McMillan was wont to insist that some day he would put out a machine that would enable a picture show to be given in any home. But, by George, Arthur did it. And he has reason to feel pretty chesty these days.

Max Levy, salesman for Metro, when seen last week, was woefully looking at a pair of soiled and blistered hands. The cause of the trouble popped out of Max when the interviewer sympathetically probed with a series of questions.

"Oh, I bought a darn Velie and I'm trying to learn to run the thing," lamented Max.

"Yes?" smiled the reporter.

"Yes," snorted the victim. "My hands hurt and my pocketbook is in agony. Why, just look at this. My Gawd, look at the insurance I have to take out on the thing yet." And there in a nice column were a pretty string of figures amounting to a nifty little total for the liability colision, fire and theft, and property damage insurance Mr. Levy has now adopted.

ALFRED HAMBURGER has just opened the President Theater at Fifty-fifth street and Calumet avenue. The house seats about 1,000.

Among the film notables to visit the Breezy Burg last week were Carl Laemmle and Joe Brandt of Universal, Myrtle Stedman, Theda Bara and Clara Kimball Young. Theda was on her way to New York for the opening of her new spectacle, "Cleopatra." Clara came over to see the slaughter of the Giants at White Sox park. Myrtle is making a theater tour.

A new film social organization has appeared on the map in Chicago. It is known as the Film Arts club and was released to the world on October 12 at a dinner at the Morrison Hotel. About forty film men were present at the dinner and each vowed to keep in the ranks and make the new club a success. C. R. Plough, Universal manager, was elected president, Ludwig Schindler, treasurer, and Hill Bernstein of the Chicago Daily News, who did the organizing, secretary.

Taylor Holmes, former stage comedian, now being featured by Essanay, has returned to Chicago after a trip to New York and is at work on a new picture, "Uneasy Money."

Lyle M. Albright, formerly reporter with MOTOGRAPHY, has joined the Chicago office of the Motion Picture News, in charge of William McGrath. Mr. Albright is a graduate of Northwestern University and a former reporter on the Chicago Herald.

The Chicago offices of the Universal-Bluebird companies were the busiest film offices in the country last week, according to the switchboard operator, who was so busy that she saved her lunch money for three days, as she was unable to leave her desk. On Thursday, Joe Brandt, the general manager of the Universal Film Mfg. Co., breezed in and was followed the next day by Carl Laemmle, who was kept busy every minute of the time he was here, conferring with his various branch managers of Chicago and vicinity. Mr. Laemmle's intentions were to leave here Friday afternoon, but his many business appointments made it necessary for him to stay over until Saturday.

Industry Boosts War Loan

EXHIBITORS REPORT ALL-STAR FEATURE WELL RECEIVED

REPORTS from exhibitors who have aided the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry by showing the All-Star feature production to boost the second Liberty Loan, indicate an enthusiastic reception of the film everywhere. The feature is composed of five complete episodes of five hundred feet each, in which President Wilson appears with other national notables and two scores of stage and screen stars.

Arrangements for distributing the film were made with a view to giving it the widest possible circulation during the Liberty Loan campaign. The one hundred prints were booked solid all over the country, through the ten largest distributing organizations, and exhibitors were furnished the reels without rental charge.

Many Stars Appear Personally

In many cities picture stars made their personal appearance on the stage after the showing of the Liberty Loan picture and urged participation in the government's war financing plan.

In New York William A. Brady headed a committee that divided the city into zones and assigned the most prominent stars to "cover" the different districts, making as many personal appearances in the interest of the campaign as possible.

With the energy that characterizes his work on the screen Douglas Fairbanks enlivened the campaign in Gotham by appearing at the Strand and several other theaters and delivering an earnest appeal for financial support of the government.

Horstmann Urges Buying

Preceding the distribution of the Liberty Loan feature film, Ernest H. Horstmann, chairman of the Motion Picture Industry Division of the Second Liberty Loan, sent out from his office in Boston the following appeal to the entire trade:

The writer has been asked by the Liberty Loan committee to act as chairman of the film interests for the purpose of securing subscriptions to the second Liberty Loan. The committee, consisting of E. R. Gregory, Harry F. Campbell, Ernest H. Horstmann, Harry Asher, H. A. Gillman, S. Grant, Nathan H. Gordon, Frank J. Howard, S. Moscow, Col. H. L. Kincaide and L. B. Mayer, has kindly volunteered to assist the government in this drive.

Let us uphold the good name the industry has always borne in aiding the government by subscribing to the utmost penny even more than we can afford.

If you feel you cannot afford to subscribe think it over again and again. Mothers are giving their boys, wives their husbands, and so will you loan—not give—the old United States that which she needs at present.

What is the good of sending our boys to the front if we cannot send them guns to use, food to eat, and clothes to wear? Don't forget they are fighting your battles as well as their own. Let the slogan be: "Do unto the boys who have gone to the front as you would like to be done by."

Send subscriptions to any of the committee.

Very truly yours, ERNEST H. HORSTMANN.

Industry Makes Hearty Response

Information from various branches of the film industry indicates that while picture men have been donating their services in many ways to make the second Liberty Loan a success, they have also contributed generously to the financial operation of the war by subscribing for Liberty Bonds.

Exposition Company Formed

Papers have been filed at Albany incorporating the Motion Picture Exposition Company which will have the management of the film expositions to be held next year; the first scheduled for New York in the month of February, to be followed by one in Boston in July during the convention there of the Exhibitors' League.

The incorporators of the new company are Arthur S. Friend of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Gabriel L. Hess, treasurer of the Goldwyn Pictures Corp., and Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association. The directors of the Exposition Company number fourteen and include the following representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry: Wm. A. Brady, Arthur S. Friend, J. E. Brulatour, Wm. L. Sherrill, J. A. Berst, Gabriel L. Hess, W. W. Irwin, P. A. Powers, J. H. Hallberg, and Lee A. Ochs, Ernest H. Horstman, Alfred S. Black, J. H. O'Donnell and Louis L. Blumenthal representing the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

A meeting of the corporation was held last week for the purpose of electing officers and receiving reports of sub-committees with recommendations regarding the arrangements for both expositions.

Avoid the Unjust Music Tax

All exhibitors are subject to taxation by the Society of American Authors and Composers if they use music controlled by that society. Avoid this unjust assessment by using music that cannot be taxed. Lists of this music are published in MOTOGRAPHY every week.

Watch for them.

Universal Stops Short Subjects

NEW WAR TAX ON POSITIVE FILMS CAUSE DRASTIC MOVE

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company has made one of the most radical moves in the history of the industry.

The big concern has, according to New York press reports, decided to do away with its comedy productions. In addition to this, all its short-reel productions will be abolished until further notice. In the future there will be eleven companies making Bluebird and Butterfly features and three companies making serials.

There have been as many as forty companies working at one time at Universal City, and there rarely have been less than twenty-eight. One of the reasons given for this clean sweep is the new war tax on positive films, although a variety of causes have made the step advantageous, at least for the present.

Move Moves Many

This edict will affect a number of staff members in the different departments. In the scenario department, which will give an idea of how the matter has affected the other branches, the following men were released: C. B. Hoadley, Leslie T. L. Peacocke, William Parker, Edward Hurzerford, A. Fernandez, Arthur Statter, Henry Wultza, King Vidor, Shelly Sutton, J. G. Alexander and R. W. Dillon.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, who have a contract which still has a year to run, find themselves in the position of men without a company. They are receiving salary as usual, but they have no one to work with. They are leaving the Coast shortly for New York, where they will take the matter up with Carl Laemmle, president of the company.

Bluebirds to Be Featured

Another cause of this change in policy is probably the fact that the success of Bluebird Pictures has shown the company that there are better profits and results to be obtained by concentrating on feature films. It has been shown that for actual money-makers the Bluebird pictures are far in advance of any other films put out by this company.

There is a possibility that the Universal may transfer many of their comedy people to the L-Ko studios, but this has not yet been definitely decided.

350 Short Subjects on Hand

R. H. Cochran, when approached on the subject, issued the following statement:

"At the present time the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has on hand about 350 one and two reel films, which have never been shown. These we expect to release, as usual; and at the usual rate of time this will stretch over at least a year's time. There will, however, be no further production of pictures of this length as a result of the war tax, which will render them temporarily unprofitable."

WAR WRECKS CHICAGO THEATER

THERE are a great many ways war has of swatting a fellow and letting him know that over across Germany's ocean there are openings for a large number of employes.

Here's the way the manager of a well-known Chicago theater has been shelled almost out of house and business.

When the smoke of the first draft calls cleared away his theater was minus an assistant, an operator, a stage man and the organist. That attack almost killed General Exhibitor. But he figured that he could fill the holes—until his two door men and an usher notified him the next day that they had enlisted instead of awaiting the call to glory.

Troubles don't come in sniper shots; they're always barrages.

But it must be great when the lady cashier is the only man on the pay roll.

ODE TO A DIRECTOR WAITING FOR SUNSHINE

Wait till the sun shines, William,
And the clouds go sprinting by,
Even if you can't shoot now, my William,
You can by and by.

You can't bribe the clouds off, William;
It don't do no good to sigh;
But those expensive actors, William,
You can buy and buy.

WORD TO PRODUCERS

A Balboa scenarioist lists the following as a few of the available picture play titles not yet used:

"The Hen's Last Ride."
"The Revenge of a Cheese."
"The Broken Quince."
"The Rise of Romeo Slappy."
"The Stewed Egg."
"The Juicy Lemon."
"The Haunted Spade."
"The Laughing Goulash."
"The Last of the Ooglywoos."
"The Mysterious Pretzel Bender's Daughter."

HE'S A STANDING JOKE NOW

"Ha," crooned the purchasing agent, Edward A. Donahoe, of the American Film Company, "a strange cat has been camping out nights on my chair cushion. I saw her this morning. We'll fix kitty."

Close-up of Donahoe arranging glass thumb tacks for a little surprise for kitty the next night.

Close-up of happy kitty sleeping down in the factory and a whoop of surprise and profanity from the night watchman, who elected to snooze for a brief half hour at midnight, when his assistant was on watch.

Night watchman beat kitty to the cushion.

If every person considered films as essential to life as the woman in Windsor, Pennsylvania, who left her husband because there was no picture house in the town, then—well, dream your own dreams.

You wouldn't mind furnishing taxicabs to take your patrons home after they had seen your show, would you? A. J. Merrill, of Evansville, Indiana, did when he ran a big spectacle.

To take care of his patrons he ran a midnight matinee, starting the show at 11:45 p. m. After the performance he sent home in taxis those who lived within the twenty-five cent limit. That's service!

PATRIOTIC MOTHER DONATES SQUAD

"Mattie," the studio cat, got herself in a Billy West comedy in the most unexpected manner.

During a scene in the candy shop, Billy West is supposed to be calling for volunteers to help him rout a band of yeggs, who have come to steal a million dollars worth of fresh eggs. Billy was hollering "I need men, I need an army." Right on the cue "Mattie" walked in to the scene and "deposited" four new kittens at Billy's feet.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

THE LITTLE AMERICAN, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Third run to turn-away business. Not a good Pickford part, however."—G. W. Mart, Strand Theater, Grinnell, Iowa.—College town.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A knock-out, to big business."—G. W. Mart, Strand Theater, Grinnell, Iowa.—College town.

Seven Keys to Baldpate, with George M. Cohan (Artcraft)—"A mixed-up affair that is hard to keep up with. Contains much melodrama. It is good but nothing to 'rave' about. Business was good with this offering."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Barbary Sheep, with Elsie Ferguson (Artcraft)—"Classy picture, classy audiences, classy business. Advertised it unusually big. A hit."—V. H. Oxley, Grand Theater, Bradford, Pa.

The Spotted Lily, with Ella Hall (Bluebird)—"A beautiful picture to look at. Scenery and photography are fine. Story entirely inadequate."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Girl in the Checkered Coat, with Dorothy Phillips (Bluebird)—"This picture is made remarkable and one that you can boost on account of the splendid acting of the star in the dual role. You will find yourself doubting that it is Miss Phillips in both roles."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Conscience, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"This is a fine picture, but the Chicago censor board cut it pretty badly."—D. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

When False Tongues Speak, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"This is a good picture but for some reason it did not draw good business."—D. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Sister Against Sister, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"This one went over big. Clever star and a drawing card."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater Huron, So. Dak.

Sins of the Parent, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"One of the best, and it has a very good moral. Will please all classes."—J. C. Welsh, Princess Theater, Boonville, Miss.

The Innocent Sinner, with Mariam Cooper (Fox)—"Star not well known here but this was a good box-office attraction and showed to S. R. O. Some picture!"—C. H. Noble, Palace Theater, Bad Axe, Mich.

Two Little Imps, with Jane and Katherine Lee (Fox)—"One of the best pictures I have ever shown. Capacity house."—C. H. Noble, Palace Theater, Bad Axe, Mich.

The Book Agent, with George Walsh (Fox)—"The same old thing. Patrons are growing tired of Walsh in the same stunts and this did not please."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Final Payment, with Nance O'Neil (Fox)—"When Webster made the dictionary he failed to include any adjectives bad enough to describe this picture. So I shall not try."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Honor System (Fox special)—"Excellent picture. Showed three days to capacity business."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

The Siren, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"A little more picture and not so much dress. The star drew good business."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

The Darling of Paris, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"Excellent picture. Drew capacity business. This star always 'holds them out.'"—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"The best bet in the past six months, worthy to be classed as a super-feature. Drew well without spending a barrel of money to force it."—G. W. Mart, Strand Theater, Grinnell, Iowa.—College town.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"Picture and attendance very fine."—V. H. Oxley, Grand Theater, Bradford, Pa.

The Goat, with Billy West (King-Bee)—"This Chaplin imitation goes over without any complaint. We are well satisfied with the Billy West comedies and run them on Sunday nights for the kids."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Mortal Sin, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"Good picture. Everyone pleased."—E. C. Snodgrass, Snodgrass Theater, Scottsboro, Ala.

Their Compact, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"Six reels. Children will not understand it. It is good entertainment but drags a trifle at times. Much by-play could be eliminated."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—Middle class neighborhood.

To the Death, with Mme. Petrova (Metro)—"This was advertised as a five-reel feature, but there are only three full reels."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Sidney Drew Comedies (Metro)—"These are very good."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up, with Marguerita Fischer (Mutual)—"Big business. Very good satisfaction."—J. S. Woodhouse, Lagoon Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.—High class neighborhood.

Charity Castle, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Good business two days. Pleased very well."—J. S. Woodhouse, Lagoon Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.—High class neighborhood.

Souls in Pawn, with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"Fine drama. Story good; star perfect; business O. K."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Calendar Girl, with Juliette Day (American-Mutual)—"Patrons did not like this. Juliette Day does not make an appeal."—D. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Outcast, with Ann Murdock (Empire-Mutual)—"This is an excellent picture, with wonderful acting by Miss Murdock. It brought us unusually good business."—D. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Upper Crust, with Gail Kane (Mutual)—"A fine comedy drama that cannot be beat."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

The Floorwalker, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"Packed them to capacity on third showing."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in MOTOGRAPHY'S "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

The Reward of Patience, with Louise Huff (Paramount)—"Very good. Miss Huff is excellent as the Quaker girl. Average business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Poor Little Peppina, with Mary Pickford (Paramount)—"Among the poor ones of this star's work. Too slow at times, much padding. Business good."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The House of Lies, with Edna Goodrich (Paramount)—"A good society drama. Nothing special to recommend it. Average business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Daughter of MacGregor, with Valentine Grant (Paramount)—"In this you will find a most pleasing picture. Fine for family night programs. Good business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Each to His Kind, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"Good picture. Business fair."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

Oh Doctor, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"Two reels of ordinary everyday comedy with little money spent on same. Fatty is not the success he was boomed to be. He made better comedies with Mabel Normand."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Spirit of Romance, with Vivian Martin (Paramount)—"Can't say much for this picture. Clever star poorly cast."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, So. Dak.

Sapho, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Excellent picture with a powerful climax. This star makes standing room scarce."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, So. Dak.

The Valentine Girl, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—Miss Clark draws well here and my people claim that this is the best Clark picture released."—J. C. Welsh, Princess Theater, Boonville, Miss.

Told at Twilight, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"One of the best. Why can't we have more such pictures? Big business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Light That Failed, with Robert Edeson (Pathe)—"A splendid melodrama that gave excellent satisfaction. Supporting cast is surely all-star."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

In the Wake of the Huns (Pathe)—"This, with Charlie Chaplin in A Jitney Elopement, brought the best business of the week at the Alcazar."—D. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Captain Kiddo, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"A good picture but the title was against it. It did not draw so well as Baby Marie's pictures usually do."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The On-the-Square Girl, with Mollie King (Pathe)—"A fair picture, up to the standard."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

The Awakening of Ruth, with Shirley Mason (Edison-Perfection)—"Miss Mason is proficient as Ruth. Good story. Fair business on a rainy day."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Kidnapped, with Raymond McKee (Conquest-Kleine)—"It is a very good costume play. Direction perfect. Scenery in every inch accurate. Business fair."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Pants, with Mary McAlister (Essanay-Perfection)—"Biggest kind of a hit to small business. Go after this big."—V. H. Oxley, Grand Theater, Bradford, Pa.

Magda, with Clara Cimball Young (Select)—"This did not draw and the people did not like it. They have twisted the story of the great play, and presented it poorly, so the patrons are disappointed."—D. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Moth, with Norma Talmadge (Select)—"Fine. Big business. Star great."—V. H. Oxley, Grand Theater, Bradford, Pa.

Poppy, with Norma Talmadge (Selznick)—"One of the best pictures on the market. Drew a wonderful crowd."—Joe Richards, American Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Easiest Way, with Clara Kimball Young (Selznick)—"A stupendous production which enthused capacity audiences. Every exhibitor should show it."—Happy Hour Theater, Schenectady, N. Y.

The Flame of the Yukon, with Dorothy Dalton

(Triangle)—"This is surely some picture. The star is popular here. Played to good business and everybody pleased."—C. H. Noble, Palace Theater, Bad Axe, Mich.

Mountain Dew, with Majorie Wilson (Triangle)—"The star is not pretty but has talent. Provides several thrilling situations and good comedy. Title rather poor from a box-office standpoint."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Cassidy, with Dick Rosson (Triangle)—"Fair is the best I can say for this picture. Not up to Triangle standard."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, So. Dak.

"Big V" Comedies (Vitagraph)—"My patrons like these very well."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Redemption of Dave Darcey, with James Morrison (Vitagraph)—Fine, one of the best, and Vitagraph prints are always in fine shape."—J. C. Welsh, Princess Theater, Boonville, Miss.

Rasputin the Black Monk, with Montague Love (World)—"Seven reels. A fifteen-cent picture on your regular program. A good box-office picture, as it is reproduced from actual incidents which have received many columns in the newspapers."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Dormant Power, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"This brought the best business of the week at the Boston. Miss Clayton always draws and pleases the patrons."—D. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

A Fool He Was, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Maco Comedies)—"Exhibitors, keep away from this. I was 'stung' hard. It will cost me many times the price to put Arbuckle again in good repute. His manager should see that this is taken off the market."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Serials and Series

The Lost Express, with Helen Holmes (Mutual)—"We consider this one of the greatest and most thrilling serials that this star has ever appeared in. It is a knock-out from every angle."—Happy Hour Theater, Schenectady, N. Y.

The Lost Express, with Helen Holmes (Mutual)—"Please tell your readers that this serial is a great box-office attraction. We have run four chapters and so far it has more than equalled all the others with Miss Holmes. We are playing to capacity business."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, O.

The Lost Express, with Helen Holmes (Mutual)—"First three episodes start it well. Business fair."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Seven Pearls, with Mollie King (Pathe)—"This is a very good serial. We have run five episodes and find that it is a drawing card and pleases our patrons."—Al Lyons, Garden Theater, Chicago.

Shorty Hamilton Series (Mutual)—"Good drawing card. Business good."—E. C. Snodgrass, Snodgrass Theater, Scottsboro, Ala.

Gaumont News Weekly (Mutual)—"Everyone likes the News. Good drawing card."—E. C. Snodgrass, Snodgrass Theater, Scottsboro, Ala.

The Red Ace, with Marie Walcamp (Universal)—"Very good star. Drew fair business. A real story."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Fighting Trail, with William Duncan (Vitagraph)—"Wonderful, take it from me! It's all there. Some money-getter!"—Joe Richards, American Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Gray Ghost, with Eddie Polo (Universal)—"In my estimation, this is the poorest picture serial ever put out."—Joe Richards, American Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Fatal Ring, with Pearl White (Pathe)—"This is a good drawing card. The picture is good and the star popular."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Neglected Wife, with Ruth Roland (Pathe) "We have just finished this serial and can frankly recommend it as a box office attraction. It draws the grown-ups and they pay full admissions, while a serial that appeals to children fills up your house at half-price admission."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Patria, with Mrs. Vernon Castle (Pathe)—"Most of the 'pep' so much needed in early chapters of serials was reserved for the last few episodes in this."—N. W. Huston, McGhie Theater, Columbus, Kansas.

Further Adventures of Stingaree, with True Boardman (Kalem series)—"If your people like a rough and outlaw picture, this one is O. K."—J. C. Welsh, Princess Theater, Boonville, Miss.

The Great Secret, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"Does not seem to be much to it, but it is doing fair business, presumably on account of the stars."—A. K. MacMartin, Empress Theater, Kamloops, British Columbia.

Pearl of the Army, with Pearl White (Pathe)—"A good serial, drawing fairly well, but too similar to The Iron Claw, which ran here some time ago."—A. K. MacMartin, Empress Theater, Kamloops, B. C.

The Purple Mask, with Ford and Cunard (Universal)—"The two stars, who are popular here, draw good business, but the serial is poor stuff."—A. K. Mactin, Empress Theater, Kamloops, B. C.

Making the Exchanges Compete

THIS is the first time we ever heard of a picture theater that voluntarily gave its exchanges something more than their film rental. The Si-Non Theater, one of the chain operated in Alabama by Harry Simon and Thomas S. Nonnenmacher, awards two prizes every week to the exchanges serving it. The first prize is for the best feature of the week. The booby prize, naturally, is for the poorest feature. Inasmuch as a copy of the weekly letter of award goes to all the exchanges, we can imagine that the booby prize excites more comment than the first prize.

We have no specific information as to the improvement in service enjoyed by the Si-Non since the inauguration of its contest system. But no doubt there is some. At least it tends to stimulate the spirit of rivalry, which is the best spur to service known to psychology.

The thing we like particularly about this plan is that by it the consumer—who, so far as the trade is concerned, is the exhibitor, not the public—assumes his proper place in the economic scheme. In other words, the buyer is the boss. He is the one to say whether the product is good or bad, desirable or undesirable. And here is one buyer who not only says, but goes out of his way to say what he thinks of the goods handed him week by week. It is as though a retailer should make tests and analyses of each week's shipment from his wholesalers, and then send out circulars showing the results.

Of course the Si-Non's first prize and booby prize are awarded on evidence which may be disputed by some other theater having different experience with the same productions. But if all the theaters did it, the open minded producers would have a wonderfully reliable guide to studio work.

MOTOGRAPHY'S "What the Picture Did for Me" section really operates along the same lines, and there are few producers who do not look to it for the only kind of information that is really valuable—that direct from the front. The only prizes it awards are verbal, but they seem to be effective.

The Government Calls for Camera Men

THE Photographic Division, United States Signal Corps, is practically a new department of army organization. Its duties consist in making observation records under conditions more or less difficult and complicated—as may be imagined. Under the authority of this division all the official photographers of the army will operate.

The Signal Corps must depend, for the personnel of its Photographic Division, upon the photographic experts of civil life. The work of the division is extending rapidly, and the demand for workers—considering the limited supply of trained men—will be comparatively large.

Obviously the motion picture industry has trained more men in work paralleling the requirements of the army than any other industry. The ranks of the commercial and portrait photographers will not yield nearly so large a proportion of men inured to hardship and difficulty; and few amateurs possess the necessary technical equipment of experience. The motion picture laboratories will be called upon to give their full share of men. And they will, naturally, be the men most valuable to industry.

For the Photographic Division of the Signal Corps can use only the most capable and experienced photographers in the country. It wants not only camera men, but laboratory experts and photo-physicists—particularly for aerial work in connection with the Aviation Section. And both for that work and for news photography, it wants men of unquestioned integrity, intelligence and all around ability. Incidentally, the opportunities for promotion in the division are declared to be exceptional, due to the rapid development of the department.

Some experienced motion picture camera men and laboratory workers have already gone into the service. Some with similar qualifications, of course, have been drafted into the National Army; and these are invited to make application (through the proper military channels) for transfer to the Photographic Division, if they so desire. Information regarding this will be furnished on request by the office of the chief signal officer of the army, Photographic Division, Washington.

This immediate need of the army organization, in extending its brilliant opportunity to a valuable class of industrial workers, makes necessary some thought of readjustment in commercial producing circles. The progress of the industry would be seriously hampered by a shortage of photographic experts. On the other hand, for patriotic reasons it is most undesirable that business should compete with the government for the possessors of specialized skill needed by both.

It seems to devolve upon the motion picture trade to increase its intensive training of camera and laboratory men, and to encourage more applicants for admission into this really fascinating and remunerative line of effort.

Open on Sunday

IN answer to a small town exhibitor who is troubled about the ticket tax, Frank Rembusch advises him, and others like him, to open his house on Sunday. He argues that it is only in the smallest cities, where the tax may be hardest to collect, that picture theaters are dark Sundays. Objectors, he thinks, will be silenced by presentment of the facts that Sunday operation will save the theater and increase the government's revenue.

We find it hard to argue on a point whose merits seem self-evident. Our attitude on the Sunday show question is already known. To recapitulate it, we believe there is more good reason for picture shows on Sunday than any other day.

The exhibitor of a benevolent and altruistic temperament will regard the Sabbath not as the day on which he can make the most profit, but the day on which he can do the most good for the largest number of patrons, and keep the most young people out of mischief. For the properly operated picture show does much good in that way, and doing good certainly should not be prohibited on Sunday, of all days.

Nevertheless, we are aware that there is a certain opposition, in places, to Sunday shows. And we are skeptical of the power of logic, no matter how clear, to dissolve that opposition. Bigotry yields not to reason, nor reformers to argument. Where legislation prevents Sabbath performances the only satisfactory solution is to remove the legislation—usually not a simple undertaking.

But Mr. Rembusch apparently refers to theaters which stay dark on Sunday when they need not—or at least when the only deterrent to operation is the pious objections of a few good—but narrow—souls. We cannot imagine why exhibitors in this position have not been operating on Sunday right along.

Whether the ticket tax be considered as a motive or not, there is no argument against Sunday shows and every argument for them. Nor is there a single good reason why any picture theater in this country should be dark on Sunday.

The exhibitor who only runs his house on the six week days is missing the biggest day of all, and the biggest opportunity to serve the public. If it is local legislation that restrains him, he can devote his spare moments to no better or more remunerative cause than to work for the amendment or repeal of the obsolete laws. Petition blanks are easily secured, and the people are at hand.

And the people are undoubtedly favorable. There is not the slightest question in our mind that a referendum for Sunday pictures would open every theater.

More Non-Taxable Music

OFFICIAL LIST COMPILED BY CHICAGO EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

EXHIBITORS should take note of the following changes in the previous lists published in MOTOGRAPHY: "The Darktown Strutter's Ball," by Shelton Brooks, formerly published by Will Rossiter, is now being published by Leo Feist, making this number taxable. "The Livery Stable Blues," published by Roger Graham, is now added to the list of non-taxable music, Roger Graham having won the suit which Leo Feist brought against him for this number.

If your music cues which you receive from the Film Corporations are compiled of music which requires an extra performance fee, replace them with music that is non-taxable.

I would suggest that for your own protection you refrain from using music that is not listed among the non-taxable numbers which I am compiling for the Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. When ordering music, state whether you desire it for orchestra or piano alone.

Any information regarding the music tax or non-taxable music can be obtained by calling at the League Headquarters, 1416 Masonic Temple.—Katherine C. Melcher.

Connecting Industry's Coasts

As a result of conferences which have been held in New York during the past few days, it is believed that closer relations will be established between the producers' committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, now comprising the representatives of forty-seven important companies, and the Motion Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles.

Walter J. Reynolds, secretary of the Producers' Association on the coast, has been in New York in conference with President Wm. A. Brady and Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott of the National Association, and has also met a number of the officers of important producing companies who have studios on the coast.

It is the consensus of opinion that some arrangement should be made to bring the activities of the two organizations in closer contact, in view of the fact that the Coast organization sometime ago established a Cinema Exchange. Secretary Reynolds was the luncheon guest on Tuesday of the committee of the National Association which has had under its direction the organization of the Service Bureau, at which time he conferred with Gabriel L. Hess, R. S. Cochrane, J. W. Engel, Arthur S. Friend and General Manager Wales Winters.

Mr. Reynolds offered several suggestions which will no doubt be adopted by the Service Bureau Committee with a view to establishing uniformity in the application forms and registration cards of the Service Bureau, which has established its headquarters in suite 320-321 of the Longacre Bldg., and of which Mr. Wales Winters is the General Manager.

Four Paralta Productions

Bessie Barriscale's second Paralta production, "Madam Who," will be Paralta's second release and will follow J. Warren Kerrigan's "A Man's Man." Then will come Mr. Kerrigan's production of Frederick Chapin's sensational romance of the western oil fields, "Turn of a Card," and Miss Barriscale's first production, Grace Miller White's charming love romance, "Rose o' Paradise."

The latter production will be held for the fourth Paralta release to give time to carry out a national advertising program already begun in connection with this story, which will have a very far reaching effect and interest at least half a million people in this picture.

The attractions named give Paralta four productions completed and ready for release. Mr. Kerrigan recently finished "Turn of a Card" and will, within a few days, begin his third Paralta production. Miss Barriscale is at work on her third Paralta play, "Within the Cup." Both Mr. Kerrigan and Miss Barriscale will have completed their third Paralta pictures within the next five or six weeks.

Idaho Exhibitors Hold Convention and Ball

The exhibitors of Idaho are up and doing things. They have an active organization known as the Idaho Theater Managers Association, of which Herman J. Brown is president.

This organizaton is to hold a convention and grand picture ball at Pocatello, Idaho, on October 29. All the theater men of the section have been circularized and a good attendance is assured.

Bryant Washburn has been secured as a special attraction. He will lead the grand march and, of course, bask in the light of the smiles of the fans. Mr. Washburn will be on his way to Los Angeles to begin his first work for Pathe.

"Under Stars and Stripes in France"

Under the title of "Under the Stars and Stripes in France" Pathe has just released a two-reel picture of the greatest timeliness and interest. As its name implies it shows the soldiers of Uncle Sam now on French soil, the vanguard of the vast army that will soon be "over there."

Important Facts Regarding Non-Taxable Music

Exhibitors will be interested to know that the non-taxable music published in Motography from the official lists compiled by Miss Katherine Melcher for the League of Chicago under the direction of President Joseph Hopp can be purchased from the following Chicago music houses: Lyon & Healy, Jackson and Wabash avenue; Carl Fischer, 337 South Wabash avenue; and Fritz & Schnier, 225 South Wabash avenue.

It should also be noted that the music published by Carrie Jacobs Bond is non-taxable, in spite of the reports circulated to the contrary by the Association of Publishers and Composers.

Firms Allow Discounts

The firms of Ross Jungnickel, 15 Whitehall street, New York, offers a 50 per cent discount on its artist's and orchestra repertoire to cash purchasers. G. Schirmer, Inc., offers the same discount on its 102 numbers of orchestra music.

Cues Taxable

Exhibitors should also bear in mind the fact that many of the music cues furnished are compiled from taxable music and are therefore taxable. Other cues can be substituted.

President Hutchinson Talks on War Tax

By S. S. Hutchinson, President American Film Company.

THE impending tax on films must mean a great difference to producer, naturally. It will necessitate a general readjustment of the film industry in order to meet this new tax. But the motion picture industry has already done much for the government and can do still more.

Taxation must be heavy in every line of business in war time. We must do our part—and do it without grumbling. It is useless to whimper over spilled milk—but we can take care not to spill any more than is necessary in the future.

I refuse to take a pessimistic view of the situation. I believe that both the government and the film industry will be the gainer of this taxation. It will bring us in close touch with one another and while the film men will have an opportunity to learn something of the problems of the government, the latter will be able to ascertain something of the difficulties under which the pictures must be produced and the manner in which the money must be raised for expenses. It will do us both good and perhaps the film men will be taught how to protect their interests better than they have in the past.

I am of the opinion that this tax will speedily bring about a re-organization of the film business that will put it on a sound and enduring basis. The government cannot afford to be without the motion picture industry, for it has become an integral part of the nation. We want to work for the government and with it. Out of this taxation is going to develop a new future for the motion picture.

The American Film Company will meet the new condition as we meet any new business condition—and keep right on producing good pictures. We will not impair in any way, the quality of our productions.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, President of the American Film Company, who refuses to be pessimistic over the tax situation.

Favorite Novels for Bluebirds

BLUEBIRD declares that it is coming into an era of big things—very big things. This is not intended to cast any aspersions on Bluebird's start, or on Bluebird's success thus far, but every company must look upward and towards bigger things and Bluebird is doing just that. Managing Director Carl Laemmle purchased a number of popular books by well-known authors, and they are going into production as fast as possible.

Bluebird is also releasing two of its newer stars in Carmel Myers and Mae Murray. Really effective vehicles are being provided for all of the Bluebird leaders. Monroe Salisbury, whose stellar possibilities are exceedingly bright, has been added to the galaxy of Bluebirders, and this completes a circle consisting of Mae Murray, Violet Mersereau, Dorothy Phillips, Ruth Clifford, Franklyn Farnum, Carmel Myers and Rupert Julian, a constellation of which any company would be proud.

Among the books purchased may be mentioned the following: Frank R. Adams' novel, "Molly and I," in which Carmel Myers and Kenneth Harlan are to be featured under the direction of George Siegmann. Mr. Siegmann is a new director to Bluebird, although he has been for many years chief assistant to D. W. Griffith, and has assisted in all of his big productions.

Another well-known story is "Barter," written by Evelyn Campbell, which appeared as a novelette in a popular magazine. Dorothy Phillips is the star, and she is supported by William Buress, Katherine Kirkwood, Harry Dunkinson and Joe Girard. The story is being produced by Allen Holubar.

Richard Harding Davis' popular novel, "The Scarlet Car," is another Bluebird which has been placed in production under the direction of Joseph De Grasse. Franklyn Farnum is the star of "The Scarlet Car" and will be supported by Edith Johnson, who will be remembered for her role in the Bluebird photoplay, "Behind the Lines" Lon Chaney, Sam De Grasse, Jack Francis and Howard Crampton.

Ruth Clifford and Monroe Salisbury are working in a Bluebird being produced from another famous story, "Anthony the Absolute." This novel by Samuel Merwin ran serially in the Cosmopolitan, and made a striking success as a novel. "One Clear Call," a magazine story by Larry Evans, the well-known author, in Hearst's of July, will have for its star Carmel Myers and Kenneth Harlan.

Gives Photos Away

As an advertisement for the Wonderland Theater, Winnipeg, the management had a flashlight photograph taken of the crowded house on Saturday night, October 6. Prints of this picture were freely distributed among patrons on the following Monday and Tuesday. There was a big demand for the prints, many people wanting an extra photo to give to friends.

Universal Films "Rainbow Division"

Universal has ready for immediate release one of the most unique news specialties that has been put on the market in some time. This is nothing less than a pictorial record of the personalities included in the noted "Rainbow Division," at Camp Mills, Mineola, Long Island.

The entire personnel of the various regiments representing fourteen states has been pictured in a panorama of intimate close-up views and many of the interesting human incidents of life as it is being lived in the dog-tents and on the drilling grounds have been introduced with telling effect. These pictures will be released in fourteen reels.

Goldwyn Continues Heavy Booking Record

Goldwyn's prearranged policy of distribution under which it was believed that its eighty-odd first run prints booked in the United States and Canada would be kept constantly at work has worked out according to early expectations in all parts of North America.

The prompt availability of the big Goldwyn productions for the smaller exhibitors, enabling smaller houses both in large cities and small towns to have Goldwyn Pictures while they are still new and talked about by picture fans, has greatly increased the popularity and contract rental business of this big new producing organization as evidenced by the bookings reported from its twenty-five branch offices.

"The Flaming Omen" Full of Action

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Scenes Are Laid Among the Haunts of Peruvian Sun-Worshippers

IN announcing "The Flaming Omen" as the Blue Ribbon feature for the week of October 29, Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, declares that it takes rank with the finest productions his company has ever offered.

It is a swift moving story, with its locale in the Andes Mountains of Peru, and conveys the South American atmosphere with wonderful fidelity. Andres de Segurola, grand opera singer, and Marie Sarlabous collaborated on the play. They have brought to the motion picture field a refreshingly original theme.

Cast is Well Balanced

For the making of the picture, William Wolbert, director, made an exhaustive study of Peruvian history and religion, because a large part of the action hinges on the curse pronounced by an Indian maiden, daughter of the Incas, on the faithless prospector who married her and fled to England when he had accumulated gold sufficient to make him independent for life. The Indian atmosphere is maintained throughout the picture and one of the fascinating features of it is a gigantic replica of an Inca God, carved from rock and weighing seven tons. This figure, set on the top of a mountain, is a shrine of the Incas.

Alfred Whitman and Mary Anderson are featured in "The Flaming Omen" and the supporting cast is a well-balanced Vitagraph feature company. Attention will be attracted to the settings in both the civilized and uncivilized surroundings.

The title, "The Flaming Omen," is taken from the sun itself, which was regarded by the Incas as a fiery god. The story deals with the romance of Dorian, called "The Red Prince," because of the color of his skin. He is the son of Watkins, an Englishman, seeking his fortune in Peru, and Coya, an Inca woman. In the opening scenes are shown the native Peruvian sun-worshippers performing their religious rites. They attribute an eclipse of the sun to the evil presence of Christians, and descending on their village, slay the priests and scatter the worshippers. Among the latter is Coya who is found by Watkins and carried away to his cabin.

Story Unfolds Rapidly

Five years later, Lord Haviland is visiting his Peruvian estates seeking health for his daughter, Lydia. They are driving up a mountain to witness the grandeur of the sunset when they come upon a woman, who has just killed herself at the foot of an image of Inti, the Sun God. It is Coya, deserted by Watkins who had returned to England with his hoard of gold. Crying by the woman is a little boy, their son. The Havilands adopt this child who is named Dorian and known as "The Red Prince."

Twenty years later Dorian has succeeded to the title and riches of Lord Haviland. Watkins, forgetting his years in Peru, has married an English woman and has a beautiful daughter, Violet. She and Dorian fall in love, but every time Dorian starts to speak of his love there appears to him in a vision his Inca mother dying at Inti's feet and swearing vengeance on the man who deserted her.

Whirlwind of Action at Finish

There is visiting at the Havilands, Blanca, an Inca girl, who loves Dorian because, he, too, is of Inca blood. Dorian is made a nervous wreck by his constant hallucinations and visions every time he is in Violet's company, and he goes to Peru. He realizes that he cannot marry Violet and that Blanca is the girl for him and tells her of his love.

Natcho, Inca chieftain, hopes to win Blanca and being repulsed, leads his tribesmen against the Haviland estate, planning to carry her off. Meanwhile Watkins and Violet have come to Peru, and in the battle which follows, Watkins is slain on the very spot where Coya, his wife, ended her life. Violet also is killed and Dorian slays Natcho. Watkins, dying, tells his story, which explains the visions which prevented Dorian from marrying his own half sister.

Above, remarkable scene from "Over There," Select feature with Charles Richman. In the oval: Alice Brady in Select's "Her Silent Sacrifice."

Select Gets War Story "Over There"

SELECT PICTURES CORPORATION has taken over Charles Richman's latest photoplay, "Over There," and is releasing it for immediate distribution through Select Exchanges.

"Over There" is a patriotic photo-drama in six reels produced by the Charles Richman Pictures Corporation, With Charles Richman and Anna Q. Nilsson as the stars. The cast, which is a brillant one, also includes Gertrude Berkeley, who won renown as the mother in 'War Brides." and Walter Hiers, who has played the role of jolly fat friend to so many heroes and heroines of screenland.

"Over There" is notable for its war scenes, which must take rank with the very best war scenes produced outside of the actual fighting lines. The battle areas in this picture are unusually extensive, and the construction of the trench system was costly. For, instead of the usual few yards of trenches and sandbags, hundreds of feet are covered by a really ramifying system of counter trench work.

These trenches were constructed under the supervision of Lieutenant W. A. O'Hara of the 24th Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Force, who spent seven months in the first line trenches in northern France, and who actively participated in the battles of the Somme from Ypres to Vimy. Lieutenant O'Hara also supervised and ably assisted in the making of the highly effective battle scenes. No picture which has yet been shown to the American public so graphically duplicates the scenic conditions of a battle on the west front as do these battle scenes in "Over There."

New Jewel Manager

R. E. Bishop has been appointed Cincinnati manager of Jewel Productions, Inc., succeeding Ralph Peckham. Mr. Bishop has been with the General Film Company in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Columbus in the capacity of booker and assistant manager and he was manager for the Mutual Company in Minneapolis. Jewel's Cincinnati office which is under the general sales management of A. J. Mentz, with headquarters in Cleveland, is located at Room 402, Strand Theater building.

A. Kaufman has been appointed salesman for the Jewel exchange in Cleveland having been promoted by Manager A. J. Metz.

"For the Freedom of the World"

A vivid presentation of what the million men of the new National Army are doing to make themselves fit soldiers for the United States service in France will soon be flashed before the picture patrons of America through the new patriotic photoplay, "For the Freedom of the World," made by Ira M. Lowry, and to be released shortly throughout the world by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation.

In the course of the story of this patriotic panorama of the present war the hero enlists in the Foreign Legion of Canada—a favorable avenue for red-blooded Americans anxious to see quick and active service in defense of the rights of democracy—and goes through the course of training prescribed by the High Command of the Allied armies after the most thorough of trials at the actual front.

This means that spectators of "For the Freedom of the World" will not have to be content with the tedious parades, drills and marches which have figured hitherto in "military spectacles" as the only alternative to scenes of battle. Ira M. Lowry's production shows all the amazing and fascinating details of actual training in trench warfare through which the members of the new National Army must pass before they can go "over there."

First Maxine Elliott Play Received Warmly

The success of the first two Goldwyn releases, "Polly of the Circus," with Mae Marsh as star, and "Baby Mine," with Madge Kennedy in the stellar role, appears to have been repeated in the case of its third production, "Fighting Odds," in which Goldwyn is presenting the famous beauty, Maxine Elliott, as a film star. The reception accorded Miss Elliott and her play by the newspapers in the metropolitan cities carrying first runs even exceeds in warmth the welcome accorded her in New York. Her beauty won a tribute from every critic unique in American theatrical annals.

Louella O. Parsons writes in the Chicago Herald: "Miss Elliott is the lovely woman we all admired on the stage. She adapts herself to the camera with astonishing facility and plays her role with charming grace."

Oma Moody Lawrence, of the Chicago Evening Post, goes on from speaking of the story, which she calls "remarkable for its strong simplicity," to say of Miss Elliott: "We are most happy to record that the beauty for which she was famous has not been lost, but rather heightened by the richness of her experience abroad. And far from having been aged by her efforts in behalf of the wounded at the war-front, she seems to have been rejuvenated. To put it very simply, she screens infinitely better than the usual stage actress."

In the Chicago Daily News, W. K. Hollander writes: "Miss Elliott has lost none of her fascination and charm. She is delightful to gaze upon."

With the release of Jane Cowl's first Goldwyn picture, "The Spreading Dawn," the celebrated emotional actress of the speaking stage will be seen for the first time as a star in a number of cities of the south.

Big Theater Changes Hands

News has come of the change in ownership of the Lubin Theater, one of the pioneer picture show houses of Cincinnati, having a large seating capacity. Isaac Frankel of the Ante-Frankel Amusement Company acquired the control by purchasing the interest heretofore held by Joseph Hennegan, one of the most widely known show printers in America.

Hennegan retires from the management held by him virtually since the opening of the house. The transfer involves, it is stated, more than $35,000. Although the deal was put through last week, for certain reasons it was not made public then. A costly loving cup was presented to Manager Hennegan upon his retiring by his associates. It is stated that Hennegan will henceforth devote his entire attention to show printing, as he plans a considerable increase in the capacity of his plant.

The Lubin was the first picture theater of ornate design and large seating capacity in this State, and its opening attracted much attention in amusement circles. It has catered almost exclusively to West Side patronage here since the opening of the big theaters in the city's heart controlled by Pittsburgh interests.

Club Formed by Japanese Players

The Japanese Photoplayers Club of Los Angeles was formed a few nights ago by natives of the land of Nippon who are members of the local film colony. Sessue Hayakawa of the Lasky Company and Frank Tokanaga of the Universal Company were the leaders of the movement to organize the club, the object of which is principally to see that its members do not appear in productions reflecting upon the Japanese race.

In addition to the Japanese film folk there were present Ujiro Oyama, Japanse Consul, members of the Japanese Association of Southern California and Japanese newspapers representatives. Addresses were made by His Imperial Majesty's Consul and others, in which the formation of the club was highly commended and its members urged to use their best efforts with the producers to the end that the dignity of the race be maintained in all pictures in which their countrymen appear.

Receives Governmental Offer

M. R. Fink, head of the foreign department of General Enterprises Inc., was compelled to cut short a trip through the southern circuit in the interests of "The Warrior" this week due to a call received from Mr. Lawrence Rubel of the Bureau on Public Information at Washington.

Mr. Fink returned to New York from Baltimore in answer to a summons from George Creel, the head of the Bureau, who offered him the important position of caption writer in the still picture department of the photograph departments. The work which is highly important, calling for a man of broad knowledge and newspaper experience, would entail the spending of two days each week in Washington. The pay is nominal and the position a patriotic service to the United States Government.

New Mutual Special

Spectacular Adventure Drama Featuring Tyrone Power to Be Available November 12 at Mutual Exchanges—Unusual Tropical Story

THE Mutual Film Corporation announces "The Planter," a seven-part spectacular adventure drama featuring Tyrone Power, as its first big special feature of the season.

"The Planter" will be available at Mutual exchanges on November 12.

This production is presented by F. M. Manson, head of the company which produced the picture in Southern Mexico.

"The Planter" is the picture version of the novel by the same title written by Herman Whitaker, celebrated writer of "big stuff" in the adventure fiction field.

The Mutual claims for this picture exceptional box office value on its value both as big drama and its decidedly unusual setting and able casting. The picture is said to have been very costly of production, as it required the movement of the entire producing company to locations in southern Mexico, and the use of many hundreds of extras, the destruction of a native village and considerable plantation property.

Is a "Strong" Story

"The Planter" may be classed as a "strong" story. It is full of situations similar to those which have found favor with the public to box office profit in the best of the big outdoor special features. The story is a love story and incidentally an expose of life and labor conditions in tropical Mexico.

"We are pleased," observed President Freuler of the Mutual, "to have a feature that is full of strength and power and box office value which does not depend for its interest on exaggeration or distortion of its proper sex interest. 'The Planter' is clean. 'The Planter' is big and must be presented in a big way."

The cast includes Lamar Johnston, who as a hero comes close to taking the lead away from Tyrone Power; Lucile King, in the role of a native girl of rare beauty; Louis FitzRoy, famous for his character work; George O'Dell, best known for his able work in earlier Triangle pictures; Mabel Wile and Carmen Phillips.

Tropical Locations

The tropical locations give the action of the drama a highly colored background of extreme faithfulness, conducing largely to the convincing character of the production. The photography is excellent, owing to capable technical work and the abundance of good working light in the tropics.

Reports gathered by the Mutual from the public libraries of the country indicate a large demand for "The Planter" in book form and incidentally a growing interest in Mexican fiction and travel books is in evidence.

The publicity department of the Mutual is preparing an exceptional line of advertising aids for the exhibitor in connection with "The Planter." Special music cues will be prepared by Joseph O'Sullivan.

Unusual lobby display and posters are also in preparation, in the hands of artists specially retained for work on this production. The paper to be issued will include two one sheets, two three sheets, a six sheet and a special 16 sheet. There will be two art slides, a variety of cuts and an attractive window card.

The production portrays the astounding adventures of white men engaged in the rubber trade, these being set forth among wild natural surroundings, pictured in the Isthmus country, of novel beauty and bewildering variety.

The Story

The story related is that of David Mann, son of a rich widow of Northfield, Maine, who has invested in one of these plantations. Young Mann is sent to the Isthmus by unscrupulous promoters as manager, in order that they may hold fuller sway over the financial resources

Goldwyn Buys $100,000 of Liberty Bonds

The subscription of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for $100,000 worth of Liberty Loan bonds is the first response of motion picture producers to the call of the government issued through a special committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. In announcing the subscription Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn corporation, said:

"The action of Goldwyn Pictures in subscribing to the Liberty Loan only faintly expresses this company's support of the National administration in all of its war policies."

of his mother. He comes in contact with Ludwig Hartzer, the evilly-disposed manager of an adjacent estate, a feud growing up between the men which results in the latter's death at the hands of slaves, after David has encountered him in a series of hair-raising episodes involving a beautiful Mexican girl with whom the young northerner has fallen in love.

A fascinating feature of the play is a beautiful young slave girl who, according to the custom of the country, is sent to look after the affairs of Mann's household, and who regards herself as "his woman," being puzzled and chagrined at his refusal to accept her as holding that relationship and using every artifice of her sex to overcome his northern scruples.

There is a yellow fever outbreak in the native settlement and young David fights it, white man fashion, winning his fight and at the same time the affections of the beautiful senorita who has been his good angel through many trials.

The exodus of the slaves in the yellow fever panic, the appalling force of a tropical storm, the horrors of a stockade fire and the deadly tangle of a jungle forest, are all vividly pictured.

Tyrone Power, star of "The Planter," played Bassanio with Sir Henry Irving in his last appearance at the Lyceum Theater, London, as "Shylock." Lamar Johnston, one of the best known men of the motion picture stage, plays David Mann to Power's Mertzer, and the two make a very strong combination.

Elsie Ferguson in New Artcraft

The next Elsie Ferguson film to be released November 12, according to an announcement by President Walter E. Greene, of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, is a dramatization of "The Rise of Jennie Cushing," considered the best work of the well known author, Mary S. Watts.

"This second play of Miss Ferguson," says Mr. Greene, "presents the star in a radically different role than the last film, 'Barbary Sheep,' and was selected because of the wide range afforded to display her talent. It is a strong story, fearlessly discussing modern tendencies of society, and dealing with a question which is now being discussed throughout the world: What is our duty toward orphan children?

"In 'Jennie Cushing' there is a wealth of intensely human situations, which, with the marked ability of Miss Ferguson, are presented in a touching manner. Jennie is a child of the slums, of unknown parentage, who runs foul of the law when she nearly kills a street urchin, one of a gang she finds torturing a cat. She is sent to a reformatory, where she becomes obsessed with a desire to climb upward. Her exceptional beauty places her in dangerous situations. Her experiences have caused thousands, who have read the book, to weep at her misfortunes, and rejoice at her victories.

"In this film version, which makes the heroine of this famous book a living, breathing human being, in the form of Miss Ferguson, and under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, whose artistry is famous, a photoplay is presented which will be acclaimed as a great step forward in motion picture history."

In the cast supporting Miss Ferguson are Elliott Dexter, Fania Marinoff, Frank Goldsmith, Callie Delatorre, Mae Bates, Edith McAlpin, Isabel Vernon, Blanche Craig, James Cogan and Marie Burk.

Dustin Farnum and Winifred Kingston in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," a Fox special of October 28.

New Fox Special Picture Oct. 28

The star, the director, the leading woman, some of the supporting company and the photographer who filmed "The Spy," one of the biggest achievements in William Fox's Standard Pictures series, are factors in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," the Fox special feature which will be released October 28. Dustin Farnum, Winifred Kingston, William Burress and Howard Gaye are in both casts and Richard Stanton directed and J. Dev. Jennings photographed each of the pictures.

"The Scarlet Pimpernel" is a dramatization of Baroness Orczy's well-known book of the same name. The title is derived from a small English wild flower which was attached to letters that a mysterious individual wrote to the French Government during the reign of terror in 1792. Each of these letters was a notice that the Scarlet Pimpernel League has rescued another French nobleman whom the revolutionists had condemned to the guillotine. The story centers equally around the efforts to identify and capture the league leader and his devices to avoid detection. This picture was being made during the recent visit of Mr. Fox to his Hollywood, California, studios and it was while disguised for one of the several characters he portrays in the drama that Mr. Farnum so deceived Mr. Fox that the latter, thinking he was talking to an aged woman who was applying for work, offered the actor a position in the studio.

"Tough Luck and Tin Lizzies"

"Tough Luck and Tin Lizzies," is the title of the "Big V" comedy scheduled for release October 22 by Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph. It was written and directed by Lawrence Semon, who also plays the leading role, with Florence Curtis as the heroine and the "Big V" riot squad supplying the excitement.

"Tin Lizzies" play quite as important a part in the picture as the actors and Pietro Aramondo, one of the riot squad, has the unusual pleasure of supporting one of the Detroit chariots with his neck. His joy is increased when Larry starts the machine and has one of the rear wheels spin around on said neck.

This one-reeler, said to be one of the best Semon has produced, introduces some entirely original ideas in the way of smashing up automobiles and shows that brick walls, police stations and slippery pavements mean nothing in the lives of flivvers. They meet their Waterloo, as it were, in a ditch and the fade-out shows half a dozen machines gracefully draped over Semon and his company, while they struggle against drowning.

Fox's "Les Miserables" Completed

After months of what is probably the steadiest and most exacting work devoted to any photoplay production, William Fox's "Les Miserables," a photodramatic masterpiece from a masterpiece of fiction has been completed in the eastern studios. William Farnum, the star, who appears as the immortal Jean Valjean; Frank Lloyd, the director; most of those in the cast, and hundreds of "extra" players, stayed many times for eighteen or twenty hours a day at the studio, because of the scores of night scenes.

There is probably no figure in literature comparable to Jean Valjean, and there is no actor better equipped artistically as well as physically for the portrayal on the screen than William Farnum. Mr. Farnum's opportunity has been great, and his is a masterly interpretation of a masterly role—a characterization in which his thousands of admirers will like him best. A complete French village—the village of D———— —was built in a New Jersey valley.

Gladys Brockwell's new William Fox production, which Bertram Bracken is directing in California, will be released in November under title of "A Branded Soul."

The likeness of the small but all-powerful star shown above has been seen so often that it is unnecessary even to mention her name. Her Goldwyn plays are now pleasing picture patrons the country over.

Varied Promotion Possibilities

Goldwyn Outlines Publicity Campaign for Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley"—Some Unusual Opportunities to Appeal to Patrons

"THE Quaintest Play of a Quaint Actress" is perhaps the best descriptive line that may be applied in advertising the celebrated actress, Mae Marsh, in her new Goldwyn photoplay, "Sunshine Alley," from the story by Mary Rider. The vehicle was especially written to fit the capabilities of the star, and it is so close-fitting that one may describe it as the best play ever produced for the full display of the Mae Marsh talents. It is a production that is replete with human interest; and full opportunity is given to the little star to develop her part in her own inimitable way.

Star—Mae Marsh is known the country over as the "whim girl of the films." Everything she does is so invested with spontaneity that her work is refreshing to a marked degree, and nothing she does is in the least mechanical. She is known throughout the world as the bright particular star of "The Birth of a Nation" and of "Intolerance," not to forget a number of famous shorter screen features, among them "Man's Genesis," "Sands O' Dee," "A Wild Girl of the Sierras," "A Child of the Paris Streets," and many more. Above all, she is the star of Margaret Mayo's classic of the big tops, "Polly of the Circus," lately produced as a literal exhibitor gold mine.

Lobby—There is opportunity for much special lobby decoration on this release in the way of live or cut-out animals. An ambitious exhibitor might secure, either through some visiting attraction or through some lithograph agency, a number of poster pictures of animals that might be mounted on a compo-board backing, propped by a back brace, and silhouetted for use in odd corners about the lobby. Or the co-operation of some local furrier or taxidermist may be enlisted and small stuffed animals dressed in quaint clothes like human beings. They would be certain to attract considerable attention. Of course much should be made of the 22 x 28 photo-gelatine portraits of the star, which are available at all Goldwyn branch offices.

Special Co-operation—There is a tremendous publicity possibility in "Sunshine Alley" that must not be neglected by any exhibitor interested in increased profits; and that is the fact that, through the large part played in the production by animal actors, the active co-operation of the local S. P. C. A. or Audubon Society may be secured in their campaigns to teach kindness to birds and animals to all persons, young and old. In as much as this is the first screen contribution to their cause, they will doubtless do everything in their power to increase attendance at the local theater and prolong the engagement.

Newspapers — The above-mentioned angle will afford opportunity to all local newspapers and magazines for not only mention in the news columns, but also on editorial pages. The production is absolutely unique in this regard. In addition to this there is the vast quantity of publicity material in the present press sheet which may be secured in duplicate at the nearest Goldwyn branch office, designed to meet the requirements of all newspaper departments. There are also cuts and mats of varying sizes.

Other Accessories—For poster work there are two kinds of one-sheet, lithograph and rotogravure, admirably suited to uses in the lobby and about the theater premises. There are two kinds of litho three-sheets and a litho twenty-four. In addition to other accessories named in preceding paragraphs, there are also lobby "still" photographs, measuring 8x10 and 11x14. Star portraits are photo-gelatine, 22x28 and 8x10. Coming and current slides are available for projection purposes; electrotype cuts come in sets of five, single and double column; and there are also electro and matrice portraits of the star in varying widths. Music cues are also to be had on application to the nearest branch.

Catchlines—"The Quaintest Play of a Quaint Actress" has already been mentioned as admirable for advertising purposes. There may also be suggested, "The Screen's First Plea for Dumb Animals," and "The Romance of a Singing Bullfinch."

Mary Garden to Florida for Desert Scene

When the California motion picture director wants a desert, he whisks himself off a few miles across the state. When a Fort Lee, N. J., photoplay expert feels the need for sand, it's ho! for Florida; St. Augustine furnishes the nearest stretch of sun-bleached terra firma to the film capital of the east.

And so Mary Garden, the newest film star of Goldwyn, who has just started work on "Thais," is making a flying trip south this week accompanied by Directors Ballin and Crane, Cameraman Ables and his assistant, Assistant-Director Berthelon, a still photographer, a publicity man, sundry costumes and their custodians, a good-sized technical staff—and one actor.

The single film player to accompany Miss Garden is her leading man, Hamilton Revelle, who plays the monk, Paphnutius.

All told, these scenes might take some eight hours to "shoot." But because of their nature, Miss Garden and her entourage have had to set off on a thousand mile trip, at the end of which they will almost literally "walk right in and turn around and walk right out again."

Wooden Fleet Shown in "Reel Life"

The Southern Pine Association co-operated with the Gaumont Company in making a picture of the building of one of the new U. S. wooden fleet from the cutting of the monster pine and its conversion into lumber in the largest sawmill in the world, to the actual construction and launching of the largest freight and passenger steamship ever built in the South. More than 42 carloads, or 1,500,000 feet of yellow pine lumber were used in this ship. "Building Our Wooden Fleet," appears in No. 79 of "Reel Life," released November 1.

Social Adventure Drama

Adventure and romance follow fast upon the heels of each other in "The Lady in the Library," the eleventh release in the Falcon Features, being distributed by General Film Company. It is a social adventure which provides plenty of action.

Exhibitors Should Use Ad Service

Press and Advertising Material of Various Sorts Issued by Distributors to Aid Theaters in Keeping Crowds Coming

EXHIBITORS should be alert to the possibilities offered in the press and advertising sheets issued by the film companies on each feature picture. Those failing to take advantage of the wealth of material offered through this medium are neglecting an important phase of their business.

The majority of exhibitors, of course, are fully aware of the value contained in these sheets. They make every possible use of the suggestions, and derive much benefit and increased patronage as a result. We hear, however, of some theater owners who are neglecting to grasp the opportunity this service affords. It is to those we wish to talk.

THIS is the first of a series of articles on advertising service which will appear in MOTOGRAPHY from time to time. Watch for them.

The careful and complete publicity aids furnished by the various companies are not always thoroughly understood by theater managers. It is the object of these articles to make the workings of these services clear and to aid the exhibitor in making use of them to better his business.

Service is Free

In the first place, the service is absolutely free. It is an advertising service that, were the exhibitor required to pay for it, would be expensive, for it costs a lot to produce.

In the second place, the exhibitor could get no better advertising service at any price.

Take Essanay's service, for example. The men who produce the Essanay press sheets are Essanay staff men, and therefore are thoroughly familiar with their subjects. The reason the exhibitor could not pay for a service and get a better one is because these men are all highly trained experts, who know exactly what the newspapers require. For instance, the news stories that are offered for use in your local newspapers are written by men with many years' training on big city newspapers. They are expert writers, and their experience has taught them just what a newspaper will use and what it will not. The men who write the suggestions for advertising stunts and for newspaper display ads are expert advertising men, who have made their life work the business of attracting the attention of the public. They know just how to get up the snappiest ads, or to devise the best possible unique lobby or street advertising stunts.

Then the men who handle the cuts that are offered for use in your local newspapers and in your newspaper display ads. They were all in newspaper art work for years before being employed by Essanay. The average artist can't make what is known in newspaper circles as a "lay-out." It takes years of practice and skill. These Essanay artists know just what the newspapers want in cuts, and just how to prepare the pictures. The engravers then make the cuts with a screen suitable for newspaper work, in order that the very best results may be obtained.

Good Stuff Appeals to Newspapers

Many exhibitors are slow to realize the importance of having press matter just right when approaching the editor. If the stories are well written and the cuts according to newspaper standards, the editor will be favorably impressed from the start, and is sure to use the stuff. If, however, the stories are so poorly handled that the editor sees he must waste the time of a reporter to rewrite them, or if the cuts are too fine a screen, or not properly set off by a "lay-out," he is practically certain to reject the matter. Few newspapers are willing to spare the time of their reporters to accommodate exhibitors or press agents. Then there is another angle—the reader. While the reading public may not be able to tell you the technical difference between a well written story and a poorly written one, it is quick to distinguish between the two. A snappy, bright story, told in the fewest possible words by a trained writer, will have many, many times the pulling power of the story written about the same subject but by a dull, untrained writer. Your press matter must interest your public just as must your pictures. You wouldn't think of offering your patrons a picture that was a failure, yet the average exhibitor believes any kind of press matter is all right, just so it contains words and the name of the theater and the picture. The same thing is true of the pictures. The newspaper reader may not know that the screen is too fine, or that the picture looks dead because it is cut in a severe oblong or square instead of being ornamented by a neat "lay-out," but just the same it is apparent there is something wrong.

Patrons Observe Advertising

Exhibitors who scoff at the idea patrons notice such little things are mistaken. As an instance, read the following bit of conversation overheard by the writer recently in a surface car in Chicago. It was between two young matrons who had just read an exhibitor's ad in a newspaper.

"You know, I like the ——— theater awfully well," spoke the first. "It is so well regulated, and so neat and clean."

"Yes," spoke the second. "Even the ads show the kind of house it is. They are well written, neat and easily understood."

It seems to the writer that there is just one logical explanation of the failure of some exhibitors to take advantage of the possibilities in these Essanay service sheets. It is a matter of psychology. To the average mind anything that is free is not worth having. Take the same article and put a money value on it and the demand will jump immediately.

If you are one of the ones who have ignored the press sheets, just try using them for a couple of weeks and see if your business doesn't increase. It's worth trying.

Gladys Leslie Stars for Vitagraph

Miss Gladys Leslie has been signed for stellar roles by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, and will first be seen with Harry Morey in the Blue Ribbon Feature, "His Own People," which is being produced under the direction of William P. S. Earle.

Miss Leslie is a New York girl, and although she is only 18 years old, for three years of that time she has been in motion picture work. She was graduated from Washington Irving High School in 1914 and the day after Thanksgiving of the same year she was engaged by the Edison Company. She remained with Edison for a year, playing small parts, and then went to Thanhouser, where she played leads. One of her most notable characterizations was that of Sophia, in the "Vicar of Wakefield," in which Frederick Warde was featured.

Subsequently, Miss Leslie was starred in the Pathe-Thanhouser productions, "The Amateur Orphan" and "What Happened to Adele."

Miss Leslie is an Irish girl, a blonde of the Mary Pickford type, and looks a great deal like Miss Pickford. She belongs to the toy class of artists, being only 5 feet tall in her high heels and weighing but 95 pounds.

Like most New York girls who have had the Atlantic Ocean for their playground, Miss Leslie is an expert swimmer and diver. She also rides, shoots, dances like a dream, and in addition, is a splendid musician—a pianist and vocalist. She will be seen regularly in Blue Ribbon features.

"Lost Express" at Full Speed

Twenty-four sheets are going up from one end of the country to the other and newspapers are blazing forth with big display copy in every city where the serial has been booked as Mutual's co-operative advertising campaign on "The Lost Express," Helen Holmes' latest photonovel, gets under way.

"The Lost Express" was exploited by the Mutual, pioneers in serial distribution, on new and special co-operative advertising plan, by which the huge advertising appropriation which heretofore has been spent in one big shot at the time of the release of the first chapter, is being spent in individual cities where the picture is showing at the time it is showing.

Exhibitors Book from Motography

Editor Motography:

It may interest you to know that during my recent visit in Des Moines and other cities in Iowa I found that Motography has a good hold on the exhibitors there and they are booking the pictures boosted in your paper, in the "What the Pictures Did for Me" department.

One exhibitor told me he only booked the pictures printed with good reports in Motography.

Very truly yours, I. L. Lesserman, manager Laemmle Exchange, Chicago.

Griffith Has European War in Films

Returns from Battle Front With Camera History of Great Conflict—To Finish Big Story Here

D. W. GRIFFITH, the American producer, who has been abroad for seven months co-operating with the British war office in securing moving picture records of events on the French and Belgium battlefields, has arrived home.

Mr. Griffith modestly admits that he has brought back with him some official war pictures which are to be woven into a mammoth spectacle of the world conflict now raging in Europe and that he is indebted to the English government for its great aid in making it possible for him to get up to the front line of trenches with his camera men, but asked to be excused from commenting upon this phase of his work until it is completed. He is to work in an American finish to his story of the great war.

Asked for Battle Descriptions

The American producer looks none the worse for his dozen or more trips up to the front, or the several nights of aeroplane raids on London. Asked for some description of the battles he saw about Ypres, the American director who has guided thousands of mimic warriors in his spectacles said that any effort at personal description would be as futile as attempting to brush back the sea with a fan.

"Shakespeare, Hugo, Zola, in fact all the great descriptive writers of wars that have gone in the past would be unequal to the task of giving one an accurate idea of the things that daily happen 'out there,'" said Mr. Griffith. "You come away from it all with an imperishable recollection of depths of mud and vermin, of decay and stench and horror piled on horror, but also inspired by deeds that attain such heights of bravery and fortitude and heroic devotion to a cause that you wish everybody could know it and understand the spirit that is maintained behind those long lines. If this message could get through to every fireside there would be no question about the success of our Liberty Loans or our concerted efforts to see this war through to a finish. Every man, woman and child who cannot get over to the front would want to do his bit to succor those who are doing this heroic work."

"Were you able to get pictures of actual battle scenes and their attendant details as you describe them?" was asked.

"We got some wonderful scenes, but whether our cameras caught the spirit and the message of it all depends upon how our story turns out," was Mr. Griffith's reply. "You cannot work there without striving for this effect, however. Thanks to the assistance of the British officers at the front we caught actual scenes in the first line trenches and the surrounding panorama which often covered a view forty miles long and from ten to fifteen miles in depth. This is where the motion picture camera is going to be important in writing the history of this war. It is not within the limit of human possibility for a dozen pairs of eyes to grasp half of what takes place in a modern battle. No one man, not even the general in command, can see a tithe of it. But the camera has been perfected to such an extent that it possesses a thousand eyes and reaches out in every direction so that it can catch the grand panorama one instant and the next it can disclose a minute detail of the most illuminative and atmospheric 'close up.'"

New Lenses Aid Work

"What modern improvements did you find that assisted you most in this work?"

"The new French lenses with their fourteen-inch depths come first," was his reply. "You see they help materially in getting what are technically known as 'long shots' in motion picture work. Then also comes the gyroscope, a miniature combination of the aeroplane and box kite which is controlled by an electric wire from the field and which can be sent up a considerable height and get birdseye effects which a short time back would have escaped the most painstaking camera expert.

"In this way," continued the American director, "one is able to show a charge along a two or three mile front and also to picture the grim work in the mud holes called trenches close enough to reveal men actually wounded at their work or to see groups of two or three straining to toss hand grenades over the ridge to the opposite German line but fifty yards removed or to take a chance rifle shot through a three-inch aperture in the soggy wall—and all the time they are wondering how soon they can go forward to that obstructing wall of steel and fire and death only a few yards away. But they are ever going forward.

"It was wonderful work and more exciting than any drama you ever read of. I suppose because I am an American I was struck most by the unusual number of American boys I saw in the thickest of these frays. Until I got out to the front I had no idea of the flock of venturesome fellows from this land who had got over there through Canadian enlistment and were doing their bit. And feeling the lonesomeness of a stranger in a strange land it seemed to me that theirs was a task just a bit harder than the other fellow's, for our boys were strangers too and have been fighting heroically beside these messmates, but are now seasoned veterans and hold up their end as well as the best."

Ogden Copyrights Advertising Novelty

As a part of its exploitation campaign in connection with the Lillian Walker productions, the Ogden Pictures Corporation who have lately completed their initial release, "The Lust of the Ages," have devised an advertising novelty in the form of a film card in which is inserted tinted and toned cubes of positive films showing actual scenes from the production.

The idea of this novelty originated with Jesse J. Goldburg, the manager of productions for that company, who has made application to the copyright division of the patent office for a certificate of copyright on not alone that novelty but all novelties wherein positive film is used for similar purposes.

Mr. Goldburg when interviewed just prior to his departure for Chicago stated: "We shall issue in connection with each release a film card, the general design of which in each instance will be different, but the purposes for which it is used will be the same."

The film cards on "The Lust of the Ages" cost to make $1.32 apiece, each square of film being inserted separately and by hand.

Theaters Assist Registration

Theater men of Nashville, Tenn., have come to the front in assisting to make woman's registration day, on October 13, a complete success by offering their houses to parties representing patriotic women's civic bodies and social clubs. The local committee representing the Council of National Defense has arranged for representatives to appear at all moving picture houses during the week preceding registration day to give short talks in the interest of this patriotic move. Every manager in the uptown district readily gave his cooperation and the speakings have begun in an enthusiastic manner.

Big Fire in Mutual Weekly 147

The big fire in the Brooklyn elevators which destroyed grain intended for shipment to our allies was evidently of incendiary origin. Gaumont photographers rushed to the scene. The result will appear in No. 147 of the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly, released October 21.

Lighting Equipment at U. City Complete

$100,000 Worth of Electrical Apparatus Recently Added to Universal's Big Producing Plant on Coast

MORE than $100,000 worth of electric lighting apparatus has been added to the equipment at Universal City during the past few months.

Harry Brown, director of electricity for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at the big motion picture-making institution, when asked a few days ago as to the value of the present electrical equipment, said a conservative estimate would be $225,000.

The additional Cooper-Hewitt lamps, Winfield Turner and other arc lights, effect lamps, location wagons, etc., have been made necessary by reason of the fact that the advancement in the art of photoplay making has induced the directors to strive for new effects and many of the producers after long and tedious days of experimentation have discovered that artistic and striking results can be obtained by certain combinations of electric light with sunlight brought about by the use of numerous lamps.

It is not an unusual thing nowadays at Universal to see scarcely an open setting on the various outdoor stages—the directors enclosing the settings with the view of adding to the beauty of their pictures with lighting effects.

Director Brown now has a generator truck capable of 200,000 candle power, and which can readily be moved to locations.

Two new Triangle dramas: "Stainless Barrier," with Texas Guinan and "Indiscreet Corinne" with Olive Thomas.

Everyday Life in New Triangle Stories

Releases for October 28 Show Material in Every Day Life; Natural Characters in Plays of American Home Life

THE Triangle program for October 28 has a welcome message for exhibitors and patrons who have had too many screen representations woven around hair-raising thrills and highly polished careers not actually experienced by the majority of regularly living people. In "The Man Hater" and "The Stainless Barrier," the drama releases for this week, Triangle offers two picturizations of natural, every-day American life, with problems universal enough to make a ready appeal.

In the part of Phemie Sanders, the daughter of a man whose ideals do not center around his family hearth, Winifred Allen marries the stalwart young smithy of the village in order to escape her father's tyranny. She marries despite a firm conviction that men are beasts, to be hated and doubted in all their dealings with the other sex. Knowing that Phemie distrusts him simply because he is a man, Joe, the husband, is making a clumsy effort to arouse her jealousy when coincidence comes to his assistance in the person of a charming, flirtatious widow. The wife instinctively puts up a real fight for the possession which she had not prized until she faced losing it. With all her natural desire to monopolize the object of her love, she is very human in interfering in her husband's affair and confessing her love for Joe. Supporting Miss Allen, who is said to do her best work in this bright comedy-drama, are Jack Meredith as the husband, Marguerite Gale in the role of the dashing widow, and little Anna Lehr as one of the brood of happy youngsters who provide much wholesome amusement throughout the story. The story of the play is by Mary Brecht Pulver, and appeared in the Saturday Evening Post last June. Albert Parker directed the production under the supervision of Allan Dwan.

The chivalry of southern love and family honor are the theme of "The Stainless Barrier," a drama which treats of the sinister influence wealth may have over a struggling youth in the city. It is the story of an old-line family reduced in circumstances, the son going cityward in search of riches while his sister toils at home, faithful and devoted to the dream of the boy's success. The boy steers his course by false lights set up by a shyster promoter, and in his flight before the law, is trapped in a scheme which results in his murdering the man who used him as a tool to defraud his fellow citizens in the small town. Munition plants on paper and other wild cat schemes which loosen the conservative pocketbooks of business men to be found in any community give the plot a good human interest turn. The climax comes in the big court room scene when the girl's spirit of devotion and sacrifice impels her to forswear her honor on the witness stand in order to save the wayward brother from the gallows. A pretty love story winds its way through to the clearing of the girl's good name by her fiance, the district attorney.

Jack Livingston, who scored a success with Belle Bennett in "Ashes of Hope" after playing leading roles in "Ten of Diamonds" and "Flying Colors," previous Triangle plays, is the young attorney who believes in the girl's innocence; Irene Hunt is the daughter of the South; and Rowland Lee portrays the weakness of the wayward brother; Thomas S. Guise and T. Barney Sherry are other well-known Triangle players who are members of the supporting cast. The story by Louis Schneider was picturized by Jack Cunningham and directed by Thomas Heffron.

The Keystone comedy of the week, "His Disguised Passion," touches of war for its plot, dealing with an ambassador-inventor whose efforts to perfect a super-explosive are thwarted by three foreign spies whose mission is as mysterious as their movements. Bob Milliken as the suitor for the hand of the ambassador's daughter is heroically blown through a plaster wall while disguised as his prospective father-in-law. The situations throughout are said to be highly explosive from a laugh-bursting standpoint. Claire Anderson, Dora Rogers, Joe Callahan and Fritz Schade lead an all-star Keystone cast in the merry-making.

"Their Husband" and "Somebody's Wife" are one-reel Triangle Komedies supplementing the regular program features.

Hundred Million "O. Henry" Fans

Had O. Henry lived to celebrate his fifty-fifth birthday last month he would have had the pleasure of knowing that his works had reached the largest audience which has ever paid tribute to the genius of a short story writer. It has been six months since the first of the inimitable O. Henry stories were released in picture form, but in that time more than 100,000,000 persons have been entertained by some of the most delightful screen stories yet made known to Filmdom. This is almost twice the audience O. Henry's stories have reached to date in print, according to careful estimates prepared by book-sellers. Since the first O. Henry story was printed it is estimated approximately 60,000,000 persons have read them in book or magazine form.

Up to the present time thirty O. Henry stories have been issued in two and four-reel form through General Film Company. The series has reached the largest audience ever collected for a series of moving picture stories, branch managers and exhibitors estimating that the number of persons who have seen these stories in picture form is as large as the country's total population, or more than 100,000,000 persons. No film versions of popular short stories by the best American writers have ever created such a furore as the O. Henry subjects. Considering the fact that the thirty stories already screened comprises but a small portion of the O. Henry material which has been published, this record is marvelous, indeed. Then, too, it has required many years for the printed stories to reach the circulation credited to them, while the picturized stories have found an audience almost twice as large within the last few months.

International Situation Forms Theme

Why could not the United States, with the co-operation of her great ally, Japan, ship a couple of million men across the Pacific to the Russian front, there surprising and overwhelming the Germans? That, in a sentence, is the underlying plot of "The Secret Game" which will afford Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese star, his next Paramount vehicle.

Petrova and Exhibitors Circuit Campaign

At a conference between Frederick L. Collins, president of Petrova Picture Company, and the officers of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, arrangements were completed for a national advertising campaign destined to make the name "Petrova Pictures," and also the titles of the plays produced by Petrova Picture Company, household words throughout the United States.

The same list of approximately twenty-five national magazines, with a circulation of over fifty million readers, that have been used in the past for the exploitation of the motion picture productions allied with Superpictures Distributing Corporation, will be used. The personality of Madame Petrova lends itself particularly well to magazine exploitation, and, being a talented writer herself, her own contributions upon subjects relating to the silent drama will appear from month to month in The Ladies' World.

Independently of this magazine campaign a $50,000 newspaper campaign, nation-wide in scope, yet so localized that the full force of it will be concentrated on the first run theaters composing the First National Exhibitors Circuit, as well as on the theaters booking the pictures through the exchanges of the Circuit, will be used to exploit each Petrova Picture, and advertisements are now being prepared by the Circuit for its first picture, "Daughter of Destiny."

A billboard campaign covering the principal cities of the country will appear simultaneously with the magazine and newspaper campaigns.

The picture trade journals will continue to figure largely in the plans of Superpictures Distributing Corporation and Petrova Picture Company, since the universal interest aroused among exhibitors in the personal productions of Madame Petrova is attributed by the heads of the publicity departments of these companies to the trade paper publicity of the last few months.

Exhibitors' Organization in Northwest

"Associated Theaters, Inc." Elects Officers—Six Hundred Houses in Four States Lined Up in Movement

THE board of directors of "Associated Theaters, Inc.," held a three-days session in Minneapolis last week and elected the following officers to serve sixty-five days until the first general meeting of stockholders, December 17, 1917:

President—H. L. Hartman, of the New Palace Theater, Mandan, N. Dak.

Vice-President—Wm. S. Smith, of the Orpheum and Grand Theaters, Menominee, Wis.

Treasurer—Henry P. Greene, of the Lake, New Lake and East Lake Theaters of Minneapolis, and Hamline Theater of St. Paul.

Chairman of the Board of Directors—Charles W. Gates, of the Bijou Theater, Aberdeen, S. D.

Secretary and General Manager—T. J. Hamlin of Minneapolis.

The Bankers Trust and Savings Bank of Minneapolis was made trustee of the funds and also the depository for the organizing fund.

All the moneys already received from exhibitors for stock were turned over to this bank and the bank is pledged to return 80 per cent of this money to the individual exhibitors if the organization is not completed with six hundred theaters by February 28, 1918.

It was decided to incorporate under the laws of Minnesota and to strictly comply with the most stringent rules of the Federal Trade Commission and the various state "blue sky" boards.

Kerr, Fowler, Schmitt & Furber, the well-known firm of Minneapolis attorneys, was engaged to handle the legal business of "Associated Theaters, Inc."

It was decided, wherever possible to do so, to organize each town solidly and attempt by the advanced, simplified plan of marketing and distributing to save each exhibitor a big percentage on his present-day expense.

The organization now has 600 members in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin lined up.

Mr. Hamlin said: "This equitable cooperative and mutual form of organization, to be really successful, decided to conduct its business firmly, in a strict, cold-blooded, hard-boiled, thorough manner, besides doing away with the continual grief of the present-day method.

To Save Money for Exhibitors

"The new corporation will also save money for the exhibitors by having shorter express hauls through the very successful plan of installing various subinspection and shipping stations throughout the four states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota.

"The hundreds of exhibitors already members of this organization are already using Artcrafts, Art Dramas, Bluebirds, Butterfly, Christie Comedies, Edison, Essanay, First National Exhibitors Circuit, Fox, Famous Players, Goldwyn, General, Hearst-Pathe, Kleine, Kalem, K. E. S. E., Laemmle, L-KO Comedies, Mutual, Metro, Pathe, Paramount, Supreme, Select, Selznick, Triangle, Universal, Vitagraph, World, and the various states rights productions, and they will continue to do so if they choose regardless of whether they book through "Associated Theaters, Inc.," or book with each concern direct, as under the present system."

President Hartman has started out to spend three solid weeks in perfecting the organization through North Dakota.

C. W. Gates, chairman of the board of directors, started out Monday to spend three solid weeks perfecting the organization in South Dakota.

Secretary and General Manager Hamlin will concentrate on Minnesota, making short trips from the office when convenient.

Henry P. Greene, treasurer, will complete the organizing in the Twin Cities.

In Wisconsin, Vice-President Wm. S. Smith, of Menominee, will have Frank T. Busch to assist him.

With 35 live exhibitors in North Dakota, 25 live exhibitors in South Dakota, 45 live exhibitors in Minnesota, and 30 live exhibitors in Wisconsin, on the huge organization committee to augment the efforts of these officers and special representatives it is expected that the six hundred mark will be passed very shortly, so that the first general meeting will be held in Minneapolis December 17, 1917, to elect a board of directors and ratify the plans promulgated by the present officers, or making any changes that the stockholders as a whole may determine is necessary.

"No town is too small, or no city is too big to be thoroughly organized by 'Associated Theaters, Inc.,'" declared Mr. Hamlin.

Splendid New Paralta Story

The fine hand of a writer who has learned wisdom in the school of practical journalism is much in evidence in the entrancing story of "His Robe of Honor" which is now being made into a Paralta Play with Henry B. Walthall as the star.

The story is that of a leopard judge who changes his spots under the refining influence of a young society woman. The writers of the book are Ethel and James Dorrance, two brilliant newspaper people who have evidently taken the foundation of their story from incidents that have come to their notice while working for the press. James Dorrance, who has been referred to by the editors of the Munsey Magazine as "The Hoyle of Horrible Conditions," has had over twelve years journalistic experience on the New York Tribune and on Hearst's various publications, affording him many experiences such as are very seldom given to any one man. Ethel Dorrance, his wife, became a newspaper woman in the City of Washington, where her father was a member of the diplomatic circles, which allowed her entree to many places where the average journalist could not gain admission. After many experiences as a newspaper woman in the Nation's capitol, she decided to enter a broader field of literature and since that time has collaborated with her husband in writing a number of successful books and short stories which have attracted wide attention.

New Rental Plan Is to Be Launched

U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation to Buy and Distribute Special Pictures

AS the result of an exhaustive study, from the exhibitor's standpoint, of the cost of producing, distributing and playing of special state right productions, several well known exhibitors and distributors have formed the nucleus of a monster organization to attack the problem of supplying big expensive productions direct to the theaters without forcing them to pay rentals that include the usual profits demanded by manufacturers, middlemen and exchanges.

The founders of the new company have been preparing for their present move for many months. As exhibitors and distributors on a large scale, they decided upon a thorough investigation of the conditions which forced them to pay an especially high price for their films every time a worth while box office winner appeared on the market in spite of the fact that they were compelled to handle pictures at frequent intervals which were not as good as represented.

The result of their deeply studied operations, which now cover every angle of the business, is a million dollar company newly incorporated under the name of U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation with a thoroughly perfected plan of precedure which is said to be mapped out so carefully that next month will see it launched and doing business as smoothly as a veteran organization.

Twelve Productions Planned

Twelve special productions are planned for the first year, their selection being entrusted to a committee on which exhibitors and exchange men are equally represented. The pictures considered by this "committee of selection" will not only number all productions that appear on the state rights market, and thus claim the distinction of being above the standards set by the regular program releases, but will also include the special efforts of well known directors who contract in advance to make exceptional features for outright sale to the organization.

By purchasing the world rights for cash and not selling territorial rights to separate buyers, it is planned to eliminate the usual long drawn out selling campaign with the extra profits involved in separate deals which the exhibitor is finally forced to pay. A further saving to the exhibitor is planned by limiting the producer's profit to the difference between the cost of production and the selling price for cash instead of having his interest continue during the life of the picture with the usual influence exerted by producers receiving a percentage of bookings. Something new is promised from the distribution angle. Exchanges now firmly established and doing business will be used to care for the prints of the new organization.

A representative of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation located in each territory will take complete charge of the company's business, using the exchange for his headquarters, but working under complete instructions from the main office in New York. He will oversee the maintenance of a carefully figured out one-price rental schedule, one of the main features of which will be the ability of each exhibitor to work out the cost of the picture for his particular theater. The U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation's representative will, according to the new plan, be in reality each exhibitor's personal representative in the exchange handling the new corporation's productions.

Prices will be governed by the population of the city, the number of theaters, the capacity of the theaters, the number of days run and the preference of the run. The schedule will be open to investigation by the exhibitor with the representative's assistance in determining equitable rental prices.

Frank Hall, president and general manager of the new company, has announced as the organization's first release the big Thomas H. Ince spectacle, "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," which is to be followed by a Bessie Barriscale production.

Two New Select Exchanges

Two new exchanges have been established by the Select Pictures Corporation and opened for work October 15. These are the Detroit exchange and the Select exchange at Cincinnati. Sam E. Morris, who is the manager of the Cleveland branch, has been achieving great results in selling Select pictures, and has been given supervision of Detroit territory in addition to Cincinnati, which was already controlled by him.

For branch manager in Detroit, Mr. Morris has secured W. D. Ward, one of the very best known exchange men in the state of Michigan. The Detroit exchange is located at 906-907 Peter Smith Building.

Another re-mapping of territorial district has been made necessary by the recent establishment of the St. Louis exchange under the management of E. W. Dustin. St. Louis now handles business in southern Illinois and western Kentucky, territory formerly written through the Chicago office.

"Mother" for Welfare League

A touch of sentimental interest is loaned to the request received by General Enterprises, Inc., from Edward J. Meagher, chairman of the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing, for a showing of "Mother" to the inmates of the Ossining institution.

The feature, recently produced by George Loane Tucker and starring Elizabeth Risdon, deals strongly with the subject of mother-love, showing the influence of a loving heart over an erring son whose strong passions finally lead him to a prison cell.

Meagher touches upon this factor in his letter of request, stating that "Mother" is bound to exert an influence for good on the entire prison body, adding that the inclination of the "shut-in" lean strongly to films of a sentimental and appealing nature.

"Mother" was screened for the Mutual Welfare League members on October 17.

Jack Cunningham, well-known Triangles scenario author, has just started work on the screen adaptation of a new story, "Betty Takes a Hand," in which Olive Thomas, former Follies favorite, will be starred.

Extraordinary Pathe War Film

On November 11, Pathe will release a five-reel special, "France in Arms," which enjoys the distinction of having received from each of the eighteen members of the Pathe film committee the highest rating possible. This rating is all the more impressive when it is learned that this is the only picture which has ever been unanimously accorded such a rating by the committee.

"France in Arms" is a great picture. It was taken by the cinematographic section of the French army and, as its name indicates, illustrates every side of the gigantic effort which France has made to thrust back the German invader from her soil.

Strand Gives Benefit

There will be a benefit performance at the Strand Theater of New York for the Seaside Home for Crippled Children, Friday, November 13. The management has donated the theater for the occasion.

"Narrow Trail" Hearing Postponed

THE motion for a preliminary injunction in the case of the New York Motion Picture Corporation against Artcraft Pictures Corporation and others to restrain the latter from presenting the initial Ince-Hart feature, "The Narrow Trail," in New York State has been adjourned until October 25, when arguments will be heard in the New York Supreme Court.

The suit, which has aroused much interest and speculation in moving picture circles because of the vital contractual issues involved, resulted in the granting of a temporary injunction suppressing the picture in New York State. Through its attorneys, Martin W. Littleton and Walter N. Seligsberg, the plaintiff charged that the defendants, notably Thomas H. Ince, have interfered with its business, and asked the court for special relief in the case of "The Narrow Trail." It was alleged that Mr. Ince contracted for the services of C. Gardner Sullivan, Lambert Hillyer, and many other employes of the New York Motion Picture Corporation while acting as general manager of the company prior to July 1, 1917, and then when he severed his connection he induced many of these employes to break the contracts which on behalf of the company he had previously induced them to make.

The original plea cited C. Gardner Sullivan's contract as one which had not expired when Ince withdrew. Although he continued to work for the plaintiff, it is alleged that he also accepted a staff position with the Ince organization, and wrote the scenario of "The Narrow Trail," the first Hart feature produced by Ince for Artcraft, while thus dually employed. Hillyer is also said to have directed the production, and Sylvia Bremer acted in it, while both of them were under exclusive contract with the plaintlff.

All bookings in New York State including the Rialto Theater, New York City, were automatically cancelled by the temporary injunction granted October 11.

Sees Boom for Pictures

Looking into the future, M. H. Hoffman, president and general manager of Hoffman-Foursquare Pictures, sees advantages accruing to the picture industry through the announced intentions of legitimate theater managers to raise the prices for seats.

According to Mr. Hoffman, the plan of New York managers to charge $2.50 for seats previously sold for $2, raising in proportion all other seats (upstairs as well as down), is certain to send thousands of new patrons into the picture houses. More than that, Mr. Hoffman declares that what holds true of New York will come to pass throughout the country.

"The picture," said Mr. Hoffman, "is esentially designed for the masses. I have always felt that while many thousands of people who go to the legitimate drama also feel interested in the motion picture, that they form the smaller percentage of the total patrons who go regularly to picture theaters.

"But now that legitimate theater managers feel it necessary to increase their seat prices from 20 to 25 per cent, I cannot refrain from speaking my thoughts that nothing better for pictures could have occurred. I believe I am right when I say that immediately this change of prices in the so-called 'regular' theaters goes into effect, that the motion picture exhibitor will find his business jumping forward."

New Mystery in "The Lost Express"

"The Race with the Limited," Chapter VII of "The Lost Express," the new fifteen chapter Mutual-Signal photonovel starring Helen Holmes, brings a new complexity into the already complex mystery story—the fight for possession of the Thurston gold mine.

The photonovel, nearing half completion, now involves the mystery of the lost express, the puzzle of the secret formula for granulating gasoline, a fight for control of the Thurston oil fields and plots and counter-plots, and now comes a battle for control of the rich gold vein.

Helen Holmes in the midst of one of her thrill producers in "The Lost Express."

"The Lost Express" requires the most hazardous and thrilling acting of her career from Helen Holmes, the fearless star of adventure drama and with the last few chapters of the picture well under way at the studio, she is still unhurt. Director McGowan has some wild stunts outlined for the last chapter but Helen is so certain that fate is on her side that she is sure she will live to furnish thrills to the great American public for some years to come.

Harvey B. Day Joins Select

The Pittsburgh exchange of Select Pictures Corporation will be under the charge of Harvey B. Day after this week. Mr. Day is an old campaigner in the Pittsburgh territory, and in becoming manager of Select's Pittsburgh exchange he is returning to the scene of former emphatic successes.

Mary Garden Works for Goldwyn

MARY GARDEN, prima donna of three continents and a score of opera houses, is at last a film actress. She has met the camera and it is hers.

The meeting took place under the huge glass roof of Goldwyn's Fort Lee, N. J., studio. It was entirely amicable. In fact, it produced the pleasantest impressions on both sides. The camera recorded about 3,000 feet of striking photography. Miss Garden confesses to much genuine satisfaction and just one surprise—Hector, lion cub, of whom later.

Scene from Goldwyn's production of "Thais," with Mary Garden.

From the moment when Miss Garden left her car in front of the studio, with her Paris costumes in her handbag for the day's work, to the moment when she rubbed the last bit of movie make-up off her face with cocoa-butter, the prima donna recorded not one of the routine thrills or emotions which every well-conducted accession to screen-stardom has laid claim to. She did not feel a spinal upheaval when the director said, "This is the picture," and she saw the camera crank turn for the first time. She did not experience that vague sensation of vacantness which every well-informed novice says she experiences at the absence of the audience. Miss Garden plowed through the script, steadily, scene after scene, until Director Ballin and Crane called a halt around five o'clock; and as for an audience, Miss Garden confessed at luncheon that she hadn't known whether the camera man was alone behind the lights, or—as it happened—a dozen people watched curiously and not a little rapturously the conquest of a new artistic medium by a woman whose artistry in her own chosen field is a byword the world over.

Characteristically, the motion pictures started Miss Garden at the end of "Thais" and before the day was out she had worked back to scenes somewhere near the beginning.

Essanay's November Chaplin

The third of the popular new edition of Charlie Chaplin's best work has been completed by Essanay and will be released on November 10, through General Film Company. The popular comedian this time appears in "By the Sea," undoubtedly the favorite one of his Essanay pictures. The facility with which Charlie's feet lead him into mirth-provoking troubles makes this release a scream of fun from start to finish. Any exhibitor will recognize in "By the Sea" a subject that is the "open seasame" to the hearts of any Chaplin admirer.

The new edition of Chaplin's pictures are demonstrating the enduring popularity of good comedies and are in fact setting a sensational mark in film history.

The next World-Picture Brady-Made in which June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley assume the star roles is "Broken Ties."

Memphis Theaters Win Out

Judge Hands Down Decision Which Permits Theaters to Open Sundays—Proceeds to Go to Charity

By J. L. Ray

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—After a fight extending over a period of many months, the doors of the Memphis theaters are again open on Sunday—this time to stay. City Judge P. W. Lanier, in an opinion handed down Saturday, October 6, held that the moving picture theaters and vaudeville houses of the city may operate legally on Sunday if they continue to follow the course pursued prior to the latest outbreak of the agitators of Sunday closing, i. e., by donating their net profits to charity.

Judge Lanier's decision straightened out the Sunday closing tangle, which has long been the source of much agitation and political strife in Memphis. The decision as rendered will oblige the police department to maintain a strict "hands off" policy when the shows open on Sunday. After hearing the test cases against James B. Amis, Judge Lanier handed down his opinion. Manager Amis was arrested September 30, three times in succession following the sale of tickets to his house. He was the only theater manager attempting to show on that day, as per agreement among the managers. Police orders transmitted from Mayor Litty caused the arrest of Manager Amis. The three cases against the defendant were released after the court's decision.

The petition to the court was made by the theater men on the grounds that in operating the shows for charity on Sunday, no law was violated, it having been decided by the court that there was no doubt that the profits of the Sunday exhibitions were being turned over to the Associated Charities. Those of a skeptical turn of mind who wondered why the theaters should desire to operate on Sunday if they are obliged to donate their profits to charity are answered by the amusement men with the explanation that the seven days' operation helps to cut down the overhead expenses, most of which continues regardless of whether the theaters are dark or open. Salaries, rent, picture rights and other expenses must be paid even though the houses be closed on Sunday. Especially is this true with combination moving picture and vaudeville houses, owing to the fact that the performers on the various circuits are paid the same for six days' work as for seven.

A special committee from the Associated Charities appointed to see that all profits came to their organization included Messrs. J. L. Rawlings, Milton Binswinger and M. H. Rosenthal. This committee will be asked by Mayor Litty as to the manager's fairness to them and their willingness to confirm their claim. And at last the end of the rumpus started by the morality agitators seems to be in sight.

Triangle Ahead of Release Dates

Nine directors and their companies are at work on new pictures, six plays have been completed and are ready for shipping, and three directors are waiting for new stories at the Triangle Culver City studios, where the fall offensive recently launched is pushing ahead of all former production records.

Melodramas, comedy dramas and westerns are on the current production schedule, which includes the work of some of the most talented scenario authors in the business.

Many new players have been added to the already large force at the Culver City studios during the past week and two new directors, Frank Borzage and C. P. Hamilton, have started pictures. Word has been passed down the line that no expense is to be spared in making the pictures now under way measure up to the Triangle standard in every particular.

---

Margery Wilson, Triangle star, who has been enjoying a vacation since the completion of her picture, "Wild Sumac," a story of the Canadian woods and the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, is back at the Culver City studio and has been cast in the leading role in Director E. Mason Hopper's new play, "Bearing Her Cross."

---

Fun-Art Film, Inc., have just completed their first two reel comedy in which the Dooleys, Ray and Gordon, are being featured. It is called "A Rag, a Bone and a Hank of Hair."

"Thais" to All Goldwyn Exhibitors

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation makes an announcement of tremendous interest to exhibitors everywhere with the definite statement that its remarkable production, "Thais," in which Mary Garden, America's most famous woman, makes her screen debut, will be delivered to all contract customers of Goldwyn at no advance in prices above what they pay for all other Goldwyn Pictures.

"Thais," well under way in the Goldwyn Fort Lee studios, will be released throughout North America on December 30, and will lift the receipts of all theaters playing it to record levels.

Goldwyn's action in making a quarter of a million dollar production of this magnitude and fame with one of the greatest of all stars and then releasing it to all regular Goldwyn contract customers at no advance in rental prices is unprecedented in the picture industry. This news will come as a welcome surprise to all Goldwyn customers, for at no time since Miss Garden signed her contract had any word issued from the company as to the prices or showmanship conditions surrounding her picture.

George Beban's Next

"Jules of the Strong Heart," adapted from a story in Collier's by Wm. Merriam Rouse, will be George Beban's next Paramount picture. Under direction of Donald Crisp, Mr. Beban has prepared to leave for Northern California and will probably go as far north as the Lasky lumber plant, at Hoquiam, Wash., to film the exterior scenes for this virile story.

"Daughter of Destiny"

PETROVA Picture Company has announced that the name of the first Petrova Picture will be "Daughter of Destiny."

The selection of this long-awaited title was made after a series of tests which, in the opinion of Madame Petrova and Mr. Frederick L. Collins, president of Petrova Picture Company, assures its popularity with both exhibitors and the public.

The method by which "Daughter of Destiny" was chosen is unique in the art of selecting motion picture titles. Twenty-five titles were proposed—some by Madame Petrova and her staff, some by the officers of Petrova Picture Company, and the remainder by officers of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, through the exchanges of which "Daughter of Destiny" is to be distributed. A list of these titles was then submitted to the members of the circuit, with the request that each select what he considered the most appealing and attention-getting title. "Daughter of Destiny" was chosen by a large majority—and since its selectors are men who know the box-office value of a good title, Petrova Picture Company believes that another important step has been accomplished to make its pictures not only artistic successes but money-makers for the men who exhibit them.

"Daughter of Destiny"' is now completed, and Director George Irving is cutting and titling it. At a private showing arranged by Mr. Collins for Mr. Rothapfel and other officers of the circuit, Madame Petrova was warmly congratulated and it was enthusiastically predicted that the picture would fulfill every promise made for it.

First Petrova Picture

"Daughter of Destiny" pictures the romantic career of a beautiful American girl. Her father is an American ambassador whose embassy is set in a hotbed of European intrigue. The girl soon finds herself entangled in a web of diplomacy, and her love affairs have a way of tangling themselves, too. Through many exciting adventures she holds true to her American ideals, and in the end, through sheer Yankee pluck, emerges triumphantly.

Madame Petrova will begin work at once on the production of her next picture. This picture, like the first, will be made at the Biograph Studio on 175th street. The director and staff for the second picture will be announced shortly.

Gerrard Again With Universal

The name of Douglas Gerrard was recently added to the Universal roster of directors. Gerrard, it will be recalled, was formerly associated with the Big U organization in the capacity of director, acting leading roles for some time before his promotion to a directorship.

During his former affiliation with the Universal Company Gerrard filmed a number of artistic productions, one of the most notable being "Polly Put the Kettle On." He will begin work in a few days on a five-reel picture entitled "Madame Spy," the story of which was written by Lee Morrison. The leading characterizations will be in the hands of Miss Edith Roberts and Jack Mulhall, who will be supported by a cast composed of the best talent among the stock players at Universal City.

"The Public Defender" Commended

"The Public Defender," which was recently completed by Harry Raver and which is now ready for distribution, has been accorded the honor of a special report by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. The Board of Review is noted for its conservatism and its appreciation of "The Public Defender," as contained in the report appended below therefore possesses a genuine significance for the exhibitor who is interested in securing the strongest screen attractions the market affords.

A summary of the board's report designates the entertainment value as "good," educational value "good," narrative "good," acting "good," photography "good," atmospheric quality of scenic setting "good" and moral effect "good."

The report finishes with the following general comment: "As a story it is full of human interest and makes a tense dramatic appeal. 'The Public Defender' is a fine example of a photoplay with a purpose."

"The Public Defender" is based on the story of the same name and in book form has reached a circulation of over two hundred thousand copies. It was written by Mayor C. Goldman and Frank W. Harris. The screen version, which presents a trio of stars in the persons of Frank Keenan, Alma Hanlon and Robert Edeson, while only two weeks old, shows every evidence even at this early date, of rivaling the book in point of popularity.

Caprice Release Again Delayed

June Caprice's black eye has caused a further postponement of one week in the release of "Miss U. S. A.," the Fox Special Feature which was to have been available for exhibitors on October 28. The expectation originally had been that the photographing of the drama would be completed in time for release October 21, and the date was fixed accordingly. As the final work was being done, however, Miss Caprice suffered a fall during the filming of a fight scene, with the result that her eye was blackened and it was necessary to delay completion of the picture.

The discoloration persisted longer than had been expected and it is now announced that the release date has been set forward to November 4. The picture will take the place on the November program that had been assigned to Dustin Farnum in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," which has been advanced for October 28 release.

The Last of "The Deemster"

Colonel William E. Condell and Nathan Greenfield, of Shreveport, Louisiana, owners of the Liberty Feature Film Company, with headquarters at Shreveport and branches in New Orleans and Dallas, have purchased the rights to Hall Caine's "The Deemster" for the states of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma from the Arrow Film Corporation. This block of territory winds up the United States rights to this famous novelist's production and proves that a great picture properly handled will unquestionably find responsible buyers in every section.

Mutual Features Goodrich and Minter

Schedule for Week of October 29 Is Headed by "A Daughter of Maryland" and "Peggy Leads the Way"

EDNA GOODRICH and Mary Miles Minter top Mutual's schedule of releases for the week of October 29, Miss Goodrich in "A Daughter of Maryland" and Miss Minter in "Peggy Leads the Way," both five-reel productions. The week's list includes two comedies and two topicals.

Edna Goodrich at her Best

"A Daughter of Maryland" is the third of the series of Mutual star productions featuring the beautiful Miss Goodrich. It provides her with a role admirably suited to her talents and she has done it so well that it has been pronounced by those who have seen it to be one of the best hits of acting in which Miss Goodrich ever appeared.

Edna Goodrich in "A Daughter of Maryland."

The picture casts Miss Goodrich as a proud and haughty southern girl. It provides opportunity for her to get into the picture the little mannerisms which have made her famous on two continents. The production was directed by John B. O'Brien and an especially notable cast was selected to support the star.

Miss Minter Displays Charm

"Peggy Leads the Way" is one of the most delightful pictures in which the charming Mary Miles Minter has appeared in many months. Miss Minter is cast as the daughter of a poor but indulgent father, who runs a one-horse store in a country town and lives in poverty to keep his daughter in a fashionable boarding school.

The child, kept away from home for years, finally spends her vacation allowance for a trip home and discovers the exact state of affairs. Whereupon "Peggy" begins to clean house, drive out the "sit and sit" club and help reestablish the family fortunes. In the meantime, she falls in love with a rich young blood and her career in storekeeping ends in a romance.

The picture was directed by Lloyd Ingraham. Ashton Dearholt plays the leading role with a capable supporting cast.

Helen Holmes Races Train

Helen Holmes engages in an exciting automobile race with a passenger train in "The Race with the Limited," Chapter VII of "The Lost Express," the new Mutual-Signal photonovel, scheduled for release in first-run houses on October 29.

"The Lost Express" is a mystery story of engrossing proportions. It involves the disappearance of an express train, a secret formula for granulating gasoline and a secret and rich gold vein in a mountain mine.

Billie Rhodes in New Comedy

The comedy releases of the week are "A Two-Cylinder Courtship," one of the happy one-reel comedies starring pretty Billie Rhodes, and "Jerry's Lucky Day," a one-reel Cub, starring George Ovey. In "A Two-Cylinder Courtship," Miss Rhodes is supported by Jay Belasco. Its release date is October 30. The release date of "Jerry's Lucky Day" is November 1.

Reel Life No. 79 is released November 1. It shows pictures of the construction of America's new wooden fleet, pictures important industries in Argentina and a dry land periscope. Mutual Weekly, the regular news reel carrying pictures of the news up to date of release, comes to the screen on October 31.

"How It Happened" is the third of the new series of Jaxon Comedies being issued through General Film Company.

Vitagraph Wins Anita Stewart Suit

Justice Whitaker, New York Supreme Court, Decides in Favor of Producing Company

THE Vitagraph Company of America has won its case against Anita Stewart and Louis B. Mayer of Boston.

Justice Edward G. Whitaker, in Part 1, of the Supreme Court of New York, handed down a decision granting the plea of Albert E. Smith, president, and the Vitagraph Company, enjoining Miss Stewart and Mr. Mayer, which prevents her from acting for any corporation or individual other than the Vitagraph Company. The defendents were also restrained from advertising or announcing that Miss Stewart is to work for any other company or individual, and Louis B. Mayer was specifically enjoined from "enticing, inducing or causing the defendant, Anita Stewart, to fail or refuse to work in the employ of the plaintiff."

Ruling Is Important

This decision is one of the most far reaching ever handed down in the motion picture industry and marks the first successful effort of a manufacturer to hold a big star to a contract when the latter sought to get away.

Justice Whitaker's decision was handed down after both sides had presented voluminous affidavits and complete arguments in court.

The court made an oral decision.

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, when told of Justice Whitaker's action said:

"This action is a business proposition with us and was started as a matter of self-protection. Miss Stewart's services we regard of extreme value to us, and in view of the vast amount of money that we have spent in making her the popular favorite that she is, we intend to retain her services. Also, there is the broader principle involved of the relation of players and producers and in this case we hope to establish for all time that contracts of motion picture stars with their employers are just as valid and binding as any other form of contract.

"Personally, we have only the kindest of feeling towards Miss Stewart, but we mean to prevent any other person from enticing her or any other star away from the Vitagraph Company so long as they are under contract to us."

This is the second decision rendered in favor of the Vitagraph Company in this case, a temporary restraining order having been granted to it by Justice George Mullen, in the New York Supreme Court, on September 6.

Legal Talent Is High Class

In the arguments on the case the Vitagraph Company was represented by Samuel Seabury, formerly Judge of the New Court of Appeals, and Democratic candidate against Charles S. Whitman for Governor of New York in 1916. Judge Seabury acted for the firm of Seabury, Massey and Lowe, of which his brother, William M. Seabury, formerly attorney for the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, is a partner. The defendants were represented by Moses L. Malevinsky and J. Robert Ruben.

Judge Seabury, in his argument before Justice Whitaker, denied in full all of the allegations made by Miss Stewart in her answer to the Vitagraph suit. He contended that the Vitagraph Company had fulfilled its contract in every way and held that the charges made by Miss Stewart as to non-performance were untenable. Mr. Malevinsky combatted these arguments with others based chiefly on a letter written by Miss Stewart on June 8 last in which she notified the company that she intended to sever her connection with it.

Anita Gets $127,000 a Year

One thing revealed by the suit was that Miss Stewart, under the terms of her contract with the Vitagraph Company, was guaranteed a salary for a year at $127,000.

In the original bill of complaint, Vitagraph told the history of Miss Stewart's connection with the company, starting in with her first appearance at the studio in Brooklyn in August, 1912. At that time, it was declared, Miss Stewart was untutored in acting or posing and her salary was not more than $25 a week. She was schooled along, however, and her natural talent, combined with an enormous expenditure for advertising, said by the company to amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars, soon made her one of the most popular motion picture stars in the world. Thus, when it came to the point of making a new contract last January, Miss Stewart was provided with a fixed salary of $1,000 a week and royalties of 10 per cent on all her productions, these royalties being guaranteed to be not less than $75,000 a year.

Newspapers Laud Fox's "Cleopatra"

William Fox's spectacular cinema version of "Cleopatra," with Theda Bara as the Siren of the Nile, set new standards in film sumptuousness. This is the gist of the critics' opinions on the new photodrama which Mr. Fox presented at the Lyric Theater in New York City.

Following are excerpts from the critiques:

"The picture was produced with gorgeous effects, settings and costumes, and is photographed with pictorial beauty."—New York World.

"'Cleopatra' is so big that one is completely overwhelmed. The spectacle simply beggars description. The photoplay is the greatest of all film spectacle plays. Flawless in its settings, magnificent beyond compare, and the performance of Miss Bara is at all times vastly interesting. Never has she looked so regally beautiful, and if the original Cleopatra was just half so lovely, we do not blame Antony for renouncing Rome."—New York Tribune.

"An uncommonly fine picture. It is the finest sort of film and the fans are certain to flock to it. It is a triumph for the director, too."—New York Times.

"The scenes were so gorgeous that they brought continued applause. Miss Bara gives a striking performance in a luxurious production. She is probably the first actress to play the role whose eyes looked the part. Needless to say, the photography and other technical points are above criticism."—New York Telegraph.

"'Cleopatra' is a production with no detail omitted that plenty of money and a great deal of effort could supply."—New York Globe.

"Destined to win success. An ideal Theda Bara role."—New York Evening Sun.

"Pageantry is inspiring. Miss Bara's impersonation quite up to expectations."—New York Evening Mail.

MOTOGRAPHY presents a complete review of "Cleopatra" on another page in this issue.

Triangle Vice-President Joins Colors

Charles M. Parker, vice-president of the Triangle Film Corporation, sailed for France last week to enter upon his duties as business manager of the Pershing expeditionary forces. He has been commissioned a Captain by President Wilson.

Mr. Parker's place of departure was designated as "An American Port," and it has not been possible to learn further details of the part he will play in the nation's tremendous war undertaking, aside from the fact that he has been officially named "Industrial Commissioner of the American army in France." Mr. Parker has never been active in political circles, although always a staunch supporter of the Wilson administration. His new office entails no political responsibilities.

For several years Mr. Parker has been recognized as one of the country's most able young financiers. He is a director and official of many eastern industrial concerns, among them the American Steam Radiator Corporation. In accepting the army appointment he gave up all of his extensive private financial interests in order to serve the country.

Mr. Parker's home is in New York, although for the past few years he has spent a considerable part of each year at the Triangle's large producing plant at Culver City, Calif.

Keystoners Preparing to Move

The entire personnel of the Triangle-Keystone studios, which includes over one hundred and fifty players, cameramen, writers, et cetera, are anxiously looking forward to "moving day." Although no official word has yet been received it is rumored that the comedy plant will be moved to the Triangle Film Corporation's studios sometime this month or as soon as the mammoth new 304 by 80 foot stage is completed at Culver City.

Many of the players now live near the Triangle-Keystone studios in Holly wood, and it is very likely that most of them will move to Culver City or one of the many beach resorts which are only a few minutes ride from the Culver City plant. Players seem to agree that one of the best things about working in pictures on the Coast is the long bathing season.

Frank Beresford Triangle Editor

Frank Beresford, prominent both in the theatrical and picture world, has been made 'script editor of the Triangle Film Corporation's scenario department of the Culver City studios.

News of State Rights Productions

THE LATEST FROM ALL OVER THE INDEPENDENT FIELD

Noble Says Trust Is Impossible

WITH his first big special production, "Shame," ready for the screen, John W. Noble has just completed a study of conditions surrounding the marketing of pictures and reached conclusions of interest to independent producers.

"Directors are so engrossed in the making of pictures that they seldom have a chance to study the problems which confront the distributors of their product," said Mr. Noble.

"'Where is your market?' is the first question put to the director who contemplates producing independently. He is confronted with arguments that would convince him that unless he can arrange for distribution through an established system of exchanges his production is destined to never see the light of a carbon. He is informed of the existence of a mighty trust which is rapidly tying up all the stars in the theatrical firmament and making it impossible for other producing and distributing organizations to make a living. He is shown the impossibility of realizing even the cost of his production unless he is fortunate enough to induce this trust to accept it. The strange part of it is, these advisers are sincere in their beliefs and are giving him what they consider friendly advice.

"It reminds me of my old theatrical days. A trust really looked possible then. But just about the time that one organization seemed to be gaining control of the theaters another stepped in and the fight went merrily on. A theatrical trust was impossible then and the motion picture has added to the difficulties of would-be trust builders to such an extent that a combine to control the industry is absolutely out of the question now. Motion picture production can never be controlled by a few powerful organizations.

"I have sized up the situation thus: Any producer who stages an exceptional picture that will appeal to the masses and attract them to the box office is assured a handsome return on his investment. But beware of an 'average' production. The standard is high and the 'open market' demands the best."

Mr. Noble's production, "Shame," with Zena Keefe as the star, is announced for early presentation by Jules Burnstein.

U. S. Exhibitors' Corporation Buys Plays

Of widespread interest to exhibitors the country over is the announcement that "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," Thomas H. Ince's great spectacle, produced while the famous master of lights and shadows was yet affiliated with the Triangle Film Corporation, has been purchased outright by the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, a recently formed organization of prominent exhibitors and distributors, of which Frank Hall is president and general manager and William Oldknow, a prominent Southern film man, secretary and treasurer.

The Ince picture, which rivals in point of scenic effects and dramatic power "Civilization," Mr. Ince's first great spectacle, will be the first production released by the company whose purpose is to alleviate some of the troubles that now harass the exhibitors of the country, big and small.

The second picture to be released by the company at an early date will be "Those Who Pay," in which Bessie Barriscale is featured. Other productions of similar quality will be announced in the near future.

Ernest Shipman Moves

Ernest Shipman has established permanent New York headquarters on the eighth floor of 17 West 44th Street, just off Fifth Avenue, where the needs of the independent producers will be cared for, and their pictures exploited to the buyers of the United States and Canada.

All foreign sales will be made through the efficient system established by Chester Beecroft, who has but lately returned to America after establishing offices at 40 Fleet Street, London, and in other prominent distributing points.

But four blocks north, situated at No. 316 East Forty-eighth Street, are the art laboratories and studios, under the personal supervision of Edmond Kuhn, who served in a similar capacity for William Fox, one year, and the Vitagraph Company six years.

Ernest Shipman has secured this property under a long time lease, in order to care for the needs of the independent producers, and is now fully equipped to cooperate on all angles of manufacture from the studio to the screen. Mr. Shipman's organization for exploitation and sales is producing most excellent results, and his affiliation with Chester Beecroft insures the most profitable returns from abroad.

Art Rosson with Fairbanks

Closely following the announcement that Allan Dwan had been engaged to alternate with John Emerson in the staging of Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft plays, comes word that Art Rosson will assist Mr. Dwan in his new work.

Rosson is leaving his position as director for the Triangle to join the Fairbanks organization. He has had six years of film training, principally under Allan Dwan, who, as supervising director of the Eastern Triangle studio, promoted him to directing.

Remarkable Record Made by "The Warrior"

WHAT is considered in film circles a remarkable record has been made in the sale of state right territory by Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin in their marketing of the seven part screen feature, "The Warrior." Secured by General Enterprises, Inc., of which Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin are the moving spirits, just six weeks ago from Harry Raver, who introduced the spectacle starring Maciste to America, "The Warrior" was heavily exploited by a remarkable whirlwind publicity and advertising campaign reaching from coast to coast. Immediately following the launching of the great exploitation drive bids were received from every representative state right purchaser in the country, many of them coming direct to New York from distant points in order to personally close the contracts.

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin announced this week that in addition to the sale of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to the Rowland-Clark interests of Pittsburgh, Pa., the following contracts have been negotiated for territorial privileges to "The Warrior."

W. S. Brewster, of the Jordan-Brewster Company, Seattle, Washington, has acquired "The Warrior" for the four western states embraced by Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington. Mr. Brewster also obtained the rights to distribute "The Warrior" in Alaska. The Jordan-Brewster Company already control the rights to "The Birth of a Nation" and in buying the big spectacle starring the Italian actor-soldier Maciste, Mr. Brewster stated he believed "The Warrior" to be a worthy running mate for D. W. Griffith's master effort. He will exploit the picture on a scale commensurate with its magnitude and it will play all of the large houses in the western territory as a road attraction, accompanied by a special crew and large orchestra.

To the Civilization Company of Newark, New Jersey, have been allotted the state right privileges for New Jersey. This contract was negotiated between Mr. Sawyer for General Enterprises, Inc., and Henry Allsopp, president, and H. Heidelberger, manager, for the Civilization Film Company.

The Globe Films, Limited, of Toronto, Canada, to which organization the Canadian rights for "The Warrior" were sold, have broken all records in the matter of prints used on a feature in this territory. Six copies of "The Warrior" are in use throughout the Dominion, which is four copies above the usual number of prints required for exhibition purposes for the average screen offering. An unprecedented order for lithographs has been placed by Globe Films. Limited, in order to properly exploit the film starring Maciste and space has been taken in all of the large Canadian cities for the placing of twenty-four sheet stands.

Mr. Sawyer states this week that four contracts for additional territory would be closed with prominent buyers within the next few days and the rapidity with which state rights for the General Enterprises, Inc., feature are being bid for has more than met his expectations.

Change in Releases

Delay in the screening of "Miss U. S. A.," due to the slight accident which befell June Caprice, the star of this William Fox subject, has made necessary still another shift in the schedule of releases for October and for November. "The Scarlet Pimpernel" will be issued for the week of October 28 instead of "Miss U. S. A." The latter will be released the first week in November.

Opening "Who's Your Neighbor?" Winter Campaign

"S. RANKIN DREW'S 'Who's Your Neighbor?' was shown to the trade press immediately upon its completion this summer," says Herman Becker, general manager of Master Drama Features, Inc., who own the world rights, "but in view of what we thought would be a slight depression through war conditions I decided to hold the film for territorial sale until winter. But I guessed wrong. Amusement conditions, as a whole, have never been so good as right now and it would be a mere waste of time to keep a big picture longer off the market.

"I have a right to speak of 'amusement conditions as a whole.' My interests are not only picture ones, but I produce for vaudeville also. The latter connection showed me just what the theaters are doing. A demand for my acts set in. Time suddenly seemed easy to fill. And it was easy to fill, for the houses felt a freshened public patronage, due, no doubt, to the desire of the people to bear their war burdens better.

"Reports from my acts showed that in every district played, the theaters were being better patronized. I believe that the English showed the same reaction to entertainment after they went into the war, but that the theaters did no markedly better business until a full year after the outbreak of the war. Here it has been different, for the public showed the desire of theatrical relaxation almost immendiately."

So actuated by the facts on hand, Mr. Becker has already opened the winter sales campaign of "Who's Your Neighbor?" and in his sales literature phrases from MOTOGRAPHY criticism are prominently quoted.

Already Washington, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon, California, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana and Northern New Jersey have been closed and deals are pending on New York, Southern New Jersey, Mexico, Pennsylvania, Porto Rico and several South American countries. The American popularity of the picture is indicated in the endorsement of Robert W. Hebberd, famous reformer and secretary of the New York Committee of Twelve, to the effect that the country would be better off if the people "took more interest in their neighbors and found out for themselves just who and what they are!" Similar endorsements have been given by other prominent Americans.

General Manager Becker believes that the excellence of its advertising paraphernalia did as much to close the sales that have been made to date as the excellence of the film itself.

"I think," he says, "that poor advertising aids can harm the sale of even a good picture, though, of course, they will not cripple it. On the other hand, the best advertising matter conceivable will not, of course, help a poor picture."

Sidney Olcott Shows Special Production

The first presentation of Sidney Olcott's production of "The Belgian," an original story written by Frederic Arnold Kummer, starring Walker Whiteside and Miss Valentine Grant, took place at New York's Strand on October 25.

This is Sidney Olcott's first venture as an independent producer. Mr. Olcott's connection with the Famous Players covered a long period, during which time he directed Mary Pickford, Margaret Clark, Marie Doro, Valentine Grant and many other notable stars. The cast of "The Belgian" contains some of the best players of the state and screen, including Arda La Croix, Sally Crute, Giorgio Majeroni, Anders Randolf, Henri Leone and others.

The scenes are laid in Belgium and are woven around two simple fisher-folk through whose veins run real the red blood of true patriots. The story was written from actual events that have transpired in Belgium, prior to the outbreak of the war and extends through the period which follows the Kaiser's path in this martyred country, exposing to the world the mysteries of the German Secret Service and intrigue. There is portrayed vividly against these actual happenings an intensely human and tender love story.

Mr. Olcott has organized his own business forces and intends to make a series of big productions for the state rights market. His offices are at 1205 Candler Building.

France Opens New York Office

Charles H. France, president of the France Films, Inc., has opened New York offices at 608 Candler Building, and from there will conduct a producing organization, having as its object the making of three, or at most, four big features a year. Mr. France is a well-known director of many years experience, and his object in organizing his own company is to be able to work unhampered for the highest artistic effects.

Mr. France selected Marguerite Courtot for the stellar role in "The Natural Law" because of her tremendous emotional powers as well as wonderful beauty. "The Natural Law" was one of the biggest stage hits of last year, playing for eight months at the Republic Theater, New York. The play was conceded to be the most unusual of last year—treating of a subject essentially delicate and vital, with a plot so powerful as to be startling, "The Natural Law" in its film version should prove one of the greatest state rights' money-makers ever released. The production is most elaborate, and supporting Miss Courtot is an exceptional cast, including Howard Hall, who plays his original role of the doctor, as in the stage presentation, and George Larkin in the juvenile lead.

"The Natural Law" is a frank treatment of the sex question—the call of youth to youth, and the consequences of evil-doing. In play and book form it received the unqualified endorsement of many leading educators and clergymen, as an intensely beneficial lesson to young people.

"Great White Trail" Praised

Specific information of the estimation in which "The Great White Trail" is held by progressive exhibitors is shown by the following letter just received by Theodore Wharton of Wharton, Incorporated, from J. C. Green, manager of the Temple Theater, Galt, Ontario, Canada, which was turned over by Mr. Wharton to M. H. Hoffman, Inc.:

"I am sending you under separate cover several Toronto weekly and daily papers. You will see the way Shea's Hippodrome, the largest house in the country, has billed "The Great White Trail" for the coming week, cutting out all mention of their eight vaudeville acts and featuring the picture exclusively. They have never done this before.

"The picture has played several days already outside of Toronto and pleased the managers and public.

"We broke all records at the Temple here, cleaned up and beat every film that has ever played at this house, including 'Cabiria,' 'Neptune's Daughter,' and the 'Battle of the Somme;' in fact, simply mopped up. Did as much business in three nights as 'Polly of the Circus' and 'The Amazons' with Marguerite Clark did in a full week, so we can't kick."

Kaufman Gets Oro Films

Kaufman Specials of Memphis, Tennessee, announces that the new Oro features, which will be released once a month beginning November 1, have been secured for distribution in Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas, for which it was necessary to pay a sum running into four figures. These pictures are being produced by the Isadore Bernstein Company, the first seven being based on the "seven cardinal virtues." The first three are entitled "Loyalty," "Destiny," and "Humility," and are of the clean type throughout. In addition to the territorial rights, Manager A. H. Kaufman states that the prints will cost extra.

Five Scenarios for "Grain of Dust"

IMMEDIATELY upon the purchase of the motion picture rights to "The Grain of Dust," the novel written by the late David Graham Phillips, the Ogden Pictures Corporation, who are screening the production, placed the writing of the scenario in the hands of three scenario writers, agreeing to pay each their full fee, in addition to which Mr. Harry Revier, the producing director, and Mr. Jesse J. Goldburg, the manager of the productions, on their own account with a copy of the novel and a manuscript of the stage play as used by James K. Hackett, when appearing in the dramtized version of the novel, proceeded to write their own continuity.

When the five manuscripts were finished the five authors held a consultation for the purpose of collaboration and to consolidate the best in each scenario into one perfect script.

Strange to say and contrary to the commonly accepted theory of pride of profession, each author was perfectly frank and generous in a discussion of the merits of the other script, but in order to avoid a deadlock, the director, Mr. Harry Revier, was the final umpire on all questions involving the scenarios of the other four.

This is another innovation employed in the conduct of the Ogden Pictures Corporation's productions. Its purpose is self-evident, being based upon the acknowledged idea that a perfect script with a competent cast will insure a perfect production.

"While this method of procedure," explained Mr. Park, the general manager of the company, "might appear to be expensive, in the end it is a labor and money saving device, because there can be little or no change in the operations of the director and with a scenario, every scene of which is reckoned with in advance, the cost of the production and the production itself can be gauged almost to a certainty."

Splendid Strand Opens at Lowell, Massachusetts

THE Strand of Lowell, Massachusetts, recently had a most auspicious opening.

More than one thousand people were turned away unable to gain admission, and as many more sought entertainment at other centers after looking over the size of the crowd that clamored for tickets earlier in the night.

Three officers had been engaged to keep the patrons in line as they approached the box office, but the management found it necessary to send in a call for an extra squad ere the time arrived for the opening of the doors.

Seven o'clock was the advertised time for the sale of seats, but two hours before then men and women gathered in front of the foyer seeking admission.

Crowds Fill House

When the doors were finally thrown open the place filled up quickly and by 8 o'clock Manager Carroll was obliged to discontinue the sale of seats. Every seat had an occupant and provision was made to accommodate the overflow. Boxes, loges and as far down front as the orchestra pit were filled to overflowing.

Despite the rush to gain entrance into the place, the majority of patrons found time to take a general survey of the beautiful and artistic surroundings along the foyer and in the theater proper before being assigned to their seats.

Thanks to the extra efforts of the management in pushing the work to completion, the place was in spick and span shape, with the result that those fortunate enough to gain admission enjoyed the many pleasant and attractive features that marked the formal introduction of Lowell's most recent addition to the amusement column. The long, double foyer, with its unique decorations and the main auditorium, with its wonderfully brilliant lighting effects and artistic designs, proved a real feast for the eyes. Every one was enthusiastically generous in bestowing congratulations on the management for the new half-million dollar enterprise. Resident Manager Carroll and Louis B. Mayer, the directing head of the concern that financed and erected the structure, were the recipients of the good wishes of all who attended.

Big Dome Over Auditorium

One of the most effective features of the decorations is the central dome that covers the greater part of the ceiling proper. It is a wonderful series of Romanesque designs that has gold leaf as a background and a rich blending of colorings that bring out the artistic designs in a most striking manner. It is centred with a huge chandelier on which are clustered numerous inverted lights of various hues, while a circling of small chandeliers, 12 in number, add to the wonderful brilliancy created when the lights are turned on full. These chandeliers have a series of colored bulbs that throw off, either individually or collectively, a striking combination of lighting effects that will serve in enriching the scenic effects of the surroundings.

The walls are divided in three sections. The upper portion is a series of long narrow panels in neutral tints which are so placed that they can be swung about to allow for better ventilation. In the middle portion are large panels of silk tapestry in Romanesque designs of gold and neutral coloring and between these are placed long panels of stained glass that throw off handsome designs when the background of lights is turned on them.

The effect of these is enhanced by surroundings of panels of distinct Romanesque design in blue, buff and pink. Bronze electrical figures, shaded by picturesque domes, add to the general beauty. The lower section of the walls is finished in gum wood and panelled. The same wood is used in the finishing of the back of the first long section of seats and the front of the second section.

Promenade in Rear of House

A long promenade is placed in the rear of the lower part of the house proper and along this is located the tier of loges, something new to Lowell and copied from the Rialto in New York. These loges are guarded by railings of white and nickel and are draped with tapestry of royal blue and upholstered to match the general scheme of decorating.

The seating capacity of the house is close to 2,000. The rear section of seats runs up to a comfortable height, behind which is the machine booth, from which the pictures are shown, and also the "run-off" room, where Manager Carroll and Conductor Martel make their review of each reel that is used in the theater.

Washington's Knickerbocker Theater Opens

THE grand opening of Harry Crandall's Knickerbocker Theater, at Washington, D. C., took place on October 13.

Among the stars present were: Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Alice Brady, Kitty Gordon, Rose Tapley, Belle Bruce, Carlysle Blackwell.

A banquet was held in the lounging room after the performance.

Col. George Bulkley presided temporarily, introducing Judge M. C. Elliott, who was toastmaster of the evening. Several senators and congressmen were present. Many members of various war commissions attended.

Speeches were made by Judge Elliott and Commissioner Brownwell of the District of Columbia. Also several judges and other high officials praised the work of the moving picture industry in the present war crisis.

Responses for the motion picture industry were made by Lewis J. Selznick, Rose Tapley and Charles C. Pettijohn. Mr. Pettijohn's speech was received with great enthusiasm, especially when he drove home the point that motion picture theaters have become in this crisis "the daily meeting houses of patriots" and that daily in these temples of the silent drama, no program is complete without the showing of patriotic slides, the presentation of speeches of the four minute men, the pleas for the sale of Liberty Bonds and funds for smokes for the boys in France.

Both Mr. Pettijohn and Miss Tapley made strong pleas that the motion picture industry be not hampered in its great work by unjust legislation. They pointed out that the industry was new and was just beginning to adjust itself to conditions and that all of the theaters must be kept open in order to continue their great work.

Miss Tapley also spoke on the great work that is being done by the industry in sending their biggest men as commissioners to foreign countries and both Miss Tapley and Mr. Pettijohn spoke of the wonderful plans of the motion picture industry in Russia and the motion picture campaign to be conducted before the eyes of the Russian soldiers to offset misstatements of the great German Spy System on the Eastern front.

Many comments were heard after the banquet and several of the biggest men in the country commented upon the fact that the motion picture industry is becoming better understood and that such a function as was given by Harry Crandall at the opening of his beautiful new theater, coupled with speeches that were delivered on behalf of the motion picture industry were very healthful for the industry as a whole and constituted rapid strides toward the ultimate goal; that the entire industry might enjoy a better understanding by the government and be better understood by the people of the United States at large.

Bijou Theater, of Nashville, Splendid Colored House

Special to Motography.

One of the finest moving picture theaters operated exclusively for colored patronage in the entire United States is located in this city—the Bijou. Through its excellent program service, which is provided for its patronage at prices of five and ten cents, its splendid equipment, and the general tone of quality, the Bijou has attracted thousands within its portals that would have otherwise sought diversion along other lines. This house is operated by the Bijou Amusement Company, the members of which are all white.

House Seats 1500

Milton Starr is actively in charge of operating the Bijou, and it has been largely under his efficient and capable direction that the Bijou has been placed upon its present high standard of quality. The capacity of the house is fifteen hundred, which includes both the balcony and gallery, as well as a large number of boxes. The theater was formerly used to take care of large road shows for white people, and it is one of the largest houses in the city, but since the negro business section has been drawn toward this locality, the theater became more properly adapted for a first class moving picture house for negroes. It has been running in this capacity over a year under the present management, and the building was recently purchased by Michael Starr, a brother of the manager, from the Chatt-Nash Corporation, New York dealers, through a local realty concern.

In the erection of the Bijou, special pains were made toward bringing the ventilation system to perfection by modern methods, resulting in this house being in keeping with the best theaters of the time, and this fact has contributed largely in keeping a good attendance throughout the warm months. Splendid steam heating facilities are used during the cold weather. The front of the structure is equipped with seven sets of double doors which permit the building to be emptied readily after each performance. The outside lobby arrangement is spacious, being built of stone and tile, with brass railings. The floors follow the lines of a graceful decline, and the screen is plainly visible from either side of the three floors. Wide stairs on both sides of the corridor facilitate prompt handling of crowds, and the manager's office, film storage rooms, advertising department, etc., are located over the ticket booth, on the second floor.

Front of Cream Brick

The front of the building is finished in cream colored brick, faced with white beams of stone and steel, with all woodwork finished in white enamel. Each of the fourteen front doors in the outer tier is of heavy plate glass, trimmed with brass. The interior lighting effect is splendid, there being sufficient light to provide a deluge of brilliancy for an intermission or overture, but properly adjustable through the means of soft shades to furnish just the proper amount of current for a moving picture show.

Extensive renovating work was undergone when the building was converted from a road show house to a picture theater, resulting in a harmonious blending of decorative effects.

With regard to the pictures used, a strong tendency has been noted on behalf of the patrons toward serial productions. The negro as a rule enjoys a sensational serial chapter better than anything else, with the possible exception of a picture of the Wm. S. Hart type or some A-1 comedy.

At present the music is furnished by an electric instrument, except on special occasions, when an orchestra is provided, but a pipe organ will be installed in the near future. Taken from an all around viewpoint, Nashville's Bijou is hard to beat as a negro picture theater.

Chattanooga Loew House Opens

By J. L. Ray.

Adding to the long string of Marcus Loew houses already established in the south, the Loew Theater of Chattanooga, Tenn., opened its doors to the public on October 15 under most favorable circumstances. The building has been used for theatrical purposes for some time, but has been thoroughly remodeled and put in suitable shape to care for the high class Loew attractions.

Both pictures and vaudeville will be shown, the series of moving pictures entitled "Loew's Current Events" being one of the photoplay features. In addition to the current event pictures, comedy reels will be shown in connection with the vaudeville program. The house has been entirely modernized from pit to dome, and presents a handsome appearance. Chattanooga theater-goers are well pleased with the scale of prices, which will run ten and twenty cents afternoon, and fifteen and twenty-five nights.

It is proposed to make the house conform to the standard set by other Loew theaters over the country, and the management has assured the public of high class shows throughout the entire winter season. It is possible that the house will remain open next summer to show moving pictures.

J. Frank Brockliss, foreign representative of the Billy West King-Bee comedies, has cabled his safe arrival in London. The trip was not without incident. It took seventeen days to make the trip. The boat was delayed at Halifax to take on 3,000 soldiers and 100 nurses.

Strand of Allentown Opens

ALLENTOWN, Pennsylvania, has a brand new picture photoplay theater, the Strand. It is one of the handsomest theater buildings to be found in eastern Pennsylvania. The new building is of brick, steel and concrete construction, strictly fire proof. The attractiveness of the spacious lobby is something that deserves considerable comment. The floor is laid in tile and terrazza; doors leading into the foyer are of mahogany and studded with French plate glass mirrors; the box office is at one end of the lobby and equipped with an automatic, motor-driven ticket selling machine; the interior of the theater has been finished in a blue and gray design in oil color by the firm of William Eckart Studios, New York city, the decorators of the Strand and Rialto Theaters of New York city, the Colonial Theater of Reading and the beautiful Arcade of Philadelphia.

Eight hundred latest design opera chairs, upholstered in blue leather, furnished by Heywood Bros. & Wakefield, of Philadelphia, provide for the comfortable seating of its patrons.

Every convenience for the benefit of the theater's patrons has been installed, such as sanitary drinking fountains, a ladies' and gentlemen's room and nine exits on front, rear and sides of the building, making it possible to empty the house in a few minutes.

Two Powers' projection machines for the throwing of the pictures on a Rembusch gold fiber screen have been installed.

One of the most complete ventilating systems ever installed in a theater is one of the important new features. It is known as the American heating and ventilating system. Individual ventilators, located under the seats, provide for twenty-five cubic feet of fresh air per minute for each person seated, warmed in winter and cooled in summer, whereby a temperature of 70 degrees can be maintained at all times, no matter how warm it may be outside.

Only first class showings of the masterpieces of the film will be the policy of the Strand management, and they will be in connection with the best of music, one of the largest and most complete Estey pipe organs, the first pipe organ installed in a theater in Allentown, being built in an extra addition to the building to furnish the music incidental to the plays.

There will be a daily matinee from 1:30 to 4:45 p. m.; evenings from 6:30 to 11 p. m.; Saturday and holidays continuous from 1 to 11 p. m. at an admission of 15 cents, and positively no changes in admission. The policy of the house will be to give the patrons the benefit of the special features at the same admission.

J. W. Huber of Colorado Springs has arrived in Seattle to take over the managership of the Colonial theater for John Danz, owner of the High Class and the Colonial. Mr. Danz has been managing both houses, but found the work too much for him.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

Writes for Tax Information

ED J. BUTLER, manager of the Ishpeming Theater, of Ishpeming, Michigan, writes in to MOTOGRAPHY for information as to the working of the new war amusement tax on tickets, stating: "I could not think of anyone who would be able to furnish that information any better or quicker than you." He got a letter right back giving him the explanation he desired. We'll do the same, of course, for any theater man who has any question in his mind about the new tax.

Nebraska Exhibitor Departs

J. B. Reid, the popular exhibitor of Hebron, Nebraska, has sold his interests in the Elite Theater to E. M. Fetterman of Lincoln, who will continue the policies of the Elite. Mr. Reid has not yet made known his future activities.

Sunday Pictures on Trial

Sunday picture shows are hanging in the balance at Little Rock, Arkansas. There is a test case on the docket now. Louis Rosenbaum, of the Princess Theater, is the martyr who kept his house open on the Sabbath and he will be tried soon. He states that he will take the case to the circuit court.

Crowds Flock to Sunday Shows

The public has voiced its approval of Sunday pictures in Memphis, Tennessee, in an enthusiastic manner. Since the order was issued by City Judge Lanier to the effect that Sunday shows may run without molestation by the authorities, providing they donated their profits to charity, as in the past, crowds have packed the houses on the Sabbath. The people wanted Sunday pictures, and after a severe fight the picture men of Memphis have finally succeeded in their efforts to give them to the public, even though without profit to themselves, other than helping to cut down expenses through seven-day operation instead of six. All profits are being turned over to the Associated Charities, there to be applied to a worthy cause.

Wassman Issues Warning

Word having come to Manager W. H. Wassman of the Knickerbocker, Nashville, Tennessee, that his exhibition rights were about to be infringed upon in showing the picture, "Fighting Odds," starring Maxine Elliott, for which he had paid a big price, and that another company proposed to show this picture in competition to the Knickerbocker, of which he is manager, he proceeded to issue a warning through the press to the effect that all infringements would be vigorously investigated and prosecuted. As a result the picture was shown only at the Knickerbocker.

"The Slacker" For Entire Week

The Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville ran "The Slacker" at the Fifth Avenue Theater for the entire week of October 15. The picture was extensively advertised, and there is much talk about it on the streets. The company's big electric flag has been placed in the Fifth avenue lobby during the run of this patriotic picture.

Program Strikes Home

Manager E. O. Weinberg, pilot of the Elmwood Theater of Buffalo, continues to strike home to the fancies and pocketbooks of patrons with his neat little vest pocket program. It is always about two inches wide and three high, when folded, and contains, besides the week's program, a page of coming attractions and a blank to be filled out for an added name to his mailing list.

Woman is Exhibitor's Organizer

Flossie A. Jones, manager and vice-president of the Waukesha Amusement Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin, has been elected state organizer for the Wisconsin Motion Picture Exhibitor's League. She is the first woman to hold an office in the league. Some weeks ago MOTOGRAPHY printed a complete account of Miss Jones' remarkable success in handling a string of houses which had formerly been "lemons."

Receives Films Via Aeroplane

The Victoria Theater of Rochester, New York, last week received a film delivery by aeroplane from the Triangle exchange in Buffalo. H. E. Lotz, Triangle branch manager, and John J. Farren, general manager of the Victoria, devised that method to get around the embargo on express. The plane left Buffalo with the matinee at 3 p. m., arrived at the theater in Rochester at 3:45, and the show was on the screen five minutes later.

Managers Entertain Convention

One of the most entertaining features of the Southern Appalachian Good Roads Convention, which met in Nashville, October 16-19, was the free amusement tendered the delegates by the exhibitors. Tony and Harry Sudekum arranged a theater party for the members at the Princess Theater, where a combination picture and vaudeville show was given. W. H. Wassman also entertained the good roads men at the Knickerbocker, where a high class picture was shown.

Fresh Air Theater

The Empire Theater of Montgomery, Alabama, prides itself on its fresh air ventilation system. The Empire has a circulation plan which keeps the auditorium always filled with iced cold air, and in cold weather this cold air is reheated, which brings it to the proper temperature for body comfort. The system is quite expensive, but has met with popular favor at the hands of Montgomery's patrons.

Admission to the Empire is only ten cents, and pictures of the highest quality are shown. The house opens at noon each day, and music is provided alternately by a huge pipe organ and a symphony orchestra.

Distributes Free Tickets

As a boost for attendance at the children's matinees every Saturday morning, the management of the Allen Theater, Calgary, Alberta, announced the distribution of one hundred free tickets at such performances for the following Saturday's show. The free tickets are handed out at the entrance as the children enter.

Time Price Schedule

The Lyceum Theater, Winnipeg, has adopted a time schedule for admission prices which has proved very satisfactory to both the theater and patrons. The plan has been advertised quite extensively so that the fans know exactly how it runs. From 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. the general admission price is 10c; from 1 p. m. to 7 p. m. the admission is 15c; and for the remainder of the night, 7 p. m. to 11 p. m., the admission is 25c.

Fourteen Houses Book "7 Pearls"

Fourteen Montreal theaters have contracted for the Pathe serial, "The Seven Pearls," and the series is booked solid for the next ten weeks. The fourteen theaters include the New Grand, Holman, Passe Temps, Fairyland, Canada, Crystal Palace, King Edward, National Biograph, Laurier Palace, Alhambra, Dominion, Perron Hall, Alexandra and Queen's Palace.

Hears Concert At Long Distance

Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand of New York, was in Atlantic City recently, but heard the afternoon concert rendered by the Strand orchestra just the same. Before he left he caused the detectaphone, which is located in his theater office, connected with the transmitter at the footlights, which in turn was connected with the long distance telephone. The detectaphone is the instrument which enables Manager Edel to hear from his desk everything that goes on in the auditorium.

Big String Boosting Liberty Loan

All the theaters in the big John H. Kunsky string in Detroit are behind the second loan campaign to the fullest extent. The official liberty loan picture is being run, with the slides and advertising, and all the houses have been thrown open to the Four Minute speakers. Practically all the progressive houses in the country are co-operating in this matter in some manner.

Attempt Sunday Closing

Women and clergy of Kansas City, Missouri, are behind a movement to close the theaters and pool rooms on Sunday. A petition has been circulated by the W. C. T. U. and presented to the mayor. He has not yet made his decision in the matter.

Theaters Aid Women

A committee of women, assisted by a staff of girls, collected $285 in the lobbies of the four picture houses of St. Louis, Missouri. The money went into the fund for books for soldiers and sailors, and the co-operation of the theaters got them in right with the people of the city.

Shows Rolled in Ditch

A couple of express cars rolled off the tracks into the ditch near Oil City, Pa., last week, and it wrought hardship on the whole section. One of the cars carried films to be shown at the Lyric and Princess Theaters and the managers, with dark houses, had to explain, Bryan-like as possible, and invite patrons to come again the following evening.

Motion Picture Company in Buffalo

Buffalo, New York, is to have a motion picture company. It will be known as the Buffalo Moving Picture Corporation and it is capitalized at $125,000. The certificate of incorporation has been filed in the office of the county clerk. One of the incorporators is Frank L. Talbot, who organized and managed the late Allied Bazaar. The directors are Mr. Talbot, Maxwell M. Nowak, Ben Starr, S. K. Talbot and Charles McCready.

New Ordinance in Salt Lake

The ordinance recently passed by the city commission of Salt Lake City, Utah, allowing the use of low power motion picture machines in places other than properly equipped theaters is not sufficiently elastic to allow for the use of all types of low power machines approved by the underwriters' laboratories, according to a letter submitted to the commission by A. F. Holden, Jr., inspector for the fire underwriters' inspection bureau. Mr. Holden recommends that the ordinance be amended. The matter was referred to the city recorder to take up with the law department and the chief of the fire department.

Beck Takes Over Regent

Koon C. Beck, manager of Riverside Park at Hutchinson, Kansas, is to be manager of the Regent Theater in Great Bend, this winter, having leased that show house. Mr. Beck is now in Great Bend completing details of the lease and is expected home tonight. He plans to manage the new show house but will continue the Sunday night vaudeville shows at Riverside park for some time yet, until bad weather causes their discontinuance.

Women to Run Theaters

Declaring that many of the motion pictures now in vogue are "immoral and obscene," Santa Fe, New Mexico, club women have accepted the offer of a local exhibitor to let them run the theater one night a week in the effort to educate the public taste toward a higher class of films. They are furnishing the house at cost, will select their pictures, advertise them and receive profits or stand the deficit as the case may be.

"Glory B" Sold

W. B. Schmucker has sold the Glory B Theater of Miami, Oklahoma, to Frank Slaton of Tar River for a consideration of $35,000. Mr. Schmucker has been in the theater business in Miami for a number of years and recently started the erecting of the Glory B Theater building, which building is not yet quite complete. The theater has been leased to the Humphery Amusement Company, who will open the season in Miami, according to the present announcements. Mr. Slaton is a wealthy mine operator and has made large investments in Miami and in the mining district.

New House for Kalispell

A new $25,000 moving picture show house may be established at Kalispell, Montana, by capitalists who have picture houses at Spokane, Butte, Missoula and other cities in Montana, and who operate the Liberty Theater at Spokane.

A representative of the corporation they control recently visited Kalispell and inspected the Princess Theater here, but decided that the house was too small. He made the statement that his principals were ready to expend $25,000 on a building and site here for a theater if a location of a satisfactory kind can be obtained, and that they much desire to enter this show field.

Refuses To Close Theater

On a bill filed by the management of a film theater of South Fork, Pennsylvania, the court of Cambria county has granted a temporary injunction against the board of health of the borough, restraining it from closing the theater on account of a scarlet fever outbreak.

The management filed a bill in equity declaring that churches, lodges and other public places in the town had not been closed, and that social affairs had not been interfered with. The bill also denies that an epidemic exists, and avers that at the time of the closing of the theater there were only five cases in the borough. The number later increased to eight,according to the bill. The population of South Fork is declared to be 5,000. The theater has been allowed to reopen for adults alone.

Fairbanks in Liberty Loan Campaign

Douglas Fairbanks, the popular acrobatic film star, has ceased activities before the motion picture camera to again "do his bit" for his country.

When the first Liberty Loan was announced the energetic Douglas promptly purchased $100,000 worth of Liberty Bonds. Immediately upon conclusion of his newest Artcraft picture, "Reaching for the Moon," Douglas gave his staff a vacation while he commenced a Coast-to-Coast tour of the country in behalf of the Liberty Loan. On his trip from Los Angeles to New York he sold $500,000 worth of bonds.

Last Sunday morning he arrived in Chicago and was met at the La Salle Street station by a delegation from the local Liberty Loan flying squadron and immediately started to work on his campaign for Liberty Loan bonds in this city. Douglas was met enthusiastically at all places where he appeared in Chicago Sunday.

Max Goldstine, general manager of Artcraft and Paramount Pictures in Chicago, was the first to purchase bonds from Mr. Fairbanks Sunday, signing for $2,000. The second purchase was made by Melvin S. Flynn, 112 South Michigan avenue, and after this start the campaign was fast and furious through the hotels and theaters of the city during the entire day. At 10 o'clock Douglas again started on his westward way in the interest of the Liberty Loan bond sale.

While in New York during a two days' touring campaign of the big department stores and theaters, as well as other Liberty Loan headquarters, he made forty-two appearances, selling over $500,000 worth of bonds. Douglas is now en route to California and expects to have sold $1,000,000 worth of bonds on reaching Los Angeles, where he will wind up his campaign in connection with the second loan.

Public Will Pay Admission Tax

New York Exhibitors Unite on Plan to Collect Federal War Assessment

MOTION picture exhibitors of New York are solving the war tax problem so as to carry out the government's intention that the admission tax be paid by the public. At a meeting called by William Fox at the Hotel Astor one hundred and fifty exhibitors and fifty men representing other branches of the industry listened to discussions of the question. Mr. Fox in his address informed his auditors that he had called the meeting without regard to any organization or association to urge that a definite stand be taken by the representative exhibitors present.

Some objection was voiced to the plan of passing the tax on to the patrons, but these were outweighed by the numbers who favored the plan. A resolution was passed unanimously adopting the arrangement to permit the public to pay, and it was decided that notices would be given prominence on the screens and in lobbies of theaters acquainting theatergoers with the reasons for the assessment that will be added to admission charges.

A wide campaign may be inaugurated soon explaining the public's duty involved in the government's arrangement and it is expected that the additional charge made necessary by the war tax will be paid cheerfully, as are all other war assessments.

William A. Brady assisted the exhibitors in another meeting at the Forty-eighth Street Theater, where the details of the collection of the tax were gone into. Representatives of distributing organizations were present to talk over the proposed rent increase of fifteen cents per reel of film due to the government's war tax on positive prints. Exhibitors generally are inclined to protest that this increase in rental charges is not proportionate to the federal tax.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

I AM working in a vaudeville house and have to run two reels of pictures and I use two Simplex machines. I run a reel on each machine and I am having trouble with the lens on one of the machines.

I have to focus the lens every time I start a reel on the machine. After I focus up at the start of the reel then it will stay in focus all through the reel, but when I start the next time with the same reel I have to focus up again. Please tell me what my trouble is and how to remedy the trouble.—H. N. W.—Michigan.

Loose Combination in Lens

From the way you describe your trouble I think it is caused by either a loose combination in the lens or that you have not tightened the clamp screw in the lens holder, and I think that you will find the last one the cause of the trouble. In the threading up you open the film trap and in opening that you either hit the end of the lens or else jar the lens holder and that throws the lens out of focus, due to the fact that the clamp screw is not tight.

Place the sliding block in the center of its travel by means of the focusing knob, then slide the lens back and forth until the edges of the aperture appear in sharp focus on the screen. Tighen the clamp screw and complete focusing by means of the focusing knob. Examine lens combination before placing them in the adapter ring and be sure that the combinations are screwed up tight.

Operator Shocked

I have been working as an operator for one year and I had something happen the other night that I do not understand and I would like to have you explain it for me. I was working in my booth with the lamp burning and I attempted to straighten my top carbon with a pair of untaped pliers, while standing on the sheet iron floor and I received a heavy shock.

I then touched the lower carbon and received no shock. The current is taken from one side of a 110-220 volt D. C. system. Please explain the electrical condition which caused me to get a shock on the top carbon and not on the lower one.—L. Y.—Illinois.

The best way that I could answer your question would be to try to explain the three-wire system to you. Below is a diagram of a three-wire system.

A. and B. are 110-volt dynamos connected in series with each other. C. is the positive (—) side of one dynamo A, and D. is the negative (—) of the other dynamo B., and O. is the third wire connecting the negative side of A. to the positive side of B., thus providing a supply or return conductor to any one of the lamps.

If the system be exactly balanced no current will flow through the wire O. because the pressure toward the negative terminal of the dynamo A. will be equal to the pressure from the positive terminal of dynamo B., thus neutralizing the pressure in the wire. For this reason the middle wire of a three-wire system is called the neutral wire and is usually indicated by the symbol O or +, the latter meaning that it is positive to the first wire D. and negative to the second C. In your case the lamp is connected to the lines marked in the diagram as C. and O., and that would make the top carbon connect with the line marked C. and the lower carbon to the one marked O.

Your booth is metallic and is a dead ground (all metal booths are supposed to be grounded), and when your pliers came in contact with the top carbon, which is the positive, then you received a shock because your body formed a connection between the positive side of the circuit and the booth or negative side of the circuit. On touching the lower carbon you received no shock because the lower carbon is the negative side of the circuit and is the same polarity as a ground. Most light companies ground the neutral wire.

Wants Wiring Diagram

(See drawing above)

I am an operator with three years' experience and have just taken a job at a new theater that will open up in the next two weeks.

I am going to have two new Power's machines and a generator set with 110-220-volt A. C. My manager has bought a generator set that has been used where they only had one machine and it will not be large enough to handle both machines, so that I am going to use a compensarc with it.

Now, here is what I would like to have you help me out on: Please give me the best wiring diagram for connecting two separate lamps to a single lamp motor generator set and to an A. C. compensarc so that either lamp can be switched from the A. C. to the motor generator instantly when changing from one machine to the other.—A. N.—Iowa.

Your two lamps can be connected to the generator and the compensarc, but it would have been a great deal better if your manager had spent a little more money and purchased a generator set large enough to handle both machines. Locate the machine, generator and switchboard and compensarc where you want them and then connect up as follows:

Run leads from the generator to the field resistance and the volt and ampere meter (some generator outfits do not have the volt and ampere meters, but if yours does not have them have the manager purchase them for you and locate them at the switchboard at the booth. Results cannot be obtained with a generator unless the operator can see just what voltage and amperage he is using and be able to regulate the current accordingly then to the fuses on the board. From the fuses connect to two of the top lugs of a four-pole double-throw switch.

Continue these wires to the lower set of lugs diagonal from the lugs used at the top. Next connect up the compensarc the same as if you were going to use it on a single machine, but instead of running the wires to the machine, run them to the two lugs not in use at the lower end of the four-hole switch, then around to the lugs not in use at the top of the switch.

Next run one set of wires from the lugs in the center of the switch to one machine and run another set of wires from the remaining set of lugs in the center to the other machine.

In connecting to the machines be sure that you connect the wires so that the negative side of the current from the generator is connected to the lower carbon jaw of each lamp.

When you throw the switch in on the top set of knives of the four-pole switch you will find that one lamp will be on the generator and the other one will be on the compensarc and by throwing the switch on the lower set of knives of the four-pole switch the current will be reversed on the machine, that is the lamp that was on the generator will be on the compensarc and the one that was on the compensarc will be on the generator. Above is a diagram that will possibly help you out.

Beautiful Sets and Costly Gowns

"Who Is 'Number One'?" the first Paramount serial, starring Kathleen Clifford, for which Anna Katherine Green wrote the novelization, is expected by Paramount to set a new standard for distinction in motion picture serials. Paramount's serial is unique in that it is a thrilling melodrama that continues consistently on a high plane. Never does it stoop to 10-20-30 melodrama, never does it become a celluloid "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model."

The sets in "Who Is 'Number One'?" are most elaborate, in every way up to the Paramount standard. The man who is the object of "the fury of woman scorned" is a multimillionaire inventor and his home and surroundings are faithful reproductions of the environment that would surround a man of that type. "The woman scorned" is rich and famous and her London home, as shown in the photoplay, is huge, in excellent taste and artistically furnished. Kathleen Clifford, star of the story, plays the part of a rich, cultivated girl who has been educated abroad. Her gowns are costly and the last word in Parisian style.

No matter what the thrill, no matter what the adventure she is called upon to go through, Kathleen—always beautifully gowned—accomplishes it with a recklessness that wrecks costume after costume, reaching a climax when she dives from the mast of a ship while she wears a golden, lacy creation that is utterly ruined. In making this thrill the gown accidentally caught on the mast, throwing Kathleen off her balance as she dived and she whirled end over end through the air into the sea. When she came to the surface her gown was entirely gone.

Star of "Mother" Writes Book

Elizabeth Risdon, star of George Loane Tucker's newest screen feature, "Mother," has recently completed a comprehensive treatise on the subject of make-up and character study. The volume will be off the press within a few days and will be placed on sale in all of the leading book stores throughout the country.

Greater Vitagraph to Release New Serial

"Vengeance and the Woman" to Appear in Fifteen Episodes of Two Reels Each—William Duncan and Carol Holloway Star Again

GREATER VITAGRAPH will release another big outdoor serial immediately after the conclusion of "The Fighting Trail," which is now running simultaneously in several thousand houses throughout the country. The new serial, which will bear the title, "Vengeance—and the Woman," will be in fifteen episodes of two reels each. William Duncan, who directed and played the lead in "The Fighting Trail," is acting in the dual role again, and already is half through the story. Carol Holloway is the female star of the picture.

Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady collaborated in writing the book for "Vengeance—and the Woman," and are said to have produced a work even more thrilling than "The Fighting Trail." The new serial is entirely different in theme and treatment from its predecessor, although the greater part of the action transpires outdoors, in the wild regions of the west.

On the strength of the business done with "The Fighting Trail," scores of exhibitors, Vitagraph announces, already have signified their intention of booking "Vengeance—and the Woman." They have given the outdoor style of serial what Mr. Smith calls a hundred per cent indorsement.

"In the vast sheaf of congratulatory letters and telegrams from exhibitors, which includes hundreds of communications, we have not received one word of complaint," said Mr. Smith. "Every exhibitor who has written to us is enthusiastic in his indorsement of the serial, its advertising and the campaign that has helped to make it a success. And in almost every case these showmen have expressed gratification over the fact that most of the photography in it is outdoors. They declare that it is refreshing and pleasing to their patrons and we feel that we have blazed a new trail in serial production by making the desert and the mountain our stage."

In making "The Fighting Trail," Director Duncan established a record by finishing the last episode seven days ahead of the schedule that had been laid out for him, and in his present work he seems fair to outdo himself, because he is already at work on the seventh episode of "Vengeance—and the Woman." The first five episodes were shipped to the eastern plant of the Vitagraph company as soon as they were completed, and the work of making prints already is under way.

Because of his enormous capacity for work Duncan has earned the title of "the demon director" at the Vitagraph western studio. The members of his company declare it is never too late, too foggy, too hot or too cold for him to work, but they are willing to go along with him gladly, because he never asks his company to do anything that he will not try himself. In addition to his labors as director and star, Mr. Duncan has interpolated a number of thrills into the early stages of "Vengeance—and the Woman" which were not included by the authors. One of these was a cave-in and it almost cost Duncan his life, for he was buried under a mass of debris for fifteen minutes. He was in a trench on a mountain side and had a cliff blasted up above him to get a "buried alive" effect and it was so real that he was caught under the avalanche of dirt and rocks that went pouring down into the trench.

Miss Carol Holloway, who leaped into stardom by her work in "The Fighting Trail," has already had several narrow escapes in making scenes for this new serial, according to reports from the coast. Last Sunday she, with the other members of the company, was taken to Chatsworth Park, in Los Angeles, to get some scenes. She had been going to a dentist and had planned to spend the day in the dentist's chair, but when Duncan said he would only want her for one or two little scenes she re-arranged her schedule.

When she got to the location, Miss Holloway found that the "one or two little scenes" were to be taken on the highest peak of the Chatsworth Park mountains and she spent the greater part of the Sabbath day standing on the mountain top, braving a gale that threatened each moment to blow her into the ravine three hundred feet below. After it was over Director Duncan expressed satisfaction that his cameraman, "Steve" Smith had "shot" some dandy "silhouette stuff."

Another example of the stunts that Miss Holloway is called upon to perform is shown when a band of brigands, stationed on a cliff above a precipitous trail, lasso her from a galloping horse. She is left swinging in the air as the horse continues on its way.

One exhibitor in endorsing "The Fighting Trail," said he felt that in booking it he had taken out "fifteen weeks of insurance for Monday night business," and the Vitagraph company intends to use this as a slogan in advertising the new serial to exhibitors.

Sheldon Succeeds Freuler in Empire

Stars come and go; directors are changed; even one president is succeeded by another, for James M. Sheldon succeeded John R. Freuler—resigned—in the Empire All-Star Corporation, but the leading man remains the same.

When handsome David Powell—good actor and nice fellow—was engaged to support Ann Murdock in "Outcast," the management thought itself lucky on more counts than one, for not only is Mr. Powell a very good and popular actor with a large following, but he also knows "Outcast" backwards, having supported Elsie Ferguson when she made her sensational hit in the play of the same name.

Now Mr. Powell is being featured in "The Unforeseen," Miss Olive Tell's first starring vehicle, and also in "Her Sister," in which Miss Tell again has the stellar role.

Reports from Portland, Ore., declare that "Sirens of the Sea," Jewel's picture beautiful with Carmel Myers, Louise Lovely and Jack Mulhall in the leading roles has opened to capacity business at the Strand Theater.

White A.C. Special Carbons

FOR MOTION PICTURE WORK

PURE WHITE LIGHT NOISELESS OPERATION

Requires No Change In Lamp Fixtures

"The Carbon That Changes A. C. to D. C."

All that the operator of A. C. apparatus has long desired is realized in the new White A. C. Special Moving Picture Carbon. Noiseless operation, pure white light and steady burning, combined with simple adjustment and elimination of expensive transforming apparatus have caused A. C. operators to regard this new carbon as the last word in A. C. practice.

Due to inherent characteristics, the arc formed with these carbons shows no flicker, even with fluctuations in the line voltage. This fact is not true with any light source where the voltage must be kept practically constant. Not only are they flickerless, but their noiseless operation has justified the title of "The carbon that changes A. C. to D. C."

No new lens or complete change of lamp housing is necessary in the installation of the White A. C. Specials. Take the old carbons out, put the new ones in and you obtain that noiseless, pure white light that insures perfect screen definition.

It will pay you to investigate the non-flickering pure white light which is obtained with these carbons. The White A. C. Specials have shown conclusively that alternating current is still a live issue in those localities where D. C. cannot be obtained.

FOR D. C. OPERATION

the National-Silvertip combination is the standard everywhere. Silvertip means perfect projection the country over.

With these two carbons, both unique in their fields, and designed especially for use with A. C. and D. C., we can fill every requirement in the motion picture industry!

"Cleopatra"

William Fox Production With Theda Bara. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

"CLEOPATRA" is a typical Fox spectacular production presenting Theda Bara as the famous "Siren of the Nile." It is a stupendous offering with many magnificent scenes and gorgeous costumes, imbuing a rich Oriental atmosphere. Some few thousands of people are represented in the big scenes which are especially noteworthy, some scenes of the "Feast of Isis" being particularly beautiful. Everything has been done on a very large scale. The scenes in the desert are very effective as is the vivid picturization of the naval battle of Actium.

Theda Bara as Cleopatra gives to her representation a Winter Garden touch which is not traditional. At no time does she appear queenly and dignified, but she makes a striking picture and wears some daring gowns which will occasion many gasps from the spectators. She is the type that is nothing if not seductive and in this respect fills the role of the notorious Egyptian queen to a nicety—if the term may be used without calling forth a smile.

The whole production is one of great lavishness and moving picture fans will undoubtedly receive it with a great deal of enthusiasm. J. Gordon Edwards has directed the big scenes with a degree of skill which shows a careful study of his subject, but in a few minor details he hasn't been quite as consistent. The photography generally is good, the water scenes being exceptionally well done.

The story is very nearly historically correct, following Shakespeare's version quite closely. It begins with Caesar's invasion of Rome and shows Cleopatra mustering together her forces in the desert. Her meeting with Caesar is pictured, the assassination of Caesar, Mark Antony delivering his famous funeral oration, Cleopatra's meeting with Antony, her great love for him, the naval battle of Actium and the death of Cleopatra. The progress of the story is at times a little slow but interest is sustained by the sumptuousness of the spectacle and Cleopatra's frequent appearances.

Fritz Leiber is the Caesar in the production and Thurston Hall takes the part of Antony. Some good work is done by Albert Roscoe as Pharon. The production is not an artistic triumph, due to overdressed interiors and historic shortcomings on the part of some of the cast, but this is of little commercial importance, as the picture is of the type to attract attention and it will be a good picture from the box-office viewpoint.

"The Adventurer"

Latest Charles Chaplin-Mutual Comedy Ready October 22. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A REVIEW of a Chaplin picture is almost unnecessary. The exhibitor already knows its box-office value with his patrons, and the sort of humor it will contain. Therefore we need only say that the comedian's last Mutual comedy is released to first-run theaters on October 22. It will "pack them in" and gain as many laughs as any previous one did. It is the usual mixture of very clever bits with "rough stuff." There is less really clever business in this than in "The Immigrant," but there is as much or more obvious humor.

In this, as advance notices have told you, Chaplin appears as a convict escaping from prison. There is much fun in his efforts to elude his pursuers. He finally is successful and also manages to get less conspicuous clothes than the prison striped suit. His next adventure is the rescuing from drowning of a society girl and her mother. He becomes their guest and his social blunders, committed in his solemn fashion, can be imagined. The situation is complicated by the arrival of the prison guard and his embarrassment in playing the social lion while trying to keep out of jail.

"Stranded in Arcady"

First Pathe Five-Reel Feature Starring Mrs. Vernon Castle. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

MRS. VERNON CASTLE'S first five-reel feature for Pathe contains a number of "stunts" of the serial kind. She swims a swift river, steers a boat through the rapids, engages in a fight, and in general has a great deal of excitement. She goes through it with spirit and skill.

This picture will draw because of Mrs. Castle's name, and it will be enjoyed because it is refreshing, pretty and full of action. The role given the star is well chosen. She looks well and goes through the various exploits as though she enjoyed them. Her enjoyment is contagious. Then the beautiful scenery and the outdoor atmosphere is delightful.

The story on which the play is based is open to criticism. It is clumsily built, and is a strange mixture of obviousness and perplexity. Its main idea seems to be to present the "desert island" situation from a new angle. The girl in this story proves to be more able to take care of herself than the man is. The method of getting the chief players onto the island is amateurishly done. At first we are led to believe a friend has decoyed them there to win a wager. We suspect this is too obvious, and are not surprised when we learn that a villain and his accomplices had done the deed to deprive them of property left to both of them by an uncle's will.

Frank Crane directed the picture. Elliott Dexter plays the leading male role. A novel by Francis Lynd serves as the basis of the plot.

The Story: Donald Prime is told by his friends that his ideas of women, as set forth in his new book, are wrong. They suggest if he were marooned on a desert island with a girl, he would not find her such a helpless creature as he thinks. Shortly after that, on his way to visit these friends, he is drugged and taken to a wild part of the country. With him is a girl he has never seen before, Lucy Millington, a dancing teacher. She, too, had been brought here while unconscious. Donald is overwhelmed by the situation, but Lucy proves equal to every emergency, and there are a succession of them. They are even entangled in a murder mystery.

At last help arrives. The friend of the author had not been playing a joke. Instead, Prime and Lucy are co-heirs of property which will go to another man if they are not found. This man had tried to have Prime and the girl killed. However, the plot is foiled. The rightful heirs get the fortune and then are married.

"Love and Pep"

Wally Van Comedy (Two Reels). Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

"LOVE AND PEP," with Wally Van, is a light comedy offering and affords a good half-hour's entertainment. The followers of "Cutie" will enjoy seeing him in this role of Wally Pep, for he gets mixed up in many laugh-provoking situations and manipulates an automobile and other vehicles in a way that is highly amusing. Masquerading as a girl on the beach, with a coterie of bathing beauties surrounding him, he proves so attractive that he has to flee from his pursuers and take refuge in a hydro-aeroplane. A race between said hydro-aeroplane and a motor-boat is quite exciting.

The story is of Wally Pep who gets a position as a chauffeur with the Wiggins family because of his ability to inject "pep" into automobiles. He makes himself otherwise useful by making love to his employer's daughter and by flirting with his wife, much to the annoyance of the irate Mr. Wiggins. He drives the family to the beach one day, and, donning a girl's bathing suit, steals a swim with the charming Winnie Wiggins. Father, seeing this unknown "peach," tries a little flirting himself, and upon discovering that the object of his attentions is his chauffeur he starts a regular row. The picture ends with everyone's pursuing everyone else in all sorts of machines until Wally and Winnie jump into the ocean to swim to a minister across the bay.

Nitra Frazer takes the part of Winnie Wiggins and Charles Eldridge does Pa Wiggins in an acceptable manner.

"Magda"

First Clara Kimball Young-Select Offering. Six Reels. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG'S first production with her own company is a picturization of Sudermann's famous drama, whose title role has been interpreted by the greatest actresses. The play, as everyone knows, is very emotional and offers its star wide opportunity for acting. Its appeal to all classes has always been great.

This combination of play and star should make this a drawing card. The story as pictured is sympathetic and interesting. It does not follow the stage version in several respects and while these changes weaken it dramatically, they make it more suitable for the family theater. Magda is pictured as blameless and much sinned against. The main idea, that unsympathetic home surroundings were responsible for her unhappy career, is emphasized.

The star makes the most of the many opportunities given her for emotional expression. Her admirers will be pleased with her work. The settings, most interiors, are in keeping with the story and are well chosen to give the atmosphere of Magda's unattractive home. The acting of the supporting cast is good. Edward Kimball as Magda's stern father draws a vivid and consistent character. Margaret Turnbull adapted the story for the screen; Emile Chautard directed.

The Story: Magda rebells at the harsh ruling of her father and the narrow life of the little German town. Ordered from home because she refuses to marry the man her father selects for her, the girl goes to Berlin to study music. There she is tricked into a mock marriage with a young art student from her home town. He deserts her before her child is born. Magda supports her baby by singing in the streets and in cheap shows. Later she is befriended by a music director and becomes an opera singer.

Years later, having become famous, she is invited to sing in her home town. No one realizes that the famous star is Magda. She is recognized and flattered by the townspeople. She and her father are reconciled. Then Magda meets again Kellner, the man who had betrayed her. Her father, overhearing their conversation, learns of their secret. He wishes Kellner to marry Magda, but Magda, who hates the man, refuses. Kellner, because of Magda's fortune, wishes to marry her. To give her child a name she agrees. Then she learns that Kellner will not acknowledge his son because his career may be endangered. Angered, Magda refuses to consider the marriage. Her father threatens to shoot her and himself unless she agrees. Before he carries out the threat, he suffers a paralytic stroke and dies. Magda is therefore free to work out her own life.

"The Fighting Trail"

Episode 7. "The Lion's Prey." Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

IN this episode "The Fighting Trail" bears out its well-earned reputation of being the best serial yet produced. It fairly abounds in dramatic situations and the suspense is as cleverly kept up as in the previous episodes. There are some remarkably daring feats performed which will give anyone a thrill. Leaping across a ten-foot chasm, when a misstep meant a fall of a couple of hundred feet, and climbing one-handed up a rope with a girl in his free arm are two of the many dangerous stunts which William Duncan does with remarkable calmness. The picture is exciting from start to finish, which is a lot to say in this day when movie ruses are looked upon with disdain by patrons and producers must really do big things to obtain results.

Gwynn leaves Nan on the precarious ledge, climbs to the top of the mountain, and, eluding the outlaws, he manages to steal their lariats. Tying one end to a tree he is lowering himself to Nan when he is discovered by "Cut-Deep" who orders one of his men to cut the rope. The cow-boy friends of Gwynn have followed him to the mine, and, finding the entrance blocked, they go to work with a vengeance to rescue the prisoners. They arrive at the little ledge, the exit of the mine, in time to shoot the hand which is about to cut the rope. Carol Halloway and William Duncan continue to do splendid work.

"The Call of the East"

Paramount Picture with Sessue Hayakawa. Released October 15. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

AN Oriental atmosphere and beautiful exotic settings serve as a background for Sessue Hayakawa in his latest vehicle by Beulah Marie Dix. He reverts to type in this picture and is again seen in his native surroundings and costumes. The picture is peculiarly suited to his individual personality and gives him ample opportunity to display his abilities. The story deals with race prejudice and aside from being logically told holds many tense situations. An American girl who has Japanese blood in her veins, but is unaware of it, is puzzled by her fondness for things Oriental. The call of blood proves too strong and she falls in love with a Japanese noble, much to her sorrow until she is enlightened as to her parentage. That is the part of the picture from which the name was derived and the rest has to do with the Japanese nobleman's revenge upon the American man who ruined his sister.

Patrons who enjoy a foreign flavor to picturizations will be charmed by the beautiful Japanese settings and by Tsuru Aoki, the quaint little wife of Hayakawa who does delightful work. The story is not great but generally absorbing and above the average for entertainment.

The Story: Alan Hepburn (Jack Holt) and his sister Sheila (Margaret Loomis) are the children of an American who made his fortune in Japan. Sheila has Japanese blood in her veins but does not know of it. She meets Arai Takada (Sessue Hayakawa) at a féte one night and becomes enamored of him, although she realizes that race prejudice should keep them apart. Young Hepburn meets Takada's sister, O'Mitsu and, without knowing who she is, takes her away with him. Takada plans a revenge and invites Hepburn to visit him at his country estate. When he gets him there he demands that Hepburn send for his own sister and he tells him that she will be treated in the same way that O'Mitsu was treated by him (Hepburn). When Hepburn refuses he is lowered into a bed of quick-sand until, almost dead, he consents. Sheila arrives and Takada recognizes in her the girl of the fête and as he has fallen in love with her he tells her that she, with her brother, is privileged to leave whenever she desires. She confesses her love for him but he repulses her as she is not of his race. Then Hepburn, seeing his sister's great love for the Oriental, tells her that her mother was a Japanese and so she dons the costume of her people and is happily united with the man she loves. George Melford directed the picture.

Vitagraph's "The Bottom of the Well."

"The Bottom of the Well"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature. Released October 22. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS is an adaptation from Frederick Upham Adams' novel of the same name. There is plenty of good material in the picture but it has been picturized so that the result is not as smooth-running a story as the book relates. Also there is one big point left unexplained at the end which leaves the spectators decidedly perplexed.

One's interest center around two points in the story: who is the father of Stanley Deane, and who is the murderer of Amos Buckingham? The scene where Amos Buckingham is convicted of his own murder has great possibilities.

There is a little boy who does some very good work as "Mascot" in the first part of the picture but his name is not mentioned on the programme. He deserves a great deal of praise for a very pleasing performance. Evart Overton makes "Stanley Deane," the leading figure in the picture, a very manly character, while Agnes Ayres and Adele de Garde play the feminine bits acceptably.

The story opens in West Indian waters. Some smugglers are captured, amongst whom is "Mascot," a youth supposed to be the son of one of the band. He is adopted by a wealthy Britisher, grows to manhood, becomes a lawyer and is known as Stanley Deane. Buckingham, a wealthy mill-owner, is having trouble with his workmen who are becoming violent. Young Deane, who sympathizes with the workmen, goes to Buckingham as their attorney to see if they can come to terms, but Buckingham, who knows of Deane's ambiguous parentage says he will have nothing to say to the son of a smuggler. The workmen have a secret meeting-place which is known as "The Well." Buckingham disguises himself and goes to "The Well" to obtain information. In the meantime David Thomas, a rabid socialist, whose child Buckingham had accidentally run over and killed, goes to the Buckingham mansion and blows up the laboratory. A charred body is found supposed to be Buckingham's. All who were in "The Well" are arrested, the real Buckingham amongst them, and tried for murder. At the crucial moment Buckingham establishes his identity and takes blame for the bitterness of his workmen. It is never explained whose body was found in the ruins. There is also a little love story running through the picture which saves it from being monotonous.

"Who Is Number One?"

First Four Episodes of Paramount Serial with Kathleen Clifford. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

"WHO IS NUMBER ONE?", the widely exploited serial by Anna Katherine Green, featuring Kathleen Clifford in her first screen venture, abounds in masked men, death signs, anonymous letters and gun-play, all of which find reflection in excitement and suspense. The melodramatic key that one expects to find in a serial picture, has been touched throughout and there are thrills aplenty.

The mystery element is well sustained, and the story is told in a way which will not disappoint the many admirers of the author who look for the best in any works with her name attached. The action throughout the picture is brisk, and the production has been given the customary Paramount touches which patrons have come to appreciate and depend upon.

Kathleen Clifford is altogether delightful in the role of Aimee Villon, the ward of the wealthy inventor, Graham Hale. She dashes always into the thickest of the fray and ably fights like a man. In fact she wears male attire most of the time.

In episode three there is a splendid under-water scene which is very effective and many of the other scenes will please. The story deals with the efforts of a band of men to obtain plans of a super-submarine from Graham Hale, a famous inventor.

"The Man-Hater"

Triangle Picture with Winifred Allyn. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

IT IS the little human home-touches in this picture which makes it so appealing and delightful. It is taken from the Saturday Evening Post story by Mary Brecht Pulver, and the slim little plot has been padded out with babies, puppies, ice-cream feasts and household duties to the customary size of five reels. The padding, however strange as it may seem, is the most enjoyable part of the picture. There is an adorable smudgy-faced baby who will delight all ages and create much laughter, and another child, Little Anna Lehr, is surprisingly clever. This piece will please spectators who like a clean sweet picture and who will be satisfied with an absence of situations.

Winifred Allyn as the pitiful little soul who hates men because of a worthless, drunken father, and who later comes to love her husband much against her will, does some very convincing work.

The story tells of Phemie Saunders who judges all men by her worthless, whiskey-soaked father and who consequently hates them. Joe Stull, the big-hearted village blacksmith, falls in love with her in spite of her queer old-fashioned clothes and asks her to marry him. She repulses him in passionate rage. Her poor worn-out mother dies, so Phemie, taking her little sister, (she has no use for her brothers) goes to Joe and says she is willing to marry him if he can take her without love.

Joe loves her so much he is willing to take her under any conditions. He tries to win Phemie's love by kindnesses to the little sister, but Phemie is adamant and, saying a bargain is a bargain, she refuses to let love creep into her life. Then Joe has an inspiration. He starts an affair with a fictitious "Lucy" and manages to arouse Phemie's jealousy. Then to his horror, a real Lucy moves to town. Thinking Phemie doesn't care for him and that he is free to do and go where he chooses, Joe takes Lucy to a dance after Premie has refused to go. Poor little Phemie corners them on the way home. In a fit of rage she demands that Lucy leave her husband alone and then she falls weeping into her husband's arms and confesses she loves him. The picture was directed by Albert Parker and supervised by Allen Dwan.

Little Mary McAlister in an Appealing Essanay-Perfection Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

PATHOS is the predominating element in this second Mary McAlister feature, as humor was in the first, "Pants." It is the kind of pathos audiences like, with enough comedy introduced to keep it from being gloomy. There are smiles and tears throughout until the happy ending. It is an especially good juvenile play, with an appeal to old and young, and its little star, in the title role, adds to her already enviable reputation for charm and clever work. She fulfills the exacting requirements of her part with skill and perfect naturalness.

Three other children support Little Mary. They are Russell McDermott, the clever boy of the first story, a still younger girl and a baby. The latter has an especially strenuous time during the story. These four children are supposed to be orphans, living in the country. Mary plays Mona, the "little mother." The children enact many of the incidents of a country childhood, with their pets and playmates, in a fashion which recalls Clare Briggs' drawings of child life in their wistful appeal.

Details in this picture are beautifully attended to. The children are dressed as children of their class would be. Settings and locations are well chosen. The types of adult players are selected with care. The story, after the first reel, progresses well. It grows more interesting, too. The first reel is rather slow, but after that there is no dragging. It is, in short, an excellent attraction for a high class neighborhood theater. Its appeal will be general except among the few patrons who crave only melodrama and problem plays. For children's matinees, it is fine.

The Story: The step-father of Mona Fairfax and the three other Fairfax children, deserts them. Mona, called "Young Mother Hubbard" by the neighbors because of her care for the children, determines to keep the home, but the owner of the farm informs the local Welfare Society that they must find other places for the little group. The society visit the children and four of the members agree each to take a child. The prospects for the kiddies are not bright, for the would-be foster-parents seem very forbidding. The youngsters beg to stay together, and at last they are allowed to go to their own home for the last night. In the middle of the night, they hitch the horse to the old wagon and set out to run away. They fall asleep and in the morning are found in the farm-yard of the owner of their home. The housekeeper wishes to keep them, but the master is angry. Finally he is won over by little Mona and decides to adopt the whole family.

Among patrons who know and like Rawlinson, it will be fully appreciated.

The production of the story is good, except in a few places when the plot becomes a bit obscure. It is well photographed and many of its scenes are out of the ordinary. The acting is generally good. Ruby LaFavette, who plays the hero's mother, is notably fine. You will wish to mention her

Olive Tell in Empire All Star Feature, Mutual Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

AN entertaining society drama, rather slow in action but with many beautiful exterior scenes, a pleasing cast and a story with a certain amount of human appeal, is this latest Empire offering. Olive Tell, the featured player, is attractive. A stage play, written by Robert Marshall and presented originally at the Empire Theater, New York, by Charles Frohman, is picturized under the direction of John B. O'Brien.

The story is pleasingly acted. David Powell plays opposite the star. Lionel Adams, Fuller Mellish, Eileen Dennes and Helen Courtney are in the cast. The picture should draw on account of its stage history. It is not of the thrilling, melodramatic kind but will satisfy patrons who prefer society stories, without much excitement but with pretty settings, smooth playing and attractive players.

The Story: Margaret Fielding, on the eve of eloping with Henry Traquair, is accidentally discovered in Traquair's apartment in a New York hotel by Captain Haynes, a friend of his and his friend, Walter Maxwell. The conditions, although actually innocent are of a compromising nature, enough so that Traquair introduces Margaret as Mrs. Traquair, anticipating marriage by a few hours. Haynes dines with the supposed bride and groom and notices a peculiar necklace which Margaret is wearing.

An hour before the time set for the wedding Traquair receives a telegram announcing the failure of his band and financial obliteration. He declines to proceed with the marriage. Margaret flees to her father's home. Traquair, despondent over his financial losses, ends his life the following morning.

Three years pass. Maxwell has gone blind, has met Margaret and has married her. They are intensely happy. Haynes shows up, after a long absence on a diplomatic mission and comes to visit them. He believes Margaret the girl he has seen in Traquair's apartment and his belief is strengthened by the quaint necklace which she wears. She denies it to him and he keeps silent to Maxwell.

Maxwell undergoes an operation. His sight is restored. Margaret suffers keenly for fear he will recognize her, when his eyes are restored, as the girl he saw in the hotel. He does and accuses her. He returns to the house to pack his belongings and leaves. As he is packing Haynes rushes in with a letter, written by Maxwell just before he ended his life, which has followed Haynes half around the world, completely establishing Margaret's innocence.

"The Sea Master"

William Russell Feature, American-Mutual Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS offering is in the style of other Russell features, and it is one of the best. It will please all who usually like Russell pictures. Its setting, on board a sailing vessel, is unusual and romantic enough to suit anyone. There are a number of beautiful scenes photographed, including a wonderful storm picture. Besides the action and adventure in the story, there is a strong human appeal.

William Russell is at his best as the hero, Red Dorgan, master of a sailing vessel. The character is sharply drawn and is human and interesting, if not always admirable. The supporting cast also does good work. Francelia Billington, George Fisher, Joe King, George Ahern, Clarence Burton, Rena Carlton, Helen Howard and Perry Banks are included. Edward Sloman's directing is commendable. As a whole, the picture is an excellent one of its kind, which is of the action and adventure type.

The Story: Red Dorgan, on shore with his men, in a furious fight, rescues a girl, Emily, from a coast resort. The girl had gone to visit a dying friend, but Dorgan does not believe her story. He takes Emily and the minister who had accompanied her to his ship. He refuses to free the girl but marries her against her wishes. During the year of the ship's voyage, a child is born and the tale grows more and more interesting until the end.

"Number One" Advertising Campaign

PARAMOUNT has launched its big advertising campaign on "Who Is 'Number One'?," the fifteen-episode serial starring Kathleen Clifford. In more than 150 cities, twenty-four sheets by Frederic Dorr Steele, the illustrator of the Sherlock Holmes' stories, are now on the stands. The story by Anna Katharine Green, famous mystery writer, will begin on Sunday, October 28th—the day before release date—in leading newspapers in fifty cities.

Paramount's newspaper advertising begins before the story starts and continues throughout the run of the picture.

Prints of "Who Is 'Number One'?" are now in all Paramount exchanges and all Paramount salesmen are keeping their promise to exhibitors, to show the picture and to demonstrate to them the pulling power of the vast advertising campaign behind "Who Is 'Number One'?"

Among the newspapers that are printing the complete Anna Katharine Green story and carrying the Paramount "Who Is 'Number One'?" advertising campaign are The New York World, The Chicago Tribune, The Boston Post, The Birmingham Ledger, The Los Angeles Times, The San Francisco Bulletin, The Denver News, The Hartford Courant, The Washington Post, The Atlanta Constitution, The Indianapolis Star, The Muncie Star, The Terre Haute Star, The Des Moines Tribune, The Louisville Herald, The New Orleans Item, The Baltimore American, The Minneapolis News, The St. Paul News, The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, The Omaha News, The Albany Times-Union, The Rochester Pictureplay News, The Troy Times, The Cincinnati Post, The Cleveland Plain Dealer, The Ohio State Journal, The Toledo Times, The Dayton Journal, The Portland Oregonian, The Pittsburgh Press, The Philadelphia North American, The Knoxville Journal-Tribune, The Memphis Commercial-Appeal, The San Antonio Express, The Houston Chronicle, The Fort Worth Record, The Dallas Times-Herald, The Salt Lake City Telegram, The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, The Spokane Spokesman Review and The New Haven Union.

Paramount has completed its special trailers for every episode. These in titles and pictures describe the high spots in the coming episode and furnish a strong pull that will bring the motion picture fans back for each succeeding episode.

"Who Is 'Number One'?" is throughout a mystery story. As it progresses the spectators are given clue after clue as to the identity of the mysterious "Number One," as to the motive back of the machinations of a revengeful woman. Differing from all other mystery tales, the denouement is not held back until the fifteenth episode. The question "Who Is 'Number One'?" is answered before the last episode, but in answering the question the story takes a startling twist into mystery and suspense greater than ever.

Paramount's serial is not open to the criticism that the fans will tire if they are asked the same question for fifteen episodes. They learn the identity of "Number One" while they are still intensely interested in the question but when one problem is solved they are suddenly plunged into another that carries the serial through to a flashing finish.

Famine of Pennies for War Tax

America is without copper pennies. This fact was only ascertained after a thorough search by Joseph Hopp, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Adolph Linick of Jones, Linick & Schaefer had made a complete tour of the leading banks and visited the sub-treasury in preparations for the new "war tax" on theaters, which takes effect November 1st. After inquiring at the various banks and sub-treasury it was discovered that there was not a bag of pennies in Chicago. Government officials began investigation and discovered that the largest amount of pennies that any one had in America was New Orleans, where there was a bag of $200 worth of pennies. Mr. Hopp immeditely sent the following wire to Mr. Roper, Internal Revenue Collector at Washington, D. C.:

"We wish to draw your attention to the fact that at the present time, no pennies can be had at any of the banks or subtreasury in Chicago. We are also informed by the sub-treasury that there are no pennies to be had in America. The revenue tax requires the theaters to collect war taxes from the purchaser of the ticket, which in our case will mean 1, 2, 3, 4, cents. How are we going to collect these taxes if no pennies can be had to make change with? As the time is drawing near to collect this tax it will be necessary to provide some means to collect same. Advise us at your earliest possible convenience." Signed, President Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

William Fox has selected the title "All for a Husband" as the title for Virginia Pearson's forthcoming picture, to be made by Director Carl Harbaugh.

Jewel Carmen Becomes Fox Star

William Fox announces the creation of still another star. Mr. Fox presents to the photoplay world the name of Jewel Carmen, who has been with the Fox forces less than a year as leading woman for William Farnum, and who is advanced to full-fledged stardom because of her dramatic ability, unsual beauty, and Mr. Fox's enthusiasm over her work.

Miss Carmen has been in the East for the last two months making the scenes in "Les Miserables," in which she appears as Cosette. She will leave for the western studios within the near future to begin the series of special features in which she will have the chief part.

Although Miss Carmen has been in motion pictures about four years, she scored her greatest success very recently in her characterization of Eliza Anthony in "The Conqueror."

Miss Carmen's first appearance in the moving photographs was in the role of Lucy Manette, opposite William Farnum, in the excellent picturization of Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities." She also had the leading feminine part in "American Methods" and did important work in "To Honor and Obey?" The five productions already cited need only one other to complete Miss Carmen's record with Fox films. The drama in point is "When A Man Sees Red," the strongest "fighting" story William Farnum has ever had.

New Leading Woman for Jack Pickford

AS his leading woman, Jack Pickford, the popular young Paramount star, has secured Katharine MacDonald, sister of Mary MacLaren and considered one of the most beautiful girls on the screen today. Miss MacDonald is declared also to be gifted beyond the average in the matter of histrionic talent and possessed of a distinctive personality.

Jack Pickford is now at work under Wm. D. Taylor's direction. He has completed the two "Tom Sawyer" films and "The Spirit of '17" is under way.

It is asserted that in the screen adaptations of Mark Twain's stories of youth, great care was taken to retain every feature that made the original stories so thoroughly enjoyable. The scenario of "Tom Sawyer" was prepared by Julia Crawford Ivers and the picture directed by Wm. D. Taylor.

The second "Tom Sawyer" film, takes up the adventures of the youthful hero after his first unforgettable experiences.

"The Spirit of '17" is one of those whimsical ideas in a story applied to a situation bordering upon the tragic and the combination, it is said, will be nothing short of startling as well as decidedly timely. In this picture Mr. Pickford is a youth in a copper mining district who saves the town from a mob of revolutionary laborers egged on by agitators, by the remarkable expedient of enlisting the aid of veterans in a soldiers' home, who hold the fort until the state troops arrive on the scene. This picture is the work of Judge Willis Brown of the Chicago Juvenile Court.

In the matter of casts for these three Jack Pickford Paramount productions the utmost care has been excercised in selecting types to suit the roles perfectly, while in the case of settings and locations, especially in the "Tom Sawyer" stories the effort has been to render them as realistic and true to the original as possible.

Paul Hurst Joins Universal

One of the most capable and experienced directors recently added to the producing forces at Universal City, who will direct photo-dramas in which Helen Gibson is to be featured.

Hurst recently staged the second series of "Stingaree" stories for Kalem, as well as many other successful productions for that company during an engagement practically of six years.

Previous to joining the Universal Hurst had been connected with the Signal Company where his work included both directing and acting. In "Judith of the Cumberlands," "The Manager of the B & A," "Whispering Smith" and "The Lass of the Lumberlands" Hurst played important parts.

The new director already has finished his first two productions for the Universal—"The Brand of the West" and "The Frustrated Hold-up." Helen Gibson is the principal player, with Mildred Wilson opposite, and Buck Connor, "Hoot" Gibson and a troop of Uuiversal cowboys in their support.

Geraldine Farrar in "The Woman God Forgot," an Aztec story.

Authority Praises "Woman God Forgot"

"The attention to detail displayed in the picture, 'The Woman God Forgot,' is amazing," said Prof. Wilburforce Eames, historical librarian of the New York Public Library and world-renowned authority on historical and Indian matters.

"The reproduction of the head-dresses alone must have required great care and research," continued Prof. Eames, "for there are a great many of them worn by the different castes of Aztecs, and different styles were worn for various occasions.

"The architecture, too, has been faithfully reproduced, a colossal undertaking when the wide range the film covers is considered. Remarkable faithfulness to detail is displayed in the hangings, settings and costumes and even the figures in the draperies. The weapons used are also historically accurate."

President Walter E. Greene, of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, which will exhibit the film throughout the country, expressed himself as highly pleased at the words of commendation from Prof. Eames, who is the author of several books bearing on Indian history.

"Positively no limit was placed in making this film," said Mr. Greene, "with the result that 'The Woman God Forgot' is one of the most elaborate productions ever conceived in motion photography. An entire Aztec city was built in California, where this film was taken, and Montezuma's palace and the pyramids, nearly 200 feet high, were reproduced. Miss Geraldine Farrar plays the leading role of Montezuma's daughter, and thousands of actors take part, including many prominent stage and screen favorites." Cecil B. De Mille, general director of the Lasky company, staged the production.

Rothacker to Print Chaplin Releases

One of the most important contracts in the history of motion picture printing and developing has been signed and entered into by and between the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of New York and the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago.

By virtue of this document, the million dollar Charlie Chaplin pictures, and other releases controlled by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, will be made by the famous home of "Perfect Developing and Printing" at Chicago and shipped from that point to all parts of the world.

The contract was awarded the Rothacker company after careful analysis of the situation by J. D. Williams, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and a committee of First National Exhibitors' Circuit members composed of Aaron Jones, Chicago, Robert Lieber, Indianapolis, and H. Schwalbe, Philadelphia, and was signed by S. L. Rothapfel and H. Schwalbe as president and secretary of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and Watterson R. Rothacker and H. J. Aldous as president and secretary of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company.

The strikes at the lumber mills in and around Everett, Washington, are having a disastrous effect on the motion picture business of the town. Most of the mills are shut down and people are leaving Everett for a place where work can be had.

The Major Says He's Been Vilified

Major Funkhouser, Chicago's esthetic second deputy superintendent of police and ex-officio motion picture censor, explained his activity in guarding Chicago's morals at a meeting of the Woman's City Club thus:

"There are pictures shown in this city which would make the high school girls who see them suspect their own mothers. It is not the Chicago firms but those from outside whose pictures I am called upon to censor. I must wash New York's dirty linen."

The major said that he was being "vilified by film companies" for doing what the law compels him to do.

Victor Eubank, general manager for the Essanay company, addressed the same meeting and stated that censorship troubles did not annoy him.

"We are making a class of films that cannot be censored," said Eubank. "We haven't a single villain in our employ. We are making the kind of pictures people now are looking for, those of a lighter vein that take their minds off the horrors of war."

Army Film Is Ready for Distribution in West

The initial showing in Chicago of the patriotic film, "Who Leads the National Army?" was held on the evening of October 22 at the meeting of the Western Society of Engineers in the Monadnock Building. The picture is now showing in the east and is ready for distribution in the middle west. It gives a graphic portrayal of the training which the officers of the new national army underwent at Plattsburg and Fort Sheridan.

Indianapolis Convention Enlivened by Lillian Walker

The motion picture convention at Indianapolis on October 20 was a decided success. Tomlinson Hall was thronged by fans who displayed a great interest in the event. Among the chief attractions was the appearance of Miss Lillian Walker, who was presented to the convention by Si Greiver, of Greiver and Herz, handlers of Miss Walker's releases. At the ball given in the evening photographs of the dimpled star were auctioned for the soldiers' tobacco fund and a considerable amount of money was realized.

Oldknow With Frank Hall

William Oldknow, long one of the best known film distributors of the South, has become associated with Frank Hall in the management of the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, and will make his headquarters in New York in the future in order to devote his entire time and energy to the advancement of the new organization. Mr. Oldknow is president of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company with branches in Atlanta and many of the other principal cities of the South. For many years he has handled the distribution of Universal pictures in that territory.

Action of the sort which should prove particularly attractive to the large number of followers of the sprightly Three C Comedies released through General Film Company is to be found in more than usual quantity and quality in the current release, "A Boarding House Battle."

Training Camp Film Booking Rapidly

HUNDREDS of motion picture exhibitors throughout New York, the New England States and Northern New Jersey on Monday, October 22nd, added to their patriotic obligations by running the one-reel picture, "Who Leads the National Army!" a film authorized by the Government, promoted by the Military Training Camps Association of the United States, and being distributed by the Triangle Distributing Corporation as a patriotic duty.

The response of the exhibitors in the territory covered by the territory served by the New York, Buffalo, Boston and New Haven Triangle exchanges apparently was almost unanimous when they were asked to run the picture as a part of their program. Hundreds of them immediately volunteered to book the picture in place of some other one-reel subject and pay exactly the same rental price that they would pay for the other short subject for which they substituted "Who Leads the National Army!"

All of the funds derived from the rental of the picture are to be used in the first big gun of a campaign for universal military training, especially with the younger generation. The plan is to establish camps throughout the country at which boys from 14 to 19 years of age will be given a course of one or two months each year in military tactics under regular army men. The time at which the boys will attend these camps will be so arranged as not to interfere with their school duties and will be without expense to the attendants.

The first object sought to be obtained through the showing of "Who Leads the National Army!" is to demonstrate to the people of the United States, and especially relatives of those affected by the draft, that the officers of the National Army are efficient, well trained men, thoroughly capable of taking complete charge of the physical and moral welfare of the men of their commands.

This object is attained in the picture by showing just exactly the training through which the officers were forced to undergo before they received their commissions.

"Who Leads the National Army!" was presented in the districts of the New York, Buffalo, Boston and New Haven exchanges for the week of October 22, after which a few prints were left in each of these exchanges and the balance were shipped to the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Triangle exchanges for the drive during the week of October 29.

Big Vitagraph Board Campaign

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Greater Vitagraph distributing organization, states that the company has completed the posting of twelve thousand additional 24-sheets on "The Fighting Trail," the big melodramatic serial of the outdoors featuring William Duncan and Carol Holloway.

This is the third stage in the Vitagraph company's drive in connection with the promotion campaign that has made "The Fighting Trail" such an overwhelming success. Four weeks before the first episode of the serial was released, the company had posted twelve thousand 24-sheet stands in all cities of the United States and Canada of 10,000 population or over, the arrangements providing that these should remain standing for four weeks.

Two weeks before the beginning of the serial's run, a complete plan book, containing every conceivable aid for the exhibitor, was sent broadcast to newspapers and exhibitors all over the country and the advance publicity that this book contained served to give "The Fighting Trail" an introduction almost as extensive as that provided by the billboards. This plan book is declared by exhibitors and sales experts in the industry to be the most comprehensive work of its kind ever issued in connection with any serial or feature since the beginning of motion pictures.

The second twelve thousand 24-sheets now completely posted mark the third step in the promotion of "The Fighting Trail." These stands will remain up for the same length of time as the first posting did. This arrangement by Vitagraph gives the second, third and later run houses the full benefit of the big display.

In addition to posting these 24,000 24-sheets at its own expense, Vitagraph provided exhibitors with all the additional paper they desired and many of them availed themselves of this free paper in order to cover their own neighborhoods fully, sniping the name of their theater and the day of the serial's run on the lower left hand corner of the stand. In both instances, the paper was made from stills of the play, the stars being made into heroic figures ten feet high, with a background of wild mountain country. The lettering was large and stood out sharply, the name of the serial being the most conspicuous thing on the stands.

While no announcement is forthcoming as yet, it is understood that Vitagraph is planning an even larger billboard campaign for "Vengeance—and the Woman," their new serial of which Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady are the authors, than that which attended "The Fighting Trail."

New Clara Kimball Young Play

Clara Kimball Young, who is said to be the only person, man or woman, to own their own producing company outright, has just completed her second picture, "Shirley Kaye" under her own management, and which will be seen on the screen in a few days. In elaborate settings it is said to far exceed her first picture "Magda." In the cast are Corliss Giles, who makes his initial appearance on the screen, George Fawcett, George Backus, John Sunderland, Claire Whitney, Nellie Lindrich, Frank Otto and F. O. Winthrope. Joseph Kaufman, the director, it is said, has surpassed even the high standards set by him in his Billie Burke productions.

Miss Young will immediately begin work on "The Marionettes" under the celebrated French director, Emile Chautard, who is putting the finishing touches to Mme. Cavalieri's coming release in Fort Lee.

Brockliss Issues Bulletin of Foreign Markets

Beautifully illustrated and printed, and with portraits of such prominent film men as Sidney Garrett, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc.; Ira M. Lowry, producer of "For the Freedom of the World"; W. L. Brind (Brind's Educationals), and many popular stars, "Brockliss Bulletin" makes its appearance. This is a publication compiled exclusively for those interested in the foreign picture markets. All interested may obtain a copy by addressing J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York.

Love Sticks to Pictures

Montagu Love, star of World-Pictures Brady-Made, has no room for the yearning to return to the speaking stage which manifests itself to so many of the picture stars—mostly when the screen begins to weaken in its beckonings.

Chaplin Displays Skill in Diving and Swimming

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S latest Mutual comedy, "The Adventurer," released October 22, opens with a strikingly original bit of comicality, in which the farceur, who is being sought high and low by armed guards of a penitentiary from which he is supposed to have escaped, emerges like a striped caterpillar from the sand of the beach, leaving a deep hole behind him into which the astonished guard tumbles backward, while Charlie escapes.

"The Adventurer" portrays one continuous effort on the part of Mr. Chaplin's pursuers to corner him, and an amazing number of narrow escapes on the part of the star, each more comical than the last.

The play opens on the sea beach, with Chaplin in his convict stripes and the little round cap of the penitentiary inmate. There is a view of rugged coast with precipitous cliffs, up and down which Chaplin leads his pursuers, eluding them with that flat-footed dexterity for which he is famed.

Wearied of the sport of being shot at by the guard, Chaplin exchanges his suit of stripes for the bathing tights of a fashionable beachcomber, and, thus disguised, he proceeds to save the life of the fair Edna Purviance, as well as that of her mother, the former having gone beyond her depth while trying to save the latter.

Chaplin executes the rescues with his usual nonchalance and incidentally gives a fine exhibition of swimming and diving. This is the first Chaplin picture in which the comedian's skill at water sports has been demonstrated.

The gratitude of the beautiful young woman prompts her to make Charlie a guest at the family mansion and it is there that he arouses the hostility of The Count, who is paying his hostess attention. The Count recognizes Charlie as an escaped convict but the tables are cleverly turned on him by the latter who diverts suspicion to the foreigner by drawing whiskers on his own picture in the newspaper, thus making it resemble The Count.

Despite this subterfuge, Charlie, in a borrowed dress suit, is traced down by the guards, who break into the house and renew the pursuit up and down stairs, over balconies and in and out of folding doors.

Brenon Becomes Independent Producer

Maker of "War Brides," "Fall of the Romanoffs" and Notable Features Takes Control of Own Corporation—"Empty Pockets"

HERBERT BRENON, the motion picture creator, has announced a declaration of independence. In becoming an absolutely independent producer, Mr. Brenon is the only big director entirely without entangling screen alliances.

Mr. Brenon is known to fans through his creation of the Annette Kellerman fantasies, including "A Daughter of the Gods," and of the Alla Nazimova production, "War Brides." Mr. Brenon has just proved his remarkable discernment and knowledge of the public taste by producing "The Fall of the Romanoffs," which was built around the Russian autocracy and the birth of the new freedom. "The Fall of the Romanoffs" went into New York's Broadway Theater last Sunday and since the premiere performance has played to absolutely capacity business. The advance sale is record breaking. In fact, no picture drama since "The Birth of a Nation" ever started its public career with such a smashing success.

"The Fall of the Romanoffs" is, of course, Brenon's best production. Brenon is a man of ideas, tremendous nervous energy, distinct ideals and determination to never stand still. Immediately following the unquestionable stamp of the public's approval on "The Fall of the Romanoffs" Mr. Brenon announced his independence.

Announcement Made from Bed

The announcement came from a hospital bed, for two days following the Broadway premiere Mr. Brenon underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Postgraduate Hospital. Mr. Brenon had personally supervised the preparations for the Broadway opening, had attended the first performances and had kept up his work at the studio until the very moment of the operation. So it was characteristic of the man that his biggest announcement should come from a hospital cot. Temporary illness could not down his great restlessness of energy.

Mr. Brenon is now in absolute control of the corporation bearing his name. Other interests have been purchased. Mr. Brenon has practically finished "Empty Pockets," visualized from Rupert Hughes' mystery romance.

His announcement of future plans carries remarkable signifigance. Mr. Brenon has arranged to present Otis Skinner in Edward Knoblock's "Kismet." He intends to make "Kismet" the greatest production of his career. The Knoblock fantasy of the days of Haroun-al-Raschid offers tremendous opportunities with its sumptuousness of mise-en-scene, the story sweeping through crowded bazaars, thronged mosques, glittering palaces, harems with pools of bathing girls, and even the desert itself.

The Knoblock drama was one of the sensations of the American stage. Mr. Skinner's playing of the central figure, the wily, unscrupulous beggar, Hajj, being considered the most brilliant creation of his career. "Kismet," with its high colors, its atmosphere of Oriental sensuousness and languor, and all the love and romance, hate and passion of the East, will give Mr. Brenon wide scope for his imaginative abilities.

Mr. Brenon's other big announcement concerns Hall Caine's widely popular novel, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." He has arranged to present this romance with its widely discussed handling of religion and divorce on the screen.

Mr. Brenon is a director of wide variety. His Kellermann fairy spectacles were creations of fantasy, beauty and imagination. His "War Brides" was a powerful, emotional handling of a tense, tragic story. His more recent visualization of Louis Joseph Vance's, "The Lone Wolf," proved his mastery of swift-moving melodrama. Here he went beneath the shell of melodrama to the human motives and foibles beneath. And now his "Fall of the Romanoffs" has proved his ability to present contemporary history—probably the biggest test of a director—in gripping fashion.

Unusual Base Ball Films

One of the most interesting releases of the fall is Marty McHale's "Baseball Revue of 1917." The picture is made up of five reels showing every team in both the National and American leagues, and features every star of the game.

Mr. McHale was formerly one of the most promising pitchers of the American League, and through the co-operation of his friends in the game has been able to actually get his camera on the playing field while league games were in progress, which has never before been accomplished. Tris Speaker is his partner in the enterprise, and it is only natural that in the hands of two such experts who know baseball from the ground up, the result should leave nothing to be desired.

The picture is so constructed that it is possible to release it in single reels as a serial, or as a single feature of five reel length; this to be decided according to the demands of local exhibiting conditions. Two of the parts are given up exclusively to the Chicago Sox and the New York Giants respectively, and are of great interest in view of the recent world series. All the principal players of both teams are shown in close-ups, and the picture forms a permanent record of their various abilities. The latter perhaps is one of the chief points in favor of the picture. It is not simply a picture of a ball game, but a permanent record of the 1917 season, which will be of lasting interest to the public.

King Bee Entertainers

Nat H. Spitzer, sales manager of the King-Bee Films corporation, has invited all the sales managers of the various exchanges throughout the U. S. to come to New York Thanksgiving week to celebrate the unusual success made by Billy West comedies all over the country.

This famous product not yet six months old has established a record for business never equalled in the film industry. Over three thousand exhibitors in the United States alone are featuring Billy West King-Bee comedies on their programs.

"Most Valuable and Interesting"

MOTOGRAPHY is to me the most valuable and interesting of all motion picture publications with two exceptions, our own. It is the only one I take home with me to read thoroughly. The others have either too much or too little in them.—Eugene V. Bruster, managing editor, Motion Picture Magazine & Classic, 175 Duffield Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

November Will Be Big Fox Month

November should prove one of the most auspicious months in the history of Fox Film Corporation, because it will mark the advent on the screen of a new spectacular film, "The Babes in the Woods;" of the Sunshine brand of William Fox-Henry Lehrman comedies, and of Mme. Sonia Markova, William Fox's sensational Russian star, whose engagement in films was announced last week.

Besides Mme. Markova's initial production, there will be released by Mr. Fox three other feature pictures. Markova's photoplays will be placed among the one-a-week, 52-a-year releases. The titles and the dates of the new Special Features are:

November 11—Sonia Markova in "The Painted Madonna.

November 4—June Caprice in "Miss U. S. A."

November 18—Virginia Pearson in "All for a Husband."

November 25—Gladys Brockwell in "A Branded Soul."

"Miss U. S. A.," June Caprice's new vehicle, is described as a "Red, White and Blue story infused with patriotic thrill." The picture has abundant dramatic action. In fact, it is the most dramatic subject which Miss Caprice has made to date. In the supporting company appear prominently William Courtleigh, Jr., Frank Evans, Tom Burrough and Al Hall. Harry Millarde is the director, and Randolph Lewis the author of the scenario.

Sonia Markova makes her debut on the screen on November 11 in a photoplay called "The Painted Madonna," directed by O. A. C. Lund, the newest member of the William Fox directorial staff in the eastern studios. "The Painted Madonna" is an impressive drama of pathos and power.

Virginia Pearson's forthcoming film, "All for a Husband," which Carl Harbaugh has in work, will be a distinct novelty among the studio output of the year.

Bertram Bracken is progressing rapidly on "A Branded Soul," an unusual photodrama from a story by E. Lloyd Sheldon. The members of Miss Brockwell's company are all well-known photoplay artists.

Lester Cuneo, who has been playing "heavies" in support of Harold Lockwood, has received his green draft card notifying him to hold himself in readiness to report for military service on twenty-four hours notice.

Mary Pickford to Be "The Little Princess"

PRESIDENT Walter E. Greene of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation has announced November 5 as the release date of Mary Pickford's latest vehicle, "The Little Princess." The story is from the book by Frances Hodgson Burnett; author of "Little Lord Fauntelroy," and was adapted to the screen by Frances Marion, who has written the scenarios for Mary's recent successes, and directed by Marshall Neilan.

"We look for a greater triumph for Mary in this subject than in 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm,'" declared Mr. Greene. "The part of Sara Crewe, which Miss Pickford plays, is an ideal one for her, combining pathos with humor. As a very rich little girl who loses her father and her wealth at the same time, and who goes to the extreme of poverty, the role is a very appealing one and is superbly interpreted by Miss Pickford.

"The story permits of lavish treatment, and we have spared no expense to make it a super-picture. It is a fitting production to follow 'Rebecca' and 'The Little American.'"

In "The Little Princess," as Sara Crewe, Mary Pickford lives with her father in India and later goes to a girls' fashionable boarding school in London, where she entertains her fellow pupils with Oriental tales, which are shown on the screen. Later, when reverses overtake her she becomes a scullery maid in the same establishment, subjected to cruelty and indignities by a shrewish and hypocritical matron.

This picture marks the last appearance of Norman Kerry, Miss Pickford's leading man, on the screen, as he has sailed to France to become an officer in the Royal Flying Corps.

"It is with mingled pride and regret that we part with Mr. Kerry," said President Greene,—"regret in losing the services of such a capable actor, and pride in the fact that a member of the Artcraft family will take a prominent part in the great world drama now raging on the European continent."

New Essanay Scenics

Essanay has just announced the titles of its new series of scenic pictures. These pictures have a screen time of 15 minutes, and are of such a nature that they may be used in connection with any sort of program, whether the feature picture be comedy or tragedy. The fact that they are short also is an advantage.

The first series of pictures covers a range of territory all the way from Canada to the southwest of the United States. The photography is excellent, showing the wonderful scenery to the very best advantage. The pictures show many of the scenes familiar to tourists, but also get away from the beaten path and give many glimpses of out-of-the-way places of rare scenic beauty.

The subjects will be released weekly, beginning about December 1. The titles of the first ten follow: "Salmon Fishing in New Brunswick, Northeastern Canada"; "Lake Louise. Visiting a Fairyland which Artists of Book and Brush Have Proclaimed the Loveliest Spot in North America"; "Banff National Park: A Trip Through the Great Playground of Canada, Covering an Area of 2,000 Square Miles in the Heart of the Rocky Mountains Park"; "The Great Natural Industries of Canada"; "Water Powers of Western Canada"; "Through Canada from Coast to Coast"; "How Canada and the Farmer Co-operate in Grain Raising"; "Agricultural Opportunities in Western Canada"; and "Scenes Among the Navajos."

Other titles will be announced later.

Film Companies Capitalized

Certificates of incorporation for eleven new amusement enterprises having a total capitalization of $241,500 have been filed in New York state.

The new corporations are formed to engage in the theatrical and motion picture business.

Frederic McKay, Nat Roth and Jules Murry of New York City are the principal stockholders of the Gotham Productions Company, having a capital stock of $20,000.

The list of new concerns follows:

Gotham Productions Company, New York City; to engage in both the theatrical and motion picture business in its various branches; capital, $20,000. Directors—July Murry, Nat Roth and Frederic McKay, 223 West Forty-fourth street, New York City.

Eveland Theater Corporation, New York City; theatrical, vaudeville and motion pictures; capital, $5,000. Directors—Arrett and A. Higgins, 301 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Special Pictures Corporation, New York City; motion pictures; capital, $1,500. Directors—F. W. Gaffney, Thomas A. Barrett and A. Higgins, 301 West Seventeenth street, New York.

Trinity Trading Corporation, Pelham Manor, N. Y.; to act as agents and brokers in the sale, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures; capital, $50,000. Directors — Charles F. Pope, Eleanor O'Keefe and Edgar C. Beecroft, 501 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Terry Holding Company, New York City; to operate hotels, theaters and halls; capital, $50,000. Directors—Watt Terry, Louisa B. Terry, Brockton, Mass.; Llewellyn C. Collins, 103 West 136th street, New York City.

Eureka Amusement Company, Brooklyn, N. Y.; theatrical, motion pictures and other amusements; capital, $10,000. Directors—Trasy D. Stamatis, George D. Stamatis and Costas Stamatis, 116 Kingston avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Helene Price, Inc., New York City; to manufacture theatrical costumes and gowns; capital, $5,000. Directors—Morris Rothstein, Sidney A. Horwitt and Helene Price, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

Emerald Film Service Company, New York City; to engage in all branches of the motion picture business; capital, $10,000. Directors—Joseph M. Davis, Theodore C. Friedman, 60 Broadway, New York City, and Barney S. Davis, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Buffalo Motion Picture Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y.; motion picture exhibitions; capital, $30,000. Directors—S. K. Talbot, Ben Starr and Charles McCready, Buffalo, N. Y.

Lund Directing Sonia Markova

William Fox has obtained the services of O. A. C. Lund as director for Sonia Markova, the sensational Russian star whose acquisition Mr. Fox announced recently. Mme. Markova has been busily at work for some time under Mr. Lund's direction in Grantwood, Lee, N. J.

Fox Film Corporation now has what is probably the largest directorial staff of any one motion picture producing company. Fifteen film makers are engaged in Mr. Fox's eastern and western studios. Four of these men do comedies under the supervision of Henry Lehrman. The other screen generals are: J. Gordon Edwards, R. A. Walsh, Frank Lloyd, John G. Adolfi, Richard Stanton, Carl Harbaugh, Kenean Buel, Bertram Bracken, Harry Millarde and O. A. C. Lund.

Work on the dramatic productions is almost evenly divided between east and west. All of the comedy pictures are produced on the Pacific Coast.

A large cast has been assembled to support Sonia Markova in the film. The principals include Sidney Mason, who played Blackie Daw in the stage production of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford"; William Lampe, David Herblin, Albert Tavernier, Anita Navaro, Edith Reeves and Julia Stuart.

Broadway Returns to Continuous Shows

The Broadway Theater of New York returned to its old-time policy of continuous performances, when Jewel Productions, Inc., brought into the house the seven-reel Ralph W. Ince production, "The Co-Respondent." The picture was enthusiastically received and hundreds of persons were turned away from the playhouse which was crowded to capacity.

The feature was preceded by the presentation of "The Shame of Bulkon," a virile tale of the far-north, a reel of current events, scenic pictures and a good musical program. "The Co-Respondent" is after the play of the same name by Alice Leal Pollack and Rita Weiman in which Irene Fenwick appeared on Broadway two years ago. It has its locale in a fashionable New England summer colony and in the editorial offices of a New York newspaper. It will continue, afternoon and evening, at the Broadway for several weeks, to be replaced by Lois Weber's latest production, "The Price of a Good Time" from "The Whim," by Marion Orth, which appeared in breezy stories and in which beautiful young Mildred Harris first makes her appearance as a Lois Weber "find."

Woman Director Busy

Ida May Park, who is directing Dorothy Phillips in a series of emotional screen dramas, is one of the few women devoting herself entirely to photoplay production. She is, in private life, the wife of Joseph De Grasse, who has worked in conjunction with Miss Park in preparing for the screen a number of Bluebird features. Miss Park's latest work is the Jewel feature, "The Grand Passion," with Miss Phillips, and which is soon to be released.

In order that it may reach the public at the earliest possible moment, the release date of the Gaumont-Mutual Weekly has been changed from Wednesday to Sunday. This change becomes effective at once, and Mutual Weekly No. 147 will be released on Sunday, October 21.

Posters That Bring the Money

AN EXPERT DISCUSSION OF AN IMPORTANT PHASE OF ADVERTISING

(Note: The author of the following article is a man of long experience in the world of motion picture advertising, well qualified to discuss details of the work.

WHEN an exhibitor has been interested by a branch manager to the point of signing a contract for service, he is naturally concerned as to the quality of his advertising material. For, after all, he has to sell a picture to his patrons, after he has bought it himself, and he is successful in the proportion that the work of the publicity and sales department has been augmented by the righth kind of posters and other advertising aids.

Posters that Sell Tickets

Naturally, the right kind of a poster is the one that attracts the greatest number of people, and let me say that the exhibitor judges the value of his paper by one standard—its effect upon the box office. The beauty of the material, be it poster, slide or lobby display, means nothing to him unless it can be translated into dollars. For he is in the business, first, last and all the time, to make money. And he comes almost instinctively to know the kind of paper that will lure the passer-by to the ticket window or drive him away from the theater.

So, in designing exhibitors' advertising material it is a good plan to keep in mind the wants of the exhibitor, who is the direct point of contact, not only with the public but with the branch manager, and who, in turn, acts as a sort of clearing house for receiving and transmitting ideas to the home office. It is well, however, not to be "blown about by every wind of doctrine," that is, be influenced by the radical or personal views of some one exhibitor at the expense of others of widely differing opinions. For instance, one exhibitor might demand the sensational, another the melodramatic, another the romantic, according to the tastes of the majority of his patrons. Strike a happy medium—a strong average—tell the story of the product in a manner that will make the widest possible appeal, and you will fulfill the basic purpose of advertising.

"Punch" and "Carrying" Quality

Posters must have "punch," insists the exhibitor—"action," as it is sometimes termed. It would seem, however, that "punch" is a matter of psychology. For example: A design showing a head-on collision between two trains or one man throwing another through a window would express action. But mere movement is not necessarily "punch," for some of the strongest posters are portrayals of tense emotion or dramatic fervor and quite devoid of action in the ordinary sense of the word.

But, insists another exhibitor, posters must "carry"—an important quality by the way, effected sometimes by originality of composition. But exaggerated or too fanciful designs, born of the artist's imagination, are tabooed. Triangle believes in truth in advertising. The object is not merely to get out a striking poster, but to portray an actual incident or character from the play. For the public resents misrepresentation, and motion picture advertising is not different from any other. It must tell the truth. So, in illustrating its advertising, Triangle tries to stick as closely as possible to the "still" photographs of actual scenes taken during the making of the picture.

Ordinarily posters are made in threee sizes—one, three and six sheets. The one-sheet, generally displayed in a lobby frame, and designed for close inspection, is more carefully worked out than the three and six-sheets, which are as a rule placed in the front of a theater or on some neighboring billboard. As the latter are generally seen from a distance, they are designed in broader style than the one-sheet. The most effective and "carrying" six-sheets are those with not more than two or three figures standing out in bold relief against a solid background.

Putting Comedy Over

I am reminded at this point that comedy offers a most difficult problem for the poster artist, because the situation that is funny upon the screen is either tame or more often melodramatic when caught by the still camera man. So you see the lot of the poster man is not always a happy one. It becomes a tragedy when he tries to design a comedy poster.

Triangle believes in distinctive advertising—radical departures from ordinary routine methods. Motion pictures are getting better and better all the time, and the advertising must keep pace and reflect these higher standards, both in quality and ideas. One of the best examples of Triangle's policy to get away from all landmarks is the rotogravure one-sheet—a decided innovation in lobby display. The rotogravure method has a decided advantage over other processes in this respect—it reproduces the delicate tones and artistic finish of the original photograph without loss of detail. It does this because it is an actual transfer of the photograph upon paper.

Triangle's Novelty Herald

While on the subject of rotogravure, attention is directed to Triangle's latest novelty—a small rotogravure herald. When folded, this herald measures 3½x5½ inches and is printed in two colors. Experience has demonstrated that the ordinary herald is too large, and Triangle has solved the problem by making this piece of advertising matter a size so convenient and handy that it can be readily slipped into a man's pocket, a lady's handbag or an ordinary envelope. Another strong point in its favor is that it costs the exhibitor considerably less than the former style.

A word about slides. Inasmuch as the audience is compelled to wait between pictures, while the slides are being displayed, it is necessary that they be attractive and that they tell the story quickly. Triangle slides do not tire the eye with a confusion of detail, decorations and long captions, forcing impatient patrons to read a lot of unnecessary text matter—they merely show a striking picture with the background eliminated and the title of the play and name of the star displayed in bold, legible lettering.

Players Added to Cast

John Ehrets, Jack McDonald, W. H. Ryno and Victor Sarno have been added to the cast of "This Is the Life," which R. A. Walsh is directing in William Fox's West Coast studios. George Walsh, brother of R. A., is the star of the production.

Fox Orders World's Best Comedies

Producer Gives Director Unlimited Resources and Time—Result Is Sunshine Comedies

WILLIAM FOX, after two years of experimenting and the expenditure of an enormous amount of money, presents to exhibitors and the motion picture public Sunshine Comedies, confident of their immediate sensational success.

In Sunshine Comedies, he believes he has solved the exhibitor's most troublesome problem—the comedy end of the programme. As an exhibitor, himself, Mr. Fox was forced to the realization that the selection of this part of the programme was the most vexing with which an exhibitor had to contend.

"Why can't we have better comedies?" was Mr. Fox's constant demand of his managers and bookers.

"We are getting the very best the market affords," he was told.

Out of this situation came Mr. Fox's ambition as a producer to make comedies that Mr. Fox as an exhibitor would approve.

"I am going to make the best comedies in the world," Mr. Fox declared. "I am going to be the first in the field or I will not offer a single comedy to an exhibitor."

Sets Lofty Comedy Standard

Mr. Fox sent for Henry Lehrmann, who, while admittedly a master comedy director, was regarded as "too expensive" for the average producer.

"I want to make the best comedies in the world," Mr. Fox told Mr. Lehrmann when they were brought together. "It is my ambition to make comedies on a scale commensurate with my other productions. Do you think you can do it?"

Lehrmann said he could.

"But it will be an expensive undertaking," he added.

"I do not care what they cost," Mr. Fox told him. "What I want is to produce the best comedies in the world—remember—THE BEST COMEDIES IN THE WORLD."

"Who is to be the judge?" asked Mr. Lehrmann.

"There is but one judge of any production in which I may be interested," Mr. Fox said. "That is the public. The public judges without prejudice, and it is the public that you must please. Now, go ahead."

The entire resources of the Fox Film Corporation were put at Mr. Lehrmann's disposal and he was told he would not be hurried.

On this basis began the making of Sunshine Comedies more than a year ago. Work moved quietly and quickly on the Pacific coast, in a specially erected studio. When Mr. Fox visited the coast last spring, he saw the fruits of Mr. Lehrmann's work. Mr. Fox is confident that in offering Sunshine Comedies he has realized his ambition of producing the best comedies in the world.

Comedies Are Hardest to Make

Discussing Sunshine Comedies and the making of comedies, Mr. Fox declared it to be the most difficult proposition in the film industry.

"Sunshine Comedies have demonstrated that it costs as much, if not more, to make a two-reel comedy than it does to make a five-reel dramatic feature," Mr. Fox said. "We have not spared time nor money in the making of Sunshine Comedies and I am sure we are offering exhibitors the best comedies ever made."

Sunshine Comedies are going to be released every two weeks—twenty-six a year.

The first three releases of Sunshine Comedies together with the dates are:

Nov. 11—Roaring Lions and Wedding Bells.

Nov. 25—A Milk-Fed Vamp.

Dec. 9—His Smashing Career.

In addition to the three releases announced, there are eight other Sunshine Comedies ready.

Fairbanks Entertains Elsie Janis

Douglas Fairbanks last week gave a luncheon in honor of Elsie Janis and her pleasant mother at his California home. Of course Bull Montana was on hand with Professor Ito, Strangler Lewis, Leach Cross, Spike Robinson, Tom Kennedy, all of professional reputations. Then there were Ruth Allen, Mrs. Clifford Crawford, John Fairbanks, Eileen Percy, Norman Kerry, Victor Fleming and Bennie Zeidman.

The luncheon was preceded by a wrestling exhibition between Douglas and Bull Montana, followed by a jiu-jitsu match with Professor Ito, in which Fairbanks showed marked improvement as a student of this Japanese sport.

The program of entertainment also included a swim in Fairbanks' outdoor pool that helps to decorate his Hollywood home.

Alice Brady's latest World-Picture Brady-Made, "The Maid of Belgium," is to be fictionized for the Photoplay Journal. The story was written for the film by Adrian Gil-Spear.

Three "Big V" Comedy Companies Work

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of greater Vitagraph, announces that the demand for "Big V" comedies has become so extensive throughout the country that he now has three companies at work producing these one-reel laughmakers.

Heretofore only one company, headed by Lawrence Semon, has been making "Big V's," written by Graham Baker and directed by Mr. Semon, who also has been playing the leading role in them. Owing to the demand for them it has been necessary for Mr. Semon and his company to work under forced draught in order to supply them at the rate of one a week. With three companies at work, Mr. Smith says, exhibitors are assured of a steady supply of comedies of the highest quality.

As planned now, Mr. Semon will continue to direct and play the lead in his own company, having with him Florence Curtis, formerly a featured dancer in Cohan's Revue, Joe Basil and Pietro Aramondo, acrobats and comedians. In addition, Mr. Semon will have in his company a score of beautiful girls and the plays will be so written that they will have parts in them and not be used solely as ornaments. Mr. Semon probably will write his own scenarios, because in addition to his ability as a comedian and director, he is a talented writer and artist of ability. It will be recalled that for several years before he entered motion pictures Mr. Semon was cartoonist on the New York Evening Sun. During the two years that he has been at the head of Vitagraph's comedy production, he has produced more than sixty one-reel subjects, notable for their originality and the daring stunts performed by the players.

Graham Baker, who has written most of the comedies produced under Mr. Semon's direction, blossomed forth as a director last week with "Riffraff and Rivalry," in which Earl Montgomery and Joseph Rock are featured. Mr. Baker, through his "Big V" comedies, has won a national reputation as a humorous writer and he has been so closely associated with Mr. Semon in the making of these comedies for the screen that his transformation into a director was a natural sequence. He has been associated with the Vitagraph company for years and is thoroughly versed in all branches of motion picture production. Next to his reputation as a comedy writer, he is known as a titler, his spontaneous style being best illustrated by the titles in "The Sixteenth Wife," a Blue Ribbon feature in which Marc MacDermott and Peggy Hyland were starred. Montgomery and Rock, the leading comedians of Mr. Baker's company, have won recognition by their remarkable daring and clever acrobatic work in these comedies.

The third "Big V" company, which has already begun work at the Vitagraph studio in Hollywood, is under the direction of Henry Kernan, with Charles Dill and Caroline Rankin in the chief roles. Mr. Dill is a well-known comedian, and Miss Rankin is regarded as one of the funniest women on the screen, having appeared in Fox and other productions. She began her stage career in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and was in stock for several years before she went into motion pictures.

Mr. Smith makes the statement that the Vitagraph comedies will be the best that money can produce. While they will lack nothing in the way of thrills and acrobatics, they will be given splendid settings and every effort made to raise them above the average slapstick comedy. He says that the returns on the "Big V" comedies convince him that this form of entertainment appeals to all classes of motion picture patrons and he thinks, out of justice to the exhibitors, he should make these comedies as high class as possible.

With three companies working, therefore, Mr. Smith feels that he and the directors will be able to devote more time to improving the comedies and introducing novelties. He asserts that in the future Vitagraph will devote as much attention to the production of these one-reelers as it does to the making of its Blue Ribbon subjects, particular attention being given to the stories and their settings. In this way Mr. Smith hopes to set a new pace for the rest of the industry in the production of comedies.

A large number of comedy scripts are now in various stages of completion and a list of future releases will be announced shortly.

Newslets for Your Program

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

EVERYBODY is knitting at the Essanay studios, and Mary McAlister, six-year-old star, is the latest convert, and is proving an apt pupil.

Nell Shipman had some touching scenes to portray with a dog in the Vitagraph feature, "The Eighth Great Grand Parent." That is, the scenes were touching, but unfortunately, the dog was not. As Miss Shipman explains it, the dog is particularly a man's dog and pays no attention whatsoever to women. Arriving at the studio at seven-thirty in the morning in order to get on friendship terms with the animal if possible, Miss Shipman bought him ten cents' worth of soup-meat and at noontime, out on location, fed him all of her lunch. But notwithstanding this treatment, "Zip," the dog, ignored her absolutely whenever a man-member of the cast was present.

Pauline Curley has been engaged to play the leading feminine role in support of Harold Lockwood in his next Metro-Yorke production, "Love Me For Myself Alone," by Francis Perry Elliott, which is being directed by Fred J. Balshofer. Miss Curley recently played the important role of Princess Irene in Herbert Brenon's "Fall of the Romanoffs."

At the opening of the Liberty Loan booth in the salesroom of the Willys-Overland Company, Broadway and Fiftieth street, Miss Annette Kellermann bought the first six $50 Liberty Loan bonds sold and pledged herself to duplicate each purchase of $50 bonds daily to the extent of six such bonds until the close of the loan. This will insure the sale of $5,000 worth of the bonds to Miss Kellermann alone.

Fannie Ward will, it is rumored, have as her first picture under the Pathe banner "The Yellow Ticket," the play that was so successful on Broadway several years ago. George Fitzmaurice of the Astra Co. will be her director.

Little Mary McAlister, the wonderful six-year-old-star with Essanay, has a keen conception of what should go into a picture. She often suggests departures from the scenario to her director, and many of the suggestions are so good that the director follows them.

Myrtle Stedman is paying a visit to Chicago and will make a personal appearance there. She is sure of a good reception for she made her debut in the Central City when she first appeared in musical comedy and light opera.

Marin Sais, who was for so long identified with the Kalem company and who is one of the best riders in the business, has joined the Fox company to play opposite Tom Mix. Tom is to be his own director.

Bessie Barriscale is a great baseball enthusiast and an unblushing "rooter."

Ruth Roland has discovered that she is as popular in vaudeville as she is on the screen. She is playing in Oakland this week and invades Los Angeles next week. She is playing on the Pantages circuit.

"God's Message," which will be the initial Metro offering of the great Nazimova, is a screen version of "A Rosebush of a Thousand Years," a story by Mabel Wagnalls, daughter of A. W. Wagnalls, of the well-known firm of publishers.

Edith Storey, "Bernhardt of the Screen," is now working at Metro's West Coast studios on her second production for this company. "The Legion of Death" is the title of the picture, of which June Mathis is the author.

Juliette Daye, Mutual star, Hooverizing on servants. You can borrow this cut for the asking.

Kaj Gynt, a well-known player of Sweden, has been engaged to play the role of Kate in support of Ethel Barrymore in the Metro motion picture adaptation of Sidney McCall's novel, "Red Horse Hill." Miss Gynt played for three years at the Royal Dramatic Theater in Stockholm.

War-time economy has a strong supporter in Little Mary McAlister, the six-year-old Essanay star. The child ordered a ham sandwich in a restaurant the other day, placing a dime on the lunch counter. Just as Little Mary had extracted a large bite, the waitress announced ham sandwiches had jumped to 15 cents. Little Mary gulped down the bite, recovered her dime, replaced the sandwich on the plate, then said as she turned to leave: "Well, if that's the case I guess I won't buy it."

Jane and Katherine Lee, the "Baby Grands" film stars, featured in William Fox's Standard Pictures, can do their turn on the speaking stage quite as well as they do it in films. Both are accomplished dancers and finished elocutionists. Recently they danced a little and sang a few verses for a famous English actress now starring at a Broadway theater, who waxed enthusiastic over their talent.

"My dear children," she said, "if you were in London, you certainly would make a big hit."

Katherine, with a little twinkle in her Irish blue eyes, replied:

"I did make a big hit in London. I was born there."

Frank Keenan, the popular photoplay star who has just been signed by Pathe, had already become famous before going into pictures. He won his spurs in such famous hits of the past as "Hearts of Oak," "Oliver Twist," "Rosedale," "The Lyons Mail," "The Bells," "A Texas Steer," "The Christian," "A Poor Relation," and "The Hon. John Grigsby." He began his screen career with the Universal and later became connected with Thomas Ince, under whose direction he starred in "The Thoroughbred," "The Sin Ye Do," "The Crab," and others.

Many exquisite gowns are worn by Dorothy Dalton, the beautiful Ince star, in her first Paramount picture, "The Price Mark," released October 29.

According to an exchange an American soldier was standing on the quay at Boulogne waiting to be embarked for England. He was "fed-up" with foreign scenes, with foreign tongues, with foreign food—with everything foreign, in fact. He sighed for home, for buckwheat cakes and syrup, for ice water, for the sound of American slang, for the sight of a good major league baseball game. He was homesick, plain homesick. His eye wandered idly from object to object that not long before would have interested him hugely—and then got a shock. There in plain sight was a sign reading as follows:

"Cinema de Boulogne
Ce soir a 8 heures
"Les Exploits d'Elaine avec
Pearl White"

Right away his heart was glad. Here was something from home with a vengeance. He wanted to see that show but his boat could not wait. He landed in England and there the first thing he saw was a poster advertising Pearl White in "The Exploits of Elaine" to be shown that evening at one of the local cinemas. His homesickness vanished. Home was not so far away after all.

After hearing stories of exceedingly well paid stars who frankly confess that they tolerate their work because of the money in it, it is refreshing to hear what Mrs. Vernon Castle says of her work for Pathe in motion pictures. "I like the work so much," she told the interviewer, "that if Pathe didn't pay me for my work I think I would do it for the love of it!"

Toto, who last winter was a big laugh at New York's Hippodrome, is now starring in Pathe comedies at the Rolin studio in Los Angeles.

Corinne Griffith, the Vitagraph star, is now working in a new production entitled "Heredity," and is for the first time under the guiding hand of Director Robertson who, by the way, directed Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine."

Albert Capellani, the renowned French director, has been signed by Metro Pictures Corporation and will shortly begin his first production under this banner. Mr. Capellani has served in the present war and came to America when he received a discharge because of injuries.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Feature Programs

Artcraft

The Woman God Forgot—(FIVE REELS)—OCTOBER 22.—Starring Geraldine Farrar. Tezca, daughter of Montezuma, refuses the attentions and hand of Guatemoco, her cousin, which angers her father. Word comes of the invasion of Cortez and Alvarado follows as an ambassador of the Spanish commander. Alvarado is wounded and Tezca cares for his wounds, learning to love the handsome Spaniard. She is unknowingly the cause of the victory of Cortez, when he comes to the city. Montezuma is slain by Cortez and Tezca is about to slay herself when Alvarado prevents the deed. She is again united to her lover in happiness and content.

Bluebird

The Mantrap—BLUEBIRD—(FIVE REELS)—OCTOBER 29.—Starring Herbert Rawlinson. Reviewed in this issue.

Butterfly

A Marked Man—(FIVE REELS)—BUTTERFLY—OCTOBER 29.—"Cheyenne" Harry is eluding the posse which is after him for a robbery, but hunger compels him to enter the home of Grant Young, a ranch owner. He is recognized, but Molly, Grant's daughter, finding a letter to "Cheyenne" from his mother, begs for his release. "Cheyenne" falls into evil ways again, holds up the stage with Ben Kent and is caught and charged with the murder of the messenger. It was Kent who actually did the killing, but "Cheyenne" can't prove his innocence. Just as "Cheyenne" is to be hanged, a letter arrives from his mother, so the sentimental cowboys allow him two weeks of grace. Young lends his ranch-house and Molly pretends to be "Cheyenne's" wife when the mother comes to visit. At the end of the two weeks "Cheyenne's" innocence is proven and he goes to Molly for "his answer."

Fox

The Scarlet Pimpernel—(FIVE REELS)—FOX—OCTOBER 28.—Starring Dustin Farnum. The scarlet pimpernel is a tiny wayside flower adopted as an emblem by a band of Englishmen engaged in rescuing condemned French aristocrats during the great Revolution of 1792. The leader of this fearless little band is Sir Percy Blakeney, the biggest fop in all England. His wife becomes disgusted with him, thinking him a listless victim of ennui. At the Fishermen's Rest in Dover the first clashes of the drama commence. Through intercepted notes passed between the members of the Scarlet Pimpernel band Chauvelin, revolutionary chief, gets his first hint that Blakeney is their head. A series of rapid incidents follow, and the action shifts to Calais. In the end Lady Blakeney, at last seeing through her husband's boredom, revives the great love she once had for him.

Metro

A Sleeping Memory—(FIVE REELS)—OCTOBER 15.—Starring Emily Stevens. The daughter of a prominent banker, Eleanore Marston, faces poverty alone after her father has died disgraced. She goes to New York and works in a department store, but leaves that when a scientist promises her every luxury if she will consent to have an operation on her brain that will erase all memory of her present existence. She consents and soon the experimenter is horrified that when he took her memory he also destroyed her soul. Another scientist, wishing to delve into past generations, hypnotizes her and sends her memory backward through previous incarnations. The man who loves her steps in and saves her from further experiments and before the story is over, Eleanore returns to her own consciousness and wins happiness.

Mutual Star Productions

The Adventurer—(TWO REELS)—CHAPLIN-MUTUAL SPECIAL—OCTOBER 22.—Reviewed in this issue.

Perfection

Young Mother Hubbard—(SCREEN TIME 65 MINUTES)—ESSANAY.—Starring little Mary McAlister. Little Mona Fairfax looks after her little brothers and sisters and earns the title of Young Mother Hubbard. They get under the wing of the Children's Welfare Society, and after some weepy and tearful times win a home for themselves. Reviewed in this issue.

Pathe

Stranded in Arcady—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE—OCTOBER 14.—Starring Mrs. Vernon Castle. Reviewed in this issue.

The Painted Doll—(FIVE REELS)—RUSSIAN ART FILMS—OCTOBER 29.

Select Pictures

Magda—(FIVE REELS)—C. K. YOUNG CORP.—OCTOBER 15.—Starring Clara Kimball Young. Reviewed in this issue.

King Bee Comedies

The Hobo—(TWO REELS)—OCTOBER 22.—Starring Billy West. Billy's alarm clock wakes him in the morning near a dinky station where he makes friends with the agent and his daughter Dolly. There is some confusion over a car that he buys with the company's railroad tickets and in the end he wins the reward offered for an auto thief and the hand of the fair Dolly.

Universal Program

The Mysterious Iron Ring—(THREE REELS)—GOLD SEAL—OCTOBER 20.—Harrison Craig, secret service agent, is on the look-out for a noted diplomatic criminal known as H. I. J. Craig goes to the Marbourgh Hotel, registers as H. I. J. and goes to room 309. The Countess goes to the room and delivers some valuable papers. H. I. J. arrives, sends for the Countess and she realizes she has delivered the papers to the wrong man. Craig takes the Countess into a taxi and drives her to Fort McPherson where she is compelled to remain. Craig has taken a card from her purse reading, "The Door with the Iron Ring." He goes to a cellar, pulls the iron ring and a bell resounds. H. I. J. pulls the door open and Craig falls into the cellar. There is a fight in which Craig finally overpowers H. I. J. and takes him prisoner.

The Shame of a Chaperone—(TWO REELS)—NESTOR STAR FEATURETTE—NOVEMBER 1.—Eddie and Lee are invited to a week-end party with their girls. At the last minute the chaperone disappoints them, so one of the boys masquerades as the chaperone, Miss Abergevezer Gevalt. Complications arise when one of the girls wants to sleep in Miss Gevalt's room. Of course, the youth is discovered when he has his wig off indulging in a smoke, but the affair is taken as a good joke and he is forgiven.

The Fifth Boy—(ONE REEL)—VICTOR COMEDY—NOVEMBER 2.—Dug is the leader of the Jesse James Honor Club, of which Spike, Matt, Bill and Tommy are members. They make a raid on Mrs. Thompson's chicken coop, are caught and taken to jail. In the Juvenile Court the Judge says he will let the boys go if each will earn three dollars and a half to pay Mrs. Thompson for the chickens. Tommy, who had eluded the officers, goes back to the coop and steals eight more chickens. When the boys arrive with their earnings the eight chickens are not accounted for and the Judge, disappointed in the boys, is about to send them to jail when Tommy confesses his share in the raid.

A Devil with the Wimmin—(ONE REEL)—JOKER COMEDY—NOVEMBER 1.—An experienced flirt attempts a flirtation with a newly-wed in the lobby of a hotel, much to Hubby's rage. Hubby pursues the flirt to his room and tells him to get out of town. The bride and groom happen to take the same train as does the flirt. Hubby throws the flirt off the train with the porter, the flirt landing in a water tank. The porter grabs the chain on the tank, thus releasing the water which washes the flirt back into the train again.

Danger Ahead—(TWO REELS)—BISON—NOVEMBER 3.—Tom Covington is the rival of Ralph Lasher for the hand of Lucille. Tom is a conductor on a freight train and Ralph is an engineman on the same division. Tom tries to get Ralph into trouble by putting oil on the tracks when Ralph is out on a run, hoping that Ralph will get hurt when the engine hits the slippery rails. Lucille, in a daring manner, jumps onto the runaway train and applys the brakes in time to avert an accident.

The Red Ace—EPISODE THREE, "THE LEAP FOR LIBERTY"—UNIVERSAL—(TWO REELS)—OCTOBER 29.—"The Phantom" carries Virginia for some distance and then drops her. Two half-breeds then take Virginia to a tree where a voice asks her about some platinum which her brother left before he died. Virginia escapes and plunges into a lake. She escapes to an island, the men in pursuit. Little Bear sees them and fires. One bullet hits perilously near Virginia and she disappears under the water.

I Quit—JOKER COMEDY—(ONE REEL)—NOVEMBER 1.—Francois, the tempermental chef, decides to quit Lizzie Spinach's restaurant when he sees two floury imprints on her back. The rest decide to quit, also, and Lizzie is left in a dejected state with too much work on her hands. Roadway Richard comes along providentially and Lizzie engages him as cook. The waiters form a strike-breaker's union and decide to make it hot for Richard. Richard's cooking has proved so bad that Lizzie willingly turns him over to the mob and gives the waiters their old jobs back.

A Bad Little Good Man—(ONE REEL)—JOKER COMEDY—OCTOBER 30.—"Texas Tommy" goes to Peaceful Gulch looking for rest. He enters the dance hall and finds things too lively for him. A large and lovely lady protects him from the "terrors." They all are cowed by her except "Montana Joe," who decides to kidnap her and hires two Mexicans to help him. "Texas Tommy" escapes and takes refuge in a deserted cabin. To this same cabin "Montana Joe" brings his kicking prize and then despatches the Mexicans for a minister. "Texas Tommy" sees his chance. He gives "Montana Joe" a swinging blow and the plump and lovely Ida falls into the arms of her rescuer as the minister arrives.

Even as Him and Her—(TWO REELS)—L-KO KOMEDY—OCTOBER 31.—Mr. and Mrs. Snookums, Mr. and Mrs. Lampem and Mr. and Mrs. Spifflegoofer are all inclined to be flirtatious. While taking the fresh air in the park one day they all start flirting with each other and eventually end up in the same cafe, but with the wrong husbands with wrong wives. There is a general rush to get under cover and they all hide under the tables. In shifting around the husbands finally sort out their own wives and one ends his adventure in the cafe fountain.

Mutual Pictures

Reel Life No. 79—NOVEMBER 1.—Building our wooden fleet—Southern sawmills working night and day. One and a half million feet of lumber required for each ship. Important industries of Argentina—this country now ranks second only to the United States in its exportation of wheat, cattle and hides. An unusual foster mother—a cat has adopted a few motherless chicks. A Dry Land Periscope—describing a home-made periscope which will enable the boys to see a ball game, no matter how high the fence. Had your mining stock panned out—animated drawing from "life."

A Daughter of Maryland—(FIVE REELS)—OCTOBER 29.—Starring Edna Goodrich. Beth Treadway lives with her father, the major, and her aunt Sarah in Headland Hall, the manor house of the Treadway family in old Maryland. She is sought by Rippley, a young southerner of good family, but doubtful reputation, when John Standish comes from New York to reconstruct the grounds of Headland Hall. The young landscape gardener arouses the antagonism of the proud and haughty Beth. She attempts to obstruct his work and secure his discharge and displays her headstrong temper in his presence and before his workmen. Haskell, a hermit, faces eviction as a result of the changes in the old place and threatens to call the curse of "The Black Ghost" upon Major Treadway, if he is thrown out. Neb, the old negro servant, tells the legend of "The Black Ghost." A young sailor, in love with a daughter of the Treadway family, is driven from the house by a pre-Revolutionary master of Headland Hall, and, ending his life with poison, calls a curse upon the house of Treadway until some daughter of the family shall marry a man of low caste. Haskell's cabin catches fire and Standish saves the old man, suffering severe burns, which Beth dresses. She overcomes her hatred of the Yankee and begins to display a sentimental interest in him. In the meantime Dorothy Pennell, daughter of the overseer of the major's place, confesses to Beth her relations with Ripp-ley and by a clever ruse Beth forces Rippley to marry Dorothy.

The Race with the Limited—(Two Reels)—October 29.—Starring Helen Holmes. "The Baron," "Harelip," alias Pitts, "The Leach," and Valquez enter into a conspiracy to keep knowledge of big gold developments in the Mountain King range from General Thurston and his daughter. "Harelip" is ordered in his capacity as private secretary, in which guise his harelip disappears, to prevent either Thurston or his daughter Helen from starting on a journey to the range. Helen becomes convinced that there is some mysterious connection between Pitts and "Harelip," but is unable to establish it. She consults Detective Murphy and between them they trail Pitts to the Valquez offices.

A Two Cylinder Courtship—(One Reel)—October 30.—Featuring Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco. Jay and Billie cannot overcome father's objections, so they elope in Jay's two-cylinder car. Before they start Jay empties almost all the gasoline from father's car so just as the chase becomes lively father's car is stalled. A telephone call from father to Lawyer Jones of Beaumont causes the lawyer to disguise himself as a minister. Arriving at Beaumont Jay and Billie are delighted to meet a minister and invited upstairs for the ceremony, they are trapped and locked in a room. Making a rope of blankets and sheets the pair are just about to escape when father rushes in. They hide and while he is trying to discover whether they escaped by means of the rope run out the open door, a real minister meets them on the street and from the window upstairs father is a witness of their marriage.

Jerry's Lucky Day—(One Reel)—Horsley—November 1.—Starring George Ovey. Jerry is hungry and broke. Meeting a hobo who is in the same fix, they try to plan some method of obtaining a square meal. While they are talking, they observe a detective removing a disguise and see him conceal it in a band stand in a park. This gives them an idea and they proceed to put it into execution. The hobo puts on the disguise and Jerry enters a swell restaurant and orders a full meal. When he finishes eating, he signals, as agreed upon, by dropping a plate out of the window. The hobo, disguised as the detective, then enters just as Jerry is in the heat of an argument with the proprietor and the waiter over his bill and arrests Jerry, telling the proprietor that "his troubles are his own," he drags Jerry away. Jerry and the hobo then reverse matters and Jerry puts on the disguise and the hobo enters and orders everything on the bill. Jerry, however, meets his sweetheart and becoming deeply interested in her, he neglects to come to his partner's rescue, even when one plate follows another out of the window. A policeman, who has been interested in watching Jerry and the hobo, hearing a terrific row in the restaurant, enters and arrests the hobo. Later, Jerry, through a reward notice found in the disguise, succeeds in apprehending a notorious crook, saves his sweetheart from being robbed and collecting a large reward, releases his hobo friend and everyone is happy.

General Program

The Enchanted Kiss—Broadway Star Features—(Two Reels).—Sam Tansey, in love with the daughter of his landlady, is afraid of Captain Peck, her brutal father. With his head soaring in the clouds created by a drink of absinthe, he rises to imaginary heights in gallantry and courage. His delirium is a fantastic round of prodigies of valor, in which the girl, her father and all sorts of grotesque villains revolve in a dizzy plot—Sam always to the rescue. She rewards him—in the dream—with a warm kiss which he multiplies masterfully. Then Sam goes home. Kate is there waiting for him by the door. Now is his time. But he wavers, loses courage and clambers awkwardly up the stairs condemned to Katie's withering scorn forever.

Hygeia at the Solito—Broadway Star Features—(Two Reels).—Cricket McGuire, ex-featherweight champion and all round sport from the East, having lost his entire savings on the outcome of a prize fight and lost finds himself in Texas with a racking cough and a dime in his pocket. Raidler, a big-hearted cattleman, invited Cricket to his ranch. Cricket distrusted this unheard-of hospitality, but decides to take a chance. Once on the ranch he distinguishes himself with his metropolitan wants and sits in his air-tight room filled with cigarette smoke. When the doctor advises Raidler that there is nothing the matter with the fellow, he puts him on a pony and makes him go to work. Returning from a two months' absence he learns that the doctor had examined the wrong man. But up rides a score of cowboys, among them a little brown-faced, grinning chap who begged to be allowed to stay with the "whitest bunch of sports he had ever traveled with."

Brand's Daughter—(Four Reels)—Falcon Feature.—Alethea, daughter of old Roger Brand, is in love with the poor cashier of her father's bank, Spencer Rutherford. Brand insists that Spencer accumulate a fortune equal to Alethea's own private fortune before they marry. A Russian baron and his sister Paula come to town and it is understood that they represent the Russian government. But they don't. And he isn't a count at all, as Alethea's French maid discovers when they call at the home of the Brands. But the discovery is not made soon enough to save the banker's half million he has loaned to the baron. Then Spencer does the heroic act and rescues Alethea from death in a vault and turns the baron over to the Russian agent. Paula, to save him from Siberia, shoots the baron, who is really her lover. Spencer thinks that by saving the half million he has earned a fortune and Brand agrees with him.

The Fable of the Uplifter and His Dandy Little Opus—(Screen Time 25 Minutes)—October 27.—George Ade Fables—Essanay.—Once there was a literary guy. Ever since his stuff had been shot back by a mere editor, he had billed himself as an author. His wife was a gumpf. At every tea and cookie carnival the literary guy was hailed as a hero. One day he dashed off an operetta. Then came a day when the great work was ready to be launched with a loud splash. But a cruel theatrical manager suggested that he sell the manuscript to the rag man. The literary guy decided to have the play done by local amateurs rather than see it lost to the world. After the home talent bunch pulled the affair, the trusty liars boosted something scandalous. There was no holding the literary guy now. He finally found a manager who had a lot of courage in risking other people's coin. The opening night the house was mostly paper. Next day the critics classified the show as a persimmon. Then the manager got busy on the manuscript with a blue pencil. He hired a bunch of chorus kickers to kick pep into the piece. The literary guy protested in vain that his art was being degraded. After the manager got through jazzing the play the literary guy recognized nothing but the scenery. The next box office report showed the gate was jumping at the rate of $90 a night. Still weeping over the ruination of his play, but with dough lining his pockets, the literary guy returned to Hickville to await more royalties. Moral: In elevating the drama be sure to get it high enough, even if you have to make it a trifle gamy.

The Girl Who Took Notes and Got Wise and Then Fell Down—(Screen Time 25 Minutes)—November 3—Essanay—George Ade Fable.—Once upon a time there was a girl whose principal ambition in life was to stand ace high with all the nice men of her set. She was so foxy that at times she got in front of herself and blocked her own plays. She was informed in taking notes of what man most desired in woman that man wanted a dame that will play up to his loftiest ambitions and supply his home with an atmosphere of culture, which is the ozone of married life. So the girl put it down that it was her cue to chop out all the twaddle and be a sort of Lady Emerson, but when she had a chance to try out her new method of landing in the matrimonial game she found that the flashy young woman who deals out slang, moves up to the cocktails freely and does a Gertrude Hoffman on the table is the one the men lose sleep about. So the next time she went to a blow-out, the wise girl added a dash of red to her costume, and cut loose and got along first rate, even though she did a lot of the things that none of the men approve, but somehow love to put up with. Moral: He can always pick out the right kind for the other fellow.

Coming Vitagraph Releases

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of Vitagraph, gives out the following list of Blue Ribbon releases for the months of November and December:

November 5—"The Fettered Woman," a romantic story play adapted from "Anne's Bridge," the novel by Robert W. Chambers, and directed by Tom Terriss. Alice Joyce will be featured in the title role, supported by Webster Campbell, Templar Saxe and other popular Vitagraphers.

November 12—"I Will Repay," an adaptation from O. Henry's famous story, "A Municipal Report," featuring Corinne Griffith. She is supported by "Mother" Mary Maurice, Eulalie Jensen, William Duncan, Arthur Donaldson and George Forth. The play, which was made on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, was produced under the direction of William P. S. Earle.

November 19—"The Grell Mystery," a thrilling drama in which Earle Williams is featured. The play was produced under the direction of Paul Scardon and in the company supporting Mr. Williams are Mabel Trunnelle, Miriam Miles, Denton Vane and others.

November 26—"Who Goes There!" another Robert W. Chambers story, with Belgium for its background. Harry Morey, with Corinne Griffith, are the featured players. This production, which was directed by William P. S. Earle, was originally intended as a special release, but is put out on the regular program in line with Vitagraph's policy of big pictures at popular prices.

The December program opens with the second of the series of pictures to be made from the "Wolfville" stories of Alfred Henry Lewis. The list for the month is as follows:

December 3—"The Tenderfoot," one of the fastest-moving pictures of the "bad west" ever made. It was directed by William Duncan, who also plays the lead, with Carol Holloway opposite him. Miss Holloway and Mr. Duncan are to be a permanent team in features produced by Vitagraph, this being their third appearance together. They were first seen in the fifteen-episode serial, "The Fighting Trail," which is now running, and their next appearance was in "Dead Shot Baker," the first of the Wolfville stories, which was released last week. As in "The Tenderfoot," Mr. Duncan was the director as well as star in these productions.

December 10—"An Investment in Petticoats," a quaint little drama featuring Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald, under the direction of Ashley Miller. The play was adapted from a story by Cyrus Townsend Brady.

December 17—"A Woman Between Friends," featuring Alice Joyce with Marc MacDermott playing opposite. This is an adaptation of the Robert W. Chambers story, "Between Friends," and is being produced under the direction of Tom Terriss. It is declared to be one of the most stirring roles that Alice Joyce has had since she played Mary Turner in "Within the Law."

December 24—A play adapted from "John Burt," a novel by Frederick Upham Adams, and produced under the direction of William Wolbert. Alfred Whitman and Mary Anderson are co-starred in this production, which carries an unusual story of the struggle of two men for the love of a girl.

December 31—"His Own People," featuring Harry Morey, with Gladys Leslie. This feature, produced under the direction of William P. S. Earle, marks the first appearance of Miss Leslie on the Vitagraph program. She went to Vitagraph from Thanhouser, where she starred in "An Amateur Orphan" and "It Happened to Adele." Previously, she had attracted attention by her work as a leading woman, particularly in "The Vicar of Wakefield," with Frederick Warde.

Another new west side picture theater building is the Fairfield, in course of construction at 2737-45 West Twenty-second street, between Fairfield and California avenues. In addition to the theater, which will have a seating capacity of 1,000, the building will contain four stores and six offices. It is being erected by Edward Kounovsky and its cost is placed at $91,000. C. C. Mitchell & Co. have underwritten a bond issue of $57,500 at 6 per cent on the property.

R. C. Seery, for a long time local Triangle manager, is now in charge of the Chicago office of the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

"You've got to come to Chicago to see the new bustle in business. I don't say this to discredit the east, where theaters and exchanges are also doing well but you don't get the note of real prosperity, real activity and real optimism you find in the middle west, particularly in Chicago. It may be that the better business wave that has hit the picture houses reached the midle west first. I don't know; and I am not enough of an expert to give reasons. I am only telling what I see."

The speaker was Herman Becker, general manager of Master Drama Features, Inc., Putnam Bldg., New York City, who was here last week on business.

Alfred Hamburger, director-general of Continental Theaters, opened the Panorama Theater, Prairie avenue and Fifty-First street, formerly operated by the Ascher Bros., last Saturday. It is now in the hands of decorators, being put in a first-class condition. Nothing but the very best photoplays produced will be shown. The music will be furnished by a ten-piece orchestra. The Panorama is considered one of the best theaters on the south side, and will be operated in a high-class fashion.

J. L. Lesserman, the genial head of the Laemmle Exchange, has been on a trip through Iowa to view the Universal fighting front in that territory.

Herman Wolfgram, sales manager of the Milwaukee Universal Exchange, was in Chicago all last week, during which time he had an operation performed on his throat. When Mr. Wolfgram came to town, he couldn't speak above a whisper and his voice sounded like the cawing of a crow. Mr. Wolfgram claims that he wore his voice out selling Universal Service, but the office thinks that he got that way rooting at the Sox-Giants game.

Producer Shoulders War Tax

REFUSES TO ASK EXHIBITOR TO PAY FIFTEEN CENT LEVY

OUT of the deluge of troubles that have descended upon motion picture exhibitors since tax problems have become an important part of their everyday life, came last week a glittering ray of hope. It was contained in the following self-explanatory letter from John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation:

To the Exhibitors of the United States:

We are pleased to inform you that the Mutual Film Corporation will absorb the special war excise tax imposed on film, and that it has instructed its branch mangaers to this effect in a telegram under date of October 25, reading as follows:

John R. Freuler.

Cancel all war excise tax instructions and operations. Make no charges or collections. Government permits us to pay direct without passing tax on to exhibitors. Destroy all stamped contract blanks and discontinue use of rubber stamp on vouchers. Notify exhibitors. Had previously understood that law required us to charge tax to exhibitors and believed that exhibitors supported fifteen cent tax charge proposed by National Association Motion Picture Industry in which exhibitors are represented.

This means the Mutual Film Corporation will pay the war tax on film.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
(Signed) JOHN R. FREULER, President.

Exhibitors Cheer News

News of this action on the part of the Mutual company was given to exhibitors first at a meeting of the Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America on Friday, October 26. Subsequently it has been forwarded to all organizations of exhibitors in the country.

Dennis J. Sullivan, general manager of the Mutual corporation, appeared at the Chicago exhibitors' meeting and without warning, other than to announce that he appeared there bearing good news, proceeded to read President Freuler's letter. Mr. Sullivan made no comment on the message, and retired from his speaking position while the cheers of the exhibitors rang through the corridors of the Masonic Temple.

Following Mr. Sullivan's appearance, the Chicago exhibitors—more than 100 members of the league were present—discussed the fifteen cent tax proposition at length, finally voting solidly to take a united stand and refuse to pay the proposed tax to any exchange or distributing organization.

President Makes Protest

"If one of the large producing and distributing companies can afford to absorb the tax, why cannot all of them?" demanded Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago branch of the league. "I have previously pointed out that the enforcement of this scheme of taxing exhibitors fifteen cents a reel per day in excess of the regular rental charge, would mean a net profit in somebody's pocket of more than 100 per cent in excess of the tax on raw and printed film.

"Producers and distributors who insist on the collection of this fifteen cent tax will find the exhibitors presenting a more determined and more united front than ever before in the history of the film industry. We simply are not going to pay anybody a profit on a tax that is assessed against a branch of the industry. The exhibitor has burdens enough and is loyally doing more than his full share of patriotic duty in aiding the government in the successful prosecution of the war."

Hoffman Pays His Share

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., an independent distributing corporation, has taken the same stand as Mutual and in an official announcement declared that Hoffman-Foursquare pictures would be furnished to exhibitors with no charge other than the regular rental. In a telegram to the Cleveland Exhibitors' League Mr. Hoffman said:

> Foursquare will not tax exhibitors any amount above rental price. Notwithstanding that we are taxed on every foot of positive film as well as negative, we feel that the exhibitor has sufficient burdens to bear without being further loaded. Taxation is the sinew of war. Foursquare will do its bit without compelling exhibitors to pay for it for them.

Eastern Exhibitors Bow

Contrary to the action of the Chicago exhibitors, the theater owners and managers of eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey, according to a telegram from Stanley V. Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, to Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, have agreed to accept the fifteen cents per reel a day tax. The message which Mr. Goldfish read to a meeting of producers in New York last week, follows:

In reference to the additional charge of fifteen cents per reel that the exhibitors in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey have been asked to pay, I have conferred with a great many of them, both small and large exhibitors. They are ready, anxious and willing to pay this charge, realizing the impossibility of the producer paying same. The attitude of many of the manufacturers trying to give to the exhibitors film productions at prices which they can afford to pay, should make every exhibitor in this country doubly anxious to keep all hardships from his source of supply.

STANLEY V. MASTBAUM.

It was forecasted that the action of some of the producing companies in renouncing the passing on of the footage tax would cause a change of feeling on the part of these exhibitors, and that they would join in the general protest against some exchanges collecting this fifteen-cent assessment while others bear it themselves.

Brady Goes to Washington

Because some constructions placed on the footage tax law make it appear that the tax must be paid every time a film is rented, a delegation of film men headed by William A. Brady went to Washington to put the matter squarely up to President Wilson. Under this interpretation of the law, it is conceded by everyone connected with the industry that the motion picture business—the fifth in magnitude of all the nation's industries—would be quickly put to death.

This view was strengthened by a letter received by William Wright, secretary of the Kalem company, from Daniel C. Roper, commissioner of internal revenue, in which he said, in regard to the tax on printed film:

"You are advised that as the tax (the one-half cent per foot assessment on positive prints) is placed not upon the manufacturer of the film itself, but upon its sale or lease, the office is of the opinion that the tax should be paid, not by you who do the commercial work only, but by the owner of the film or positive print, and upon him the tax will be imposed at one-half cent per foot each time the same is sold or leased."

More Information Is Sought

There have been several pilgrimages to Washington in connection with the interpretations of the various tax enactments of the last congress. P. A. Powers, J. A. Berst, Lee A. Ochs and Arthur S. Friend, were appointed a special committee to go to the national capital to confer with Commissioner Roper of the internal revenue office of the treasury department on the subject of the admission tax.

These men representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry sought enlightenment on the subject of the ten per cent admission tax which became effective November 1. Leaders of the association, after a series of meetings in New York, were agreed that the public must pay this tax. This point has been generally agreed upon over the entire country, but there have been various interpretations of some clauses of the law regarding the exemption of certain classes of admissions.

In various cities local revenue offices have been unable to give exhibitors a concise statement covering the points on which differences of opinion exist. In Chicago two deputy collectors gave the Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America two opposite explanations of the question of whether children admitted for five cents to a theater charging more than five cents for adults should be compelled to contribute to the admission war tax.

In plain English and free from legal entanglements is an explanation of the working of the admission tax by William Fox who says:

"On all tickets sold for the matinee on Thursday, November 1st, 1917, and for every performance thereafter, the purchaser of a ticket will pay a tax collected at the time of the sale. The holder of a pass must also pay. The amount of the tax is one cent for each ten cents or fraction of ten cents, thus:

One cent on a ten cent ticket;
Two cents on a fifteen cent ticket;
Three cents on a twenty-five cent ticket;
Four cents on a thirty-five cent ticket;
Five cents on a fifty cent ticket;
Eight cents on a seventy-five cent ticket;

Regarding Children's Tickets

"Where children under twelve years of age are admitted, and their tickets paid for, the tax is one cent per ticket regardless of the price. If a purchaser buys two seventy-five cent tickets, he pays an eight cent tax on each, not fifteen cents for the total of $1.50. The tax is on each ticket separately and not on the aggregate.

"The duty of collecting the tax is placed upon the person or corporation operating the theater. The Government has designated no special method for collecting the tax and makes no allowance for any deduction for the expense to which the theater may be put by the new law.

"Where the highest admission in a theater is five cents, the admissions are tax exempt. This does not mean theaters which have a five cent admission in their scale, but means theatres where the maximum charge is five cents."

Laemmle Explains Curtailment

Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., has issued the following statement concerning the temporary suspension of some few producing companies at Universal City.

"Until we know exactly how seriously the war tax is going to affect us," says Mr. Laemmle, "and until we are positively convinced that the exhibitors will co-operate in collecting the money from the public, we intend to take advantage of the fact that we have accumulated the largest reserve stock of negatives in our career by laying off several feature companies for about four weeks.

"This will not affect the producting of serials, because we are not far enough ahead on serial negatives to suspend producing them. The same thing, of course, applies to the Animated Weekly, the Current Events and the Universal Screen Magazine because of the fact that it is impossible to have a reserve supply of negatives.

"The fact that the cloudy and rainy season are about at hand helped us to arrive at this decision, for we have not quite enough electric light stages in Universal City for all our companies. By suspending operations until we have used up a certain amount of our big reserve supply of negatives, we avoid the heavy loss of having several companies idle on cloudy or rainy days. This, by the way, happened only last week, entailing a loss of approximately $15,000."

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

THE NARROW TRAIL, with W. S. Hart (Artcraft)—"Our patrons classed this as Hart's best, even though the censor board cheated us out of a great fight."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"As all the others say,—this is the kind that sends them away satisfied."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

Joan the Woman, with Geraldine Farrar (Artcraft)—"A production of extraordinary merit. Star great."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"One of the greatest pictures I have ever shown. Everyone was pleased. Business great."—J. F. Mullin, Electric Theater, Falls City, Nebr.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"This is a wonderful Mary Pickford production and an exceptionally fine picture. Enlarge your house as much as you can when you run this photoplay. Don't be afraid to book this one. Record business."—Spyros P. Skouras, Pageant Theater, St. Louis, Mo.—Refined neighborhood.

The Man From Painted Post, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A western drama, full of action. Business great on a week's run."—H. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Down to Earth, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A few more like this and Doug's salary will come down. Not a poor picture but decidedly not one to please followers of this star."—George E. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Barbary Sheep, with Elsie Ferguson (Artcraft)—"The star has a great screen personality. The story went over the heads of our audience. Gorgeous costumes, superb direction and magnificent settings, but it did not draw here."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Peddler, with Joe Welch (Art Dramas)—"Amateurish throughout. We don't know of anything good to say for it."—Cragin and Pike, Majestic Theater, Las Vegas, Nevada.

The Clean-Up, with Franklin Farnum (Bluebird)—"Very good picture. Played to capacity business."—L. W. Schultz, New Comique Theater, Montpelier, Vt.

The Clean-up, with Franklyn Farnum (Bluebird)—"This smiling comedian is drawing well for us. Story very good and with plenty of laughs."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Kentucky Cinderella, with Ruth Clifford (Bluebird)—"We boosted this picture, showed to capacity, and everybody was pleased. The kind of picture we like to run."—Cragin and Pike, Majestic Theater, Las Vegas, Nevada.

Mr. Opp, with Arthur Hoyt (Bluebird)—"Good picture but poor business, due probably to new, unknown star."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

Anything Once, with Franklyn Farnum (Bluebird)—"A good comedy drama that went over very well and I believe pleased all."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

Anything Once, with Franklyn Farnum (Bluebird)—"Excellent picture; has everything in it that will please. One of Bluebird's best."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

A Stormy Knight, with Franklyn Farnum (Bluebird)—Farnum draws well here. The picture was fair, though somewhat inferior to most of his other plays."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

The Great Problem, with Violet Mersereau (Bluebird)—"Star very pleasing. Patrons liked this."—A. Lorenzo, Strand Theater, West Branch, Mich.

Hell Morgan's Girl, with Dorothy Phillips (Bluebird)—"Fine business with this, which has a record as a money-getter. Copy supplied me was in poor shape. Insist on a good print when you book."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Fires of Rebellion, with Dorothy Phillips (Bluebird)—"A great picture but too suggestive."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Little Orphan, with Ella Hall (Bluebird)—"One of the best pictures out. Business fine. The star is a winner."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Show Down, with Myrtle Gonzales (Bluebird)—"A good picture, with a good story. Was well liked."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theater, Chicago. —In middle class neighborhood.

The Secret of the Swamp, with Myrtle Gonzales (Bluebird)—"One of the best Bluebirds I have run. Patrons well pleased. Good business."—Wm. A. Clark, Jr., Elite Theater, Golconda, Ill.

Straight Shooting, with Harry Carey (Butterfly) —"This was a dandy picture and pleased my audience." —E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Midnight Man, with Jack Mulhall (Butterfly) —"A first class picture for Saturday, catering to a mixed audience."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

Two Little Imps, with Jane and Katherine Lee (Fox)—"Business poor but the picture pleased."—J. H. McDonald, Strand Theater, Walla Walla, Wash.

This Is the Life, with George Walsh (Fox)— "George is coming so fast of late that he now runs neck and neck with Douglas Fairbanks in this territory. The men seem to like him better than they do Fairbanks. This picture is full of pep. Business great on a two-day run."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Silent Lie, with R. A. Walsh (Fox)—"Can't say much for this production. Big chance for improvement."—J. F. Mullin, Electric Theater, Falls City, Nebr.

The Witching Hour, with C. Audrey Smith (Frohman)—"A good picture throughout and drew capacity business."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)— "Great. Pleased everybody."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—High class suburban audience.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn) —"Good business with this and it pleased very much. Shown at increased prices."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Baby Mine, with Madge Kennedy (Goldwyn)— "One half said this was very good; the other half called it poor. A matter of taste. A good picture and worth a slight raise in admission."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Fighting Odds, with Maxine Elliot (Goldwyn)— "Without Miss Elliott, it wouldn't get you a nickel. Business slumped on the second day. And yet I heard no complaints even when shown at an increase over regular prices."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Fighting Odds, with Maxine Elliot (Goldwyn)— "Although this was knocked by local newspaper critics, it played to exceptionally big business. However, the people did not seem to be pleased with it."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in Motography's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

The Mysterious Miss Terry, with Billie Burke (Paramount)—"Shown at advanced prices and it pleased. Star does not draw exceedingly well for Gloria's Romance injured her popularity here."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

The Hostage, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A poor vehicle for a popular player. It did not please."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Her Father's Son, with Vivian Martin (Paramount)—"The star was most of the show but it made a fair impression. Clean and wholesome and that helps."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

The Inner Shrine, with Margaret Illington (Paramount)—"Miss Illington will never be very popular on the screen if we take this picture for her best."—J. F. Mullin, Electric Theater, Falls City, Nebr.

The Amazons, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Not as good as the former releases of this star but it seemed to satisfy even at advanced prices."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

What Money Can't Buy, with Jack Pickford (Paramount)—"This went over well. Everyone was satisfied. Business good."—C. Everett Wagner, Grotto Theater, Burlington, N. C.

Lost in Transit, with George Beban (Paramount)—"A picture young and old will enjoy. Full of that human interest stuff that puts a picture over. The baby, George Beban's son, is very clever and gets many laughs."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Oh Doctor, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"Poor. A few more like this and Fatty will be on the list with the has-beens. Capacity business but patrons displeased."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

As Men Love, with House Peters (Paramount)—"Just a fair picture. Did not draw. Business fair."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

The Marcellini Millions, with George Beban (Paramount)—"A very good picture, liked by all.—J. F. Mullin, Electric Theater, Falls City, Nebr.

The Iron Heart, with Edwin Arden (Pathe)—"All who saw this picture said it was great. Arden's work is wonderful."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Sunshine and Gold, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"This little star is worth her weight in gold to any exhibitor who will bill her right."—C. Everett Wagner, Grotto Theater, Burlington, N. C.

The Cigarette Girl, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe)—"This did well for us. Picture is everything Pathe claims. Star well liked."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

War and the Woman, with Florence LaBadie (Pathe)—"Very timely picture. Good photography, good story, interesting throughout."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

Under the Stars and Stripes in France (Two-reel Pathe special)—"More or less of a disappointment and not up to the standard one would expect in a special. Undoubtedly there is a good field for this class of picture owing to the interest of the relatives, sweethearts and friends of the boys."—H. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Streets of Illusion, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe)—"A fair picture, not remarkable."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Stranded in Arcady, with Mrs. Vernon Castle (Pathe)—"A very satisfactory picture. It held up exceptionally well. In fact, Mrs. Castle was perfectly at home in the Castle during a week's run."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Apple Tree Girl, with Shirley Mason (Edison-Perfection)—"Believe me, this is some picture. The star does admirable acting. This is a very interesting and different comedy-drama, exceptionally good for Friday or Saturday. Business good."—Spyros P. Skouras, Pageant Theater, St. Louis, Mo.—High class neighborhood.

T. Haviland Hicks, Freshman, with Ray McKee (Edison-Conquest)—"Three reels. A sure-fire college story. Everyone liked it."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—High class suburban audience.

The Argyle Case, with Robert Warwick (Selznick)—"Story well told. Exciting climax and acting superb. A remarkable picture. Business fair."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

One Shot Ross, with Roy Stewart (Triangle)—"Very good western picture. Star is gaining popularity. Capacity business."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—High class neighborhood.

Wild Sumac, with Margery Wilson (Triangle)—"Another poor Triangle offering."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Firefly of Tough Luck, with Alma Reuben (Triangle)—"Brought us 'tough luck' in the way of business. Didn't draw and patrons did not like it or the star."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Cassidy, with Dick Rosson (Triangle)—"Too many bar-room scenes to please our patrons. Did not draw."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Clod Hopper, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"Webster is shy on adjectives to praise this money-getter. Any who miss it have themselves to blame."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Millionaire Vagrant (Triangle)—"Not quite as good as some of Ray's pictures but nevertheless a good picture. Got money here."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Seeking Happiness, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"This is the kind of stuff the people like. Star very good. Picture drew capacity."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Sin Ye Do, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"Went over big. Star great."—A. Lorenzo, Strand Theater, West Branch, Mich.

The Bride of Hate, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"Good story and star well liked."—A. Lorenzo, Strand Theater, West Branch, Mich.

Her Official Fathers, with Dorothy Gish (Triangle)—"A good vehicle for a highly pleasing star. Well received by an audience almost unusual for this season."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"About as fine a comedy-drama as we've ever seen. Ray made a clean hit with the audience. Business good."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

The Devil Dodger, with Roy Stewart (Triangle)—"The star is far from being a W. S. Hart. Action drags. Five reels of sadness and tragedy. Not a box office attraction."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Bond of Fear, with Belle Bennett (Triangle)—"Good sand-storm scene. Will hold interest to the end. Contains a good theme and has many thrills. Star is new to the movie fans."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Mountain Dew, with Margery Wilson (Triangle)—"Fine business; picture satisfactory."—J. H. McDonald, Strand Theater, Walla Walla, Wash.

The Americano, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"First appearance of the star in this theater. Made a hit. Good picture to good business."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

Chicken Casey, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"Miss Dalton is a very clever actress."—A. Lorenzo, Strand Theater, West Branch, Mich.

Chicken Casey, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"Good show to good business."—Wm. A. Clark, Jr., Elite Theater, Golconda, Ill.

The Girl of the Timber Claims, with Constance Talmadge (Triangle)—"Fair picture. Patrons were about divided on this picture. Fair business."—Wm. A. Clark, Jr., Elite Theater, Golconda, Ill.

The Fall of a Nation (Vitagraph special)—"Feature great. Broke all house records."—L. W. Schultz, New Comique Theater, Montpelier, Vt.

The Ninety and Nine, with William Courtney (Vitagraph)—"Excellent. Big business."—L. W. Schultz, New Comique Theater, Montpelier, Vt.

Captain of the Gray Horse Troup, with Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"Excellent business. Patrons delighted."—L. W. Schultz, New Comique Theater, Montpelier, Vt.

The Glory of Yolanda, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Good local color. Good story. Everyone pleased."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.

An Enemy of the King, with E. H. Sothern (Vitagraph)—"We class this with the best."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Within the Law, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"Any exhibitor can get good money with this. Double your regular prices; you are safe in doing so."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Son of the Hills, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"This one is not up to the Vitagraph standard. It did not go over for us."—C. T. McClure, Comique Theater, Jamesport, Mo.

Money Magic, with Edith Storey (Vitagraph)—"A poor story, too many death bed scenes. People don't want this kind of thing in pictures."—C. T. McClure, Comique Theater, Jamesport, Mo.

The Hunted Woman, with Virginia Pearson (Vitagraph)—"'Go to it!' A good box-office attraction. Book it, exhibitors; it is worth while."—C. T. McClure, Comique Theater, Jamesport, Mo.

The Magnificent Meddler, with Mary Anderson (Vitagraph)—"A plumb good one. Don't be afraid to book it. Went over big with us."—C. T. McClure, Comique Theater, Jamesport, Mo.

The Divorcee, with Mary Anderson (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture which played to fair business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Cupid's Rival, with Billy West (King Bee)—"We broke all house records with the first Billy West-King Bee comedy, in spite of the fact that we had The Hero booked and ran Cupid's Rival instead. We raised our price to ten cents and patrons were pleased."—Jos. Halleman, Melvin Theater, St. Louis, Mo.

Their Compact, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"A good picture with plenty of action, but the star over-poses. Business good."—Spyros P. Skouras, Pageant Theater, St. Louis, Mo.—High class neighborhood.

Their Compact, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"A pretty good picture. Brought good business."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Adopted Son, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro)—"Six reels. A glance at the Chicago board of censors permit shows 'Cut forty-nine gambling scenes.' The picture was well received; stars are well liked and business was good."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Silence Sellers, with Mme. Petrova (Metro)—"A good picture for the admirers of Petrova. She wears handsome gowns and some beautiful furs. As a whole the picture is good and will go over."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Slacker, with Emily Stevens (Metro)—"Broke all records and gave excellent satisfaction."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

Outcast, with Ann Murdock (Empire-Mutual)—"A good picture. Patrons commented on it. Brought good business."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Bride's Silence, with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"A good picture. We had many compliments on it."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Reputation, with Edna Goodrich (Mutual)—"Our patrons liked this picture."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Charity Castle, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"This was liked especially well. Miss Minter is popular with our patrons."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Dream or Two Ago, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"An excellent picture. Star fast becoming a favorite. Film in fair condition."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

Her Country's Call, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"A very good picture. Pleased a capacity audience."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Queen X, with Edna Goodrich (Mutual)—"A very good picture. Brought exceptionally good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Runaway, with Julia Sanderson (Mutual)—"A very good picture, but it did not draw. The star is not well known to picture patrons."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Sands of Sacrifice, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"This star is not popular in our territory and the picture did not please. Business poor."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Periwinkle, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"To exhibitors who suffer 'Blue Mondays,' I'd suggest the 'Minter cure.' It worked for me. 'Nuff sed.' "—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Environment, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Excellent production. Dainty Mary went over big as usual. Fine card here."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Melissa of the Hills, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Fine picture. Played to capacity."—E. Saunder, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Adventurer, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"The biggest laugh producer this comedian has turned out, which came as a surprise when the audiences knew that it was Chaplin's last Mutual and proves that Charlie always leaves them smiling when he says goodbye."—H. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Sea Master, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—" 'Pink permit.' It is hard to tell whether this was good or not after the Chicago censor board had cut it. The picture drew exceptionally well. Russell is well liked."—H. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Bab, the Fixer, with Jackie Saunders (Horkheimer-Mutual)—"Pleased everyone. Big house."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Souls in Pawn, with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"This went over big. Business good. Direction, photography and star's work, perfect."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Chimmie Fadden Out West, with Victor West (Paramount)—"Excellent comedy, good title and star. Business poor because of a local entertainment."—Clarence J. Koetting, Lyric Theater, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

The Dummy, with Jack Pickford (Paramount)—"Clean entertainment with thrills and laughter."—Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale Theater, Hinsdale, Ill.—High class suburban audience.

The Law of the Land, with Mme. Petrova (Paramount)—"A splendid production but I failed to bring 'em in to see it."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

The Varmint, with Jack Pickford (Paramount)—"The directors missed making a good picture in this. No one will enthuse over it. Fair in pulling power."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

Transgression, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture which brought very good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Whip, with Alma Hanlon (World)—"Played to capacity. The picture is full of action; the settings are wonderful and the photography unbeatable."—Cragin and Pike, Majestic Theater, Las Vegas, Nevada.

The Crimson Dove, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"A good melodrama. Heard lots of favorable comment. Good for all classes of audiences."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

The Hungry Heart, with Alice Brady (World)—"A very good picture, but the star did not draw as well as expected."—C. Everett Wagner, Grotto Theater, Burlington, N. C.

Shall We Forgive Her? with June Elvidge (World)—"Best box-office picture of the week. Not a children's picture. A melodrama. The art-loving critics are against this kind of pictures but the public to whom we cater seem to want them."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Rasputin, the Black Monk, with Montague Love (World)—"This went over big. About half of our patrons are Jewish and they were especially interested in it. This is a fine offering for Jewish and Russian neighborhood. Brought very good business."—J. J. Chrissis, Queen and Isis Theaters, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Rasputin, the Black Monk (World)—"Good picture. Drew big business and pleased a high class audience."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

The Corner Grocery, with Lew Fields (World)—"A very good picture with fair drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Beware of Strangers, with Thomas Santschi (Selig special)—"A picture every theater ought to run."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

King of the Rails (General Electric Company)—"A three reel picture treating on the evolution of railways and showing the locomotive from the first stage to the present electric transcontinental moguls. The film is put out by the General Electric Company gratis and is a wonderful study, not only to the electrically inclined but to everyone. I would advise exhibitors to run this as an educational. It should get the support of the thinking class in every locality."—H. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Mormon Maid, with Mae Murray (Lasky special)—"As one of our patrons said, 'A crazy picture.' It was, and we were bunked by boosting it and charging fifteen cents for it. It was taken off the Paramount program and someone thought he would call it a feature. As a box-office picture, I mark it poor."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Barrier (Rex Beach)—"Cannot say enough for this picture. Played three days to capacity business at advanced prices and pleased everyone."—C. R. Haase, Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

The Garden of Allah, with Thomas Santschi (Selig special)—"Drew only fair business because of previous bookings in the neighborhood. The people did not care for it."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Serials and Series

The Fighting Trail, with William Duncan (Vitagraph)—"Holding up fairly well. I consider it a good serial."—Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theater, Sedalia, Mo.

The Gray Grost, fifteenth episode (Universal)—"We consider this serial the best of them all. It will get the crowds and hold them."—Cragin and Pike, Majestic Theater, Las Vegas, Nevada.

Music War Draws Notice

The war being waged against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers by Miss Katherine C. Melcher, compiler of the only authentic list of non-taxable music obtainable, is attracting attention all over the country. Miss Melcher's work is being done for the Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, of which Joseph Hopp is president.

Reports received by Mr. Hopp indicate the value of the work Miss Melcher is accomplishing. More than one thousand selections have been listed on which an exhibitor need not pay royalties, and there are thousands of additional pieces to be listed. The Chicago league is receiving daily reports from other organizations and from individuals in all parts of the United States requesting information about non-taxable music.

In the tabulation of selections which have been appearing in Motography, exhibitors will notice this week for the first time some of the works of Harry Von Tilzer and the publications of his New York house.

Advance Admission Prices

The Liberty and Columbia, leading theaters in Portland, Ore., have announced advances in admission charges of from 15 to 20 cents for adults, and from 5 to 10 cents for children. Other downtown theaters, including the Peoples, Majestic, Star and Sunset, have made similar announcement. Houses in outlying sections are increasing their prices from 10 to 15 cents. In the state outside of Portland, admission fees have been increased generally. Managers of five-cent theaters are considering making a charge of 10 cents for Sunday shows.

Volume XVIII CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 10, 1917 Number 19

Disposing of the Tax on Film Stock

A REASONABLE consumer, familiar with the fundamentals of business economics, expects to pay the producers' taxes for him. He knows that the manufacturer's cost and overhead and profit all must be paid by the public in the end. The thing to which the consumer strenuously objects is paying the producer a profit on all his special taxes.

The proposal is made to charge exchange rental customers fifteen cents a reel, in addition to the regular service charge, to defray the manufacturer's war tax of one-fourth cent a foot on raw stock and one-half cent a foot on finished pictures.

President Joseph Hopp of the Chicago League has demonstrated, with a few simple calculations, that fifteen cents per reel per day would return a profit of over a hundred per cent on the producer's tax. Figuring nine hundred and fifty feet as the average reel, and one hundred runs as the average life, the producer's tax would amount to $7.12½, while the same tax as it was passed on to the exhibitor would yield $15.00. Negative stock waste would have to be extravagant indeed to bring the actual tax to $7.50 a print.

There is only one condition that justifies the manufacturer in adding a profit to the tax he passes along to his customers. If it is plain that a certain percentage of trade will be lost as a direct result of the tax, the survivors may pay for the lost taxes and receive in return the satisfaction of losing competition. But no such situation obtains here. There will be no falling off in trade as a result of the three-quarter cent producer's tax.

It is gratifying to observe that at least one large distributor has voluntarily canceled the arrangement for passing the tax along, and has agreed to absorb it into its overhead expense. No doubt there will be a general inclination to follow suit; in which case the disturbance will vanish and be forgotten.

The exhibitor will still pay it, of course. The manufacturer must have all his costs paid by his trade or there will be no manufacture. The producer who buries a special tax in his overhead account must necessarily make some slight readjustment in other expenses, or in profits, to preserve the balance of his business. The customer hopes he will take it out of profits; but he hopes to find some way to make it up by reducing other expenses. Anyway it is put where it belongs, and where it will at least excite no animosity. And it is worth noting, while we are discussing business economics, that a few well developed cases of animus may cost the producer more in the end than carrying the burden of the whole tax.

The exhibitor has considerable tax problems of his own just now. He is required not only to collect over ten per cent more money than before from the public, but he must keep books on it and deliver it to the government. This he is willing and glad to do, even though some of his patronage, in the name of economy, abandon him. But it leaves him in no mood to receive with open arms so glaringly obvious an item as rental plus fifteen cents. He concludes that he is offered the position of goat, and it displeases him.

There is no doubt that the safest and most satisfactory place for the producer's film tax is in the producer's overhead expense account.

Every Showman Has His Day in Public

IDEAL censorship is a phrase suggesting, at first, nothing more than an ingenious example of paradox. Yet we have the word of the National Board of Review—a thorough student body of censorship—that we may conscientiously apply the term to the system used in Boston, which remains unsullied after a rigorous third-degree course of checking up.

Boston has John M. Casey. It has had him for nearly twenty years, while municipal administration changes swept over his head and left him, sometimes, the only hold-over public official on the job. His title is mayor's license commissioner.

The state law of Massachusetts guarantees every showman his day before the people. One public performance of any entertainment is assured without hindrance or condition. And Mr. Casey, either on his own initiative or on the complaint of citizens, decides then and there whether there shall be more performances.

Yet even then Mr. Casey's benign power is not absolute. He is subject to appeal. The actual (but latent) Board of Censorship, which acts only to review the license commissioner's decisions when they are disputed, consists of Boston's mayor, police commissioner and a local court judge. This safeguards the public—and the exhibitor—against any arbitrary decision which Mr. Casey might make, but never has. It also distributes the responsible and doubtful burden of individual judgment.

That arbitrary and unintelligent action is the rule where any responsibility rests on a single censor we have ample demonstration in Chicago, New York and elsewhere. That the rule has at least one exception is proven by the scarcity of appeals from the opinions of the Boston Commissioner. It should be noted that, on executive order of the mayor, the weekly bulletin of the National Board of Review is made the basis for official action in the Hub City. Picture productions lacking changes which have been recommended by the National Board are not considered as ready for exhibition.

Here, then, is a practically good censorship. The New York plan is theoretically good, as we explained some weeks ago; but in practice it breaks down. The secretary of the National Board says of the New York system:

> No constructive safeguards, as far as the public is concerned, are maintained in regard to motion picture exhibitions. Under a recent ruling of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court the license commissioner of New York may prohibit the exhibition of any motion picture so long as it cannot be shown that the official acted capriciously or dishonestly. No redress may be had in the courts. No review of the merits of the commissioner's wisdom in prohibiting the proposed exhibition may be secured. The property right in connection with the motion picture is entirely taken away without due process of law. A motion picture is worthless unless it can be exhibited. A film such as "The Birth of a Nation," worth thousands of dollars per foot as an exhibition proposition, may become, so far as New York is concerned, worth three and one-half cents a foot, the cost of the raw celluloid, through the action of the license commissioner in the arbitrary exercise of his discretion.
> A case in point is interesting. Recently the National Board reviewed a photoplay of a propaganda nature. It was passed unanimously by a committee of the Board. A private exhibition of the film was given, at which nearly one hundred citizens were present. A printed ballot was distributed, raising the question as to the availability of the photoplay for general public exhibition. Over ninety per cent of the ballots returned to the National Board were favorable to the exhibition of the picture. The license commissioner of New York notified the theaters that any exhibition of the photoplay would result in the cancellation of the license of the theater involved. This automatically prohibited the exhibition of the picture. The producing company sought an injunction, restraining the commissioner from action. On appeal the Court of Appeals held that as the producing company had not been able to show that the commissioner had acted arbitrarily or dishonestly the temporary injunction granted could not be made permanent; that the commissioner had exercised discretion as authorized by local ordinance, and that the courts could not interfere with the exercise of his discretion in regard to the prohibition of any particular picture.
> Accordingly, on the contrary from being the ideal system, the New York plan is comparable to the Chicago plan in being unintelligent, arbitrary and opposed to public welfare.

The general public should be more vitally interested than the motion picture producers in seeking a change in the present law, since the motion picture screen, like the daily press, belongs to the whole people for free discussion of current topics, subject to the same penalties for abuse already provided under the common law. General ignorance of the operations of censorship is the only condition that preserves the obsolete function from annihilation by the people. They accept the dispositions of the censor because he has removed the evidence of his incompetence.

Here's More Non-Taxable Music

THESE CAN BE PLAYED IN YOUR THEATER WITHOUT COST

Through the courtesy of Miss Katherine C. Melcher, who is compiling lists of non-taxable music for the Chicago Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, MOTOGRAPHY is able to present herewith the first authentic compilation of grand opera, operetta and musical comedy selections that can be made a part of the motion picture exhibitors' programs without paying tribute to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

This is the list many exhibitors have been waiting for, and it is furnished you as a supplement to the hundreds of other numbers MOTOGRAPHY has been printing in every issue.

Spoor's Food Work Gets Valuable Aid

Taylor Holmes, former famous stage comedian, now being featured in Essanay comedy-dramas, is giving valuable assistance to Mr. George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, in carrying out the work of Food Administrator Hoover's food economy campaign in Illinois, in which Mr. Spoor is actively engaged as chairman of the Illinois Motion Picture Bureau of Food Administration.

Mr. Holmes has been added to the list of "Four-Minute Men," of the Chicago district, and will speak each night in Chicago moving picture and other theaters. Mr. Holmes gave liberally of his time in the interest of the Second Liberty Loan, speaking each night in some Chicago theater, and making frequent trips to nearby towns. He also bought a large block of bonds.

A. J. Callaghan, personal representative of Mr. Spoor, is giving valuable assistance to the Illinois exhibitors in the organization of the food conservation campaign.

Charles Howard Eaton Dies Suddenly

Charles Howard Eaton, well known to musicians and motion picture men, died suddenly at his home at 25 Milton avenue in Dorchester, last Wednesday.

Mr. Eaton was for years leader of the Bangor City Band of Bangor, Me., and later was manager and owner of a number of theaters in Massachusetts. He had just completed a trip through Maine in the interest of the World Film Corporation when stricken.

Mr. Eaton was a member of the New Bedford lodge of Elks, The Royal Arcanum and the Portland local of the Musicians' Protective Association.

Funeral services were held at his former home in Portland, Me., on Friday.

Chaplin Company Buys Five-Acre Site for Studio

Through the action of the city council in approving the purchase of a five-acre plot of ground in the Hollywood district by the Charlie Chaplin company, last week, the motion picture contingent won another victory over forces opposed to the industry.

It was only after heated debate, which continued for three days and during which time the council was split, that a verdict was finally given in favor of the producers by a vote of eight to one. The only negative voice was that of Councilman Conway.

Chaplin's property occupies a square block and fronts on La Brea street. The plot cost $30,000 and it is planned to expend close to $500,000 for improvements within the next year. The site will be the home of the future Chaplin comedies and the star expects to erect a residence there.

How and When Tax Is Collected

Legal Phases of War Measure Explained by William Fox for Exhibitors

TO answer questions of motion picture exhibitors on ways and means of meeting the requirements of the new war revenue law as it applies to the taxation of theater admissions, William Fox of the Fox Film Corporation, himself an exhibitor, has prepared a statement of questions and answers carefully covering, point by point, the legal and other phases of the measure.

The statement follows:

In the following form, I believe you will find a solution of all questions which may arise in connection with the law.

Question: When must the tax be collected?

Answer: On all tickets sold for the matinee on Thursday, November 1st, 1917, and every performance thereafter on advance sales made prior to November 1st for performances after November 1st, the tax should be collected at time of sale.

Question: Who pays the tax?

Answer: The purchaser of the ticket or tickets.

Question: When does the purchaser pay the tax?

Answer: At the time he purchases the ticket.

Question: Must holders of passess pay the tax?

Answer: They pay the tax when the pass is presented and exchanged for a ticket, but bona fide employes of the theater, municipal officers on official business and children under 12 years of age when entering on a pass need uot pay a tax,

Question: What is the amount of tax?

Answer: It is not 10 per cent of the price of the ticket. It is one cent for each ten cents or a fraction of ten cents. In other words, it is—

(a) 1 cent on a 10 cent ticket;
(b) 2 cents on a 15 cent ticket;
(c) 3 cents on a 25 cent ticket;
(d) 4 cents on a 35 cent ticket;
(e) 5 cents on a 50 cent ticket;
(f) 8 cents on a 75 cent ticket;

and so on. Where children under 12 years of age are admitted, and their ticket paid for, the tax is one cent per ticket regardless of the price of the ticket.

Question: If a purchaser buys two 75 cents tickets, the total price therefor being $1.50, does the purchaser pay 15 cents or 16 cents.

Answer: The purchaser pays 16 cents. The tax is on each ticket separately and not on the aggregate amount paid by the purchaser.

Question: What tax must the holder of a pass pay?

Answer: Under the law, his tax is based upon the regular price of the ticket he receives if he were paying for it instead of getting it for nothing, so that if he received a 25 cent ticket, he would pay 3 cents; a 50 cent ticket 5 cents; a $1.00 ticket, 10 cents, and so on. For the sake of convenience, to reduce labor and in the interest of the government, I suggest that there be collected from every holder of a pass, a tax based upon the maximum price of admission. In other words, if the top price of tickets in your house is $1.00, collect a tax of 10 cents on every pass, whether the accomodation given the pass holder is a $1.00 seat, a 50 cent seat or just standing room. For like convenience, even though the tax rate on a 75 cent ticket is 8 cents, if that is your top price, I would suggest the collection of 10 cents nevertheless on all passes.

Question: On whom is the duty of collecting this tax?

Answer: The person or corporation operating the theater.

Question: Has the government directed the theaters to adopt any special method for collecting the tax?

Answer: No.

Question: What method should the theater employ to collect the tax?

Answer: In view of the fact that the burden of making the collection of this tax is placed on the theater, and that the government will not make any allowance or permit any deduction for any expense to which the theater may be put in collecting the tax, it seems to me the cheapest and simplest method is for the man in the box office to thoroughly familiarize himself with the amount of the tax based on his scale of admissions and to collect the tax when he sells a ticket, so that when selling a 15 cent ticket, the purchaser pays and the box office man collects 17 cents as though 17 cents were the price of the ticket, and so on, according to the price of the ticket and the tax based thereon. There is no necessity for adopting the following suggestion, but if it is thought that it will help the box office man or avoid disputes with the purchaser, I suggest that the coupon of every ticket contain a statement of the price of the ticket, the amount of war tax and the total. For example, as follows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| : | : RIGHT | E 10 |
| : | : Orchestra | 75c |
| : | : War Tax | 8c |
| : | : Total | 83c |

While this method may result in a little confusion for the first three or four weeks, I believe it will after that time work out to a more general satisfaction than the confusion resulting from the sale of tickets at one box office and the sale of war stamps or war tax coupons at another box office, to say nothing of the expense attached for additional help.

Where strip tickets are used, the same plan can be adopted, and the amount of the tax can be stamped or printed on the ticket as convenience suggests or it may be omitted from the ticket entirely.

Question: What theaters are exempted from collecting the tax?

Answer: Theaters whose highest admission or top price is 5 cents. This does not mean theaters which have a 5 cent admission in their scale, but means theaters where the maximum charge is 5 cents. When all the proceeds of the theater inure exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational or charitable purposes, the admission is tax exempt.

Question: What records must the theater keep regarding the tax?

Answer: The law does not require any special bookkeeping. Your usual daily and weekly statements, however, should clearly show the number of tickets sold at the various prices. Also the number of passes exchanged for tickets and if you are only going to collect the tax based upon the price of the ticket given and exchanged for the pass,

Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley" and Mabel Normand in "Joan of Plattsburg, two Goldwyn productions.

Gladys Leslie.

Agnes Ayres.

Alice Joyce.

Carroll Halloway.

Corrine Griffith.

Five of Vitagraph's feminine stars.

you will have to separate your list of passes showing the box office price of the seats given for each pass.

On the other hand, if you adopt the suggestion of exacting a tax based upon the top price of your tickets, then you can lump the number of passess together.

Your statements and books will have to be shown to the government whenever an inspection is requested.

Question: When must the theater make a report to the government?

Answer: On December 1st, 1917, a report must be made for the preceding month and every month thereafter. The reports must be in duplicate, on forms to be furnished by the government.

Question: When must the tax collected be turned over to the government?

Answer: At the same time when you make your monthly report to the government.

United Exchanges Completes Organization Plans

The plans of the new organization calling itself The United Exchanges, Inc., were completed at a final organization meeting held on Monday, October 29th, at the Hotel Astor in New York. All of the franchise holders who form the membership of The United Exchanges, Inc., were expected to be present to participate in the election of permanent officers and the selection of various committees.

The temporary officers of the organization were L. C. Card, treasurer, and David A. Lourie, chairman.

Following the meeting the entire body of members planned to sit in review to pass upon the merits of ten big film productions for the purpose of purchasing them.

Ann Is at Work Again

The adventures of a harum-scarum seminary girl form the basis of Ann Pennington's forthcoming Paramount production, "The Antics of Ann," which is scheduled for release November 5th. This will mark the first appearance of the little Ziegfeld Follies star for some time.

Vitagraph Offers Second Chamber Story

"The Fettered Woman," Featuring Alice Joyce, Is Announced for Release Nov. 5

ANOTHER Robert W. Chambers romance supplies the vehicle for the Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon program, "The Fettered Woman," announced for the week of November 5th by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company. Alice Joyce, star of many of the biggest productions put out by the company, is featured in the title role.

This is the second Chambers story to appear on the Vitagraph lists during the present year, the first having been "The Girl Philippa," featuring Anita Stewart. "The Fettered Woman" is an adaptation from Chambers' story, "Anne's Bridge," and was produced under the direction of Tom Terriss.

The play, aside from the strength of narrative characteristic of Chambers, is remarkable for many beautiful scenes and splendid photographic effects. Also it clearly establishes Alice Joyce as one of the really beautiful women of the world. The Vitagraph executive staff, after reviewing the picture, was collectively enthusiastic in its praise of Miss Joyce's beauty, and the statement was made that she never had appeared more attractive.

Story Is Absorbing

"The Fettered Woman" is an exceptionally beautiful story, the theme of which is built on the fate of a girl falsely accused of a crime and sent to a corrective institution, the shame of which fetters her until a noble-hearted man appears in her life and rescues her from her own sad memories. The play has its setting in "Anne's Bridge," a one-time booming village whose prosperity was made possible by Dr. Allende, a wealthy practitioner and the father of Angeline Allende (Miss Joyce).

At the opening of the story the town is in the last stages of decay, its stilled factories representative of the lost fortunes of Dr. Allende and others, and a blatant real estate sign stands like a tombstone over the boom that has died.

Dr. Allende and his daughter still live in the old estate, which comprises 3,000 acres of land, on which he is trying to borrow money, as he has only $600 left in the bank and his daughter is in college. An unscrupulous real estate broker refuses the loan, but suggests that if he could have Angelina the loan might be forthcoming. Ordered from the house, the agent points to a rifle and sneeringly suggests that the old man would be doing the community and his child a favor if he used the weapon on himself. An hour later Anne's Bridge is shocked by the suicide of Allende.

This real estate broker seeks to force his attention on Angelina on her return from college, but she loathes him. However, he induces her to go to New York on a pretense that a syndicate is prepared to buy her acres. His plan is to get her to sign away all title and thus get her in his power.

Finish Is Romantic

With another man and a woman posing as his wife, they take Angelina to a cafe, where the men drink to excess, and the New Yorker, luring Angelina to the summer garden, forces his attentions on her. She fells him with a heavy vase and, as the man rises again to attack her, his associate, hidden in the shrubbery, shoots and seriously wounds him. The girl, dazed by the sudden tragedy, stands rooted to the ground, and the assailant sees a chance to shift the crime to her by dropping the revolver at her feet. She is arrested and the two sharpers, by perjured testimony, escape, and Angelina is sent to a Samaritan home for three years.

Returning to Anne's Bridge, she is shunned as a jail bird by the older people and feared by the children whom she loves. She advertises for summer boarders, but gets only one, a young New Yorker attracted by the trout streams on the Allende estate. He falls in love with Angelina and asks her to marry him. She refuses, although she loves him, on account of her prison record, which she keeps a secret.

He learns that she has such a record, and disbelieving the village gossips, returns to New York and learns the truth. Then he returns to Anne's Bridge and finds he has removed the only barrier to their happiness.

Mutual Press Book Is a Model

CONTAINS HELPS FOR EXPLOITING "THE PLANTER"

THE Mutual Film Corporation has issued an eight-page press book on "The Planter," the seven-reel dramatic spectacle starring Tyrone Power, which is scheduled for release on November 12. They are now ready for distribution to exhibitors.

The book is a comprehensive and complete aid to the exhibitor who books the production in addition to being a highly attractive piece of printing. It is done in two colors, orange and dull black, profusely illustrated and printed on enameled stock.

The press book illustrates all the accessories available on the production, two sets of one-sheet posters, two sets of three-sheet posters, a six and sixteen sheet, two art slides, a throwaway, two double-column cuts, a single and thumbnail and a set of ten lobby photos.

Book Includes Music Setting

It carries a musical setting prepared by Joseph O'Sullivan, director of music service for the Mutual Film Corporation, who prepares cues for all of the Mutual star productions. Mr. O'Sullivan has used standard music in his setting, which will eliminate the necessity for buying an elaborate library for the musical accompaniment of the picture.

In addition to these features, the press book contains two pages of newspaper publicity, written by trained newspapermen, a page of advertising suggestions and a complete outlay of material for the exhibitor's program.

Helps Exhibitors Stir Interest

An added feature of the press book is a comprehensive guide to the exploitation of the production, outlining the various methods which may be adopted by the exhibitor to create interest in the picture among his patrons. This was prepared with the fact in mind that each individual territory present a different problem of exploitation, an appeal to a differeent class of people through a different channel.

The press book on "The Planter" has been issued as part of Mutual's "service beyond the films," a policy which the Mutual Film Corporation is pursuing on all of its productions—an effort to help the exhibitor get 100 per cent at the box office.

Madame Markova Has Narrow Escape

MADAME SONIA MARKOVA, the newly acquired William Fox star, recently came near losing her life when at work in making "The Painted Madonna." In one of the scenes it was necessary for Markova to stand on the edge of a cliff overlooking a waterfall. She stepped too near the edge of the rock and slipped on a piece of moss. It seemed certain that she would be drowned or injured fatally on the rocks that bordered the waterfall.

Markova swam out and clung to one of the ledges of rock until the camera man reached her with a rope. Markova climbed, hand over hand, and finally came "over the top."

Her hands were severely cut and she was thoroughly drenched, but retiring to her nearby "limousine-dressing-room," she changed her clothing, got a little "first aid to the injured" and in fifteen minutes was raedy to go on with the picture.

Critics Praise Theda Bara as "Cleopatra"

William Fox's spectacular cinema version of "Cleopatra," with Theda Bara as the Siren of the Nile, set new standards in film sumptuousness. This is the gist of the critics' opinions on the new photo-drama which Mr. Fox presented at the Lyric Theater, in New York City.

The New York Times calls it "an uncommonly fine picture," and the Telegram says that as a spectacle, "the film surpasses even 'The Birth of a Nation.'" The reviewers were enthusiastic over Miss Bara's splendid impersonation of Cleopatra, and admitted, too, that the hugeness of the spectacle was quite enough to take one's breath away.

Following are excerpts from the critiques:

"The picture was produced with gorgeous effects, settings and costumes, and is photographed with pictorial beauty."—New York World.

"'Cleopatra' is so big that one is completely overwhelmed. The spectacle simply beggars description."—New York Tribune.

"An uncommonly fine picture. It is the finest sort of film and the fans are certain to flock to it. It is a triumph for the director, too."—New York Times.

"Miss Bara gives a striking performance in a luxurious production. She is probably the first actress to play the role whose eyes looked the part."—New York Telegraph.

"'Cleopatra' is a production with no detail omitted that plenty of money and a great deal of effort could supply."—New York Globe.

"'Cleopatra' is Miss Bara at her best."—New York Telegram.

"An ideal Theda Bara role."—New York Evening Sun.

Camouflage Has No Place in Poster Making

"There is absolutely no excuse, with the possible exception of inferior production, for making motion picture posters deceptive. Camouflage has its uses but it does not lend itself to the theater lobby. The up-to-date distributor does not issue deceptive posters."

This was the comment of H. F. Turrill, in charge of posters for the Mutual Film Corporation, upon stories that exhibitors are meeting increasing difficulties in securing paper which truly portrays the production and that the use of camouflage in posters has become one of the big troubles of the exhibitor.

Release Dates Are Shifted

Delay in the screening of "Miss U. S. A.," due to the slight accident which befell June Caprice, the star of this William Fox subject, has made necessary still another shift in the schedule of releases for October and for November. "The Scarlet Pimpernel" was changed to the week of October 28, instead of "Miss U. S. A.," the latter being shifted to the first week in November.

Brady Is Elected Exposition Head

Producer Is Unanimous Choice of Directors Who Will Stage Grand Central Palace Show

WILLIAM A. BRADY, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, was unanimously elected president of the Motion Picture Exposition Company at a meeting of the board of directors held in New York last week. He began the duties of his new office at once.

Other officers chosen were: Vice-president, Lee A. Ochs; vice-president, J. H. Hallberg; treasurer, J. A. Berst, and Secretary, Louis F. Blumenthal. Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, was selected as general manager of the exposition to be held in Grand Central Palace, New York city, February 2 to 10, inclusive. Samuel Grant, of Boston, was appointed as Mr. Elliott's assistant. The Boston show which will be held next July, will be under the management of Mr. Grant, with Mr. Elliott as his assistant. For the New York show, Richard G. Hollaman, president of the International Exposition Company, will act as adviser to the management.

The contract prices for floor space were approved by the directors and certain sections of the main floor of the Palace will be sold at $2.50 a square foot, while the remainder as well as the entire second floor will be sold at $2.00 a square foot. Although no active solicitation for the New York exposition has been made, practically $10,000 in space has already been allotted, and the indications are that all of the available area on the second floor of the Palace will be reserved within the next few weeks.

Triangle Is Making a Diversified Program

European Subjects, Western Dramas, Tale of the Sea and Society Story Making

WITH nine directors shooting daily on stories varying from melodrama to comedy dramas and more than one hundred stock people employed, the Triangle Film Corporation's Culver City plant and its big ranch studio, Hartville, are the scenes of unusual activity this week. Work is being rushed while the weather is still agreeable.

Three directors, Ferris Hartman, Lynn Reynolds and Jack Dillon, are waiting for stories, and the end of the week will see the completion of three pictures, "Fanatics," which is in charge of Director Raymond Wells; "The Sudden Gentleman," in which Thomas N. Heffron is directing William Desmond; and "The Ship of Doom," on which Wyndham Gittens is handling the megaphone.

Triangle pictures now completed and awaiting shipment include "Regenerates," featuring Alma Ruebens and Walt Whitman; "Indiscreet Corinne," starring Olive Thomas; "The Fuel of Life," in which Belle Bennett is featured; and "Easy Money," with Charles Gunn in the leading role.

In "The Sudden Gentleman," William Desmond is seen as a village blacksmith from Old Ireland, who falls heir to a vast estate in Chicago. The transition of Desmond, as Garry Garrity, from an awkward rustic to a polished gentleman, is said to afford unusual situations of comedy. The star is supported in the principal roles by Mary McIvor and Jack Richardson.

Jack Conway, who directed "Doing Her Bit," has begun work on "Because of the Woman," in which Belle Bennett is being featured. The supporting cast includes such Triangle favorites as Jack Livingston, George Chesebro, George Pearce and Lillian Langdon.

Director Gittens is putting the fininshing touches on his first Triangle offering, "The Ship of Doom," a narrative of the sea, which includes such spectacles as a fight between the officers and a mutinous crew while the vessel is burning at sea, and a battle between a man-eating shark and sailor. Included in the cast are Monte Blue, Claire McDowell and Frank Brownlee.

J. Barney Sherry has the role of a financier with a reputation as a miser, but who in reality is a philanthropist without a press agent, in "Fanatic," now being completed under the direction of Raymond Wells. In this picture a woman blames the financier for the death of her husband and starts out to gain revenge, only to find that the financier was a loyal friend to the man she loved. Players supporting Sherry are William V. Mong, Olga Grey, Alberta Lee, Lee Phelps, Aaron Edwards and Louis Durham.

"The Passion Flower" is the latest picture selected for Alma Ruebens. A great part of the action is laid in Italy and France before the world war. The production is being directed by Walter Edwards, who recently completed "The Fuel of Life."

Rowland Lee Goes to War

Having worked night and day for more than a week that Rowland Lee might be released as soon as possible to join Uncle Sam's Liberty Army, Director G. P. Hamilton is finishing his first picture under the Triangle banner, "The Maternal Spark." All of the scenes in which Lee appears have been taken, and the young actor is now cast in the greatest role of his life, that of an officers' training camp student.

The deadly feud which raged between the cattle barons and the sheep men of the early west is the theme on which is based Roy Stewart's new story, "The Learnin' of Jim Benton."

"Without Honor" is the working title of the new picture to which Director E. Mason Hopper is devoting his attention.

Frank Borzage, former leading man and now a director of Triangle productions, has started work on a story of the great Northwest, "Until They Get Me," by Kenneth B. Clark, depicting the life of an officer of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

Rankin Drew an Aviator

It has just become known that S. Rankin Drew, formerly a motion picture director of note and son of Sidney Drew, is an aviator and that he is seeing active service in France. He went abroad to drive an ambulance in one of the Red Cross units but, finding that game too tame, went in for aviation. He obtained a license and is a full-fledged air pilot on the western front. It is understood he intends to remain in the service as long as he is needed.

Vitagraph Lines Up Against Music Tax

All Cue Sheets Are Made From Lists of Selections Which are Non-Taxable

WALTER W. IRWIN, general manager of the distributing and selling organization of Greater Vitagraph, has caused a notice to exhibitors to be put in the company's house organ, calling attention to the fact that Vitagraph will not have in its musical accompaniments any but non-taxable music. This action marks first official cognizance that any producing company has taken with relation to the attempt of the American Society of Authors and Composers to impose a tax on the exhibitors of the country, which, it has been estimated, would add a burden af $1,500,000 a year to the heavy load they are already carrying.

The Vitagraph Company in the past has avoided putting out any music that could be taxed by the American Society. It was decided many months ago that Vitagraph musical suggestion cue sheets should be arranged only from such music as was permissible to be played free of tax. S. M. Berg, the company's musical director and arranger, was chosen to make a special investigation.

Irwin Explains Service

Discussing the music situation, Mr. Irwin said:

"We have tried to devote as much care and thought to our musical accompaniments as we do to our film productions, and there is no reason why this should not be done, because in the final analysis they are similar in purpose, there is no room or there should not be for careless preparation in either field. Motion pictures are interpretations of writers' thoughts and musical accompaniments, to be of value, should be faithful interpretations of these other interpretations.

"Big pictures require big music, and big music means the classics, excerpts from Hayden, Beethoven, Mozart, Mendelssohn, Tschaikowsky, Chopin and other masters will be found consistently in the musical suggestions prepared for our productions. These are woven together with such exceptional skill, that when used in conjunction with the picture they become the voice of the silent drama. Music must be the voice of the screen.

"Vitagraph has ever striven to give exhibitors every ounce of service that can be devised in all angles of the business and we have given special attention to the musical service. While we have sought the higher altitudes for musical expression descriptive of screen action, we have also sought to have our themes the acme of simplicity, and in conjunction with the incidental and characteristic music offered to theaters with our product, I believe no difficulty should be experienced by any competent musician in interpreting every emotion depicted upon the screen. In our determination to give exhibitors tax-free musical suggestions, we feel that we are not only helping the exhibitors and ourselves, but we are giving the public the best music, and, therefore, the best entertainment."

Exhibitors Save Money on "Who Is Number One?"

A large percentage of exhibitors booking "Who Is 'Number One?", the Paramount serial starring Kathleen Clifford, are taking advantage of Paramount's discount offered to exhibitors who pay in advance for the entire fifteen-week run.

Prints of the first episodes are in all exchanges and a rush of bookings has followed the trade showings in every city. Exhibitors see what they are buying in "Who Is 'Number One'?" and because they are running no risk they are taking advantage of Paramount's profitable discount for cash in advance.

Ira Aaronson, who has been Pittsburgh salesman for Jewel Productions, Inc., since the formation of that company, has been appointed manager of the Detroit office, succeeding Ralph Pielow.

New Music Law Is Tested in Court

Exhibitor Seeks to Enjoin Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers

IN AN effort to test the right of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to levy a tax on music played in motion picture theaters, the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street and St. Nicholas Avenue Amusement Company, operating a theater at that location in New York City, has brought suit asking an injunction against the society. While the suit is brought in the name of this one amusement organization, the bill prays that the composers and publishers be enjoined against collecting royalty fees from all motion picture theaters.

As defendants, the complaint names a most comprehensive list, comprising the foremost composers and publishers of the country. Among these are Victor Herbert, Raymond Hubbell, E. Ray Goetz, Silvio Hein, Irving Berlin, George C. Hobart, William Jerome, Will Von Tilzer, R. H. Burnside and Leo Feist.

Music Only Incidental

The contention of the film men is that their theaters are conducted solely for the purpose of exhibiting motion pictures. The music dispensed is solely of an incidental character, they insist, and is in no way exploited as to infringe on the copyright of the melodies they use.

Furthermore, they add, the patrons of the films do not attend the shows to hear the music and before the act of Congress permitting the publishers to tax all amusement places, publishers were wont to send out free copies of their songs broadcast to advertise them, as well as hiring song "pluggers" to sing them.

Declare Tax Is Unjust

In view of all this, the motion picture interests say they do not think it is just or right to tax an industry for royalty fees when the product taxed is only an incidental to the business conducted.

The affidavit submitted sets forth that the defendant exacts royalties from some 50,000 theaters, restaurants and other amusement places for the use of their music that totals $20,000 a day.

New England Exhibitors Meet

Boston Is Scene of Consolidation of Film Organizations—Brady Is Speaker

THE Massachusetts branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and the New England Exhibitors' Association were merged into a single organization—the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts—at the recent convention of New England exhibitors in Boston. E. H. Horstmann was elected temporary chairman of the merged organization, pending the first called meeting scheduled for the second Wednesday in December. At this time permanent officers will be elected.

At a banquet which followed the convention section, William A. Brady, who was introduced by Toastmaster Horstmann as "the father of the moving picture industry," said:

"There is every indication that the motion picture is to be the greatest factor in winning the present world war. Herbert Hoover, food administrator, has told me he considers the motion picture the best medium of transmitting his propaganda to the public. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo told me he believed the success of the first Liberty Loan was due in great measure to the motion picture. Two weeks ago in the White House President Wilson told me he believed the motion picture might win the war."

Lee A. Ochs, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, in an address, declared exhibitors were not getting as much money for their shows as they deserve.

"You are giving a $2 show for virtually nothing," he said.

In the discussion of the federal tax laws as applied to the picture industry, it was pointed out that moving pictures in the next year would contribute to the government between $12,000,000 and $18,000,000.

Gail Kane Heads Mutual Schedule

GAIL KANE tops Mutual's release schedule for the week of November 5 in "A Game of Wits," a five-reel comedy drama produced by the American Film Company, Inc., under the direction of Henry King. The schedule carries two comedies, a topical and a two-reel serial.

"A Game of Wits" is a clever story, well told in the picture and showing Miss Kane to advantage. It is said to be a superior production even to "Souls in Pawn," Miss Kane's most pronounced screen success.

Supporting Miss Kane in the picture are Spottiswood Aitken, George Periolat and Louis J. Cody, best known and most capable of the stock company at the American studio. Mr. King has put his best efforts into the production and Miss Kane does some remarkably fine bits of work.

The story is built around the successful effort of a pretty girl, who frustrates the efforts of an aged and rich admirer to marry her and save, at the same time, the family fortune, which he has threatened to destroy unless she becomes his bride. Before he gets through, the veteran lover is quite sick of his bargain.

The comedy releases of the week are "Mary's Merry Mixup," a one-reel Strand, and "Jerry and the Vampire," a one-reel cub. Pretty Miss Rhodes is cast as a flirting bride in "Mary's Merry Mixup." Jay Belasco is the suffering, banned by Mary's pa, who sneaks into her house as a butler and is exposed in the arms of a vampish maid by his own wife.

Mutual Weekly hereafter goes to the screen on Monday instead of Thursday. The release of the week of November 5 is No. 149.

"The Mountain King," is the title of Chapter VIII of "The Lost Express," the fifteen-chapter Mutual-Signal serial.

Exhibitors Invited to Share Advertising Benefits

Through the various Paramount and Artcraft exchanges throughout the United States suggestions are being sent to exhibitors for linking up with their million-dollar newspaper advertising campaign. In a letter to film showmen it is pointed out that the popularity of Paramount and Artcraft pictures will be trebled in a short time as a result of the advertising drive not only in the newspapers but in the national magazines and in the use of the most prominent electric signboards in all the principal cities.

"Nothing," runs the letter, "can stop it. We have the best-loved stars and the greatest directors; we are producing the finest, cleanest and most advanced type of pictures."

H. M. Berman, New York manager of Jewel Productions, Inc., has returned to New York after a three-week western trip in the interest of Jewel Productions.

Fox Is Strong for Plays from Children's Stories

The success of William Fox's presentation of "Jack and the Beanstalk" and, more recently, "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," has led Mr. Fox to organize another company of juvenile players. The new company will be headed by Georgie Stone. His miniature leading lady will be the piquant Gertrude Messinger, few of years, but accomplished beyond her age.

Mr. Fox retains the services of Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, the featured players in "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "Aladdin."

Author Watches Filming of His Story

George Melford has had the benefit of Frank Spearman's personal attendance during much of the work of directing "Nan of Music Mountain," which Mr. Spearman wrote and which will be a Paramount picture starring Wallace Reid with Ann Little as his leading woman. Mr. Spearman has watched much of the work of filming his story.

Censor Board Gives Praise to "Mother"

George Loane Tucker's feature production, "Mother," has passed the keen scrutiny of a censoring committee of the National Board of Review without the necessity of a single elimination. Chairman Sherwood, of the reviewing committee, who is a member of the national board, expressed himself as highly pleased with the wholesomeness of "Mother" throughout the entire six parts. He remarked upon the grateful absence of purient sex interest and sensationalism and commended highly the artistry of Elizabeth Risdon in the role of Mother. "Mother" will be released to the various state right buyers exactly as produced by George Loane Tucker from the novel by Eden Philpotts.

"Mother," is gaining wide distribution through McClure Pictures.

Express Delays Cause Cancellations

Southern Exhibitors Are Hard Hit—Memphis Sunday Closing Fight Results in Mistrial

BY J. L. RAY

MOTION picture exchanges in the south are experiencing considerable delay and inconvenience in the handling of their films at various points south of the Ohio river. Numerous complaints have been filed with the express companies, and while it is believed that the express management is doing a great deal to alleviate the abnormal condition of slow transit, many programs are being cancelled on account of not receiving the films on time.

All express companies are accepting shipments of films and accessories subject to delay, which prevents any lawsuits arising from their inability to deliver the goods on time. One of the largest exchanges in the south is putting a bulletin notice on all correspondence to the effect that they are unwilling to assume responsibility for non-delivery of films.

Sunday Trial Miscarries

In the suit of the city of Memphis against James B. Amis, manager of the Majestic Theater No. 2, an up-town show house, in which the defendant is charged with the illegal operation of a motion picture house on Sunday, Judge J. P. Young, of the First Circuit court, has granted the application of A. L. Heiskill, representing the city, for a writ of certiorari in the Sunday closing case.

This is the suit growing out of the test case instituted by Memphis theater men as to the legality of Sunday operation, provided profits were donated to charity. Three cases are pending against Amis, each for the mere sale of a ticket, one following the other. However this case is merely a fragment of the Sunday closing muddle, which came to an abrupt halt when P. W. Lanier held that it was not legal for shows to operate on Sunday under the conditions set forth above.

Notwithstanding the fact that Judge Young gave peremptory instructions to the jury which heard the case to assess a fine of from $1 to $50, the jury could not agree on the amount, and the judge was forced to discharge the jurors and declare a mistrial. Nine of the jurors favored a fine of $12.50, while three of them held out for a $1 fine for each offense.

Eight similar cases will be consolidated and tried together by Judge Young this week, leaving about forty others, arising at various times in the Sunday mix-up, and pending in other divisions of the court.

Opening Is Delayed

On account of delay by the contractors who have been remodeling the old Lyric Theater in Chattanooga, the rejuvenated play-house opened a week later than anticipated. The house opened Monday as the Loew Theater, after some fast work by the interior decorators and others engaged in renovating the building. Through the personal efforts of General Manager E. A. Schiller of the Loew circuit, the delay was limited to only one week.

Five New Comedies Are Started

WORK has been started this week on five new comedies at the Triangle Culver-city studios, with Directors Reggie Morris, Harry Williams, William Beaudine, H. Raymaker and Charles Avery. Mr. Morris has just returned from Hartville, the company's 1800 acre ranch, where he spent the entire week filming exteriors for a new comedy featuring Ray Griffith. The story is a burlesque of the West and of western life and promises to be an exceptionally good one. Griffith is seen in the character of a gun-man with little or no regard for human life.

Director Williams is at work on a new Triangle-Keystone comedy with an all star cast containing Mal St. Claire, Eddie Gribbon, Max Asher, Atalia Marton, Dora Rogers, William Irving, Marianna de la Torre and Alice Davenport. Director Beaudine has started work on a new comedy and has been out on "locations" the past week. The cast includes Peggy Pearce, Baldy Belmont, Paddy McGuire, Ward Caulfield, Andy Anderson and Fred Bretram.

H. Raymaker, has been hindered the past week by the uncertain light. He is at work on a new comedy with Dale Fuller, Maude Wayne, Milton Sims, James Donnelly, Lloyd Bacon and Dorothy Hager.

Director Avery who recently turned out a one reel comedy in two days is again at work on a new production. His cast includes Harry Depp, Fritz Schade, Myrtle Lind, Jack Henderson, Ruth Langston and Lee Forbes. Director Avery attributes his speed in turning out pictures to the fact that he insists on having all sets and location ready before he starts work on his production.

Present Petrova Portrait to Patrons

The Petrova Picture advertising campaign is to be augmented by the distribution to all of the patrons who attend the showing of the first Petrova picture, "Daughter of Destiny," a large, colored reproduction of the Underwood portrait of Madame Petrova, which is to appear on the front cover of the December Ladies' World. With each sheet will go a note of cordial greeting signed by Madame Petrova.

The first distribution of these portraits will be at The Rialto during the week in November when "Daughter of Destiny" is shown. The original of this Underwood portrait will also be displayed in the lobby of The Rialto.

Farrell Succeeds Mayer

Edward J. Farrell, formerly manager of the Boston Pathe exchange, has succeeded Louis B. Mayer as general manager of the New England territory for Metro. Mr. Mayer will become New England manager for the Select Pictures Corporation.

Florence De Shon, newly acquired Vitagraph star.

Florence De Shon Joins

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of Greater Vitagraph, has added another young artist to his list of stars by signing Miss Florence De Shon to a long-time contract providing for her appearance in feature roles.

Miss De Shon, who was on the legitimate stage until a year ago, is the third feminine star to be engaged by Mr. Smith in as many weeks and the fifth added to the Vitagraph forces in the last few months.

For some time Mr. Smith has been studying the work of young women appearing on the screen, his search for new artists being prompted by a desire to get talent of as varying temperament as looks. No two of the quintette which he has selected thus far resemble each other in features or complexion and each was chosen because of suitability for a specific line of interpretation. His choices, in their work, range from the ingenue type to the tragic actress. Nowhere in the list is there a "vamp." He says that Vitagraph has no intention of putting out any productions requiring any vampire work.

In Miss De Shon, the Vitagraph president thinks he has a "find," because before her advent into motion picture work she had had splendid training on the legitimate stage, appearing in a number of successful Broadway productions.

Born in Tacoma, Wash., Miss De Shon spent her childhood in the Northwest, but when it came time for her education her parents brought her to New York to attend private schools. She went on the stage four seasons ago and her ability as an actress was such that in her second season she was one of two American girls chosen for important roles in "My Lady's Dress," an English production which ran at Grace George's Playhouse in New York. As "Psyche," a cockney model, Miss De Shon scored a personal hit in this production. She appeared in "Seven Chances," which ran for a season on Broadway.

After a stay of more than six months in southern California, Miss Theda Bara, the William Fox star, arrived in New York City last Sunday.

American Cinema Aides Are Named

Men Who Will Select Films for Showing Abroad Are Leaders of Motion Picture Industry

J. E. BROULATOUR, treasurer of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, who was recently selected as chairman of the American Cinema Commission, has announced the personnel of an advisory board, comprising officials of representative companies who have volunteered to assist in the selection of American films, which are to be sent to Russia, France and Italy for showing to the soldiers, as well as to the people throughout those countries.

The advisory board comprises the following: William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation; Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; R. A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation; J. A. Berst, vice-president of the Pathe Exchange, Inc.; W. R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company; S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto Theater; Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand Theater.

Mr. Broulatour has established headquarters for the American Cinema Commission at 235 West Twenty-third street, and within a few hours after the headquarters were opened film shipments began to arrive from some of the well-known producing companies. In the next few weeks it is expected that the advisory board and the commissioners will have several hundred thousand feet of film offered for examination and approval.

A. A. Kaufman, George Mooser and John Tuerk have been selected by Mr. Brulatour as his staff assistants with offices at the headquarters of the commission.

Fox Announces Four November Features

NOVEMBER should prove one of the most auspicious months in the history of Fox Film Corporation, because it will mark the advent on the screen of a new, spectacular film, "The Babes in the Woods," of the Sunshine brand of William Fox-Henry Lehrman comedies; and of Mme. Sonia Markova, William Fox's sensational Russian star, whose engagement in films was announced last week.

Besides Mme. Markova's initial production, there will be released by Mr. Fox three other feature pictures. Markova's photoplays will be placed among the one-a-week, 52-a-year releases. The titles and the dates of the new special features are:

November 4—June Caprice in "Miss U. S. A."

November 11—Sonia Markova in "The Painted Madonna."

November 18—Virginia Pearson in "All for a Husband."

November 25—Gladys Brockwell in "A Branded Soul."

"Miss U. S. A.," June Caprice's new vehicle, is described as a "Red, White and Blue story infused with patriotic thrills." The picture has abundant dramatic action, in fact, it is the most dramatic subject which Miss Caprice has made to date. In the supporting company appear prominently William Courtleigh, Jr., Frank Evans, Tom Burrough and Al Hall. Harry Millarde is the director and Randolph Lewis the author of the scenario.

June Caprice in "Miss U. S. A."

Sonia Markova makes her debut on the screen on November 11, in a photoplay called "The Painted Madonna," directed by O. A. C. Lund. "The Painted Madonna" is an impressive drama of pathos and power.

Virginia Pearson's forthcoming film, "All for a Husband," which Carl Harbaugh has in work, will be a distinct novelty among the studio output of the year.

Bertram Bracken is progressing rapidly on "A Branded Soul," an unusual photodrama from a story by E. Lloyd Sheldon. The members of Miss Brockwell's company are all well known photoplay artists.

Ruggles Ready for War

Wesley Ruggles, who produced "For France," a Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, is expecting his call to the national army at any moment. He received an extension of time, recently, when President Albert E. Smith of the Vitagraph company requested that he be permitted to complete "The Agony Column" and in return promised to furnish free of cost several feature productions for showing in army camps. Ruggles hopes to obtain a transfer to the aviation section soon after he dons a uniform.

Cameraman an Artist

John Arnold, cameraman, of Metro's staff, has become a member of the Metropolitan Museum of Arts. He is the only motion picture photographer who has a place in this body.

Nazimova Is Sponsor

SURROUNDED by a maze of steel, and by hundreds of spectators who had left early morning tasks to witness the unique ceremony, Madame Nazimova, the celebrated star, stood upon a small platform in New Orleans and sent a bottle of American-made champagne crashing onto one of the master beams of the Boehringer Amusement Company's new theater, as it slowly lifted into space, and gave the structure the name "Liberty."

Madame Nazimova was in New Orleans with a company of Metro players under direction of George D. Baker for the filming of quaint Old World exteriors for their forthcoming special production, "The Madonna of the Rosebush." The star graciously acceded to the request of the Boehringer company that she be sponsor of their new temple of the silent drama, and the ceremony was unique in that this is the first time an international celebrity christened a theater.

The scene was staged for two cameras operated by the Harcol Film Company, who are photographing the construction of the theater for a special film to be used as one of the novel features of the opening, and, at the request of Madame Nazimova, there were no speeches to the assembled spectators.

The Liberty will be the largest and finest theater in Dixie and will have a number of unique features which will distinguish it from all theaters of America. If its career is as auspicious as its early days, it will indeed be brilliant.

Madame Nazimova's company boarded the New York limited the night after the christening. They were given a rousing send-off by a host of friends they had won in New Orleans.

Twenty Thousand Help to Make "Cleopatra"

Not only an army, but a navy as well, of extras—some 20,000 persons in all, it is estimated—was necessary in making the William Fox Standard picture, "Cleopatra," starring Theda Bara, and which has opened an indefinite run in New York at the Lyric Theater.

In one scene, that in which Cleopatra flees from her palace at Alexandria and, surrounded by her army, awaits word from the Roman conqueror—there were used more than 3,000 men, 1,000 horses and camels, and a vast city of multi-colored tents, pitched in the shadow of the Sphinx and the pyramids.

It required 3,000 human beings in brilliant garb to populate the huge Egyptian palace erected on a desolate habitat of wild ducks and jack rabbits. For the royal barge 150 men were needed—more than are required to man a modern destroyer. Aboard the battle craft seen in the production were 5,000 men, divided between the followers of Cleopatra and Octavius Caesar. More than 4,000 persons were used in the scenes in Rome. All these types were obtained in California. Romans, Egyptians, Nubians, Greeks, Persians—all were at hand just as they were wanted. In many instances Mexicans were used for Egyptians, fair-haired Americans for Romans and negroes for Egyptian slaves.

Vitagraph Gains Another Legal Point

Wins Order Restraining City of Chicago From Interfering With "Within the Law"

CHICAGO'S "super-director" of the movies has again met with defeat. The Vitagraph Company of America obtained an injunction which permits the showing of "Within the Law" while awaiting action of an appeal taken by the city of Chicago against a mandamus issued them some time ago.

A short time ago they were offered a "pink permit" for Chicago territory providing that certain cuts were made. This the Vitagraph company refused and took legal action to obtain a white permit. In the legal battle that followed the petitioners were granted a mandamus by the circuit court but the city appealed the case. The appeal threatened to lay the picture on the shelf for some time so in the face of the city's appeal the Vitagraph company asked and obtained an injunction.

This is the first case of its kind that has been decided in favor of a film company in the history of Illinois and is believed to be the first of its kind in the history of the entire country.

Making of "Les Miserables" Is Finished

Fox Forces Complete Picturization of Victor Hugo's Immortal Masterpiece of Literature

AFTER months of steady and most exacting work, William Fox's "Les Miserables," a photodramatic masterpiece from a masterpiece of fiction, has been completed in the eastern studios. William Farnum, the star, who appears as the immortal Jean Valjean; Frank Lloyd, the director; most of those in the cast, and hundreds of "extra" players, stayed many times for eighteen or twenty hours a day at the studio, because of the scores of night scenes.

There is probably no figure in literature comparable to Jean Valjean, and, in Mr. Fox's opinion, there is no actor better equipped artistically, as well as physically, for the portrayal on the screen than William Farnum.

Director Lloyd is enthusiastic over the production. He is happiest when dealing with a production calling for the closest attention to detail, the erection of massive settings, and for the handling of great crowds. All of these things were imperative in screening "Les Miserables."

A complete French village—the village of D———was built in a New Jersey valley at a cost of $50,000. Immediately the site was selected, the facilities of the Fox producing organization were called into play. Architects who had studied the French villages of the early nineteenth century were consulted; carpenters and masons were set to work; the property department received a list a yard long of the materials it was to furnish; and the business of constructing the village of D—— proceeded with speed and accuracy.

The company of photoplayers who will be seen in the characters from Victor Hugo's deathless novel include some of the best known players in the Fox forces.

Release Dates Elastic

In order that the picture may have the very widest distribution, irregular release dates have been arranged, the plan being to have special weeks devoted to the showing of the picture in different sections of the country. The release dates which may be re-arranged to suit the convenience of exhibitors who may desire a prelease are:

October 22—New York, New England states, northern New Jersey.

October 29—Pennsylvania, Delaware, southern New Jersey, Wheeling, W. Va.

November 5—Northern Illinois, northern Indiana, eastern Wisconsin, upper Michigan.

November 12—Ohio, southern Indiana, Kentucky.

November 19—Lower Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, southern Illinois.

November 26—Maryland, eastern West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, District of Columbia.

December 3—Washington, Oregon, California, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Colorado.

Censors Need Assistance

Owing to the difficulties encountered in examining all films of a news character at Washington before their release, the Committee on Public Information has asked the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures to examine such films in New York City in an advisory capacity. The national board will be expected to call the attention of the Federal committee to any scenes which might be construed as giving information to the enemy or as harmful to the military activities of the country. Following the receipt of such information, it will be determined later by the Committee on Public Information as to whether the portions of film mentioned shall be eliminated.

Runs Picture Show in Auto

H. H. Buckwalter of Denver, Colo., has perfected an arrangement whereby he can have his own private motion picture show in his automobile. By attaching a small screen to the windshield, closing the curtains on all sides and setting a tiny projection machine in the rear seat, he can operate a complete program for as many guests as can pile into the car. The "juice" for the projecting light is obtained from the automobile's storage battery.

New Firm on Pacific Coast

The Sacramento Film Company has been organized and plans are being made for the erection of a picture-making plant in Sacramento, Cal. It is the first of the industry to locate in Sacramento. Walter L. McGinn, who announces that the company will produce features and comedies, is in Sacramento investigating prospective sites for studios.

Becomes Hoover Aide

Arthur Williams, general manager of the New York Edison company, has been appointed United States food administrator for the district of New York. Mr. Williams was informed of his appointment in a telegram from Herbert Hoover, national food administrator. Mr. Williams' headquarters will be at 124 East Fifteenth street, New York City.

Patriotic Film Is Going Strong

"Who Leads the National Army?" Is Booked by Exhibitors in All Parts of Nation

"WHO Leads the National Army?" the one reel military training picture being distributed by the Triangle Distributing Corporation to help the government prove that the drafted men are commanded by highly trained, efficient officers, is breaking all booking records for one reel subjects in all parts of the United States.

The reason assigned is the timeliness of the picture, the patriotism of the exhibitors of the country in booking it in place of some other one-reel subject for their program and the bonus offered by Nat Stronge, who is handling the picture for the Military Training Camps Association, to members of the Triangle Distributing organization.

When Mr. Stronge was "drafted" by the promoters of the picture to send it along to a patriotic and financial success, he made arrangements with the Triangle Distributing Corporation to take charge of the distribution. This was done through Mr. Fred Kingsbury of Triangle who agreed to handle the picture in the United States and turn back every cent of the rental money received for the purpose of promoting universal military training, especially among the younger generation.

Salesmen Work for Bonus

The second move of Mr. Stronge was to offer a bonus of one hundred dollars to the salesman who would obtain the greatest amount of bookings for the picture in a given time and another bonus of one hundred dollars to the branch manager whose office turned in the greatest number of bookings.

C. B. Pricel, manager of the Triangle New York exchange, and Manager J. S. Woody of the Triangle Chicago exchange are both claiming they have the bonus won.

In Utica, N. Y., there are sixteen motion picture theaters, every one of which has booked "Who Leads the National Army?"

Publicity Man Joins Navy

Lloyd Robinson, of the publicity staff of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, has covered his "mill" and departed to become a chief yeoman in the United States navy. He will be stationed at Boston Navy Yard, temporarily, but hopes to be sent to Europe in the near future. Robinson is a graduate of Williams college.

Predicts War's End Soon

Ingvald C. Oes, formerly American representative for Great Northern Films and now the Scandinavian representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, writes from Copenhagen to a friend in New York, saying:

"There is a feeling over here that the action of the United States in entering the war will bring about a conclusion of the conflict in six months."

Scene from "Who Is Number One," starring Kathleen Clifford, Paramount's widely advertised serial.

Jewell Carmen Becomes a Star in Fox Pictures

William Fox announces the creation of another star in presenting to the photoplay world the name of Jewel Carmen, who has been with the Fox forces less than a year as leading woman for William Farnum, and who is advanced to full-fledged stardom because of her dramatic ability, beauty and Mr. Fox's enthusiasm over her work.

Miss Carmen has been in the east for the last two months making the scenes in "Les Miserables," in which she appears as Cosette. She will leave for the western studios within the near future to begin the series of special features in which she will have the chief part.

Although Miss Carmen has been in motion pictures about four years, she scored her greatest success very recently in her characterization of Eliza Allen in "The Conqueror," R. A. Walsh's eight-reel drama based on the life of Sam Houston. Miss Carmen's portrayal of Eliza, the belle of Nashville, is an interesting and deftly done screen heroine.

Her first appearance in the moving photographs was in the role of Lucy Manette, opposite William Farnum, in the picturization of Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities." She also had the leading feminine part in "American Methods" and d'd important work in "To Honor and Obey?" In addition to these, she appeared in "When a Man Sees Red," the strongest "fighting" story William Farnum has ever had.

Jewel Carmen is of little more than debutante age. She was born in Danville, Kentucky, twenty years ago; was educated in Portland, Oregon. Her director will be announced soon.

Exposition Date Is Fixed February 2 to 10

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Exhibitors' League of America jointly have announced that the New York film exposition of 1918 will be held at the Grand Central Palace from February 2 until February 10, inclusive.

"Thais" Price Is Not Advanced

Goldwyn Film Starring Mary Garden Will Be Delivered at Regular Rental

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION announces that its production, "Thais," in which Mary Garden makes her screen debut, will be delivered to all contract customers of Goldwyn at no advance in prices above what they pay for all other Goldwyn pictures. This is the first announcement regarding the price of this production.

"Thais," well under way in the Goldwyn Fort Lee studios, will be released throughout North America on December 30. Goldwyn's action in making a quarter of a million dollar production of this magnitude with one of the greatest of all stars, and then releasing it to all regular Goldwyn contract customers at no advance in rental prices, is unprecedented in the picture industry.

Samuel Goldfish and his associates have determined that nothing Goldwyn could produce would be too big or costly to give at regular prices to the exhibitors who have booked its productions.

Miss Garden herself approved the plan to play to the largest possible audiences and gain for herself an introduction to all of the people of the country from the start, rather than having them wait until months after the initial release date to see the picture played in popular price houses.

This determination by Goldwyn makes "Thais" come as a huge Christmas gift for the exhibitors who signed Goldwyn contracts.

Crawling Boat in Paramount Serial

SIMON LAKE, Bridgeport inventor, has just announced the invention of a boat that crawls on the bottom of the sea. It is equipped with an apparatus so that divers can leave and enter the boat while it is under water.

Through a strange coincidence Paramount was making a "sea crawler" and putting it into its new serial "Who Is 'Number One'?" at about the same time, Mr. Lake began work upon his undersea boat. The third episode of "Who Is 'Number One'?", which was completed several months ago, is a submarine episode and a feature of this episode is an underwater battle between divers from the "sea crawler" and their antagonists from a super submarine. Both bands of men are seeking sunken treasure.

In this episode is shown the process by which the sea crawler operates. It may not be exactly the same as Simon Lake's but it was devised by submarine experts and is practical. The men in diving suits enter a water tight compartment in the "sea crawler." Water pours in from the outside until the compartment is filled. Then a door is opened, admitting the men to the outside. When they reenter the compartment, the door is closed, the water is pumped out and the men can go into the main part of the "sea crawler" again.

Censor Fees Fall Off

The receipts of the Kansas State Board of Reviews of motion pictures have decreased $20,000 during the last year, according to a report just issued by the committee. Miss Carrie Simpson, a board member, attributes this loss of revenue to the fact that the number of regular programs presented for review has fallen off and that the board's work has been composed chiefly of reviewing features comprising full length reels. The board receives $2 per reel for all films viewed.

Sleep Is Not Part of Kennedy's Program

Aubrey M. Kennedy, general manager of productions for the Goldwyn Corporation, is piling up a record for going without sleep. Kennedy says he does not know what his hours of slumber average—and he hasn't got the time to figure it out. It is a matter of habit with him to put in a strenuous day at the studio and then spend nearly all of the night cutting a negative or personally directing a picture.

Governor Is Lillian's Host

Miss Lillian Walker, the star of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, while at Indianapolis, recently, was entertained by Governor and Mrs. Goodrich and was the guest of honor at a dinner tendered by the members of the Indianapolis branch of the Red Cross Society. Miss Walker was accompanied by Mr. Lester Park, general manager of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, Miss Belle Bruce and Miss Rose Tapley.

Herbert Brenon's new studio at Hudson Heights, N. J.

Managing Editor McGrath

Blaine McGrath, writer, newspaper man and motion picture student, has brought his film publicity experience to our office and this week assumes the role of managing editor of MOTOGRAPHY. So large a proportion of the trade, in both New York and Chicago, is already acquainted with Mr. McGrath, that further introduction is unecessary.

Edward Earle Does the Next Best Thing

Edward Earle, star in "For France," the patriotic Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, and in "The Agony Column," another Blue Ribbon Feature, completed last week, has again been turned down in his efforts to break into military service. This was his third attempt and failure.

Edward Earle, Vitagraph's patriotic star.

Mr. Earle, who is a native of Toronto, made two applications for service in the Royal Flying Corps of Canada but was rejected for physical reasons. On the completion of "The Agony Column," Percy Standing, who worked with Mr. Earle in that feature and who also is a Britisher, was notified he would have to start in a few weeks for an aviation camp in Texas, he having been accepted in the Royal Flying Corps. Spurred to further efforts by his friend's success, Mr. Earle visited the British recruiting station in Brooklyn and again was rejected.

Determined to do something to help the cause of the Allies, Mr. Earle, who previously had offered his services in any capacity, to the Liberty Loan committee, visited four places where bonds were being sold and proposed to the salesman that for a period of a half hour he would purchase every fifth bond disposed of. In that time he became the owner of $2,000 worth of Liberty Bonds.

Madame Petrova in two scenes from "The Daughter of Destiny."

Petrova Selects Supporting Staff for Second Picture

MADAME PETROVA, having completed "Daughter of Destiny," the first Petrova Picture, is now engaged in the making of the second of her personally supervised productions.

The scenario for the second Petrova Picture was written by Mrs. L. Case Russell, author of several of Mme. Petrova's previous successes. It deals with the romance of Laurel Carlisle (played by Petrova), a nurse who has become famous for her research work. The theme is startling and dramatic and presents Petrova an opportunity to display her emotional powers. The Biograph studio will be used for the production of this picture.

Madame Petrova has personally selected Thomas Holding, leading man, to play the part of the manly young doctor who wins the young nurse after many twists of fortune. Mr. Holding was Mme. Petrova's leading man in "Daughter of Destiny" and also played with Clara Kimball Young in "Magda," and with Pauline Frederick in "The Moment Before."

Lumsden Hare will play the part of Clinton Durand, a middle-aged millionaire, of an aggressive, domineering disposition, with whose life Laurel Carlisle's is seemingly inextricably woven. Mr. Hare was the leading man in the World production, "Friday the 13th."

Others in the cast are Clarence Hermitage, Fred Jones, Evelyn Dummo, and Freddie Verdi, aged 6 years.

Larry Trimble has been selected to direct the picture.

Mabel Normand Helps Win the War

MABEL NORMAND, Goldwyn star, made a whirlwind speaking tour in eight New York theaters one evening last week in behalf of the Liberty Loan.

Miss Normand could have begun by saying "unaccustomed as I am to public speaking," as she had never in her life addressed an audience. It is no violation of confidence to say that in the beginning Miss Normand was frightened at the prospect of delivering a public address. It was not mock fear that caused her to grasp her first introducer by the hand and hold him near while starting her speech.

Beginning at 8:30 in the evening at Marcus Loew's American Theater, Miss Normand made a two-minute talk first to an audience on the roof-top theater and a few minutes later met the audience in the main ground floor theater. Thereafter she averaged one theater every fifteen minutes.

In her brief speeches Miss Normand related incidents of her visit to the camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., where 5,000 American men and boys who are training to be officers in Uncle Sam's army worked with her in a picture. Her efforts were a substantial aid to the Liberty Loan campaign.

Exhibitors Refuse to Pay

Members of the American Exhibitors Association have refused to pay the tax of fifteen cents per reel for films delivered by exchanges, upon the theory that the footage tax is a tax upon the manufacturer and the film maker, and was never intended as a tax to be paid by the exhibitor. Present indications are that exhibitors will not be compelled to pay this tax.

New Studio Is Built for Beban Picture

A permanent studio will be erected shortly at Hoquiam, Wash., primarily for George Beban, who is making "Jules of the Strong Heart" for Paramount, but it will also be used in future for other pictures requiring a lumber camp setting. The studio is to be built at the Lasky lumber camp in the heart of the woods. Two baggage cars will convey the furniture and a complete lighting plant, while other scenery and furniture will be constructed on the ground.

"Sergeant" Mary McAlister Visits Rookie Camp

Three thousand future United States army officers, members of the officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan near Chicago, were hosts, recently, to little Mary McAlister, six-year-old Essanay star, at a reception in her honor at the fort.

"Little Billie," as the tiny actress is known, wore her uniform of a sergeant in the United States army and the occasion was given an official atmosphere when she was saluted by the entire command.

"Sergeant" McAlister gave a little talk to "her soldiers" in the camp Y. M. C. A. auditorium, preceding the first public showing of "The Kill Joy," a western comedy-drama, the cast of which is composed entirely of men, with the exception of the child prodigy.

"Little Billie" also was the guest of the camp at evening mess and ate heartily of the regulation army fare.

Opens Chicago Offices

The Doll-Van Film Corporation, organized more than a month ago, in Indianapolis, has opened offices in Chicago, at 1332 Consumers Building. The Chicago office will be in charge of D. M. Vandawalker, Jr., vice-president of the corporation. Associated with him is W. H. Engleman, an experienced Chicago film man. The new firm holds the rights in Indiana, Illinois and Southern Wisconsin on "Today," with Florence Reed, and "The Mad Lover," featuring Robert Warwick. It is booking for Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky, William S. Hart's, "The Cold Deck."

O. Henry Pictures Progress

"The Enchanted Kiss," the thirtieth O. Henry stories to be filmed, is the current release in General Film Company's popular Broadway Star Features subjects. Featured are Chet Ryan and Frances Parks, who have been appearing in nearly all of the O. Henry western stories. The producers have made good progress in picturizing the fourth series of ten O. Henry stories.

Good Advertising for "Warrior"

Following out the theory that a large film attraction should be exploited on a plane equal to that of the big theatrical productions, A. H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, of General Enterprises, Inc., which controls the seven-part version of "The Warrior," have provided a comprehensive outlay of advertising material to accompany the feature in which Maciste makes his reappearance before the American public.

The lobby display end has been given particular attention and a line of scene photographs, both black and white and of the hand colored variety, have been ordered in large quantities. In order to meet all demands, the sizes are varied, and the lobby pictures are obtainable in eight by ten, eleven by fourteen, twenty-two by twenty-eight, and thirty by forty, the latter size lending itself admirably for use by theaters with extensive lobby space. The lithographs have been made from especially prepared sketches by prominent poster artists.

An important adjunct to the line of lobby display is a series of beautifully colored paintings, depicting Maciste in several heroic poses. Novelty heralds and an abundance of star and scene cuts are included in the exploitation layout.

A musical setting, so orchestrated as to be easily adapted for the large or small theaters, completes the service, which Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin feel will enable all exhibitors to give "The Warrior" a public heralding fully in keeping with the magnitude of the film spectacle.

Jane Cowl in First Goldwyn

Jane Cowl has dried the tears she shed for Mary Turner and Ellen Neal in "Within the Law" and "Common Clay" and will weep no more, for a while at least. For she has departed from the roles of persecuted shopgirls and serving maids in which she won the name of "Weeping Jane" to play the part of a sweet, romantic girl in the picture version of Basil King's story, "The Spreading Dawn," in which she will make her first screen appearance as a Goldwyn star.

In "The Spreading Dawn" Miss Cowl is seen as a society belle of New York in the early 60's when hoop skirts were the fashion and romance and war were the chief activities. As the daughter of one of New York's first families she marries an officer in the army and the trials that follow come near crushing her faith in love and romance. But in the end they prevail. And while she sheds no tears Miss Cowl is not without her emotional moments.

Vitagraph Play in Indian Village

William Wolbert, director of Alfred Whitman and Mary Anderson in Blue Ribbon features at the western studio of Greater Vitagraph, is in the midst of producing a five-reel romance adapted from Frederick Upham Adam's novel, "John Burt." Mr. Whitman plays the title role while Mary Anderson has the feminine lead. Philo McCullough is the heavy.

The story was novelized by Mr. Wolbert and the company is now working at San Diego, California. W. S. Smith, manager of the Vitagraph studio in Hollywood, made arrangements for taking scenes in the Indian village which is still standing on the grounds of the San Diego Exposition, but when the company went there to start work the place was occupied by United States troops. This necessitated a series of telegrams between Los Angeles, New York and Washington to obtain a new permit to use the village. It took several days and much influence, but permission was finally granted and Wolbert began "shooting."

Clara Kimball Young Play

Clara Kimball Young, who has just completed "Magda," her first production by her own organization under the management of Harry I. Garson, has already started work on "Shirley Kaye" which will be her second release.

Joseph Kaufman, who has just completed Billie Burke's new picture, "Arms and the Girl," will direct Miss Young, instead of Emile Chautard, who is busily engaged on the picture now being made by Mme. Lina Cavalieri. Corliss Giles has been engaged to play the lead. This will be Mr. Giles' first appearance on any screen although he is an actor of sterling worth, having played the lead in "Mother Carey's Chickens," Thomas Dixon's "One Woman" and "The Iron Door." The play is well known for its successful run and as the vehicle in which Elsie Ferguson made a tremendous success.

Booked for 7,500 Days

After the showing of the first episode of "The Retreat of the Germans at the Batle of Arras," the official government pictures showing war in Europe as it really is, A. Paul Keith and D. F. Albee decided that instead of 5,400 days for the showing of these pictures, at their allied theaters, they would take them for 7,500 days.

The rental paid by Messrs. Keith and Albee for these pictures amounts to $40 a day and as a result of this booking the greater part of the $300,000 they will pay, will go to war charities.

Sears Engaged by Triangle

Allan Sears, well-known leading man of filmdom, is the most recent acquisition to the large force of players now engaged at the Triangle studio in Culver City, California. His first production under the Triangle colors will be in "Blue Blood," a production just begun by Director E. Mason Hopper, in which Alma Reubens will be starred.

To Get Exhibitors' Ideas

Itinerary of Hiram Abrams, Paramount Pres., and B. P. Schulberg, Gen. Mgr., Linked With Great Advertising Drive Inaugurated by Distributers

IT was not merely coincidental that Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, and B. P. Schulberg, general manager, started on their long tour of the United States to visit exhibitors in every city of fifty thousand population or over, just prior to the announcement of the million dollar campaign of Paramount andy Artcraft to still further promote the popularity of the motion pictures bearing those trademarks.

As a matter of fact, prior to the beginning of the tour of the Paramount officials, the big drive had been thoroughly discussed and it had been definitely determined that one of the most important phases of the campaign would be that of personal contact with the exhibitor. Obviously the great value to the exhibitors of Paramount and Artcraft pictures of the tremendous outlay of money and thought which is entailed is the linking up, so to speak, of the advertising with the local showman and his theater. In other words, if an advertisement of these pictures appears in a great national magazine or newspaper it must at once be associated in the minds of the readers with their local theaters exhibiting these products. This will be done by means of trademarks employed in all advertising, identifying marks which can not be overlooked or mistaken.

Exhibitors Have First Hand Knowledge

The exhibitors themselves, however, must have first hand knowledge of the plan, and also they are certain to have ideas of their own which will be of value to the corporation in rendering the campaign of greater practical value to them. Hence the tour of the officials who will carefully in each instance not only explain in detail the idea of the drive, but obtain as many ideas as possible which will be useful in increasing the service-value of the whole undertaking.

Discussing the plan upon his arrival at Los Angeles for which his tour proper will begin, President Abrams said:

"Already the names Paramount and Artcraft had become household words with photoplay patrons the country over, but this was not enough. The Paramount organization had assured exhibitors at the time the Star Series Selective booking plan was inaugurated that every possible means would be employed to aid them in building up their business for the product. The million dollar campaign which has been launched is one of the vastly important means to that end. Not the money spent but the way in which it is spent is the significant point.

"The purpose is to link the campaign with the local showman so that he will directly benefit. The public will be drawn into the theaters where these productions are exhibited as surely as a needle is attracted by a lodestone. It is admitted that in the grocery business, for example, there are probably ten customers who demand one of the nationally advertised articles to one who asks for some unknown brand. But here the analogy ends. Very often in the grocery line, or in similar goods, the unadvertised article is as good if not better than the one which is exploited so widely. This is a proof that advertising does the trick. But unless the quality is kept up there is always a grave danger that the custom will eventually fail. In motion pictures, those presented by Paramount and Artcraft offer a brand of film entertainment so good, so superior in many respects to what is termed the "average" picture, with stars of such splendid drawing power, stories by the foremost authors and technical perfection apparent in every foot of the film, that once those who by some chance are unacquainted with these pictures have the opportunity of seeing them, they become regular patrons of the theaters where Paramount and Artcraft productions are shown.

Exhibitor Benefits Directly

"It is to reach the ones who for one reason or another have not yet become members of the Paramount and Artcraft 'family' that this great national advertising campaign was undertaken. Of course, the exhibitor benefits directly. It is as if someone stood at the door of his theater—someone, too, with standing and reputation, and took every passerby by the arm and said 'Come in, old chap (or Madame)—there's a Paramount (or Artcraft) picture being shown here today and it's great. You can't afford to miss it.' Would that be a help—always providing the authority was unimpeachable and sufficiently respected in the community to undertake such a liberty? Ask the exhibitor that question!

"When the daily paper is picked up at the breakfast table in more than eighty cities throughout the United States; or when the favorite magazine is read in the evening; or when the family strolls down the street and gazes up at the great electric sign atop the roofs—Paramount and Artcraft will stare them in the face. There will be the identifying trademarks, always prominently displayed, so that when the live exhibitor uses these—cuts being obtainable from exchanges—in his own local advertising, the big campaign is linked up immediately with it. The reader knows that he saw Paramount or Artcraft advertised in perhaps The Ladies Home Journal or the Chicago Tribune, or some other of the great national magazines or the big dailies. It is doubly impressed upon his mind—and there it is before him. There will be a Paramount or Artcraft picture at such and such a theater—'tonight.' The value of this hardly needs to be alluded to."

All along the line, from the different points of their itinerary Mr. Abrams and Mr. Schulberg will send in reports of their findings. This information will be used in carrying out the details of this record-breaking advertising drive.

Fox Directors Return to "Home Grounds"

After having completed special work away from their "home grounds," two members of William Fox's directorial staff exchanged places last week. J. Gordon Edwards, who directed "Cleopatra," returned to New York city from California. Frank Lloyd, who has made the cinema version of Hugo's "Les Miserables," left New York for the coast on the same day.

War Pictures Booking Heavily

Goldwyn offices throughout North America are reporting heavy bookings for the war photodrama, "For the Freedom of the World," made by Ira M. Lowry and associates.

Risks Life to Film Volcano

William F. Aldrich, a member of the expedition sent out by the Peter Pan Film Corporation to photograph the world, made an exceptionally interesting bit of motion picture history when he risked death in photographing the interior of the crater of Kilauea, Hawaii's active volcano. Numerous efforts to accomplish this feat have met with defeat, and Aldrich's efforts are said to have netted the Peter Pan company the best photographic record of this boiling lake of flaming lava, which will be introduced in the fourth episode of "The Honeymooners, "Peter Pan's scenic serial.

The successful filming of the sputtering crater of Kilauea was accomplished by Aldrich on October 5. He wore a gas mask similar to those in use in European warfare, reinforced by a leather cap that covered all of his face except his eyes. He made the descent of three hundred feet of almost perpendicular cliff to the inner edge of the lake of lava, and set up his tripod with the seething liquid earth licking at his shoes.

After completing his task Aldrich climbed out of the bowels of the earth and removing his fantastic headgear said:

"It's just like going to hell."

Big Author with Harry Raver

Augustus Thomas, Dean of American Playwrights, to Become Associated With New Producing Organization

BY the terms of an agreement the final details of which were arranged last week, Augustus Thomas, the dean of American playwrights, becomes associated with Harry Raver in the formation of a new picture-producing organization. Augustus Thomas, in addition to writing original stories which will be visualized by the new concern, will also act in an advisory capacity with respect to all scenarios accepted for production, and will generally supervise all matters relative to the selection of casts, scenic investiture and staging.

Mr. Thomas has achieved a place in the hearts of the American theater-going public equalled by few contemporaneous playwrights. For more than twenty-five years he has contributed consistently successful offerings to the stage and his fame as a dramatist has reached the four quarters of the globe. He has received the plaudits of the foremost critics of all nations, who have been as one in their designations of his plays, as remarkable not only in technical construction and craftsmanship, but in their masterly treatment of the real problems of life, as well.

August Thomas has been accorded many honors in the form of decorations by literary bodies of the highest standing, but the honor he prizes most highly is that conferred upon him by the American Society of Arts and Letters, whose recognition of his notable achievements as a dramatist was recently expressed in the presentation of a medal of solid gold. Mr. Thomas is the only American dramatist who has ever received this signal mark of honor from the Society of Arts and Letters.

Before the field of playwrighting attracted him, Augustus Thomas was a newspaper man. In 1890 he wrote "Alabama," a play which started a vogue, which resulted in a veritable flood of similar offerings. "Alabama" was a great success and established the young playwright forthwith. Then followed "Mr. Carter of Cartersville," and "In Mizzoura," the latter play presenting Nat Goodwin in a new type of role, which added greatly to the reputations of both dramatist and actor.

"Arizona," one of Mr. Thomas' most successful plays, appeared in 1900. This ran for two seasons on Broadway and later toured the country with unremitting favor. The complete list of Augustus Thomas' successes would fill a large volume and space limitations naturally preclude their repetition here. Among his better-known plays, however, we might mention such whirlwind hits as: "Colorado," "On the Quiet," "The Earl of Pawtucket," "The Harvest Moon," "As a Man Thinks," "The Education of Mr. Pipp," "The Embassy Ball," and "The Witching Hour."

"The Witching Hour" was not alone an unusual stage success, but from an artistic and financial standpoint duplicated its record as an exceptional box-office attraction in visual form, its appearance on the screen being hailed with an acclaim that has fully justified itself, as all who are familiar with motion pictures are aware.

Further details of Augustus Thomas' new association with Harry Raver will be forthcoming at an early date.

$100,000 for "Fall of Romanoffs"

WITH the New York state rights selling for $100,000, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," Herbert Brenon's spectacular picture drama depicting the birth of Russian democracy, has established a brand new film record. This sales price tops anything ever paid for any screen production for New York state.

The purchase was made from A. H. Woods, the theatrical producer and half owner of "The Fall of the Romanoffs" with Mr. Brenon, by a group of capitalists organized for the purpose. The syndicate of purchases have appointed Sol J. Berman as sales manager to handle the New York territory.

Asks Comparison of Reports for Two Months

The American Exhibitors' Association has issued the following bulletin, which is self explanatory:

To All Exhibitors:

An intelligent box office statement for the month of October compared with the same kind of a statement for the month of November will reveal facts upon which to base our contention that many ten-cent theaters will be compelled to discontinue because of the war tax. Box office facts and figures for these two months are desired from every exhibitor operating a ten-cent house. These statements should be full and complete, showing receipts, expenditures and profits for the month, with an additional statement showing the investment of capital bringing about the profit, if any.

If we receive enough of these reports to show the effect of the war tax upon the ten cent theater, something may be accomplished in December. Comparison must be made upon these two months, as they are the only months intervening.

Prepare these reports and send them to the headquarters of either of the exhibitors' organizations, so that they may be tabulated and put into proper shape for presentation. These reports should be in our hands not later than December 5th.

This is important to every exhibitor operating a ten-cent theater, and we should have hundreds of these reports in our hands by that time. Start working on your October report now.

Lund Directs New Russian Film Star

William Fox has obtained the services of O. A. C. Lund as director for Sonia Markova, the sensational Russian star, whose acquisition Mr. Fox announced recently. Mme. Markova has been busily at work for some time in Fort Lee, N. J. Director Lund has been identified with stage and screen nearly all of his life. He was born in Stockholm, Sweden, the son of a distinguished Swedish actress and stage director. When he was two months old, he played the role of a foundling who had been left on a doorstep. As he grew older, he progressed rapidly from "doorstep roles" to leading parts. Since coming to America he has written scores of scenarios and has acted in and directed dozens of pictures.

A large cast has been assembled to support Sonia Markova in the film. The principals include Sidney Mason, who played Blackie Daw in the stage production of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford"; William Lampe, David Herblin, Albert Tavennier, Anita Navaro, Edith Reeves and Julia Stuart.

Detroit Likes Ade Fables

The popularity of the George Ade Essanay "New Fables in Slang," released by General Film Company, is indicated in the case of the Washington Theater in Detroit, one of the largest moving picture theaters in the west, playing only high-grade attractions, which has booked each of the new "Fables in Slang" for a week's solid run.

Ogden Inaugurates "Winter Drive"

AFTER suspending advertising in trade publications for a period of three weeks, the Ogden Pictures Corporation have resumed advertising activities after completing an extensive program of operations to cover the winter of 1917-1918.

Lester Park, vice-president and general manager, and Jesse J. Goldburg, productions manager, for the past three weeks have been actively engaged in mapping out the proposed activities of the company for the next six months, and have completed a thorough scheme of advertising publicity.

In order to become thoroughly advised of every angle connected with the exploitation and exhibition of extraordinary photoplay attractions, Mr. Goldburg made a hurried departure last Tuesday for Chicago where he was in consultation with the state right buyers who control "The Lust of the Ages" for the territories of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

Mr. Goldburg upon his return from Chicago made some interesting observations on conditions in connection with the exhibition field in the middle west territory. Mr. Goldburg stated: "On my previous tours throughout the United States I confess I erroneously confined my investigations to the theaters charging a minimum of 10 cents and a maximum of half a dollar admission price, but in Chicago largely as a novelty, I interviewed the managers of the houses charging a minimum of five and a maximum of ten cents admission, and I do find this rather inconsistent viewpoint; The smaller house insists upon a production with a star regardless of the age of the picture, the bigger house insists upon a worthy production and the star is of secondary importance.

"It is also wonderful to contemplate the changing viewpoints not alone of the exhibitor but of the public, for instance, the use of heralds is rapidly on the wane, and if I might engage in a forecast I would say that outside of five cities in the United States, the use of twenty-four sheets will be altogether abandoned within six months, and the use of six-sheets will be lessened materially, if not altogether abandoned within the same period, and instead of making the accustomed two style one sheets, the line-up of lithographs will more likely run toward the making of four style one sheets, four style three-sheets and two style six-sheets.

"There is lots of room for original ideas that will materially assist the exhibitor in packing his house, not necessarily ideas along the lines of circus ballyhoing but dignified methods of advertising and exploitation that take into consideration the psychology of the public."

Eccentric Eva Runs True to Form

Eva Tanguay, whose first screen production, "The Wild Girl," is now being released through Select Pictures, is maintaining her reputation for eccentricity. While on a recent trip to Chicago she indulged her pet bulldog in a walk that cost $800.

Miss Tanguay occupied a special car hitched to a fast train and when she discovered that no stops would be made along the way, and that "Stokie," the canine pet, would not get his morning walk, she ordered that her special car be dropped at Pittsburgh. A railroad official pointed out that such a course would cost her several hundred dollars.

"I don't care," said Miss Tanguay, and "Stokie" had his walk.

Makes Unique Change

George S. Wood, manager of the Chicago Theater, formerly the American Music Hall, at Wabash avenue and Eighth street, Chicago, has sensed the need of the motion picture and other industries, and has completed plans to transform his playhouse into a public hall, or emergency place of meeting. His purpose is to fill a want caused by the frequent overflow of hotels and other gathering places, and to make his theater an ideal place for private exhibitions of pictures. The theater is equipped with adjustable floors and it can be quickly remodeled to take care of regular theatrical audiences, trade expositions, concerts, balls, bazaars and athletic tournaments.

Barthelmess to Appear in "For Valour"

Richard Barthelmess, regarded as one of the most promising juvenile actors in pictures, will make his appearance in the Triangle play, "For Valour," adapted from the story "Melia No-Good," by I. A. R. Wylie, which appeared some time ago in Good Housekeeping magazine, and which is scheduled for release November 28th.

Barthelmess left Trinity College at the completion of his Junior year with the intention of playing extra parts in pictures during his summer vacation. Herbert Breno discovered him carrying a spear in a mob scene and selected him to play the part of Arno, the younger brother, in "War Brides," starring Nazimova. Later he was requisitioned by Pathe, Famous Players and Goldwyn. He has been seen in the leading roles opposite Marguerite Clark in "The Valentine Girl" and "Bab's Burglar," and has just completed work in the Goldwyn production, "Nearly Married."

In "For Valour," which was directed by Albert Parker, under the supervision of Allan Dwan, at the Triangle Yonkers studio, Barthelmess has the part of a young Canadian slacker, who does not feel the stir of patriotism until touched by the sacrifice of his little sister, played by Winifred Allen, whose devotion to her brother is second only to that for England's cause. The boy sets forth on the trail of honor that leads "over there" and wins the Victoria Cross.

Lee Kiddies Receive Monster Pumpkin

A two hundred and four pound pumpkin arrived in New York city last week as a gift to Jane and Katherine Lee, William Fox's "Baby Grands." The pumpkin was used in the children's home as a Jack-o'-Lantern on Hallowe'en night, when the Lee kiddies were hosts to a party of young friends. This pumpkin won a prize for weight at the recent New Jersey State Fair in Trenton.

Vitagraph Releases Short Features

IT is announced by Greater Vitagraph that its list of Favorite Film Features releases for the month of November will be as follows:

November 5—"The Strength of Men," two-reel drama, with Edith Storey, Ned Finley, Tefft Johnson and Herbert L. Barry.

"Captain Barnacle's Legacy," one-reel comedy, with Van Dyke Brooke, Flora Finch, Kate Price, Hughie Mack, Robert Gaillard and Helen Costello.

November 12—"Just Show Folks," one-reel drama, with Norma Talmadge, Courtney Foote, Leo Delaney and Helen Costello.

"Jerry's Mother-in-Law," two-reel comedy, with Clara Kimball Young, Sidney Drew, Kate Price and Rogers Lytton.

November 19—"Sisters All," one-reel drama, with Edith Storey, Florence E. Turner and Courtney Foote.

"Never Again," two-reel comedy, with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, S. Rankin Drew, Ethel Lloyd, Jane Fearnley, Arthur Cozine and Lillian Burns.

November 26—"The Portrait," two-reel drama, with Naomi Childers, James Morrison, Mary Maurice, James Young and Donald Hall.

"How Fatty Made Good," one-reel comedy, with Lucille Lee Stewart, Hughie Mack, E. K. Lincoln and Dick Rosson.

Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, is personally supervising the re-editing of Favorite Film Features.

Beefsteak? Beefsteak? What For?

AMONG the receipted bills in the office files of Benjamin B. Hampton, president of the Rex Beach Pictures Company, is an extraordinary one that hints at part of a very interesting story. It reads: "Beefsteak, $1.50."

There is a banquet scene in "The Auction Block," but the menu was innocent of beefsteak, and Mr. Hampton asked Larry Trimble, who directed the picture, to explain. Trimble sent for George Cooper, who plays Jimmy Knight, tough brother of the heroine, in the Beach picture.

Cooper, in addition to acting his part creditably, directed the portion of the picture which involves a realistic gambling house raid and the resultant fight between gamblers and hangers-on and the police. He knew all about the beefsteak bill.

"That's for an extra man who took an unexpectedly prominent part in the fight," he explained. "Somebody with a taste for realism got excited and threw a seltzer bottle at a scrambling group of men and this extra fellow caught it square in the eye. He insisted that he had to have a beefsteak to fix it; but I'm beginning to wonder, after seeing the bill, whether he put it on his eye or applied it to his injured feelings. It sounds like a rare sirloin with French fried potatoes on the side."

The luckless extra man, it develops was not the only sufferer in the fight. Tom Powers, who plays the young hero, let go with his fists so vigorously that he broke a small bone in his left hand. The injury almost kept him out of the army aviation corps, which he joined just before the picture was completed.

Retired Vaudeville Magnate as "Prop. Man"

Percy Williams, retired vaudeville magnate, has "come back" to the theatrical business—he acted as an assistant property man for John Robertson, Vitagraph director, during the making of scenes for a forthcoming Blue Ribbon feature, "Heredity."

Mr. Williams, who took a keen interest in the making of the picture, had loaned his palatial home near Bay Shore, L. I., as a "location" out of regard for Mr. Robertson and for two days the Vitagraph players worked there, the cameramen "shooting" interiors and exteriors to their hearts' delight. That he still retains the artistic eye that made him a power in the revolutionizing of vaudeville was shown when Mr. Williams, after peeking at Robertson's working script, pointed out several beautiful settings in his home for the purpose of the picture.

Mr. Williams has one of the most magnificent places on Long Island, his home being set in a beautiful park, and it lends itself admirably to the making of artistic motion pictures. Evert Overt and Corinne Griffith who are to be featured in "Heredity" were "shot" in scores of scenes on the Williams grounds.

Although he has not been actively connected with motion pictures, Mr. Williams is a real "fan" and has a motion picture theater in his home, with a specially made screen and a fine projection machine.

When "Heredity" is completed a private showing of the picture will be given at the Williams home. It is a story by Rex Taylor and presents an interesting study in psychology. A boy was kidnaped by a thief, later being claimed as a son by this man and forced to aid him in his burglaries. Ultimately, when the boy feels that he was born a thief, he learns that he is not the son of the ex-convict but of one of the most respected families in the country.

Triangle Players to Army

The picture colony on the west coast is still "doing its bit" to help swell Uncle Sam's liberty army. Last week Triangle released Raymond Jackson, prominent juvenile, to the colors. Rowland Lee, also of the Triangle playing force, and Joseph Roach, scenario author, are among the regulars who have been called.

Joseph Roach, who was ordered to report to the American Lake training camp, was granted a week in which to complete his work on the screen adaptation of his last story.

Alice Brady, whose first Select Picture, "Her Silent Sacrifice," is receiving its finishing touches this week, has leased a new apartment overlooking Central Park, so as to be within a short motor ride of the Fort Lee ferry.

"Trouble Makers" Next for Lee Children

The next picture in which Jane and Katherine Lee, William Fox's "Baby Grand" film stars, will be seen has been christened "Trouble Makers," and will be released in the near future.

If ever a photoplay was appropriately titled, this Fox Standard Picture is, according to the reports from the Fox studios, whence come stories of amazing pranks and stunts in which these little film celebrities figured in "Trouble Makers."

There is a strong plot and a virile story in "Trouble Makers" making an excellent background for Jane's and Katherine's comedy. A pleasing romance is unfolded, and a puzzling tragedy mystery cleared up, as the result of a series of pranks perpetrated by the little stars, and its climax carries a punch, but before it is reached, a tense story in film has been told.

An excellent cast support the Lee children, and the picture, it is predicted, will rank as one of the year's biggest successes.

Critics who viewed "Trouble Makers" at a private showing at the Fox offices speak highly of it, and some prophesy that it will be a "find" for exhibitors. Kenean Buel directed it.

Chance for Exhibitors to Save Money

A suggestion, made by the publicity department of Triangle through its house organ, will enable many exhibitors to save money in connection with advertising and publicity.

Experience has proved that many exhibitors are furnishing electrotypes of star cuts and scene cuts to newspapers, which can use mats to better advantage.

Only papers in the very small towns are not equipped to use mats in place of cuts. The increasing use of mats by newspaper syndicates, advertising agents and national advertisers has made it necessary for most of the newspapers in the country to install casting equipment to make plates from mats. Exhibitors who find that their local newspapers can use mats instead of cuts should advise the exchanges from which they are securing service so that on future orders mats will be furnished to them in place of cuts at a considerable reduction in price.

Shurtleff Sees Promising Conditions

CONDITIONS in the middle west are most favorable for the producer who has the highest grade of pictures to sell, according to the report which C. E. Shurtleff, sales manager for Select Pictures Corporation, has just made to General Manager Arthur S. Kane on the conclusion of a three weeks' trip which embraced St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines and Pittsburgh. While visiting Select branches in this territory, Mr. Shurtleff established the recently opened office at St. Louis under the management of E. W. Dustin.

According to Mr. Shurtleff, there is a very general recognition on the part of the exhibitor of the advantages accruing from showing only the highest grade pictures and running them for more than one day. Runs of two or more days are becoming much commoner than heretofore. With this movement is the accompanying demand for star pictures. He says there is a willingness on the part of the exhibitor to pay a much better price for these attractions than he has been accustomed to paying for the features which he has been showing under a policy of daily changes.

Merely as an example, Mr. Shurtleff gives as an instance an exhibitor in a small city in the middle west who has never before paid over $12.50 for a picture. This amount was paid for program features which he was able to show for one day only. This exhibitor has now paid as high as $100 for star pictures which he proposes to show for runs of two days each. What, to Mr. Shurtleff, is more promising is the fact that the exhibitor reports better business and better profits for himself under the new arrangement.

Bill Russell has strong support in this "play," for it's none other than "Doug." Fairbanks. They were giving a vaudeville act of their own at the Patten Theater in Santa Barbara.

Paralta Building Extensive Studios

THE Paralta organization is taking another step forward in the rapid advancement that has marked its short career under the guidance of its president, Carl Anderson. Last May, Paralta leased the big Clune studios at 5300 Melrose avenue, Hollywood. Work was begun in June by J. Warren Kerrigan and Bessie Barriscale in "A Man's Man," and "Rose o' Paradise," the first Paralta productions.

Since then Henry B. Walthall, Clara Williams and Rhea Mitchell have organized companies to make productions at the Paralta studios, which have now proved too small to permit the execution of the plans for the future formulated by President Anderson, Treasurer Herman Katz and their associates.

During his recent visit to California, Mr. Anderson took up this subject and arrangements were made to give Paralta studios a permanent establishment. To this end a tract of twenty-four acres has been secured fronting along Melrose avenue directly opposite the Clune studios. The building plans are very extensive and at least a year will be required to complete them.

To furnish additional accommodations required at this time, Mr. Anderson gave orders to rush work on one of the big stages on the new studios. The structure is already completed. Within a few days the Barriscale and Walthall companies, now at work on "Within the Cup" and "His Robe of Honor," will work on this new stage.

The new studios will comprise four stages 60 by 150 feet, erected on cement piers. They will all be glass-enclosed, so that conditions of weather will not interfere with the work of production. Robert Brunton, manager of productions, and R. Holmes Paul, technical director of the Paralta staff, designed the ground plans.

The four stages will be situated in the center of the grounds, the other buildings being located with special reference to convenience of access to them. On the east side of the stages there will be a double tier of 200 dressing rooms connected with a green room for the members of the Paralta companies. Next to the dressing rooms, which flank the stages, will be the cabinet and plaster shops, developing and projecting rooms. On the opposite side of the stage buildings the scene docks, electrical shops, wardrobe, paint shop, stock rooms and garage will be built. The carpenter and machine shops are to be directly north of the stages. South of the stages will be the property building, in two wings.

Publishes Attractive Booklet for Patrons

C. R. Brown, owner of the Hub Theater of Gaylord, Minn., publishes a neat booklet which he calls Photoplay Weekly, to inform his patrons of his current and coming attractions. The miniature magazine carries an illustration on the cover and is embellished throughout with action pictures, well selected, from the subjects showing for the week at the Hub. The biggest news story in the latest issue is the following:

ARRIVED!
A MOVIE STAR
MISS BROWN
WHO TAKES LEADING ROLE IN
"DADDY'S NIGHTLY WALKS"

The Stork presented Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Brown with a dandy little miss on Wednesday. Brownie says she possesses musical talent and the pianist at the Hub Theater will soon be looking for a new job.

In addition to news of attractions, the Photoplay Weekly carries enough advertising of local merchants to minimize the cost of printing the publication.

New Journal Appears

A new motion picture trade journal has just started publication in Buenos Aires under the title "Correo Cinematografico Excelsior," and is printed in Spanish. The make-up and contents are said to be up to the best standards, and the paper is giving a large amount of prominence to American productions. It also carries the advertisements of several large American producers. So far as is known it is the only motion picture paper printed and published in Buenos Aires. The editor and publisher is Augusto Alveraz.

Government Appreciates Screen Aid

Tracy Hammond Lewis, staff correspondent of the New York Telegraph, writing from Washington, declares that the government regards the proposed dissemination of information regarding the war activities of the United States through the medium of films as the most important step yet taken by the motion picture business in the performance of its patriotic duties. The showing of these films abroad, he says, will do more to convince Russia that America has gone to war heart and soul with such a wealth of human and financial resources that Germany will be unable longer to withstand the added strain.

Essanay Produces Feature Japanese Picture

An unusually unique feature picture, entitled, "The Curse of Iku," has just been released by Essanay. Although primarily it is a drama of Japanese life, it is at the same time a valuable historical film and an attractive scenic picture. Tsuri Aoki, wife of the famous Japanese star, Sessue Hayakawa, plays the leading role.

Screen Club Elects New Officers

Joseph Farnum, business manager of the Frohman Amusement Company, has been elected president of the New York Screen Club, to succeed William Quirk. Mr. Farnum is one of the charter members and an organizer of the club. In the first year of the club's existence he was appointed corresponding secretary, and then succeeded the late John Bunny as first vice-president. The other new officers are Frank Powell, first vice-president; Edgar Lewis, second vice-president; B. A. Rolfe, third vice-president; Will C. Smith, re-elected as treasurer; Anthony P. Kelly, re-elected corresponding secretary; and George F. Blaisdell, recording secretary.

Farrar and Garden Meet in Studio

GERALDINE FARRAR and Mary Garden, twin stars of opera and photodrama, met at the Goldwyn studio in Fort Lee, N. J., where Miss Garden is making her debut in motion picture work with the filming of "Thais," and renewed an old operatic acquaintance. Miss Farrar has just returned to New York for her season's work at the Metropolitan Opera House after a summer in the Pacific coast film studios. With Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, Miss Farrar and her mother journeyed to the Fort Lee studio.

Miss Garden was deep in work under the direction of Frank H. Crane on the scene of introduction between Thais and the monk Paphnutius. When the visitors appeared she leaped from the luxurious dais of Thais and rushed to greet her guest. For the next ten minutes Director Crane was idle while the two opera stars gushed their joy at meeting each other.

Ambassador Gerard Visits Film Studios

James W. Gerard, ambassador to Germany until negotiations with the kaiser's government were severed, was an interested visitor to several motion picture studios in California last week. The diplomat consented to take part in one scene of "Beloved Jim," a Universal Christmas play which was in the making when he reached Universal City. Those who witnessed his work before the camera declared he went through the brief scene like a veteran film actor.

At the William Fox studios in Hollywood he watched the filming of a new juvenile production, and praised Miss Virginia Lee Corbin for her work. Ambassador Gerard, who was for many years a justice of the supreme court of New York, showed keen interest in a "set" of an elaborate court scene and pronounced it flawless.

Hoffman Salesmen Engaged

Preparations for the establishing of Hoffman-Foursquare Canadian exchanges, arranged for barely ten days ago in conjunction with the Metro Pictures Service, have proceeded with surprising rapidity. M. H. Hoffman has received, from J. J. Unger, of the Metro organization at the Montreal office, assurances that the special salesmen who are to sell Hoffman-Foursquare exclusively in Canada are already engaged.

"I want Canadian exhibitors to know," said Mr. Hoffman to a representative for this publication, "that our exchanges will cover the three chief distribution points in Canada. We shall have offices with the Metro Pictures Service in Montreal, Toronto, and likewise in St. Johns, New Brunswick. I am particularly desirous that it should be known that the extreme northeastern portion of Canada will be covered through St. Johns."

Dowd Visits Chicago

Arthur S. Dowd, sales manager for Universal's Big "3," Circuit Events, Screen Magazine and Universal Animated Weekly, arrived in Chicago last week for an indefinite stay. He is boosting these reels throughout the country and comes to Chicago after a two weeks' stay in Pittsburgh.

Mr. Dowd believes that Current Events are in their prime at this time. He states that fully ninety-eight per cent of the people of the United States are affected by the draft, and Universal's policy for Current Events hereafter will be to keep in touch with "the boys."

"Pop" Plough, manager of the Chicago Universal office, has ordered several new prints of these reels and expects to do a land office business.

M. M. Wolf, formerly of the Milwaukee Universal office, has been transferred to the Chicago Universal office to take charge of the supply department.

White Permit Is Issued for "Magda"

Despite the fact that the Chicago Board of Censorship passed Clara Kimball Young's production, "Magda," without a single elimination, rumors were circulated in Chicago and in at least one instance were published elsewhere that "Magda" had been roughly handled and badly mutilated by the Chicago censor board. The Chicago censors made no eliminations in this production and issued a white permit, the highest form of permit.

Here's Cheer for Ugly Girls

The ugly girl may be shoved aside for her more handsome sister in many walks of life, but, according to Donald MacKenzie, who is directing Mollie King in the "Seven Pearls," Pathe's latest serial, there is no injustice done her on the screen.

"The ugly girl comes into her own on the screen," said Mr. MacKenzie, "if she is content to do ugly girl parts. However, if she insists on being the heroine, with jealous suitors fighting for her hand, then woe be unto her, for the audience refuses to see the realism in a situation like that."

Newspapers Co-operate with Exhibtor

Co-operation between the management of the Clifford Theater and the local newsappers of Urbana, Ohio, in the exploitation of "The Lost Express," Helen Holmes' latest Mutual-Signal serial, broke attendance records of the 1,000-seat house and started the photonovel's run with spectacular success.

The management of the Clifford put on "The Lost Express" with an aggressive newspaper campaign under the cooperative plan with which the production was issued by the Mutual Film Corporation. The house manager laid out his campaign in co-operation with the advertising managers and photoplay editors of the two local dailies and the result was an abundance of publicity and a record-breaking attendance.

Shipman Makes Record For October

Ernest Shipman — personal clearing house for the independent producer — states that October is written down as a successful month upon the opening pages of his new ledger.

During these thirty days he established a New York headquarters, at 17 West 44th street, leased and put in excellent running order the Art Studios and Laboratories, at 316 East Forty-eighth street, consolidated his foreign selling connections, and closed contracts for the exploitation of a number of feature pictures now in the course of manufacture.

Four-Day-Old Infant Works for Triangle

What is believed to be the youngest screen actor in the world will be seen in the coming Triangle production, "Until They Get Me," a Royal Northwest Mounted Police story laid in western Alberta and northern Montana. He is a four-day-old baby, used at the opening of the story. The mother of the infant actor was still in the hospital and the baby was brought to the studio by a trained nurse. His earnings for working in the picture amounted to ten dollars.

Pershing Seen in News Film

The first pictures showing the actual training of the American soldiers in France are presented in the Hearst-Pathe News No. 85, just released. They were taken by French army cinematographers, just in the rear of the French line, "somewhere in France."

General Pershing and General Petrain, the French commander-in-chief, are shown reviewing the troops.

Kansas Exhibitors Meet

A grand movie ball closed the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Kansas, which was held in Manhattan, Kansas. The grand march was led by Bryant Washburn, former Essanay star who has joined the Pathe forces. Miss Ivy Fuller, of Essanay, attended the function.

Louis Marcus, district manager of the Notable Feature Film Company of Salt Lake, has returned from Denver, after an inspection of the branch offices of the exchange.

Films to Show U. S. War Activity

The United States government is going into the motion picture producing business on a large scale. It is not going to seek a profit from the venture, however, and the pictures that will be made under the supervision of the Committee on Public Information in Washington will be intended as a direct appeal to patriotism.

Government camera men will record from week to week the various military and civilian activities of the government and these will be compiled into reels that will be released, not through the regular channels, but through patriotic civic organizations in various cities, to non-commercial organizations. The charge for the films will be apportioned among the clubs, social, military, occupational, religious, military and other organizations so as to cover the bare cost of production.

Shea's Remarkable Institution

Splendid Hippodrome of Buffalo Has Big Symphony Orchestra and Number of Unusual Features

THE Shea Hippodrome of Buffalo, under the management of Harold B. Franklin, has celebrated its third birthday.

During its three years of service to the public this beautiful house has established itself as one of the most excellent in the picture field. The Hippodrome has proved itself to be a dignified and refined place of entertainment and has given an inestimable amount of satisfaction and pleasure to its patrons.

Only productions of decided merit that measure up to a strict standard have been shown, always with special musical settings by an excellent concert orchestra. Refinement and courteous hospitality is always reflected in the atmosphere at this unusual house.

The bills for the Hippodrome are drawn from Artcraft, Paramount, Goldwyn, Selznick, Triangle and Metro, together with special productions and the better comedies. The Hippodrome Pictorial Digest is compiled from the film newspapers. The Symphony orchestra conducts regular popular concerts.

Shea's Hippodrome was constructed without consideration of expense and is notable for its convenience and completeness in arrangements and for the up-to-the-minute character of its equipment, and the comfort provided for patrons. The house has a staff of almost a hundred employes.

Music is made a special feature at the Hippodrome and attracts many patrons. The concert orchestra consists of twenty-six men and is provided with a very complete musical library.

Through careful rehearsals, fitting musical settings are arranged for each production. The Hippodrome organ is one of the finest orchestral instruments in New York.

A very attractive and novel department is the art room, where all signs are designed and where plates are designed for special electrotypes which are used in connection with newspaper advertisements. These ads have created favorable comment.

Shea's Hippodrome is in many ways probably the most interesting institution in New York State.

Tacoma to Have New House

Construction of a new film theater to have a seating capacity of nearly 2,000, or two times the capacity of any movie house in the city, will be started in Tacoma, Washington, just as soon as the necessary details can be worked out and the plans withdrawn.

The new structure will be erected at the southeast corner of Ninth and Market streets, just west of the Tacoma Theater. The building itself will be at least 90 by 120 feet in size, and in this respect will rank among the largest in the Northwest, comparing in this particular with the largest film theaters in Seattle.

The new theater is to be constructed by two prominent business men of Tacoma.

An agreement has been signed with Dave Gross, owner of the ground known as the old Star Theater property, to lease it for 50 years. The rental for this period will approximate $275,000. The first year's rent already has been deposited and the closing of the deal only awaits the approval by the lessees of the title to the property.

The men interested in the project say the cost of the building will not be known until the detail plans have been drawn, but they expect it to reach a high figure, not only because of the size of the building, but because of the increased cost of building material and labor.

Fine New San Francisco House

As evidence of their faith in the future of the motion picture house in residential sections, the Kahn & Greenfield circuit of San Francisco has added a larger holding to its chain of picture playhouses. Joseph E. Levin, the manager of the house, believes that the construction of the New Fillmore, costing $250,000, will provide a playhouse of such sumptuousness as will attract to its portals the picture-loving public of a great residential section, which requires its own opportunities for the highest class of photo-play and musical entertainment.

The new theater is equipped with a vacuum and ventilating system which insure cleanliness, health and comfort. Luxurious retiring and rest rooms are provided on the orchestral and balcony floors. Everything is in the best of taste, from the French gray oak of the comfortable chairs and the same kind of color and material in the wainscoting, to the subdued tinting of the vast expanse of ceiling and walls which inclose the beautiful auditorium.

Intensive Aid for Exhibitors

Real and Brass Tacks Help Owner to Boost Box Office Returns in Triangle Service and Advertising

ADVERTISING and publicity play a very important part in the motion picture industry. It is through the efficient handling of this service that distributors and producers can be of great help to exhibitors.

In keeping with the new policy of Triangle no effort will be spared in offering to exhibitors complete service in connection with the sale of pictures. As has been previously announced each Triangle exchange representative will be given a definite territory to which he will devote his entire attention. His work will be not only the sale of film but also the development of close cooperation with every exhibitor in his territory, so as to serve the exhibitor in every capacity in which he can be of help.

Practical Aid for Exhibitors

In connection with advertising and publicity, Triangle will develop a more intensive service for exhibitors. It will be the aim of the Triangle advertising department to furnish exhibitors with advertising material that has been carefully prepared by experts and that can be furnished to exhibitors at the lowest possible prices.

The posters now being furnished by Triangle on its releases have been prepared from the box office angle, so that they have real sales value. This also applies to lobby displays, slides, stills and other promotion aids that are used by exhibitors. Instead of preparing a great bulk of advertising material for exhibitors, the practice of Triangle will be to furnish quality rather than quantity.

Triangle Magazine Book of "Recipes"

The effort that is being made to cooperate with exhibitors and to help them in developing the exhibition of pictures, is well exemplified in the Triangle Magazine. Any exhibitor who is receiving Triangle Magazine and is not carefully reading every page of each issue is overlooking a great amount of valuable information.

Triangle Magazine differs from the house organs of many producers and distributors in that it is not merely a collection of advertisements on plays and players, but rather contains many constructive ideas that will help exhibitors in boosting box office receipts. Exhibitors who have read Triangle Magazine for the past year will recall numerous articles on seating, ventilating, advertising, lobby display and other subjects, containg valuable ideas and suggestions. In each issue of Triangle Magazine, an entire page is devoted to each of the forthcoming releases telling exhibitors the important facts of interest in each production and how the production can best be promoted.

Promotion Articles Help

These promotion articles describe the play, telling the type of story and the reason for the production. A paragraph is always devoted to the star of the production and to other prominent players, giving a list of the productions in which these prominent players have appeared. Suggestions are also given for a distinctive lobby display on each production which are of great aid to exhibitors. Many exhibitors, referring to the importance of lobby display, claim that a good lobby display will sell a poor picture while a poor lobby display frequently renders a good production profitless. Another paragraph is usually devoted to methods of promotion that can be employed by exhibitors through circular letters, or mailing cards in reaching certain classes of people to whom the particular production will appeal. The subject of newspaper advertising, including a sample lay-out of a suggested advertisement, is thoroughly covered. A number of catch lines for signs, newspaper advertising or for lantern slides, are also given on each production. A cast and condensed synopsis are included which are very useful to exhibitors either for newspaper publicity or for reprinting in programs.

Triangle Magazine is published exclusively for exhibitors and its pages are always open to exhibitors for suggestions or comments.

The Triangle Magazine is at present mailed to exhibitors from various Triangle exchanges throughout the country, and any exhibitor not receiving the Triangle Magazine regularly and who desires to have his name placed on the mailing list, should write at once to the Triangle exchange nearest him.

Grass Valley (Cal.) Has New House

The new Grass Valley Theater of Grass Valley, California, is now doing business.

The new theater has a seating capacity of about eight hundred.

As an opening attraction Jules Verne's "20,000 Leagues Uuder the Sea" and a two-reel comedy, "Little Fat Rascal," were shown. The prices are 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults.

The new theater has been constructed of brick and concrete and two moving picture machines of late type have been installed. During the winter months the theater will be heated by gas, radiators having been installed in various parts of the theater.

Harvard Prize Play Is Screened

"Believe Me, Xantippe," third prize play of Harvard University, written by John Frederick Ballard, and given its premiere at the Castle Square Theater in Boston, January 20, 1913, is to be produced upon the screen for Paramount with Wallace Reid in the leading role.

Depends Upon Motography

As a medium for good and reliable information, let me say that I depend upon Motography and always have found it a mighty good paper for "the trade."—G. H. Ostrander, 2501 Caithness Place, Denver, Colorado.

Theaters Raise Prices

The Rex Theater, Vancouver, B. C., has adopted a "big show policy." The best and biggest productions are being booked on the open market, and, in accordance with this plan, the scale of admission prices has been raised from ten cents to fifteen cents for matinees and from fifteen cents to twenty-five cents at nights. These prices also cover the war tax which has just been imposed by the Provincial Government. The admission for children is five cents at all times. After announcing that the New Grand Theater, one of Montreal's downtown houses, was paying more for features per seat than any other theater in Canada, the management established a higher schedule of admission prices to become effective on Sunday, October 14. The new matinee price was placed at fifteen cents, an advance of five cents, and the evening price for the orchestra floor was fixed at twenty-five cents, an advance of ten cents over the old rate. The new prices include the war tax, however.

Here's Way to Get Business

By W. M. Gladish.

Manager Mitchell of the Regent Theater, one of Toronto's finest, is catering to automobile trade. He has a uniformed doorman who assists patrons in alighting from automobiles and he helps to park the cars in the vicinity of the house. In case of a sudden shower uniformed ushers and the doorman are sent to raise the tops on the parked cars with the result that when patrons leave the theater they find that their machines have been protected.

The Regent has also a finely fitted waiting room just off the lobby, in which are found comfortable seats, lounges, tables, mirrors, books and magazines. This waiting room, though accessible from the street, is richly furnished in keeping with the interior of the house. The house is getting the very best patronage and lots of it, by charging an admission of thirty-five cents for the orchestra floor in the evenings. None of these seats is reserved.

Police Hold Crowds from Metro Night Scenes

POLICE reserves of the Fourteenth precinct, New York, held back the crowds attracted by the "blaze" of lights which Metro Director William C. Dowlan used in staging night rain storm scenes on the roofs of Hudson street tenements, for "The Outsider," Emmy Wehlen's coming Metro wonderplay, adapted by Charles A. Taylor from the novel of Louis Joseph Vance.

To all appearances, the entire block on Hudson street between Perry and Eleventh streets was in flames. Electrical Director Frank Detering and his assistants had installed a score of goose neck and duplex lights along the roofs. The blaze of these lights was augmented by baby spot lights and successive bursts of light from a series of flash banks supplying the lightning effects. A fire hose, attached to a street hydrant was used for the rainstorm effect and this heightened the illusion of a big fire in progress.

News of State Rights Productions

THE LATEST FROM ALL OVER THE INDEPENDENT FIELD

"Raffles" Will Be Sold in Open Market

John Barrymore Stars in Picture Released Under States Rights Plan

WHILE releasing companies have made efforts to secure the Hy-Class Producing Company's feature "Raffles, The Amateur Cracksman," in which John Barrymore returns to the screen in the role made famous by the late Kyrle Bellew, it has finally been decided to release "Raffles" on the state right plan. The main cause for this decision was the desire to establish a standard of excellence so high that it would be unjust to the Hy-Class productions to have them released along with features lacking the quality that the executives of the company have determined to maintain. In addition to making their features the most artistic possible, the aim of the company is to produce books and plays having established publicity value in combination with such stars as John Barrymore and Forbes Robertson.

Hiller and Wilk, well-known state right brokers, who have been appointed exclusive selling agents for "Raffles," feel certain that the open market buyers will have in "Raffles" a photoplay that stands out not only because it combines quality of production with publicity value in story, but also because of the star, and the fact that it is a thrilling, finished production.

It represents six months of concentrated effort on the part of the producing staff headed by Director George Irving in addition to the investment of thousands of dollars wisely spent in obtaining a perfect cast, the most complete settings and scenes available.

The picture rights of "Raffles" alone costs a small fortune. As a play, it has been an international success, and as a story, it has been read in every civilized tongue. Heading the cast is John Barrymore, who departs from the lines which he has usually played and essays a role that will endear him to everyone who sees the picture. Other members of the cast are Frederick Perry, who plays Capt. Bedford, H. Cooper Cliffe, Christine Mayo, Evelyn Brent and players of equal merit."

The selling arrangements have been placed in our hands and the bids that have been made indicate that "Raffles" will be sold in record-breaking time. Offers for England and Australia show that the prices for these countries likely will establish new records.

Sir Forbes Robertson is on his way to New York to appear in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," which is to be the second production of the Hy-Class Producing Company.

Lillian Walker Feature Selling Rapidly

THE Ogden Pictures Corporation is rapidly disposing of the remaining unsold territory on their first Lillian Walker production, "The Lust of the Ages."

A contract was closed with Greiver & Herz of Chicago, Illinois, for the exclusive rights to this production for the territory of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

A contract was closed last week with Mayer Silverman, of Pittsburg, on the same production, for the territory of western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. After extended negotiations between Harry G. Segal of the Globe Feature Film Corporation of Boston and Jesse J. Goldburg, of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, a contract was finally closed, whereby the Globe Feature Film Corporation procured the rights to the production for the six New England states, Mr. Segal operating four prints.

These sales mark a rapid disposition of "The Lust of the Ages," which was first offered for sale about six weeks ago. Every territory has been disposed of, including the entire foreign rights, with the exception of Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska. It is the intention of the Ogden Pictures Corporation not to release or offer for sale anywhere their second production, "The Grain of Dust," until the entire territory on "The Lust of the Ages" has been disposed of.

Hoffman Opens More Exchanges

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., has promoted Jerome Abrams, division manager in Pennsylvania, to the position of assistant general manager of exchanges. Jack Greenberg succeeds Mr. Abrams. New exchanges will be opened by the Hoffman organization in San Francisco and Portland, Ore., making a total of eighteen Hoffman-Foursquare offices in operation.

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., has been chosen to book the forthcoming serial that is being written by Chief of the United States Secret Service, William J. Flynn. The serial will tell the story of what German spies have done and tried to do in the United States.

Raver Stars Edmund Breese

Edmund Breese, noted character actor, has been engaged to star in a new mystery story, which will be produced by Harry Raver.

Harry Berman, New York manager of Jewel Productions, Inc., who has been working in and about Kansas City for the past three weeks, has gone to St. Louis, where he will establish Jewel headquarters and appoint a St. Louis manager.

Hodkinson Gets Back into the Game

Announcement was made last week of the re-entry into the motion picture business of W. W. Hodkinson, founder and first president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Mr. Hodkinson has organized a distributing company which will be known as the W. W. Hodkinson Company. Announcement of the first of the producers who will be affiliated with him is promised for next week.

Mr. Hodkinson recently sold his holdings and resigned from the presidency of the Triangle Distributing Corporation. His retirement from all activity in the motion picture business was forecasted then.

In an interview Mr. Hodkinson had several things to say in connection with his return to active work in the film business.

"In the first place," he explained, "I cannot go into details of my contracts, for the producers with whom I am affiliated and I have felt that we must hold up that announcement until next week. But what brought me back?

"I did not come back because I wanted to sell a States Rights picture on the strength of the confidence that exhibitors have in me. And I did not come back merely because I like excitement. Behind this move of mine is a plan that expects to help the exhibitor to solve a few of the problems that are facing him. I haven't a program now. What I have, however, is a distribution system and plans for securing the best all-round pictures made.

"My entrance into the business was as an exhibitor, and my contact with exhibitors has always been of the closest sort. I know what the exhibitor wants in the way of treatment and pretty well what he wants in the way of pictures. I am not a producer, and do not expect to be. My business is exhibiting, and my plan is to give exhibitors a service, through my distribution company, that will be really worth the cost of distribution."

Mr. Hodkinson and Raymond Pawley, who will be associated with him, in this enterprise, have taken offices at 527 Fifth avenue, New York.

Leah Baird Will Have Her Own Company

Miss Leah Baird is to appear in six super-features to be made by her own company. It is said a Wall street man is backing the company, which will pay Miss Baird a salary of $1,500 a week, and a percentage of the profits. It is understood Nat H. Spitzer will handle the sales end of the Baird productions.

Sell New Seven-Reeler

Crystal Photoplays Corporation announces that the rights to "Mother-Love and the Law," their new seven-reel feature drama, have been sold to Greiver & Herz, of Chicago, for Illinois, Indiana and southern Wisconsin.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

Machine Has Peculiar Movements

I AM working in a booth where I have two machines and am using alternating current through compensarcs. I am having some trouble with one of the machines. It is a Baird and has been in use for a little over a year. There is end play in the intermittent sprocket and lost motion between the star and cam.

I have only been working on this job for a short time and do not understand the Baird machine very well. The picture on the screen, when using the Baird machine, has an up-and-down movement and at times a side movement, while on the other machine the same film is steady so I am convinced that the trouble lies in the machine, but I did not want to take any chances in trying to remedy it because I had never attempted to adjust an intermittent movement on a Baird before. I have worked on Power's and Standard American machines and understand them but the Baird is a new one on me. If you can explain the adjustment to me I will be much obliged. V. McM.

To adjust the intermittent sprocket for end motion,—loosen the screw in the steel collar between the intermittent sprocket 41P and the eccentric sleeve 43P and prying lightly against the rim of the sprocket with a screwdriver, letting the point of the screwdriver rest on the collar, which will have the effect of forcing the sprocket to the right and the collar to the left. Tighten up the screw in the collar while it is held in this position.

To adjust the intermittent sprocket and cam in order to eliminate lost motion in the intermittent, first loosen screw 201P (screw to lock the eccentric sleeve) and screw 49P (screw for bracket on the intermittent shaft) after which slightly turn the eccentric sleeve 43P by pressing down on the projecting pin 50P (pin to adjust the eccentric sleeve), at the same time revolving the flywheel by hand.

When you have adjusted the cam and star so that there is no lost motion between them, tighten up screw 201P. The cam and star should be adjusted so that there is very little circumferential play in the intermittent sprocket. Do not attempt to take out all the circumferential play in the sprocket, for if the cam and star are adjusted too close it will cause excessive and unnecessary wear. Possibly some of the up-and-down motion that appears on the screen is caused by not having the proper adjustment on the tension shoes. The tension shoes are regulated by nut 68P (adjusting nut for upper tension shoes). Each of the upper tension shoes 65P is pivoted to a plunger which passes through the gate casting, the shoes being held up against the film by a flat spring. The tension on this spring is regulated by nut 68P, which is attached to a steel screw 67P (adjusting screw for upper tension shoe). Spring 66P (spring for upper tension shoe) is so pivoted that it automatically equalizes the tension between the two shoes.

I am the owner of a theater and do my own operating, and I am using a Motiograph machine No. 1A Model 1912. I have been in the show business for the last year and have done my own operating because there are no operators in this town. I have the only show in the town and run three nights a week. I have never had any trouble with my machine until this last week and now something is wrong and I do not know what it is, so would like to have you help me out if you can. Here is the trouble—it started with the titles in the film. Every time a title comes on the screen it has shading or streaks upon the letters, and when anything white shows on the screen, like a man's collar or a table cover on a table, then it shows streaks, too. What is the cause of this? Can I fix it, or will I have to send the machine in to the factory? I do not want to send the machine away unless I have to, for I have no other one to use. Yours truly, J. B. C.—Wisconsin.

Your trouble is caused from one of two things, either the set-screw in the shutter has worked loose and allowed one of the blades to slip on the shutter shaft, or else the shutter gears are worn and allow lost motion in the shutter blades. I think the trouble is in the setting of the shutter, and if that is the cause then you can remedy it yourself, but if the gears are worn then you will have to send the mechanism in to the factory for new gears. You can set the shutter blades and can then tell which is the cause. The following instructions are taken from the hand book that is supplied by the Motiograph Company and I would advise you to write to The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Co., 564 West Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., for a copy of this book. The book will be forwarded to you free of charge.

Setting the Shutters

The principle of setting the shutters for the Motiograph is the same as for any other motion picture machine, that is, the larger wings of the shutters should cover the light opening or aperture as nearly as possible during the time that the intermittent sprocket and film are in motion, and the smaller wings should pass during the exposure while the film is at rest. It is not necessary to pay any attention to the small wings when setting the shutter, as they take care of themselves and are only intended as interrupters of the light, which reduces the flicker in the picture to a minimum.

To set the shutters, remove the front plate which carries the lens, after which remove the outer shutter wing (the one nearest you), loosen the screws on the inner shutter, leaving the shutter just loose enough on the shaft to be turned easily by hand, and tight enough so they will not move of their own accord. Remove the gear cover, after which take hold of the balance wheel and turn the mechanism in the same direction as during the operation of the machine; turn very slowly until the intermittent sprocket wheel starts to move, after which set the low edge of the large wing of the inner shutter about ⅛ inch above the center of the aperture opening (indicated by the dotted line in illustration figure number 1), when looking on a line parallel through the center of the light aperture. Now revolve the mechanism slowly in the same direction, observing when the intermittent sprocket wheel stops, that the top edge of the large wing shutter is about ⅛ inch below the center of the aperture opening (indicated by a dotted line in illustration number 2).

Tighten the screws firmly, after which revolve the mechanism until the inner shutter is at the original position, that is, the lower edge of the large wing should be about ⅛ inch above the center of the aperture opening.

Replace the outer shutter on the shaft, tighten the screws partially in the same manner as was done with the inner shutter, set the top edge of the large wing about ⅛ inch below the center of the aperture opening (indicated in figure number 3), after which tighten the screws firmly.

The space between the two large wings of the shutter should be exactly the same width when the intermittent sprocket is just ready to start (but not started), as it is just as the intermittent sprocket has come to rest after turning, and said space should be exactly in the center of the aperture opening when looking on a line parallel through aperture opening. Figure number 4 represents both shutters in the position they should occupy when the intermittent sprocket wheel stops. After the setting of the shutters has been once done it will be found very simple and easy to repeat. Set the shutters on your machine as per the above instructions and I think that that will end your trouble.

Operators Receive Increase

Operators of Local No. 306 of New York City have been granted a new wage scale and a contract which means better working conditions and a substantial increase in wages. Sam Kaplan, who is president of Local No. 306, is also chief inspector for the Precision Machine Co., who manufacture the Simplex Projection Machine. Brother Kaplan was instrumental in getting the new wage scale signed up and deserves a great deal of credit for the way in which he handled the Local's affairs.

New Carbon Solves A. C. Problems

White Specials End Troubles of Operators Whose Houses Have No Direct Current

BY A. A. HOWARD

ONE motion picture problem which remained for a long time unsolved was that which dealt with the use of alternating current for projection purposes. Numerous attempts have been made in the past to find a solution, but the defects which operators felt were inseparable from alternating current operation seemed a permanent bar.

This question was quite pertinent, in view of the fact that in towns where a. c. was in use the smaller houses have always been under a handicap. This was especially true if they were not of a size which warranted putting in transforming apparatus. Operators and exhibitors alike felt that the a. c. problem must receive a speedy solution if these smaller houses were to give the same satisfaction to their audiences that the larger houses in the big cities were giving. In other words, some means must be found that would do away with the defects of the old a. c. projection arc and make operation with that current more like that obtained from direct current.

Carbon Light Best

It was necessary that the problem be solved by the use of a carbon arc, rather than through other light-giving means. This was true because, while the old a. c. arc may have been deficient in some ways, it still offered the best regulation of any light source. That is, a carbon arc is not susceptible to line fluctuations and, therefore, for all practical purposes the old spectre of flicker was not nearly as important in this type of light as in a light source where it was necessary to work at an exact voltage.

With the latter light source, any slight line fluctuation would, of course, result in an unavoidable flicker or change in light value. Then, too, the light from a carbon arc is the most brilliant known, and at the same time has a much purer tone than any other illuminant. Therefore, unless the operator was willing to sacrifice brilliancy and light tone, thus losing the finer values of the photography, the carbon arc was the only light source which could be considered.

After an exhaustive research, one of the carbon manufacturers offered as a solution a new a. c. carbon known as the White A. C. Special Carbon. All of the desired elements—noiseless operation, pure white light and steady burning, combined with simple adjustment and elimination of expensive transforming apparatus were present when this carbon was used, all of which caused a. c. exhibitors and operators to regard this carbon as the final solution of the a. c. projection problem.

Operation Is Silent

In direct contrast to the usual noisy a. c. arc, the operation of these new carbons is a revelation. They are noiseless and the pure white light which is so necessary for perfect screen definition is obtained in abundance by the specially prepared material which is used in the cores of these carbons.

The research and testing by specially trained laboratory men have brought about the introduction of this material, which, in itself, is productive of a white light, exactly the same as daylight and far more intense. It is by the use of the same material that the noiseless operation is obtained.

Although many attempts have been made to solve the a. c. projection problem, nearly all have involved in some way or another a change in the lamp housings. This contributed in a large measure to the expensiveness of the proposition. No change could be made which did not mean tearing out the interior construction of the lamp and replacing as called for by the special design of the new apparatus. Operators did not see much promise of relief for the small exhibitor in such attempts at a solution of the problem.

Not only must new housings be placed in the lamp, but in a number of cases a new lens system has been necessitated by the improvements. It is for these reasons that the new a. c. carbons seem to

A Help to Operators

In conclusion, it might be well to give a few suggestions from the operators' point of view concerning a. c. motion picture operation. In the first place, the following table gives the proper combinations which have been found by operators to give most efficient operation with this new carbon:

| Amperes | Carbon Diameter |
|---|---|
| 40 to 60 | 5/8" combination |
| 60 to 75 | 3/4" combination |
| 75 to 90 | 7/8" combination |

At all times as good a contact as possible should be maintained between the carbon and holder. Only by so doing will the longest life be obtained and the minimum spindling or "needling" occasioned. Good contact also insures maximum candlepower throughout the life of the trim.

Film Firms and Stars Aid Liberty Loan

In addition to lending the weight of their efforts to induce others to buy bonds of the government's second Liberty Loan, the motion picture industry was generously represented among the subscribers to the billions that the United States raised during October to finance the war.

Among the heaviest contributors was the Jaxon Film Corporation which bought $300,000 of Liberty Bonds. Fatty Arbuckle himself subscribed for $40,000 worth of the second loan. Mary Miles Minter took another $25,000 worth, which added to her subscription to the first loan makes her contribution to the government $50,000. Pearl White bought $25,000 worth of the bonds and then sold her $14,000 motor car and an expensive set of ermine furs and put the proceeds into the United States treasury. Little Bobby Connelly, the eight-year-old Vitagraph star, without suggestion from anyone, bought a $50 bond with the money he received from an insurance company on account of an accident that befell him last June.

Through the efforts of Theda Bara more than $300,000 worth of bonds were sold in front of the public library in New York in a single day. Marguerite Clark was active in the bond campaign in Washington and Cincinnati.

Pictures Will Be Used As Cure for Mind Ills

Several thousand photographs, snapshots, scenes from Paramount productions, etc., have been collected at the Lasky studios in California and given to Major Ross Moore, the famous neurologist, who will be in charge of the Neurasthenic Hospital, back of the American lines in France.

These photographs will be in charge of Louis Coleman Hall of Los Angeles, who is to be aide to Major Moore in France, and will be used for the purpose of distracting the minds of soldiers suffering from mental disorders as a result of shell shock, privation, confinement, gas, and other hardships.

The United States is preparing to establish a special hospital witht 2,500 beds to care for these cases. As the ailments are entirely mental, the object of the physicians is to take the minds of the sufferers off the war as much as possible. The pictures, accompanied by little stories appropriate thereto, will be used for this purpose.

Booth Men Hold Feast

Moving picture operators of Chattanooga held a banquet and get-together meeting in Central Labor hall last week in observance of their seventh anniversary. Matt Robinson, representing the American Federation, was the toastmaster. R. H. Johnson, president of the organization, delivered an address. A talk was made by Ed Healy, one of the oldest members of the operators' union. Elbert Lowry was chairman of the committee in charge.

"A Game of Wits"

Gail Kane in a Fine American-Mutual Comedy Drama. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THOSE who have seen Gail Kane in other comedy-dramas, "The Upper Crust," for instance, will rejoice to learn that her latest American picture is a merry one, giving her a chance for her light, skillful comedy playing. Miss Kane's recent success, both in heavy emotional roles and in comedy-drama is winning for her a fine reputation for versatility. Perhaps it is a matter of taste, but the writer at least believes that Miss Kane's greatest opportunity lies in the comedy-drama field. There are many other actresses who can do as good and better emotional acting than Miss Kane, but few or none who can so skillfully and intelligently "get over" a humorous point. Roles which the average actress would play in a conventional, ingenue fashion fairly radiate magnetism and personality when Gail interprets them. Her part in this picture is an example.

Gail Kane in "A Game of Wits."

The offering is high class in every way. It is one of American's best. Spottiswoode Aitken's comedy is clever, as the millionaire who finds his engagement too strenuous an affair. George Periolat and Lewis J. Cody have the only other important parts. The settings and photography are fine. Miss Kane's costumes are also interesting. Henry King directed the story, which is by Dan F. Whitcomb. The plot is pleasingly picturized and is full of opportunity for the players. The production will entertain all audiences and the exhibitor is safe in recommending it unreservedly.

The Story: Jeannette Browning (Miss Kane) is a society girl and has always supposed her father possessed unlimited wealth. She overhears a conversation between her father and Silas Stone (Aitken), an aged millionaire, which shows her that her father is deeply in debt to the millionaire. She hears Stone tell her father that he will free him from debt if Jeannette will marry him. Later Jeannette, to her father's surprise, accepts the old man's proposal of marriage.

This might be the opening for a dreary society drama, except for Jeannette's wit. She had a plan and set about carrying it out. After accepting the jeweled gifts of her millionaire fiance, she invited him and a party of her young friends to a house-party at her father's mountain home. She entertained him so strenuously, with parties and rich food, dancing, riding and mountain climbing that he began to fear for his life. But he did not give up until Larry appeared on the scene. Jeannette said Larry was her twin brother who had escaped from an asylum. He had spells of insanity when he tried to commit murder. Jeannette hinted that she too felt the same mania.

Stone began to lose sleep nights fearing Larry. At last he could stand no more and he asked Jeannette to release him from the engagement. Whereupon Jeannette sued him for breach of promise, collected a young fortune from him, and married Larry, her former fiance.

"Fighting Back"

Triangle Picture With William Desmond Released November 4. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

SCENES of a wild western Fourth of July celebration, broncobusters, a raid on a dance-hall in which the hero carries the dance-hall queen away bodily, and plenty of fighting save this picture from being merely mediocre. The central figure of the U. S. army officer, who unjustly loses his commission, and then every manly quality is an unconvincing character, although William Desmond does all that can possibly be done with the part. Another character which was evidently drawn with the gullibility of the average moving picture enthusiast in mind is the girl who, for no reason at all, changes from a meek, cringing creature to a wild temperamental dance-hall girl, appropriately named the "Fury."

The western scenery is beautifully pictured and the unconventional atmosphere is truly portrayed. The cowboy characters are good. Many will enjoy the picture because of its brisk, thrilling interjections.

The Story: The Weakling is found by Alamo Sam and Mournful Pete half dead from exhaustion near a water-hole in the desert. They take him back to Big Jim Newton's ranch and show him every consideration, but the weakling seems to be a born coward and can demand no respect from the men.

The Fury is a girl of the dance-hall, so called because of her fiery disposition. She takes a strange fancy to the Weakling who learns to love her. He tells her the story of his part which led to his being the coward that he is. He was an officer in the United States army when he was unjustly accused of a crime and dishonorably discharged. The girl spurs him on to new efforts, telling him he should go back to the world and clear his name of disgrace.

The Weakling, now a weakling no longer, receives first prize at a Fourth of July celebration for riding an out-lawed horse, and then going to the "Iron Front" saloon he gives a thrashing to China Mex, who had previously insulted him, and carries away the Fury.

He goes straight to his army post with his girl and there hears the news that he had been exonerated long ago from dishonor and that his commission has been given back to him. The picture was directed by Raymond Wells.

"The Planter"

Tyrone Power in Mutual Seven-Reel Special. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

TO picturize this novel by Herman Whitaker, dealing with conditions surrounding the rubber industry in Southern Mexico, a company of players, headed by Tyrone Power, traveled to the country in which the story is laid. As a result we have accurate and very beautiful backgrounds and "local color" that is real. But in these beautiful settings, a story is presented which is so brutal and so filled with horrible episodes that there are few audiences to which it will appeal. It is advertised by Mutual as a "strong" play. It is indeed too "strong" for any theater catering to a fastidious clientele. If a fair proportion of your audience is feminine, think twice before you play this feature.

Of course there are audiences which will like this picture on account of its thrills and adventure spirit. The conditions shown are also undoubtedly true, and this always adds interest. But it will be the men rather than the women who are interested.

From an artistic standpoint, the excellent acting of Tyrone Power stands out as the best feature. His supporting cast is not far behind him and the types selected are unusually good. The fine exteriors and photography have been mentioned. The directing seems to emphasize the cruelty and the immorality of the conditions. There is no light side to the picture. It is brutality picturized vividly, and from many points of view, uselessly.

The Story: David Man (Lamar Johnstone) is a young New Englander who is sent to Southern Mexico to investigate a rubber plantation in which his mother wishes to invest. He finds conditions so bad that he wires her not to buy the stock, but the message is intercepted and the money invested. Then he determines to stay and do what he can to better things and if possible make the plantation profitable.

David's New England sensibilities are shocked first by the relations between the managers and the native women. The girl who is his housekeeper is angered at his indifference and tries in every way to win him. The outbreak of yellow fever which frightens away many of the slaves on the plantation also makes the girl leave.

David nurses many of his people through the fever, and at last contracts the disease. Ludwig Hertzer, "The Planter," (Tyrone Power), who with his half-breed daughter, lives on the next plantation, saves David's life. Hertzer is a man of great cruelty. On one occasion he orders an unruly slave whipped to death. His daughter begs for the man's life and it is granted. Hertzer and David fall in love with a Spanish girl. Hertzner has David sent back to America, and succeeds in getting the girl into his power. Only an uprising of the slaves saves the girl. Hertzner, after being hamstrung by his slaves, is deserted by his daughter, who runs away with her slave lover and he dies in the fire which burns the plantation. David returns to marry the Spanish girl.

"The Lash of Power"

Carmel Myers Starred in Bluebird Release of November 5. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

CARMEL MYERS is starred in this picture, evidently because her name has the most potent drawing power of any in the cast, not because she has the leading part. Kenneth Harlan plays the central character, and about him the story is built. The story has an allegorical flavor; the events take place in a dream of a young man who craves power and who worships the memory of the great Napoleon. He achieves his goal, but the unhappiness which attends it makes him glad to awake to a normal life.

The picture is rather fanastic and will not make a great appeal to the average picture patron. It is not up to the Blubird standard. The acting is as a rule good. Carmel Myers is given little opportunity. Kenneth Harlan as John Rand does well with a difficult part. Others in the cast are Helen Wright, Charles Mailes, T. D. Crittenden, Jack Nelson and Gertrude Astor. J. Grubb Alexander wrote the story. Harry Solter produced it.

The Story: John Rand, a poor young man in a small town, is in love with Marion Sherwood, who has social ambitions. Marion's father inherits a fortune and moves to the city. John is given a position in Sherwood's office. By accident he comes into possession of a powerful explosive perfected by an old inventor. He sells this to a foreign government, and thus brings about the European war. He becomes rich but Marion refuses to marry him because he has no social standing. Thereupon by ruthless means he uses his money to buy social position. But Marion has married a man with a renowned name and John further embittered, continues a career of oppression and cruelty until the common people rebel and he is blown up the explosive he first marketed. Then he awakes and finds his career a dream. Marion and he, still villagers but contented, are later married.

"Two-Bit Seats"

Taylor Holmes in Third Essanay-Perfection Comedy Drama. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A PLEASANT little story, pleasingly picturized, with humor and also good sense, this third Taylor Holmes feature from Essanay studios will entertain its audiences but will not create as much merriment as the earlier two pictures. It isn't hackneyed or dull. There are several novelties in the picture, the trip through the amusement park, for instance, when various rides over the "chute the chutes" and the coasters are cleverly filmed, in several instances the camera being placed on the front of the car.

Taylor Holmes does not have so much opportunity for individual comedy playing as in previous screen roles. There is nothing very distinctive about the characterization of the hero of this play and this is its weak point. Taylor Holmes' name will undoubtedly make this a strong drawing card in theaters which have shown his previous successes. It will not disappoint its audiences, but it will add no new laurels to his fame.

Marguerite Clayton is pleasing as Holmes' leading lady. The supporting cast is small but capable. The photography and settings are satisfactory. The story originally appeared in the American Magazine and was written by Gladys E. Johnson. November 5 is the release date of the feature.

The Story: Jimmy Mason, a poor but proud clerk, was too proud to sit in anything but two dollar theater seats. One week when the musical comedy hit of the season came to town he found everything but the gallery sold; so he took a gallery seat. He found his seat was next to a very pretty girl. The girl, Alice Carroll, accidentally jabbed him with a hat pin. The episode resulted in an acquaintance which became a warm friendship. But when Jimmy wished to take Alice to another show, she consented only on condition that they take cheap seats. The various inexpensive amusements which they enjoy form part of the story. So does an episode in which Jimmy becomes jealous of Alice's wealthy employer.

Jimmy was in fear that some of his friends would see him in the "two-bit seats" section. One night his employer did. The next day Jimmy was promoted because of his economical habits. He and Alice then announced their engagement.

"A Daughter of Maryland"

Third in Edna Goodrich-Mutual Star Series. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

EXHIBITORS who will run this feature have doubtless shown the first two Edna Goodrich pictures to their patrons and can judge the impression the lady makes upon their clientele and the probable success of this offering. We beg the question in this fashion because the picture under discussion is the kind which depends largely upon the personality of the star for its entertainment value. The story is not interesting for its own sake, and there is little opportunity for dramatic acting. However, there are many very pretty scenes, well photographed, and there is a quaint atmosphere of olden times given the story by the interpolation of the romance of the preceding generation, in which Miss Goodrich and the other characters appear in colonial costumes. The picture is really very pretty in every way, but the story can hardly be called "gripping," although there is a flavor of melodrama. It is not presented very effectively.

Joseph Poland wrote the story of the picture, and John B. O'Brien directed it. Supporting the star are William T. Carlton, Helen Strickland, Carl Brickett, Jack Hopkins, Charles Martin, Florence Miller, Morgan Thorpe, S. J. Burton and Myra Brooks.

The Story: Headland Hall, on the coast of Maryland, has been the home of the Treadway family for generations. Oliver Treadway is a foxhunting squire. His daughter, Elizabeth, is self-willed and an outdoor devotee.

Standish, a landscape artist, is brought from New York to improve the grounds. He stays on the estate with his uncle, Martin Pennell, the superintendent. Walter Ripley, a New York lawyer, engaged to "Beth," stays at the hall. Dorothy Pennell, a pretty girl, is much admired by Ripley, who wrongs her.

"Beth" Treadway objects strenuously to the changes her father has ordered in the grounds and antagonizes Standish in his work. The latter laughingly accepts her hostility and falls in love with her at the same time.

Ripley is discovered by "Beth" to have betrayed Dorothy. "Beth" agrees to marry Ripley, luring him to the minister's house under that pretext and there confronting him with Dorothy, whom he is compelled to marry.

Ripley attempts to rob Squire Treadway's safe, being on the verge of ruin through speculation. Treadway catches him and in the struggle that ensues Ripley kills the old man.

Betrayed by a piece of cloth found in the dead man's hand, Ripley tries to kill Standish and in the struggle between them is himself killed by accidental discharge of his revolver. Standish marries Beth.

role and plays with spirit. The photography, acting and directing are good. Harvey Gates wrote the story and Louis Chaudet directed it. The cast includes Charles West, Joseph Girard and William Musgrave.

The picture is one which, because of its human appeal and interest, may be advertised with confidence in any class of theater. Miss Cunard's name will prove a drawing feature, and patrons will enjoy the picture.

The Story: Lena Rogers is a fortune-teller with a circus. One day a crook steals a woman's bag and, in danger of arrest, becomes frightened and hides the bag near the fortune-teller's booth. Lena is accused of the theft. To protect her, her brother, Roger, confesses to the crime he did not commit. Lena pleads for justice and mercy for her brother, who is ill, but the boy is sent to prison for a long term. Some time later, Lena becomes a fashionable modiste in the city. The judge who sentenced her brother becomes an influential lawyer. Lena meets him again and wins his love, but she marries his young brother, a newspaper reporter. Then she tells the judge who she is. This is part of her revenge. For the rest, she discovers and reveals to his brother the judge's corrupt methods of getting ahead. Her brother, released from prison, tries to kill the judge. He is unsuccessful, and the judge agrees to forgive him and to help him. But the boy dies.

"Weavers of Destiny"

Edward Warren Production. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

"WEAVERS of Destiny" is a picture in which the little shop-girl heroine reforms everyone in her realm by just being her own very sweet self. It will be enjoyed by patrons who favor plays of the smooth, pleasant type and who like a comingling of gladness and pathos in productions.

The picture is in six reels, but the story could easily have been told in less. The introduction of a few symbolic bits will rectify this in the minds of spectators who like allegorical pictures. There is of course a moral which gets side-tracked at intervals throughout the transmission, but which arrives with a great deal of force at the end. It may be summed up as an exceptionally clean, sweet picture, and, as the production is lavish and the cast excellent, it should be well received.

Helen Hayes has the female lead and plays it with a great deal of winsomeness. Others in the cast are Earl Schenck, Howard Hall, Gilbert Rooney and Beatrice Allen.

The Story: Peggy is a little shop girl who has a great longing to be like the great ladies whom she waits upon. One day she finds a package containing a costume for a masquerade ball to be given by a member of society, so she puts it on and attends.

At the ball she meets George Pratt, son of a millionaire, who falls in love with her. When he appeals to his father for consent to their marriage, the father proposes that Peggy live with them for a month and, if at the end of that time the two are just as anxious to get married, they may.

Peggy proves to be a ray of sunshine in the house and teaches these blase, selfish people to appreciate better things in life than they have been pursuing. At the end of the month, however, she realizes that she doesn't really love George at all, but was only attracted by his wealth, so she goes back to her first love, leaving a great void by her departure.

"Up or Down"

Triangle Picture Released November 4. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS picture by Lynn Reynolds, with a jail-bird as its chief character, tells an exceptionally entertaining human-interest story. Mike is a thoroughly likable person, in spite of his tendency to appropriate things which do not belong to him, and he will be enjoyed by all who appreciate cleverly drawn characterizations. Mike does unexpected things in unexpected ways and his real nature remains a mystery until the very end of the picture. Plenty of wild riding, shooting, a little love insert and the usual western brisk action helps to fill up the picture which is one of the best Triangle has shown in some time.

George Fernandez as Mike leaves nothing to be desired in his portrayal of the genial bum. He is at all times natural and the most skeptical spectator will observe him with glee. Others in the cast who do good work are Fritzie Ridgeway, Jack Gilbert and a boy, Elwood Brodell.

The Story: Allan Corey, an author with worn-out ideas, sees Mike beating up a man who was hitting a horse, and becomes interested. He invites Mike to tour the west with him and act as his muse, as it were.

Mike, who has just finished a term in the penitentiary, finds it very difficult to walk the straight and narrow and highly unexciting path of honest endeavor and only waits for the opportunity to present itself to go back to his old tricks.

The two stop at the ranch of Esther Hollister, where Corey hopes to get real western atmosphere for his new novel. Mike starts a series of hold-ups and raids, but as he always drags four horses around with him the blame is laid at the door of Texas Jack and his bandits who are hiding in the vicinity.

Esther becomes disgusted with Corey when he allows the "bandits" to hold them up and steal the money bags as they are coming from the bank one pay-day.

Corey, smarting under her insults, starts a search for the bandits, and coming upon the real ones, holds them up single-handed. The loot, which had been buried near them by Mike, is unearthed and the bandits are sent to jail.

Of course all this furnishes good material for Corey's novel and his daring also wins him the girl, so Mike slips out at moonlight, breaks open the jail and releases the prisoners as a favor from one in the trade to another, but when asked to join them he shakes his head and goes back to his pard on the ranch. The picture was also directed by Lynn Reynolds.

"Cy Whitaker's Ward"

Shirley Mason in Edison-Perfection Feature, Kleine Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

JOSEPH C. LINCOLN'S well-known novel of sea-coast folk, "Cy Whitaker's Place," is the basis for this latest Edison picture. This fact, together with the star's popularity, will insure its drawing power, especially in the better class neighborhoods. The "local color" is very well kept in the picture and the sets were very carefully furnished. In fact, the picture is technically fine. It has, however, a fault frequently noticed in picturizations of novels, that is a sketchiness of story, a feeling that something is left out. This keeps the release from being as good as the best Perfection Pictures, but it is nevertheless a clean, pretty picture, especially good for youthful and mixed audiences.

Shirley Mason plays a child's role throughout the picture. The large supporting cast contains many well chosen types. William Wadsworth plays Captain Cy Whitaker. There is more than a touch of melodrama in the story to supply the excitement and there is a generous flavoring of humor.

The Story: Captain Cy Whitaker returns to Bayport after twenty-five years' absence at sea. He redeems his old home, about to be sold for taxes, and adopts Emily Thomas, a little orphan girl. Whitaker and Heman Aitkins, the richest man in the town, at once become rivals. When Emily's father, an ex-convict, tries to get possession of the child, Aitkin takes his part. After much excitement, during which it seems that Captain Cy will lose his little ward, the aunt of the child recognizes in Aitkin the dishonest partner of her brother. By threatening to disclose his past, Aitkin is subdued and he turns over his leadership in the village to Cy.

Emmy Lynn in Pathe Melodrama, Last "Gold Rooster" Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS five-reel feature completes the list of "Gold Rooster" plays. Hereafter the Pathe series of star features will be called "Pathe Plays."

This is a French-made play, starring the French actress Emmy Lynn. The story is a society melodrama, very emotional but not convincing. The situations and the conduct of the characters are artificial to a high degree, and bear little resemblance to real life. However, there is a certain theatrical glamour which can make the play interesting to audiences with a taste for heavy acting, even though it is not artistic. Its entertainment value with the average American audience is not great. Many of them will watch it with good natured tolerance but little sympathy. Critical patrons will frequently be amused when they are supposed to be moved to tears.

The photography throughout much of the play is poor. The interiors are well furnished but poorly lighted. The acting of the star is very intense, as is also that of her supporting cast. The picture will go better in middle class houses than among critical audiences.

The Story: Mme. Courand is unhappy because her husband, a famous surgeon, puts his work before her happiness. She falls in love with the doctor's friend, Gallatin, and urges him to elope with her. He refuses because of his friendship for her husband and she tries to commit suicide. In a struggle Gallatin is killed. As he is dying, he exacts a pledge from Mme. Courand and his servant never to let the doctor know of the love affair. He leaves a note stating that he shot himself.

Later a child is born to the Courands. Several years after that, a letter written by Mme. Courand to Gallatin finds its way into the doctor's hands. He accuses his wife of unfaithfulness and as a punishment takes her child away. She learns that the baby is sick, but her husband refuses to impart any information unless she tell the name of the man to whom she wrote the letter. She refuses because of her promise. After many scenes of mental anguish, the situation is cleared by the old servant, who tells the whole story to Dr. Courand, and proves that the wife had not been unfaithful.

"The Maid of Belgium"

World Picture Brady-Made With Alice Brady. Released November 5. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

A THRILLING story of a Belgian refugee is told in William A. Brady's production of "The Maid of Belgium" written by Adrian Gil-Spear and featuring Alice Brady. The predominating note in the picture is not of the devastation of Belgium as one might be lead to believe in these current times but of mother-love. It deals with a little refugee who loses her mind from the shock of explosives and cannot remember the name of the father of her baby, or indeed that she is married at all.

Only a few scenes are laid in Belgium, the others being in the home of some wealthy New Yorkers who adopt the Belgian girl. A few harrowing war-scenes are shown which are very stirring, but the mental conflict over the possession of Adoree's baby takes up the major part of the picture. Probably no subject makes a wider appeal than mother-love and so, aside from its timely presention, this picture should prove very popular.

Alice Brady gives to her representation of the little Belgian girl an appealing touch which characterizes her ability as an actress. She does especially effective work in her scenes with the baby. George McQuarrie handles the role of Roger Hudson very capably.

The Story: Adore, a Belgian refugee, whose mind has become a blank through the horrors of war, is adopted out of pity by the Hudsons, wealthy New York people. Soon after arriving in New York Adoree has a child and Mrs. Hudson, who is estranged from her husband, plans to pass the child off as her own in order to bring her husband back to her. Adoree, remembering nothing of her past, allows Mrs. Hudson to do this to give to her child an honorable name and the assurance of happiness in the future. The strain proves too great for her, however, and mother-love coming to the fore, she kidnaps the baby and rows with it to an island in the middle of a lake.

The Hudsons, thinking the two have been drowned, dynamite the lake and the shock restores to Adoree her memory. She claims she was married to the Vicomte Michelet the night before he was called to the front. Mrs. Hudson is obliged to confess to her husband that the baby is not theirs but Adoree's, and Hudson calls in the Vicomte himself, who happens to be in New York collecting funds for the Belgian relief. Adoree is thus happily reunited with her husband, who had thought her dead. The picture was directed by George Archainbaud.

rendition of it is in no way remarkable. The action in the first part of the picture drags but leads up to a stirring climax in the courtroom scene. There is a repetition of scenes which is monotonous, but patrons not too insistent upon novelty will find it an offering of interest. Somehow the story doesn't ring true but to many this will not prove a draw-back. One doesn't expect to find things pictured too realistically in the movies.

The Story: Betsy Shelton (Irene Hunt) lives with a maiden aunt in the southern town of Myrtleville. She is the private secretary of the town's financier and is engaged to marry Calvin Stone (Jack Livingston) a young lawyer. Most of her meagre earnings go to her worthless brother in New York who is the dupe of Roger Enderleigh (H. A. Barrows), a promoter with an unsavory reputation.

The brother Dick introduces Enderleigh to Myrtleville as a prosperous business man and they promote a munitions factory, trapping all the good townspeople into the investment of their savings. The postal authorities, who have been watching the pair for some time, arrive in Myrtleville to arrest them. Enderleigh attempts to flee with all the money, leaving Dick to face the charges alone, but in the fight which follows is shot by Dick and killed. When tried for murder Dick pleads for mitigation on the grounds that Enderleigh wronged his sister.

In the south this evidence is sufficient to pardon a man.

Betsy to save her brother allows her reputation to be thus besmirched. After the trial, Stone, realizing that Betsy has allowed the lie for her brother's salvation, makes Dick confess Betsy's innocence and gives him twenty-four hours in which to leave town. Thus Betsy is restored to her good name and sweetheart. The picture was directed by Thomas Heffron.

"The Flaming Omen"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature With Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

MOST of the scenes in this picture by Andrea de Sagurola are laid in the Peruvian mountains and the atmosphere supplied by natives performing their religious rites and dancing barbarous dances adds materially to the effect of the picture.

The use of all the old theatric tricks to sustain suspense and elicit thrills, and the interjection of many improbable bits rather spoils the picture from the standpoint of the truly critical, but they have the intended effect upon spectators who still, and always will, enjoy the melodramatic. It is one of those pictures where Fate guides the characters to out-of-the-way spots at the most propitious times, and where all the characters who have fulfilled their missions throughout the picture are killed off at the end because they cannot be logically accounted for in any other way. There is plenty of action and the theme of the half-breed who falls in love with his own sister, not knowing they are related, is very absorbing.

The piece has been given a splendid production, some of the scenes being especially worthy of praise. Mary Anderson as Blanca, an Inca girl, is very pleasing in the part and much of the pleasure derived from seeing the picture is due to her winning personality. Alfred Whitman as Dorian ably fills the role.

The Story: Watkins, an Englishman, deserts his Inca wife, Coya, and their child when he has found enough gold in Peru to enable him to go back to England and live in wealth. Coya commits suicide and her baby is found by Lord Haviland who is traveling in Peru for his daughter's health. Twenty years pass and the Inca boy, called Dorian, has succeeded to the title and riches of Lord Haviland.

He falls in love with Violet Watkins, daughter of the man who deserted Coya in Peru, and who is now living in England. His love is returned by Violet but every time he tries to tell her of his love he has a vision of an Inca woman with a baby which prevents his going further.

Blanca, an Inca girl, comes to England to school and stays at the home of Lord Haviland. When she returns to her native land Dorian misses her companionship, and, as his hallucinations have made a nervous wreck of him, he decides to go to Peru and visit the home of his birth. Violet and Watkins follow him there.

Natche, Inca Chieftain, is in love with Blanca, and when she repulses him he leads his tribesmen against her home, planning to carry her off. In the fight Violet and Watkins are killed but just before the latter dies he confesses to Dorian that he is his father, thereby explaining the visions which had prevented Dorian's marrying his own half-sister. We are lead to believe that Dorian will find compensation in Blanca's love.

"Scandal"

Select Picture With Constance Talmadge. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

MISS TALMADGE is quite the prettiest thing seen in pictures in some time, and "Scandal," from the book of Cosmo Hamilton, will be assured of success because of her charming personality if for no other reason.

The story borders very near to the danger line. The theme is decidedly risque, and one continually has a horror that the bounds will, or will not, according to one's individual taste, be overstepped. As to its actual merits as a picture, the construction is very weak and were it not upheld by its very clever, youthful star, would topple to pieces with the first breath of investigation.

It is decidedly modern and strikes a sympathetic note not touched by the old style pictures which only excite awe. The settings are wonderful and, in fact, the whole production is meritorious from the studio point of view.

Constance Talmadge as a daughter of the Idle Rich is delightful, and conveys to the spectators the right degree of irresponsible daring to make the character a wonderfully appealing one. Harry C. Browns as the millionaire with atavistic tendencies plays the part in a highly acceptable manner.

The story is of Beatrix Vanderdyke, the spoiled daughter of wealthy New Yorkers, who thinks it fun to do Bohemian things. She pays evening visits to Sutherland Yorke's apartments until she realizes the true character of the man when she leaves in a rage.

Her parents hear of her visits and are horribly afraid a breath of scandal will be attached to her name for fear Pelham Franklyn, whom they are very anxious for her to marry, will be prejudiced against her.

Beatrix, anxious to set herself right with her parents, audaciously tells them that she had a right to go to the bachelor apartments but that she was not visiting York but Pelham Franklyn himself to whom she had been secretly married. Then she rushes to Franklyn and telling him what she has done she begs him to be a good sport and play the part.

Franklyn is furious and demands that if he play the role of husband she must actually play the role of wife and so saying he orders her clothes sent to his room.

For fear someone will find out they are not really married and to avoid scandal they take a cruise on Franklyn's yacht, properly chaperoned of course. Constant association makes the two eventually fall in love with each other, so the picture ends with a real honeymoon in sight.

"The Fighting Trail"

Episode 9, "The Bridge of Death." Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

WHILE not as replete in outdoor grandeur as some of the preceeding episodes this serial still continues its rapid unfolding of exciting events with remarkable adroitness, keeping one's interest keenly alive until the finish. There is some daring riding which should furnish a thrill for those lovers of western pictures who find their greatest delight in scenes with a lot of action.

The sequence of events always seem to come about in the most natural manner. There are very few forced situations, which is quite remarkable in a serial picture where an appeal is usually made to the senses rather than to the mind.

Nan and Gwynn climb up the rope to safety and Gwynn goes to town to get a warrant for the arrest of "Cut-Throat." The sheriff is bribed by Von Bleck and tells Gwynn he is very busy. Gwynn goes himself to serve a warrant on "Cut-Throat." He is overpowered by the gang who ties him up and sends a decoy message to Nan, telling her to come at once with the titles of the mine. She falls into the trap and is captured and tied with Gwynn.

In the still of the night Gwynn bribes "One Lung" and escapes with Nan on horses provided for the purpose. The bandits follow at break-neck speed. Nan and Gwynn dismount and start to cross a rope bridge with the bandits close at their heels when the bridge collapses.

Carol Halloway and William Duncan are splendid in their respective parts as usual.

"The Spreading Dawn"

Goldwyn Production With Jane Cowl. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THE new Goldwyn picture, "The Spreading Dawn," carries with it an aggregation of names which in themselves insure its success as a drawing power. Lawrence Trimble directed the picture which was written by Basil King, and which serves as a starring vehicle for Jane Cowl.

A startling surprise is experienced at the beginning of the picture when Miss Cowl is seen in the role of an old gray-haired lady, irritable and unrelenting. As she sits with her diary before her, reviewing her past life and explaining to her niece why she doesn't believe in love, the picture flashes back and reveals her youth and the episodes which lead to her disillusionment. The picture has a great deal of charm and distinctiveness and is decidedly on a higher plane than the average productions. In it is reflected the superior quality for which the name Goldwyn stands.

The scenes of Civil War times are very picturesque and will hold an added interest as a comparison to our current great war scenes. An interesting feature is the leaving of the Seventy-first Regiment for the front in 1861, particularly so as spectators will recall the departure of the present Seventy-first a few weeks ago. The whole picture has been photographed and directed with a great degree of skill. The scenes of a panic in a burning theater are unusually realistic.

Jane Cowl does some very good work, her performance being admirable in every way. Orme Caldara plays the male lead in an able manner.

The Story: The niece of Mrs. Vanderpyl is desirous of marrying a young aviator before he goes to France, but the aunt, crabbed and hard, controller of the Vanderpyl millions, is obdurate, saying that her niece will be disinherited if she persists in the matter.

The young girl, broken-hearted, insists upon knowing why her aunt has so hardened her heart to love, and so the aunt unfolds her life story with the aid of a diary.

In her youth she had loved and married young Vanderpyl in spite of the fact that she had caught him in a compromising act, which had weakened her faith in him. After their marriage he was called to the colors. Home on a furlough one night, he kissed her, looked into her eyes, received a message and left without an explanation. She never saw him again. He was killed that night by the husband of a friend of hers who had found him with his wife.

Disillusioned, the young wife believed the worst of her husband and refused to open a letter which he managed to write to her before he died.

The niece, upon hearing this story, upbraids the aunt for never having opened the letter and when she insists that she now do so she finds proof that the husband was innocent of any infidelity.

"The Price Mark"

Paramount Picture With Dorothy Dalton. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

THIS is decidedly an unpleasant picture and it hasn't even the saving grace of a mission to excuse it. The predominating note is lust, so there probably will be plenty who will be attracted by it, and it will not suffer from a box-office standpoint. The girl in the story is dishonored, accepts her fate and lives cheerfully in dishonor, and finally has all good things come to her. There are sordid features about life which, when artistically pictured, are a revelation, but unhallowed love is a subject which has to be handled with a great deal of care and which in this picture is allowed to run riot.

It has been given splendid Paramount production. The only flaw to be found is in the theme. Dorothy Dalton plays her part with intensity and others in the cast who do good work are William Conklin, Thurston Hall and Adele Farrington.

The Story: Fielding Powell, an artist, has an unsavory reputation as far as women are concerned. Paula Lee poses for him and one day confesses to having no money and being in straitened circumstances. He sends her to an apartment house, supposed to be the home of friends of his, and he promises to help her secure a position on the stage.

Paula goes to the apartment which is very luxurious, and soon Powell comes and tries to lure her with jewels. Realizing that his intentions are not honorable Paula tries to leave, but, finding the doors barred, she accepts the situation and remains. She meets and falls in love with Dr. Malfi, who in turn loves her, but when she tells him of the other man in her life he leaves, saying he will be waiting for her whenever she shall choose to come. She finally marries him, and then to the house one night comes Fielding Powell. He of course recognizes Paula and, when the doctor is called away to see a patient, tells her that the price of his silence is a midnight visit to his rooms.

Paula goes and is the object of Powell's passions again. While Paula struggles with him to save her honor, Powell is killed by his servant. The doctor arrives on the scene and exonerates his wife.

"Arms and the Girl"

Paramount Offering with Billie Burke. Reviewed by Helen Rockwell

ANY picture dealing with the present great war is bound to appeal, and this picture, taken from the play of the same name, will prove an attraction for this, if for no other reason. The war element has not been treated in a too serious vein, there are no harrowing details and it will inspire no unfriendly feelings. The jovial German General, in fact, is pictured as a most likable figure and the characterization will be enjoyed.

The comedy is good throughout the picture, the sub-titles being cleverly written and some of the situations being decidedly humorous, while the few dramatic scenes are not out of place. Billie Burke is winsome as the American girl who is left stranded in a Belgian village at the time of the German invasion and who is saved from an embarrassing situation because she remembered the commanding officer as a former head-waiter at the Ritz. She does her best work along comedy lines and becomes somewhat ludicrous when attempting the dramatic. Thomas Meighan as the man in the case does satisfactory work.

The story begins with the Sherwoods traveling through Belgium when they hear the first rumors of war. Ruth Sherwood (Billie Burke) hears of her fiance's dissipating in Paris and she leaves the train at the first stop to send a telegram saying all is over. Not being well acquainted with French she mistakes the conductor's "two minutes" for "fifteen" and consequently misses her train. She sends the telegram but not worded as she had expected it to be, telling her fiancé to motor over and get her at once and signing it "with love." She goes to the village inn to wait, when news arrives that the Boches are coming. A Russian spy in the shape of a lovely female sees her chance to escape by taking Ruth's passport and substituting her own. A young man at the inn, realizing the predicament that Ruth is in, takes the Russian passport and is in the act of burning it when the Germans arrive and arrest him. He is ordered to be shot. Ruth wildly goes to the old German General who has taken a fancy to her and begs him not to shoot the fellow and adds that it is her fiancé. The young man's life is spared but the General, in high spirits, makes them get married at once and sends them off to a bridal chamber in a hurry. The rest of the picture deals with the embarrassment of the two young persons thus being thrust upon each other and of their eventual love and happiness.

are well-drawn and entirely human. In fact it is in every way a superior offering. The picture was supervised by Thomas H. Ince.

Charles Ray as Gordon Carbhoy, who worsts his father at his own game, is wholly devoid of the artificialities with which most screen stars are satiated. He has no cut-and-dried group of tricks and with his natural verility is a genuine treat. Charles French as the father does capital work, and by far the best scene in the picture is the closing one between father and son. Seldom is such a human touch given to characterizations, and patrons are bound to appreciate it. Charles French shows us that even millionaires may be likable when possessed of a sense of humor, and Charles Ray proves that there is hope for millionaires' sons even when going the pace of ten-thousand a year.

Vola Vale is a very decorative new-comer who glides through comedy better than drama, but is nevertheless an asset to the picture. George Nichols and Robert McKim are others who add to the production.

The Story: James Carbhoy, a millionaire railroad magnate, is disgusted by his son's lack of business ability. The son, Gordon, remarks flippantly that he could make as much money as his father if he cared to use the same methods. Carbhoy takes him up on the remark, gives him five thousand dollars, and tells him he will give him a half interest in his business if he makes good.

Gordon buys a ticket for the Yukon, not knowing where else to go, and is on his way across the continent when he gets mixed up in a crap game and is thrown off the train. The town which is his landing place is trying to have a railroad put through, so that it can develop some coal fields. Gordon sees a pretty girl, Helen Mallinsbee, and decides to stay in the town. Hearing of the desire for a railroad, and learning that it is his own father whom the townspeople have to fight, Gordon sees a way to win the interest in his father's business.

He kidnaps his father in a daring way, puts through a big deal and makes a hundred thousand dollars at his father's expense. The latter proves to be a jovial fellow, however, and even beams paternally upon the pretty girl Helen Mallinsbee who was an accomplice in the kidnaping affair. Splendid production makes this rather trite plot a decidedly worth-while picture.

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

Business Booms at Loew's Memphis Lyceum

The city of Memphis, the largest town on the Mississippi between St. Louis and New Orleans, naturally has several fine picture and vaudeville houses, but none of them can beat Loew's Lyceum now-a-days for pulling power. The accompanying photograph was taken on the day that Alice Brady made a tour of the theaters of the city but there is just such activity around the box office every good afternoon. The show had been running for half an hour when the snapshot was made.

The house runs nine reels of pictures and five acts of vaudeville for each bill. Performances are from 1 to 11 p. m. The 1,432 seats are practically always filled and the crowds are usually willing to stand in the lobby and other spaces awaiting a chance to use the sitting down privilege they have paid for.

A fine orchestra of seven pieces is used, in connection with the organ. The prices charged are ten and fifteen cents for matinees and ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents evenings.

The house is managed by B. M. Stainback, who is old and experienced in the game. He was at one time in partnership with Jake Wells of Virginia, who is now president of the new American Exhibitors' Association. The two built the Bijou of Memphis together. Its cost, $30,000, went up in smoke when the house burned.

Two New Theaters Added

Allentown, Pa., is moving upward in the motion picture world. Within the week two new theaters have opened there, the Strand and Hippodrome, both devoted to picture productions. The Hippodrome presents the exterior appearance of a metropolitan playhouse. The interior is embellished by ornamental plaster designs. The Strand's new building is of brick, steel and concrete. It has a spacious lobby artistically done, and the entrance into the foyer is by way of French plateglass mirrored doors. A motor driven machine vends tickets at the box office. Nine exits aid in emptying the house at the end of performances. Individual ventilators placed under the seats provide twenty-five cubic feet of fresh air per minute for each person in the house.

Something Else to Pay

Motion picture exhibitors of St. Joseph, Mo., have another tax to pay. This one was hung on them by the county authorities and the collection of it is entrusted to the men who wear constable stars. The assessment rates follow: Houses charging not more than 5 cents admission, $25 a year; houses charging not more than 10 cents, $35 a year; houses charging not more than 25 cents, $50 a year. A further tax is assessed against theaters charging 50 cents or more at the gate, amounting to $85 a year. All these charges are in addition to the war tax burden already placed on the shoulders of the exhibitors, whose lot these days is not one of halcyon repose.

Remark Causes License Loss

"To hell with the government," is what J. H. Ruerup, of Bozeman, Mont., is reported to have said when an attempt was made to persuade him to permit a speech in his Gem Theater by one of the Four-minute-men of the Liberty Loan campaign squad. Ruerup's remark was reported to the Liberty Loan committee of Bozeman and the city council was asked for immediate action on his case. The council voted unanimously to revoke the license for the Gem Theater. Mrs. Ruerup, the exhibitor's wife, stated that her husband would be willing to make a public apology, but the councilmen declined to alter their decision.

Loew Runs Kiddie Shows

Marcus Loew is meeting with success in his experiment in offering Saturday morning matinees for children in his New York theaters. Earlier releases featuring Marguerite Clark and Mary Pickford are finding greatest favor with the kiddies. Among the presentations which delighted the little folks recently have been "Such a Little Queen," "Mistress Nell," "Cinderella," "Little Pal," "Wildflower," "The Goose Girl," and "Seven Sisters." Mothers' clubs and educational organizations have endorsed Loew's move.

Pictures Prevent Fires

In St. Paul motion pictures are being used by the city in a campaign of education on the subject of fire prevention. Exhibitors of the city have co-operated with the municipal authorities in stirring interest in these films. The first showing of the fire prevention pictures was held recently in the St. Paul Auditorium in connection with the first municipal band concert of the season.

Old Theater Transformed

The old Johnson opera house in Seneca Falls, N. Y., is being transformed into a modern palace of the silent drama. The exterior of the theater building is being done in white stucco with much ornamentation. The old stage has been removed to make room for additional seats and new galleries and boxes are under construction. The installation of the seats has been intrusted to the Fred Teller Warerooms. The chairs are to be of Circassian walnut finish, of generous size that will insure comfort.

Only the Movies Remain

In Winchester, Ind., the last of the legitimate playhouses of the city has passed out of existence and the building is being remodeled to make a cigar box factory. The passing of this old playhouse leaves the motion picture theaters the entire field.

Honors Poet Riley

New Manager Takes Charge

The Excel and Lincoln theaters, colored houses of Nashville, Tenn., are now under the management of A. J. Wharton, an enterprising colored exhibitor, who announces that he will present first class pictures.

She was one of the first purchasers of a $100 bond and she said she may buy another.

Mary Pickford has taken up boxing, and has been taught "the manly art" by Director Neilan, who often dons the gloves with her. Of course it is soft for Mary, who takes great delight in pummeling her director.

Mae Murray recently gave an animal party at her home in Hollywood to sixteen children. The Bluebird star was the only grownup present. Miss Murray's guests ranged from five to twelve years and each of the little ones was dressed to represent some kind of an animal. There were white cats and black cats, a variety of dogs and several lions and mules, all of the costumes being provided for for the children by the popular star.

Among recent visitors at the William Fox studios in Los Angeles was the Honorable James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany. He was particularly impressed by the work on "The Mikado," which was then in progress, under the direction of C. M. and S. A. Franklin, and he stood for a long time watching little Virginia Corbin, Violet Radcliffe and others who happened to be engaged. Between scenes he met Virginia Corbin and told her how delightful he thought she was.

Virginia Pearson has just completed her thirteenth mile of film for William Fox. She has finished eleven pictures and now is working on her twelfth, "All For a Husband." The thirteen miles are not total length of film in the productions in which Miss Pearson has appeared, but length of frames in which she figures personally.

Harvey Thew's daughter, aged eleven months, has been perpetuated in all her dainty babyhood in a forthtcoming George Beban Paramount picture. Mr. Thew is a member of the Lasky scenario staff and when he was handed the Beban script to arrange, he wrote in a role for Vivian Thew.

"Should Women Smoke" is one of the problems offered in "Men Who Have Made Love to Me," Essanay production now in the making, featuring Mary MacLane, the writer.

Helen Ferguson, sixteen-year-old Essanay star, visited the studio every day for four months before she was given a chance as an "extra."

They took some scenes in a forthcoming Charles Ray Paramount picture at a county fair race track recently. The actors created a greater sensation at the fair than the well-known balloon ascension, etc. There were over ten thousand Californians in attendance and each one wanted to "act" in the big ensemble scenes.

Star Will Auction Tiny Yacht for Red Cross

Alma Ruebens, Triangle actress, who appeared in "The Firefly of Tough Luck" at the New York theaters during the past week, has donated a minature yacht to the Los Angeles branch of the Red Cross and will auction it off at a benefit some time in November.

The boat, four feet in length, contains everything found in a larger craft, from mahogany furnishings to anchor, and is capable of holding its own in a heavy sea.

Among the conspicuous performers at a recent entertainment given by the Los Angeles Committee of the Red Cross were Francis Carpenter and Virginia Corbin, the famous William Fox children. Francis discussed his work in pictures and Virginia showed her audience how her ability to smile and cry was always at her command. She also gave a little dance, which delighted the audience.

Patrons of the Liberty Theater, Long Beach, California, noting that the W. S. Hart picture, "The Two-Gun Man," was hard on hats, and appreciating how difficult it is for a moving-picture star to make both ends meet, some of the patrons requested the management to take up a collection for the purpose of buying Hart a new hat, to be presented to him as a token of their admiration. The donations were limited to one cent, permitting 4,000 donors to take part in the gift, which was presented to Hart on the stage of the Liberty Theater. The star was greatly affected by the incident and promised faithfully to wear the hat in his next picture. He kept his word, for it will be seen in his first Artcraft release, "The Narrow Trail."

Maxine Elliott's Theater, on Thirty-ninth street, New York, became for one afternoon recently a Paramount studio, when Marguerite Clark enacted some of the playhouse scenes in "Bab's Matinee Idol," third of the "Sub-Deb" stories from Mary Roberts Rinehart's series of highly amusing tales in the Saturday Evening Post.

Madge Kennedy states that she does not find the usually irritating waits in the picture theater trying. Instead, she is glad because they give her time to continue her knitting for the soldiers.

There are many animal actors in "Sunshine Alley," Mae Marsh's second Goldwyn play. Among them is a monkey which Miss Marsh saw first chained to the hand-organ of a street musician. Her sympathy was stirred by the little fellow and she bought him. for her play. As though in gratitude for the star's kindness, the little monk proved the most tractable of the many animal actors used in the production of "Sunshine Alley." He has a whole scene to himself wherein he helps a squirrel to keep the wheel in his cage going, and leading critics have joined in saying that he does it very well. Now the little chap lives in luxury, nevermore to be a mendicant or to work for a living.

Every Monday morning Mary Miles Minter is forcibly led to the Goff's, the only beauty parlor in Santa Barbara, to have her small paws made smooth and beautiful. Mary does not enjoy the process because it takes up a lot of time that she could be using working in her garden.

Charlie Chaplin is holiday making at Honolulu and Sydney Chaplin and Manager John Jasper are arranging for a studio in Los Angeles. By the time Cinema Charles first return he will find everything nicely fixed up for him.

Lois Weber's studio is located in a beautiful garden with wonderful cedar hedges and a wealth of flowers. A big residence provides handsome offices and the clever lady could not have more harmonious surroundings. She is delighted with her little leading woman, Mildred Harris.

The William Fox production, "The Painted Madonna," has one distinctly international touch. Sonia Markova, the star, is a Russian; O. A. C. Lund, the director, was born in Sweden. Of the supporting company, one member hails from Scotland, another from Italy.

Florence Reed is said to wear a number of unusual and very beautiful gowns in "The Struggle Everlasting," Harry Rapf's production, in which she is starred. Miss Reed is especially busy these days, for besides her screen work she had to prepare herself for her trying role in the stage spectacle, "Chu Chin Chow," which recently opened at the Manhattan Opera House, New York.

Lou-Tellegen has turned playwright and has written a play which he will shortly produce, and in which he will play the leading role.

The Artcraft company plans to make ten productions next year featuring Douglas Fairbanks. Allan Dwan and John Emerson each will direct five features.

Feature Programs

Bluebird

The Lash of Power—(Five Reels)—Bluebird—November 5.—A rich uncle dies and leaves the control of a great financial institution to his nephew. Marion Sherwood, the daughter of the family, has ambitions for society and breaks right in. She is loved by John Rand, who supports a widowed mother and who moves to New York with them, accepting a position with the Sherwood firm. When John seeks the hand of Marion he is informed that there will be no objection to the marriage after he has amassed a fortune. An old chemist dies, after leaving the formula of a powerful explosive in Rand's possession. Rand sells this and becomes powerful and wealthy through speculation. When Rand and his mother are blown to atoms by the dynamiting of his home by anarchists, Rand is shocked from the dream he has fallen into at the beginning of the story. Marion is near at hand and he takes her in his arms.

Butterfly

John Ermine of the Yellowstone—(Butterfly)—(Five Reels)—November 5.—John Ermine, known as White Weasel, has been brought up by the Indians and doesn't know he is white until he reaches manhood. He falls in love with Katherine Searles, but when he asks her to marry him he is repulsed by her parents, who think he is not good enough for their daughter. Katherine, who really loves him, goes to his cabin, and there is discovered by Lieutenant Butler, who also loves Katherine. Ermine kills Butler in self-defense. Katherine goes to her father, tells him of the murder, but says Ermine did it in defense of his own life and admits she loves Ermine. Ermine's life is spared and he is happily wedded to Katherine.

FOx

Miss U. S. A.—Fox—(Five Reels)—November 4.—Starring June Caprice. Eugenie Lenoir marries the sister of Major Warfield. He dies soon afterward and his wife does not survive him long. Gabriel Lenoir inherits the estate of his brother, but only after forcing a nurse to swear she will kill the baby born to his brother's wife. The nurse returns after many years and tells the major the child has been growing up with a family of New York's tenement district. The Major brings her back, adopts her and calls her Capitola Black. The United States declares war on Germany. Herbert Grayson is detailed to ferret out spies in the district. Capitola helps and learns that her uncle Gabriel is the chief. Finally he is arrested and the Major tells the story of his injury to the child of his brother. Lenoir gets his just deserts, Capitola her fortune and Grayson gets Capitola.

Goldwyn

Sunshine Alley—(Six Reels)—November 4.—Starring Mae Marsh. Nell, the little granddaughter of Harbost, who runs the animal and bird store, is fond of the bullfinch, and when Mrs. Morris runs over Harbost and almost kills him, she offers to buy Nell's pet. But grand-daddy will not sell. Ned Morris, who is in the party, is much taken with Nell's quaint charm and gives her his card, telling her to call on him whenever he may be of assistance. As the days pass Harbost's injuries prove serious, and Nell, being without funds for a physician and drugs, phones to Ned that she will sell his mother the bullfinch. Ned responds promptly and his mother decides to surprise her guests that evening. When the time comes the bird will not sing. The bird-doctor is called, so Nell goes in his place, in her best clothes, her grandmother's wedding dress. Ned falls in love with her and she becomes the belle of the evening. She stays all night and gets mixed up in the theft of some jewels, but she is cleared of the charges and happiness rewards her goodness.

Metro

The Outsider—(Six Reels)—Metro—November 5.—Starring Emmy Wehlen. Sally Manvers is a little shop girl who decides that life is quite forlorn and dreary and that she will try being an adventuress. Sally is plunged head first into society. Then she decides she doesn't like it. She gets all her wishes in an unexpected manner. Mystery piles upon mystery until the exciting climax.

Mutual Star Productions

A Game of Wits—(Five Reels)—American—November 5.—Starring Gail Kane. Jeanette Browning, returning from a party, overhears Silas Stone, a Wall street wolf, demanding her as his wife as a price for saving her father from financial ruin. Jeanette walks with unconcern into the room and greets the men with a proposal of marriage. Then she assumes to disregard totally the difference of their ages. She leads Stone a merry pace, finally introducing him to her wayward brother, in disgrace and an outcast from the family. She imparts the information confidentially that she inherits the same tastes. Then Stone wishes to be rid of his bargain and she makes him sign a check as a balm for her pride. With the check she goes to her father and confesses, telling him the "brother" is her lover who played the part. Reviewed in this issue.

Perfection

Two-Bit Seats—(Five Reels)—Essanay—November 5.—Starring Taylor Holmes. The story of a man who won a girl and a better job by sitting in "two-bit" seats. Reviewed in this issue.

Mutual Pictures

Up or Down—(Five Reels)—November 5.—Reviewed in this issue.

Reel Life No. 80—(One Reel)—November 8.—Fifteen thousand deaths occur at grade crossings every year, showing that only 2 per cent of the happy motorists stop, look or listen! The Pipe Organ—The building of a big pipe orgain is a romance of industrial art. The Cord Tire Machine—The forty thousand dollar machine which crisscrosses on tires the cords used in their manufacture. The Story of Water—The lightning flashes amid the dark clouds, the raindrops fall, and the tiny stream is born high up on the mountain side, becoming a broad and peaceful river in the valley below. It Wasn't the Colic—Animated drawing from "Life."

The Mountain King—(Two Reels)—The Lost Express—November 5.—Starring Helen Holmes. Helen and Murphy by trailing Pitts discover traces of "The Lost Express." Detective Murphy is convinced that the missing train is camouflaged by the skillful foreign gang. General Thurston urges Murphy to locate the missing train at any expense and Helen determines to go with them on the trail. Young Bonner, the clerk, who is devoted to Helen, handicaps the search by following her. Helen snubs Bonner and sends him about his business, but later restores him to favor.

Mary's Merry Mixup—(One Reel)—Strand—November 5.—Starring Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco. Jay and Billie get married in spite of father's objections. Father decides to return to town to put a stop to Billie's flirtations. Jay sees Billie greeting her brother, whom he has never seen, and the green-eyed monster possesses him. He secures a disguise and enters his wife's home as a butler. Babbie, the maid, falls in love with him and one funny situation follows another, in which Jay's sidebeard, mustache and eyebrows play a large part. Billie and Jay finally make up and the bride is forgiven, in the hope that she will flirt no more.

Jerry and the Vampire—(One Reel)—Horsley—November 8.—Starring George Ovey. Down at the beach Jerry sees Mme. Bada Tara and is told she is a great screen vampire. When she has entered her limousine Jerry falls asleep on the sand, but seems to wake again and wanders along the edge of the water. He finds an ancient ring and discovers it is magic. He wishes for money and his hands become full. After some minor adventures he again meets the vampire and the villain. Seeing Jerry with so much money they decide to ensnare him. The vampire and Jerry have supper together and go to her apartments. While she is pulling the real vampire stuff the villain directs her efforts from behind the curtain. Then the villain stalks in and demands Jerry's money as damages, claiming to be the husband of the vampire. Jerry puts up a fight and gets knocked down, the vampire pulling his ear. He awakes with a start to find a big lobster biting his ear. Some dream!

Universal Program

Double Dukes—L-Ko Komedy—(Two Reels)—Sir Muchdoe is a golf enthusiast and his daughter Eva is looked upon as a great catch. Eva loves Chester, who sells soft drinks at the country club. Two hobos impersonate Duke Mixture and Lord Salisbury to get in father's good graces. Their attempts at the noble game of golf are ludicrous, as they use ancient eggs in place of golf balls. Chester is suspicious and jealous of the noblemen, so he challenges them to a duel. In the middle of the fray the real noblemen arrive and the bogus ones are kicked out. Chstr mbraces Eva before all those present.

The Red Ace—Episode Four—The Under Current—November 5.—Diving under the water Virginia finds a subterranean chamber which she decides must be the mine. At the inn Piccard is shot in a struggle with Winthrop who escapes to Virginia's cabin. Steele and his men arrive to search the cabin. Steele tells Virginia that Winthrop killed Piccard in a fight over a dance-hall girl. Virginia upbraids Winthrop and tells him to leave the cabin. She later learns the truth and, putting on some clothes of Winthrop's, she mounts a horse and dashes away to mislead Steele. Dismounting at a rope bridge she starts crossing it when her pursuers cut the rope.

General Program

The Fable of the Back-Trackers from the Hot Sidewalks—Essanay — (Two Reels) — November 10.—A George Ade fable about a foundling who worked on a farm for his board and keep, fourteen hours a day, sleeping under the rafters at night. He ran away to the city where it took him twenty years to climb to the position of floor walker in a department store. He then makes a visit to the old farmstead, where he finds the family about to go out to the links. He is rebuked with, "You should have brought your clubs along." Times have so changed in the country.

His Old-Fashioned Dad—Falcon Features—(Four Reels)—Horkheimer.—An old-fashioned country doctor and his wife make every sacrifice to send their son Emory through college. When the horse and the cow have been sold the doctor determines to visit his son. About this time Emory has discovered a bacillus, of vital importance, by accident. When his dad walks in and finds him playing poker he tells his father that he is old-fashioned and that gambling is necessary to raise money to perfect the discovery. On the way home the doctor meets with an accident and is taken to the hospital with another injured man. The other man dies and he changes the charts. The deception is successful. The insurance is paid to the widow. She promptly turns it over to her son, and he continues his research work, redeeming himself with his fiancee. The widow lives alone and the fear of tramps becomes an obsession. When she sees the door knob turn one night she shoots through the door, opening it to find her husband, who she had thought dead. His longing for a glimpse of home was too strong, and he has returned only to die.

The Renaissance at Charleroi—(Four Reels)—Broadway Star Feature—O. Henry Series.—Grandemont Charles, a seventy-five dollar a month clerk in a broker's office in New Orleans, is a descendant of the noble Charles family of France. He has spent the family fortune, and the old plantation, in his search for the lost brother of the girl he loves, Adele Fauquier, who will not marry him until the brother returns. Ten years before Victor Fauquier had been mixed up in an unfortunate affair, which Grandemont has never revealed to the sister. It is the nineteenth of January, which for generations has been a family anniversary with the Charles family. Out of the six hundred dollars he has saved Grandemont rents his old home and plans to entertain in the old style for two days. But the invited guests take it as a joke and do not come. As he sists down to dinner alone a tramp appears, and is made the honor guest. He recites thrilling tales of adventure in Mexico. When asleep he says, "That was a good dinner, Grande." Then Grandemont knows that his ten years' search is over. Victor has returned.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.
